But if the servant's heart is not right, he will say, My Master tarries (has not arrived), and may smite (oppose and contradict) his fellow servants (those who differ with him; those, therefore, who are declaring the opposite—My Lord does not tarry, but has come, is present.) Such may eat and drink with the intemperate (become intoxicated with the spirit of the world), but the Master of that servant will come (Greek, heko—will have arrived) a day not expected, and in an hour in which that servant is not aware, and will cut him off (from being one of the servants privileged to hand meat in due season to the household), and will appoint him his portion with the hypocrites. (Though not a hypocrite but a servant, he must, because unfaithful and overcharged, have his portion with the hypocrites in the perplexity and trouble coming upon Babylon.) "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

The foregoing, carefully examined, clearly teaches us that in the end of this age there will be one class denying that the Lord is present (not denying that He will come sometime, but that He has come), and smiting or harshly opposing those fellow servants who must therefore be teaching the opposite—that the Lord has come. Which is the faithful, truthful servant, and which the one in error, is clearly stated by our Lord. The faithful one whom He finds giving seasonable "meat" will be exalted and given fuller stewardship over the storehouse of truth, with increased ability to bring it forth to the household, while the unfaithful one will be gradually separated and drawn into closer and closer sympathy with the mere professors or hypocrites. And note the fact that the unfaithful is thus cut off, or separated, at a time of which he is not aware—in the harvest time—while his Lord is really present unknown to him, searching for and gathering His jewels—Matt. 13:30; Psa. 50:5; Mal. 3:17; Matt. 24:31.

We particularize here, to show that, in answer to the question of the disciples about signs and evidences of His second presence, our Lord taught that neither the world nor the unfaithful servants would be aware of it, until the intense fire of trouble is at least commenced. And the faithful evidently will see Him present merely by the eye of faith—through the Scriptures written aforetime for their learning, to be apprehended as they become due. Present truths on every subject are parts of "His goods" and treasures new and old which our Lord had laid up for us and now freely gives us.—Matt. 24:45-47.

Other Scriptures which state that “The Lord shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the Archangel, and with the trump of God,” and other similar references will be dealt with by an article in a later issue of “Peoples Paper.”

A further helpful explanation of this subject will be found in the booklet—”The Promise of His Presence,” which is available at 1/- per copy.

Yours in fellowship with Christ.

(The Lord’s Supper is intended not only to be in remembrance of the Lord, but also showing the Christian’s willingness to sacrifice unto death with Christ. Literature explaining this subject is available free to all.—B.B. Inst.)

May God’s richest blessing be on your messages, and pray that many may be brought to know Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour. I am, yours in Christ,

Dear Sir.—I heard your Talk for the first time on Sunday morning, and found it very helpful and interesting. As it is very rarely that I am able to listen-in at the time the session is on the air, I wondered if it would be possible for you to send me a copy each week; I would be very pleased if you could. Could I please have a copy of the booklet, “The Plan of God” ? I am, yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest.—Dear Sirs.—Tuning into 3GL yesterday, I contacted your session for the first time, and was interested in the discussion which transpired on *the subject of “The Kingdom,” and am availing myself of the opportunity of your offer to forward a copy of the broadcast to anyone on application. Mention was also made of another publication you had for distribution which I would also count as a privilege to receive, and any other previous broadcasts you may have on hand. I would be pleased to forward cost of postage and any other contribution necessary to the cost of production.

Thanking you in anticipation of receiving the matter desired in due course, and trusting that God will richly bless you as you endeavour to spread the good tidings abroad. Yours sincerely.

South Australia.

Dear Frank and Ernest.—I must thank you, very much for the literature you have sent me in the past. I always listen to your broadcasts over 5AD, and find them very helpful. Could I have one of “God’s Plan” and “God’s Promises”? I would also like a copy of “Where are the Dead?” if you have any. I passed some of the last lot of literature you sent on to someone whom I thought would benefit from reading it.

I hope you will keep on helping people to try to understand the Bible and God’s plan. I have often puzzled over things in the past, which have become very clear since listening to your! broadcasts. God bless and help you. Yours sincerely.

To Frank and Ernest.—Your very interesting Talks on the Bible, to which we are constant listeners and look forward to every Sunday morning, are, I’m sure, a great help to all your listeners. Your promise of a free booklet, “God’s Promises,” I would very much like to possess. Your Talk on the 12th chapter of Daniel was very interesting and explained a lot; we were very interested in it. I’m sure more of your Talks and Talks of your kind is what mankind is wanting to-day. Thanking you and hoping your Talks will continue for ever. We are selfish, and would like them to last much longer. Yours truly.

Dear Frank and Ernest —I was very pleased to receive your letter, also the book of “God’s Plan” and the copies of your past Talks over the air; also the magazines of the “People’s Paper,” for which my husband and I thank you very much. We will pass on some of your past Talks to Mother, when we have read them. I have seen by some of the papers some letters from listeners and can see the good work you are both doing, and we enclose a postal note for 5/- for your work.

We will be listening next Sunday as usual. I think your Theme Hymn, “Fight the Good Fight,” is very appropriate for these times, and it used to be my Mother’s favourite hymn. We both wish you the best of good wishes in your work. Your sincere Christian Friends,

P.S.—Please could you send us a copy of “Daily Heavenly Manna”?

To. Frank and Ernest.—Dear Brothers.—I am sorry not answering yours before, and thanks for books and papers.

I pray to the Lord to give you grace and strength to carry on. I often wonder you giving Bible Talks on Sunday mornings if it ever dawns on you the souls that listen to you; how much your Talks uplift so many souls, sending them away in thoughts for the day; it makes so many understand and draw them nearer to God.

So now I close in thoughts of love and prayers, and God bless you both and your good work.

Dear Sits,—Please kindly forward to me one copy of the Sunday morning Bible Talk, “God’s Plan,” by Frank and Ernest, which I listen to with marked attention, and it should be a great help to many listeners who have been neglected in those lessons most needful to the human soul. I am, respectfully yours.

N.S. Wales.

Frank and Ernest.—Dear Brothers.—I have been intending to write to you for some time. I was able to hear your Sunday morning Talk last Sunday for the first time for months; we have not been able to hear Swan Hill on our set, but we get 2CA very clearly; and I did enjoy hearing the session again. But I have been getting the “People’s Paper” all along, and I am so glad that you are able to continue with your broadcasting. I am sure it must be proving “meat in due season” to many people that are hungering for the truths of the Bible.

If you can, I would be pleased if you would send me a copy of “Daily Heavenly Manna,” and I am enclosing a postal note for 10/- to cover the cost of it, and would like the balance to go to the broadcasting fund. Trusting that your work will continue to be blessed. With kindest regards from, yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest.—Dear Sirs.—Will you please send me your Frank and Ernest Bible study and booklets as advertised on your Sunday session? I always enjoy this session, and would like to study it afterwards. Would you please send them regularly, also state cost of same, as I would like to contribute the cost of them? How Jesus Preached to Spirits in Prison “Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the Just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened in the spirit, by which [two experiences—death and resurrection] He preached unto the spirits in prison.”-1 Peter 3 18, 19.

THIS text has been made the basis for some peculiar presentations. From it some have deduced an intermediate state lasting between death and the resurrection. Others have claimed it as an authority for the doctrine of Purgatory. The difficulty in every case seems to be the failure to remember that the Bible always and everywhere teaches that the dead are really dead, that they know nothing, and that, therefore, it would be impossible to do any preaching to the dead humans. Undoubtedly the theory that people are more alive after they die than when they were alive is responsible for nearly all of the foolish things which we have all at some time professed to believe.

Before dismissing the thought that these “spirits in prison” are human spirits, let us note the fact that to say, “human spirits,” is an absurdity of itself, because human beings are not spirits and spirit beings are not humans. “Who maketh His angels spirits,” is the Scriptural proposition. True, we do sometimes speak of humans as possessing a spirit of life, but by this we merely mean that they possess the power or energy of life, and the same would be equally true of the lower orders of creation, beasts, fish, fowl, etc.

Again, we sometimes speak of the Church as spirit beings—begotten of the holy spirit. Thus the Apostle speaks of the natural man in contrast with the New Creature, a spirit being. To appreciate this statement we must remember that the Church class receive the begetting of the holy spirit to the end that, if faithful, they may attain unto a spirit resurrection and become spirit beings, like unto the angels and like to the Redeemer. But we are not spirits yet, except by faith—by hope. However, the context shows the Apostle had no reference to the Church, either: we were not in prison; we received the message of salvation through the Apostles.

Spirits Once Disobedient.

The spirits to whom the message was given had proven themselves disobedient, says St. Peter. He even tells us the time of their disobedience, namely, that it was “in the days of Noah, while the ark was preparing.” Surely, if noticing these particulars mentioned in the context, no one would be excusable for misunderstanding this Scripture and considering it in any way applicable to humanity of our day or to humanity in general. However, it is helpful to us to learn the full particulars of the matter. What was their disobedience, and when and how were they imprisoned?

Turning to Genesis 6:1-5, we find there the cause of the disobedience of those angels, who for a time had been permitted to see what they could do for the uplift of humanity, or, rather, permitted to demonstrate that the downward tendency of sin is incurable except in the manner which God has already arranged through Messiah and His glorious reign of a thousand years.

Instead of those angels helping mankind out of sin they helped themselves into sin, and by so doing they increased the depravity amongst humanity until the astounding record is that “the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thought of his heart was only evil continually.” The particular sin of those angels was that when they were granted the privilege of materializing — of taking human bodies for the sake of helping and instructing mankind—they misused this power and took to themselves the daughters of men for wives.

Thus these angels came gradually to prefer to live as men amongst men and to rear earthly families rather than to abide in the condition in which they were created—spirit beings, higher than humans.- Not only was this wrong in the sense that it was taking a course in opposition to the Divine arrangement, but it was wrong also because the thing was done for the cultivation and gratification of lust, and it led to their own moral defilement as well as having a baneful influence upon humanity; for we can readily see that for the angels, of superior powers and intelligence, to become leaders in lustful practices would mean a great influence upon mankind toward sin and defilement of mind and body.’

We are particularly told that the offspring of this improper union between the angels and the daughters of men were giants, both physically and mentally superior to the fallen human family—“men of renown.” And this statement, that they were “men of renown,” was at a time when manhood’s estate was reached at a hundred years, and implies that God did not interfere to hinder or stop the progress of sin for perhaps several centuries. In the meantime the race had become so corrupt that apparently only Noah and his family were uncontaminated—all others had more or less come under the influence, directly or indirectly, of these fallen angels or their giant sons. Hence, of Noah it was written (not that he was a perfect man, but), “Now Noah was perfect in his generation” (uncontaminated) and his family apparently the same. Hence these alone were saved in the ark, while all the remainder, more or less contaminated, were destroyed by the flood.

“ In Chains Of Darkness.”

It was then and there that God imprisoned those spirits, angels, who kept not their first estate, and are therefore called fallen angels, devils, demons. They were not imprisoned in some far world called hell, nor are they engaged there in stoking fires for the torture of poor humanity. Following the leading of the Scriptures we find that when the flood came they were not destroyed because, while their fleshly bodies which they assumed might indeed perish, yet they would merely dematerialize, or assume their spirit conditions again.

The record is that God cast them down, that He condemned them to an overthrow—that they might not any longer associate with the holy angels, but must be reserved in tartarus—our earth’s atmosphere. Here they were imprisoned, not in a special place, but in the sense of having their liberties restrained, “in chains of darkness.” They were no longer permitted to materialize and thus to associate with humanity. These things are distinctly told us by St. Jude and St. Peter (Jude 6; 2 Peter 2:4, 5)—an explanation in full harmony with the Genesis account of their fall.

Once Disobedient—Still Disobedient.

We, of course, cannot know that all of those fallen angels are still in a disloyal condition of heart. On the contrary, in harmony with our text, we may suppose that some of these fallen angels have since repented of their wrong course and it would be none too strong a way to state the matter—that any such repentant ones would surely have terrible experiences as a result. To be obliged to be in close touch and relationship with the more evil and malignant ones and to have knowledge of all their evil designs and efforts would be a terrible experience and, besides this, we may be sure that the rebellious would not hesitate to persecute the repentant ones in every conceivable manner, as they would be lawless, regardless of the Divine will.

On the other hand, the repentant ones would be obliged to restrain themselves and to not render evil for evil, knowing that this would be contrary to the Divine will. In other words, repentant ones amongst those fallen spirits, influenced by the preaching of Jesus or otherwise, would have a kind of purgatorial experience, and the very thought calls forth our sympathy.

When imprisoned or cut off from the privilege of materialization, many of the fallen spirits, we know not what proportion, continued their active opposition to God, after the manner of Satan. Hence they are spoken of as his angels, his messengers, his servants and he is spoken of as Beelzebub, the Prince of Demons. Satan, who sinned much earlier than the others, and in a different way, the Scriptures tell us was an angel of a higher rank, or a higher nature, and this superiority of his has made him the Prince or ruler over the hosts of fallen spirits.

Fighting Against God.

The fight of Satan and his fallen angels is against God, against all who are in harmony with Him, against all the regulations of righteousness, and against all the channels and servants whom the Lord may use. St. Paul's words along this line are forceful; he remarks that God's people contend not merely "with flesh and blood," but also "with wicked spirits in high positions," and the question arises, "Who is sufficient for these things?" The reply is that none is sufficient; without the aid of the Redeemer His church would be quite overcome and vanquished by evil.

Likewise, without the Redeemer's aid through His Kingdom, without the binding of Satan, without our Lord's releasing of the world from the bondage of sin and death, there would be no hope of the world's recovery from its present bondage. But with the Apostle we exclaim, "If God be for us, who can be against us?"—Romans 8:31.

Through Mediums and Obsessions.

Satan's original plan of attack was to bring our race under his influence by misrepresentation—by putting darkness for light and light for darkness — for instance, the temptation under which Mother Eve fell. Satan there represented himself as Eve's friend, giving her sound advice. He represented God as having a selfish motive behind His command that our first parents should not eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. Satan declared that God had told an untruth when He said that the penalty for sin would be death. Satan declared that man cannot die.

And has he not since kept up the same line of falsification? And has he not deceived the whole world upon this very subject? Do not all peoples in every land believe that when a man dies he does not die, but gets more alive — exactly Satan's lie of the first instance? How few have believed God, even amongst His people who truly love Him, and who truly desire to believe the teachings of His Word! We have all been under a kind of “hoodoo.” “The god of this world [Satan] has blinded” our minds on this subject. We are now coming to see that death is the penalty for sin and that the resurrection is the salvation which God has promised and will provide.

Satan has had powerful allies and servants in the fallen angels, and it is through their persistence that this lie has seemingly triumphed over the Divine Word—”Dying, thou shalt die.” These fallen spirits have made various manifestations in every land for centuries, and thereby have apparently substantiated the theory that a dead man is more alive than when he was alive. Knowing that mankind would have nothing to do with them if their real personality were known they hide their personality and represent themselves as our dead friends who desire to speak with us, either directly or through mediums.

A further desire of these angels is to obsess or to get possession of a human being. Being chained or restrained from the privilege of materialization, the next most desirable thing in their estimation is to gain control over a human being and to use his body instead of their own. This is styled obsession, and persons so afflicted today are sent to an insane .asylum where, it is estimated, they constitute at least one half of the entire number. In the days of our Lord these were not mistakenly supposed to be insane, but rightly declared to be obsessed. All remember the New Testament account that our Saviour and His Apostles cast out legions of fallen spirits from humanity.

“Know Ye Not that the Saints Shall Judge Angels?”

We need not discuss this question with Bible Students, for it is too well recognized to be disputed. We suggest a topical study of this subject by all of our readers. See how many times Jesus and the Apostles cast out demons, and note the particulars. Although we still have with us spirit mediums and many obsessed, we cannot know whether the proportionate number is greater or less than in our Lord’s day. Since the world’s population today is so much larger, the same number of evil spirits (which do not increase) would show proportionately less.

But, however that may be, we may assume that some fruitage resulted from the great sermons preached to these in connection with the death and resurrection of our Lord, respecting which St. Peter tells us in our text. Additionally, St. Paul remarks, “Know ye not that the saints shall judge angels?” (1 Cor. 6:3). We do know that the holy angels need no judging, no trial, hence the Apostle must in some way refer to a trial or judgment or testing of these spirits in prison who were once disobedient, in the days of Noah. And if the judgment or testing is a part of the divine plan, it implies a hope for them, and in conjunction with St. Peter’s statement in our text it gives the reasonable inference that the preaching which Jesus did to them was not wholly, in vain.

How Jesus Preached in Death.

Here arises another question: If Jesus was really dead, as the Scriptures declare, if “He poured out His soul unto death,” and “made His soul an offering for sin,” and He was not raised from the dead until the third day after His crucifixion, how could He in the meantime preach to spirits in prison, or to anybody else? We reply that He could preach in the same way that the Apostle refers to in respect of Abel, saying, “He, being dead, yet speaketh.” (Heb. 11:4); and again, in the same way that the blood of Abel is said to have cried to God—figuratively. Of one thing we are sure, namely, that Jesus gave no oral address while He was dead. He preached in the way we sometimes refer to when we say, “Actions speak louder than words.”

It was the great object lesson which the fallen angels saw that constituted to them the great sermon that gave them a ground for hope. On several occasions the fallen spirits, when commanded to come out of human beings, declared that they knew Jesus. In the long ago they had known him, when, as the Only Begotten of the Father. and His representative, He had created them and all things that are made, and was also the mouthpiece for all divine orders and regulations.

The fallen angels realized[^] that he had come into the world to be its Redeemer; they perceived the great stoop that He had made from His lofty position on the heavenly plane to the servant position on the human plane. They admired His loyalty and faithfulness to God, but doubtless believed Him to be foolish; they never expected Him to arise from the dead. But when they perceived His resurrection on the third day to glory, honor and immortality, “far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named,” His sermon to them was complete, namely, that “the wages of sin is death,” but that “the gift of God is eternal life.” (Rom. 6:23.) And as they realized thus the power of God and the love of God for His human creatures, the Apostle’s words imply that this constituted to them a message of hope. Perhaps if they would show full contrition God eventually would have mercy upon them, even as He had had mercy and had provided for humanity.

The lesson is one for all. God’s power is infinite, so is His love, His mercy, His goodness. Nevertheless, every wilful sin will have its punishment, a just recompense of reward, and only the willing and obedient shall have the divine favor and everlasting life. Let each apply the lesson to himself.

Two Parable Booklets

“Parables of the Kingdom,” is the title of a booklet recently produced by our English brethren. It contains a short explanation of six of our Lord’s parables, as follows:— “The Wheat and the Tares,” “The Great Supper,” “The Ten Virgins,” “The Pearl of Great Price,” “The Rich Man in Hell,” and “The Sheep and Goats.” Containing 29 pages it will be found a helpful little book for the brethren, or for passing on.

“Some of the Parables” is well known to most of our readers. Containing 90 pages in explanation of a number of our Lord’s parables and an article on “What Shall be the Sign of Thy Presence and of the End of the World?” it is a most useful booklet on these subjects.

Our Lord's Return.

This article on the manner of Christ's return is presented in continuance of this subject from last month's issue, and should prove equally as helpful and refreshing to all.

THERE are some statements of Scripture with reference to the manner of the Lord's return and appearing which, until critically examined, appear to be contradictory of each other. And no doubt they have for centuries served the divine purpose of concealing the truth until the due time for it to be understood; and even then, from all except the special class of consecrated ones for whom it was intended.

For instance, our Lord said, "Behold, I come as a thief;" and, "As it was in the days of Noah, -so shall it be also in the days of the Son of Man (the days, of his presence): They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage," "and knew not until the flood came." "And when Jesus was questioned of the Pharisees when the Kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The Kingdom of God cometh not with observation" (marginal reading, "not with outward show").—Rev. 16:15; Luke 17:26, 27, 20; Matt. 24:38, 39.

These Scriptures plainly state and illustrate the manner of the Lord's coming. They show that he will be present unseen, doing a work of which the world for a time will be entirely unaware. His arrival must therefore be in a quiet manner, unobserved, and entirely unknown to the world, just "as a thief" would come, without noise or other demonstration to attract attention. As in the days of Noah the world went on with its affairs as usual, not in the least disconcerted, and without the slightest faith in the preaching of Noah with reference to the coming flood, so in the early part of the Day of the Lord, the world, having no faith in the announcement of His presence and of the impending trouble, will go on as usual, giving no heed whatever to any such preaching until, in the great flood of trouble, the old world—the old order of things—goes down, passes away, preparatory to the full establishment of the new order, the Kingdom of God under the whole heavens.—"As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be also in the days (of the presence) of the Son of Man."

On the other hand, we find scriptures which at first sight seem to be in direct conflict with these; as, for instance: "The Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the Archangel, and with the trump of God."—"The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with His mighty messengers, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."—"They (the world) shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."—"Behold, He cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see Him."—1 Thes. 4:16; 2 Thes. 1:7, 8; Matt. 24:30; Rev. 1:7.

As seekers after truth, it will not do for us to say, in view of these passages, that the majority of them seem to favor whatever view we incline to prefer, and then to ignore the other. Until we have a view of the matter in which every Bible statement finds a reasonable representation, we should not feel sure that we have the truth on the subject. One statement of -God is as true, and as firm a foundation for faith, as a hundred. And it would be wiser to seek for a harmonious understanding than to arrive at a conclusion or adopt a theory based on a one-sided interpretation, and thus to deceive ourselves and others.

Christians generally make no effort to harmonize these statements, and therefore their ideas are one-sided and incorrect. The last group of statements is just as positive as the first, and apparently teaches the very reverse of a quiet, unobserved, thief-like manner in the Lord's coming and presence. In addition to these statements, we are referred to two other illustrations of the manner of His coming, viz.: "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come, in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven,” and “As the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.” (Acts 1:11; Matt. 24:27.)*

(* An article on these two texts appeared in last month’s ‘Peoples Paper,’ extra copies of which are available.)

In our examination of the subject we should note that while our Lord stated, as a positive fact, that His kingdom would be established without outward show, and that His coming, His presence, would be as a thief, requiring close, attentive watching to apprehend and discern it, all of the above texts generally cited as proof of an outward, visible manifestation are in highly figurative language, except the one which says that He will come in like manner as He went away. The symbolic must always bend in interpretation to the plainer, more literal statements, as soon as their symbolic character is recognized. Whenever a literal interpretation would do violence to reason, and also place the passage in direct antagonism to plain statements of Scripture, such passage should be considered figurative, and its interpretation as a symbol should be sought in harmony with obviously plain and literal passages, and with the general character and object of the revealed plan. By recognizing and thus interpreting the symbols in this case, the beautiful harmony of all the statements is manifest. Let us now examine them and see how perfectly they agree with the statements which are not symbolic.

“The Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the Archangel, and with the trump of God.” (1 Thes. 4:16.) The voice and the trumpet here mentioned correspond in every way with the same figures used in Rev. 11:15-19—”The seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdom of this world is become the kingdom of our Lord, and of His Christ, and He shall reign forever and ever. . . And the nations were angry, and Thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged,” etc. The same events are referred to in Daniel’s prophecy:—”And at that time shall Michael (Christ) stand up (assume control), the great Prince, . . . and there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation, . . . and many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake.” And Paul adds to his mention of the voices and the trumpet the statement, “And the dead in Christ shall rise first.” In 2 Tim. 4:1 he further states that Christ shall judge the quick and the dead, at this time of His appearing and kingdom; and the beginning of the judgment of the living nations is everywhere described as the greatest time of the trouble the world has ever known.—Dan. 12:1.

Thus Paul, John and Daniel evidently refer to the same time, the time of our Lord’s appearing, and the establishment of His kingdom in the midst of a great time of trouble, and to the events preceding and introducing it. The same result is shown by each writer to follow the standing up of Michael, the voices and the trumpet: namely, trouble and wrath upon the nations and the resurrection of the dead. Next, mark the figure used:— A SHOUT.”—The Greek word here translated “shout” is keleusma, which signifies a shout of encouragement. A shout implies a public message designed for the ears, not of a few, but of a mixed multitude. It is generally designed either to alarm and terrify or to assist and encourage. Or it may have the one effect upon one class, and the reverse effect upon another, according to circumstances and conditions.

The aspect of affairs in the world for the past fifty years very strikingly corresponds with this symbol, in the outbursts of world-wide encouragement for all men to wake up to a sense of their rights and privileges as men, and to consider their mutual relationships, the principles upon which they are based and the ends which they should accomplish. Where on the face of the earth is the civilized nation that has not heard the shout, and is not influenced by it! The entire civilized world has, in the past forty or fifty years, been studying political economy, civil rights and social liberties as never before in the annals of history; and men are encouraging each other, and being encouraged, as never before, to probe these subjects to the very foundation. The shout of encouragement started by the increase of knowledge among men has already encircled the earth, and under its influence men are banding themselves together, encouraged and assisted by men of brain and genius, to contend and strive for both real and . fancied rights and liberties; and as their organizations increase and multiply, the shout grows louder and longer, and will by and by result as foretold, in the great time of trouble and tumult of angry nations. This result is graphically described by the Prophet—"The noise of a multitude in the mountains (kingdoms) like as a great people; a tumultuous noise of the kingdoms of nations gathered together: the Lord of hosts mustereth the host of battle."—Isa. 13:4.

"THE VOICE OF THE ARCHANGEL."—is another striking symbol of similar import. The name "archangel" signifies chief messenger; and our anointed Lord Himself is Jehovah's Chief Messenger—the "Messenger of the Covenant." (Mal. 3:1.) Daniel refers to the same personage, calling Him Michael, which name signifies Who as God—an appropriate name for Him Who is "the express image of the Father's person," and the representative of His authority and power. The voice of the Archangel represents Christ's authority and command. This symbol, then, represents Christ as taking control, and issuing His commands, His official orders, announcing the change of dispensation by the enforcement of the laws of His kingdom.

The same thought is differently expressed by Daniel, when he says, Then shall Michael, the great Prince, "stand up." To stand up signifies to assume authority, to give commands. See "ariseth," Isa. 2:19, 21. Another illustration of this symbol is from David, who says of Christ prophetically, "He uttered His voice; the earth melted." The great time of trouble will be precipitated, and the earth (organized society) will melt, or disintegrate, under the change of administration going into effect when the new King utters His voice of command. At His command, systems of error, civil, social and religious, must go down, however old or firmly entrenched and fortified they may be. The sword out of His mouth shall cause the havoc: The truth on every subject, and in all its varied aspects, shall judge men, and, under His power and overruling, shall cause the overturning of evil and error in all their thousand forms.

"THE TRUMP OF GOD."—Many seem thoughtlessly to entertain the idea that this trumpet will be a literal sound on the air. But this will be seen to be an unreasonable expectation, when it is noticed that Paul here refers to what the Revelator designates "The Seventh Trumpet," the "Last Trump," in a series of symbolic trumpets. (Rev. 11:15; 1 Cor. 15:52.) The proof that these references are to the same trumpet is found in the record of the events connected with each. Paul mentions the resurrection, and the establishment of the Lord's Kingdom, as connected with "the trump of God," and the Revelator mentions the same with even greater minuteness. The propriety of calling the "seventh," or "last trump," the "trump of God," is evident, too, when we remember that the events mentioned under the preceding six trumpets of Revelation refer to humanity's doings, while the seventh refers specially to the Lord's work, and covers the "Day of the Lord." Since the six preceding trumpets were symbols—and this is generally admitted by commentators and students who make any claim as expositors of Revelation—it would be a violation of reason and common sense to expect the seventh, the last of the series, to be a literal, audible sound on the air. And not only so, but it would be out of harmony with the Lord's general methods, as well as with those statements of Scripture indicating the secrecy of His coming; for a thief never sounds a trumpet to announce his arrival.

The seven trumpets of Revelation are all symbolic, and represent seven great periods of time and their events. It would seem clear that today we are in the midst of the very events which mark the sounding of the seventh trumpet. The great voices, the increase of knowledge, the angry nations, etc., establish this as a fact. Many events are yet to transpire before this seventh or last trumpet ceases to sound; as, for instance, the rewarding of all the saints and prophets, the resurrection of all the dead, etc. In fact, it covers the entire period of the Millennial reign of Christ, as well, as indicated by the events which are to transpire under it.—Rev. 10:7; 11:15, 18.

Thus we find the “shout,” the “voice of the Archangel” and “the trump of God” all symbols, and now in process of fulfilment. Note carefully, too, the fact that each of the three prophecies just referred to (Dan. 12:1; Rev. 11:15; 1 Thes. 4:16) declares the Lord’s presence at the time when the events mentioned transpire. They were foretold for the very purpose of indicating the manner in which His invisible presence would be manifested to those who have faith in the word of prophecy. Paul says, “The Lord shall descend with (literally in, or during) a shout, voice, trumpet,” etc.; John says that the kingdoms of this world become His, during the time of these events; and Daniel says, “At that time shall Michael, the great Prince (Christ), stand up” (be present) and take to Himself His great power. If, therefore, we can recognize the shout, the voices and the sounding of the great trumpet, we should accept them as indications, not that the Lord will come soon, but rather that He has come and is now present, and that the harvest work of gathering the wheat and burning the tares is well under way. Yet it is not to the natural vision, but only to the eye of faith, through the sure word of prophecy, that His presence and work can be discerned.

Just here another fact should not be overlooked, namely, that the “Shout,” the “Voice of the Archangel,” and the “Trump of God,” as above explained, are all instrumentalities for the accomplishment of the harvest work of the Gospel age. If therefore, we see not only the meaning of these symbols, but the foretold results actually taking place, we have additional proof both that we have rightly interpreted the symbols, and that we are now well in this period called the “harvest” of the Gospel age. Many will need no aid in tracing a separating work now going on between the truly consecrated and the merely nominal Christians. Many can see the symbolic fire already under way, and can discern the “shout” of the people, the command of the new King Immanuel and the events called the “seventh trumpet,” and the “clouds” of trouble, in which the Lord comes, and from and in which His power is to be manifested—subduing all things unto Himself.

The recognition of the harvest work in actual process is proof of the Lord’s presence, since He declared that He would be the chief reaper and director of the entire work, and that this would be His first work.—“Behold, a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in His hand a sharp sickle. . . And He That sat on the cloud thrust in His sickle on the earth; and the earth was reaped.”—“In the time of the harvest I will say to the reapers, gather” etc. (Rev. 15:14, 16; Matt. 13:30.) The various features of the harvest work will be accomplished gradually, but all of its days are “days of the Son of Man”—days of our Lord’s presence and power—recognized in the end by all, but at first only by the class specified by the Apostle—“Ye, brethren—not in darkness.”

“IN FLAMING FIRE.”—The next of these symbolic statements can be readily understood, if the meaning of the symbols, fire, etc., be borne in mind. It reads, “The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with His mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.”—2 Thes. 1:8.

Expressed literally, we understand this to signify that our Lord’s presence will be revealed or manifested to the world from His position of spiritual control (“heaven”), in the wrath and punishment then visited upon evil and evil-doers. It will be consuming wrath, as indicated by the symbol, fire, and will leave neither root nor branch of evil systems, error, oppression, or wilful sinners; and all the proud, and ‘all evil-doers, shall be burned up as stubble. In its beginning—in this “harvest” period—this fire will burn very fiercely, consuming pride and evil, now of such rank growth. Happy those who will surrender their pride and evil to be destroyed, that they themselves be not destroyed also (in the “second death”), as some resisters will evidently be. It is of this time that we read, “Behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch.” —Mal. 4:1.

The “mighty angels,” messengers, or agents of His power are various, and may properly be understood as applying to and including all the various agencies, animate and inanimate, which shall be used by our Lord in the overthrow of the evil systems of the present, and in the chastisement of evil-doers.

While the wrath or vengeance of the Lord is thus to be expressed in flaming fire, in consuming trouble, such as never before was known,—so general and widespread, and so destructive of evil—righteousness and the righteous will begin to be favored. And as these dealings become more and more apparent, men will begin to draw the inference that a new power has taken control of human affairs; and thus the presence of our Lord as King of kings shall be revealed to the world. “He shall be revealed in flaming fire, taking vengeance (both) on them that know not God (who are not really acquainted with God, but who nevertheless fail to obey the light of conscience, which all to some extent possess), and (also on those who, while knowing God, yet) obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.”

Under the chastisements and increasing light and favorable opportunities of the Millennial day, all will be brought to such a clear knowledge of the truth and the way of righteousness as to be without the excuse of ignorance, or of inability to obey the truth; and those who persistently continue enemies of God and righteousness shall be punished with lasting destruction (a destruction from which there shall be no resurrection) from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power.

“IN POWER AND GREAT GLORY.”—The next statement is to the effect that the world will see the Son of man coming, before His kingdom is fully set up or His joint-heirs are all gathered and exalted with Him. And, seeing His coming, all the tribes of the earth will mourn “They shall see the Son of man coming with power and great glory.”

Already the world sees the clouds of trouble gathering and darkening; they realise that a power is now at work in the affairs of men, with which they cannot cope; the near future, from the present outlook, is dark and ominous to all who have sufficient intelligence to mark the trend of events. Thinking men observe the persistency with which questions of right and wrong, justice and injustice, are forced upon their consideration, demanding an expression of their individual principles. Many recognise the glory and power of earth’s new Ruler, yet because clouds and darkness are round about Him they do not recognise the King himself. Men see the clouds, and therefore see Him coming in the clouds with power and great glory (the glory of power and justice), but they do not recognise Him. Not until the clouds have let fall hail stones and coals of fire (Psa. 18:12, 13) to batter down men’s pride, and selfishness, and prejudices, and consume these, will the clouds disappear, and reveal the full majesty and glory of Christ’s presence.

If men would consider, and hearken to the voice of the Lord, which now directs the course of justice, and warns of impending retribution, the great disasters of the near future would be averted; but “God speaketh once, yea, twice, yet man perceiveth it not. . . Then He opened the ears of man (in the thunder tones of “the day of trouble”) and seaeth their instruction, that He may withdraw man from his (own) purpose, and hide pride from man.”

“Behold, He cometh with clouds,” and in due time “every eye shall see (discern) Him,” shall recognise His presence, power and authority; and all must submit to it, whether willing or unwilling, until the loosing of Satan for a little season, in the close of the Millennium, when after full experience their willingness or unwillingness will be fully tested, and the unwilling will be destroyed—the second death, symbolically called the lake of fire.—Rev. 21:8.

Thus seen, all of these symbolic explanations of the manner of our Lord’s coming accord perfectly with the plain statements which declare that His presence will be a secret for a time, known only to those watching.

Victoria.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs.—I am very interested in your broadcasts on Sunday mornings from GL. You state the facts very clearly and helpfully. May our Heavenly Father bless your service to humanity in making clear His mind and purpose. Could you kindly send me your book on "God's Plan" and the three on the present series, "God the Father," "The Son," and "Holy Spirit." If there is any cost inform me and I will forward it to you.

I believe the only redemption of the world is in the coming of our King. Man has ruined the world; God will make it right. May God bless you both in His great service. Yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest. Dear Sirs,—I enjoyed listening to you over the air to-day. I would be pleased if you would post me a copy of to-day's programme and a copy of any further programmes you put over the air. I failed to get your address properly, so am asking Geelong Radio Station to forward you this. When I get your address I will be pleased to forward whatever is necessary for the above mentioned. Yours sincerely.

Dear Frank and Ernest,—Thank you very much for sending me the "Peoples Paper" each month since I wrote to you and please forgive me not writing sooner. I haven't been at all well. Could you send me the "Peoples Paper" each month and I'll enclose postal note for same. Still enjoying your Sunday morning talks. Thanking you and wishing you well in your good work. Yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Bible Institute. Dear Sirs,—I would like to say how educational and helpful I find your talks of a Sunday from 3GL, and am accepting your invitation to apply for last Sunday's talk, and the chart of God's plan.

The average man seems to find portions of the Scriptures confusing, and it is very nice to have matters clearly explained, as your session does. I wonder if you could put me on the track of a book of Bible Stories suitable to read to a youngster going to kinder-classes, as it is fairly hard to make stories up suitable for such small folk. Wishing you every success in your mission, and thanking you in anticipation. Sincerely yours.

Berean Bible Institute. Dear Sir,—Enclosed please find postal note for another twelve months' subscription to your "Peoples Paper," which I should have sent on before. I would also like the following booklets, if you have them to spare—"The Plan of God" and "God's Promises."

If possible could you send along the booklets you mention on the air each Sunday with my "Peoples Paper." We never miss hearing your Sunday morning talk. Thanking you and wishing you well in your good work. I remain, yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest. Dear Friends,—Once again I am writing a few words to you and thank you for the copy of "Foregleams of the Golden 'Age'" which you so kindly forwarded to me in answer to my last letter. It is a beautiful book and blessed are they that can understand and grasp all that its messages contain.

I am still unable to get the full meaning of some of the passages not only in "Foregleams," but other books as well. Nevertheless, I do try hard to enlighten myself by keeping on reading, and trust in the Lord to help me. . . . My son and I listen regularly to your Sunday broadcasts through 5AD and do appreciate your endeavours in trying to help us and others by explaining the Bible. We would also like to thank you for your very nice letter to us, also copies of dialogues and the words of the hymn "Fight the Good Fight," which I requested.

We have since received the "People's Paper," and we will take advantage of your offer to send copies of the dialogues when you send the "Peoples Paper." We would like the last three talks from to-day. . . . What we know is that every talk or book of the "Berean" is quoted in the Scriptures, and is only put forth in a more enlightening way for us to understand. Enclosed please find postal note for 4/-. Well, dear friends, I will close with best Christian wishes and regards. Yours sincerely.

Dear Frank and Ernest.—Would you kindly send me copies of your wonderful explanations of the Bible, at least beginning of the Trinity. Thanking you in anticipation, and may your good work continue for all time. Yours respectfully.

To Frank and Ernest. Dear Sirs,—I am a very interested listener to your talks Sunday mornings over 5PI. I should be very glad if you will forward me the booklet "The Plan of God," also your talk for the last two Sunday mornings. Yours faithfully.

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Christian Friends,—A brief line to thank you for the usual monthly "Peoples Paper" with Dialogues enclosed, also good letter following.

I am pleased to say that I am privileged each Sunday morning to enjoy with the same usual enthusiasm your continued discussions. The present series on The Trinity is very helpful; it's a subject (I think) which has been, and still is, much misunderstood.

It's very refreshing to note, per "Correspondence column" the very keen spiritual interest aroused per medium of your good radio efforts, and we pray God to continue His blessing upon the good work of "Frank and Ernest" and the brethren of the Berean Bible Institute. Please accept the small enclosure to add to the General Funds. With Christian regards. Yours sincerely.

Berean Bible Institute. Dear Sirs,—Thank you for your card. A few months ago I lost my son in the R.A.F. He came down over the Mediterranean. Now, my husband, who went right through the last war and joined up at the beginning of this.

I have received hundreds of cards and wires, but no clergyman came to see me in either case, and nearly all my friends assure me that when one is dead it is the end. If that is so, what is the good of sacrifice and love and striving. Life itself would be empty indeed. I should be grateful for your literature and thank you in anticipation. Yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest. Dear Sirs,—Please forward the following booklets—“Good News” and “God’s Plan.” Perhaps I have not the names quite right, as I have only heard a few of your talks, but find same very interesting indeed. I would be glad to receive any other booklets of early discussions. Thanking you. Yours truly.

Tasmania.

Frank and Ernest. Dear Sirs,—I have received the parcel of dialogues and booklets safely and wish to thank you for same. I am enclosing stamps to the value of 5/- and would like the booklets, “Where are the Dead?” “A

New Dictator,” “The Greatest of These is Love,” “Times of Refreshing,” “Some of the Parables,” “Parables of the Kingdom,” “Christ’s Return,” “Hell, Death, Spiritism,” “God and Reason ‘Beyond the Grave.” Also the pamphlet “An Open Letter to a Seventh Day Adventist,” and the dialogue “What is the Soul?” I find your dialogues and other booklets very interesting, and intend passing them on to others.

I will be sending for more books later: keep balance over the price of booklets as a small donation towards the cost of postage, etc. Yours sincerely.

Western Australia.

Frank and Ernest. Dear Christian Friends,—Many thanks for your kind Christian letter received a short time ago, also for the booklets under separate cover. I have received also three copies of “Peoples Paper” which I have enjoyed and hope to take regularly directly.

To-night I listened in to your dialogue; you asked if people wish them to be continued. Well, I most certainly hope you will continue them. They are so helpful in that they reveal God’s plan so plainly. I should like to have to-night’s dialogue and any others you may have on hand, also “Good News.” I can then pass them along. . . . I am enclosing a small subscription to help with the broadcasts. I remain, yours very sincerely.

Messrs. Frank and Ernest. Dear Sirs and Brothers, Would you please send me a copy of the little booklet “Good News,” I think you called it. I am enclosing a guinea towards the expenses; it would be a pity to discontinue the discussions, they are interesting and instructive, and people are gradually beginning to know of them. Yours sincerely.

Why God Gave a Bible Hard to Understand

Is it a fact?

(Public Address)

IT would seem to be an indisputable fact, and it is presumed that there is no one who would yet be able to explain all that is written from Genesis to Revelation. Paul, in Hebrews 1, states that "God at sundry times and in divers manners spake unto the fathers by the prophets." God has spoken in various ways, i.e. in plain, simple language, in dreams and visions, in signs and symbols, in types and in parables, and we are assured by Peter that the prophets themselves did not understand their own utterances and the angels sought to know and Understand what was written. (I Pet. 1:10-12.)

We may remember how Daniel prayed earnestly that he might understand the vision; part of it was revealed to him and other parts he was told were to be "sealed till the time of the end." "But go thy way till the end be: for thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of the days." (Dan. 12:13.) See verses 8 and 9,— "And I heard, but I understood not; then said I, O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things? And he said, Go thy way, Daniel: for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end."

No wonder then, that it is not easy to understand the wonderful symbols of Ezekiel, Daniel and Revelation, and how true it is that we must search for truth as men dig for silver.

We remember what the eunuch said in answer to Phil-ipp's enquiry, "Understandest thou what thou readest?" It was Isaiah 53, and the answer was "How can I, except some man should guide me?"

At the first advent of Christ, of which so much had been written, the religious leaders with all their education and study of the law and the prophets were unable to understand and recognise Jesus of Nazareth as the promised Messiah. There was Nathaniel under the fig tree puzzling over the Scriptures concerning Messiah and when Phillip called him "to come and see," "we have found him of whom Moses and the prophets did write, Jesus of Nazareth," Nathaniel said that cannot be, for I do not find any prophet comes out of Nazareth. However, Nathaniel was not like many today and in his day—unwilling to investigate. He was willing to go and see; like the Bereans of old, he was willing to search the Scriptures to see if those things were so; he was convinced and became an apostle of Jesus Christ. So we see that something more than education is required to understand the Bible and the God of the Bible. "Man by wisdom knew not God.”

What is Necessary in Order to Understand the Bible?

We find that in each age there have been those to whom the Lord has revealed His purpose. The prophet has said, “The Lord will do nothing, but that He will reveal it unto His servants the prophets.” Before the Deluge, Noah was found loyal to God and to him was made known what was coming and how to protect himself and family. When God would destroy Sodom and Gommorah, He said, “Shall I do this thing and not show it unto Abraham.” So, in every age, there have been some to whom God has made known truth due for the time. “The meek will He teach His ways.” “The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him, and He will show them His covenant.”

Prior to Adam’s disobedience God’s providence was over them and He communed with them in the Garden. Sin entered, God’s providence was removed and mankind, represented in Adam, was sent forth out of Eden to gain experience under the rule of Satan whom they had chosen to obey. But God had known that man would fall into sin and had prearranged the great plan for his recovery. We read of the “Lamb slain from the foundation of the world,” also that the church was chosen “before the foundation of the world.” (Rev. 13:8; Eph. 1:4.) God would never have allowed Satan to tempt our first parents had He not had the plan of the ages (Eph. 3:9, 10) in view and known that He could overrule the experience of sin and evil and death for ultimate benefit to the human race.

On account of sin God has allowed all nations to walk in their own ways winking at their ignorance. He has hidden His face from them, yet He has been ever ready to bless any who would turn to righteousness. “The Lord looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, and seek God.” (Psa. 14:2.)

So then while it was not the Divine intention that the Bible should all be understood at once, but that it should gradually unfold its truths as time went on, as “meat in due season” to the household of faith, yet those who sought the Lord in sincerity have ever been supplied with that meat in due season. Things have been “hidden from the wise and prudent” of the world, while “they have been revealed unto babes.” “Man by wisdom knew not God.”

That God’s Word was intended to gradually reveal the Divine purpose is indicated in our Lord’s words to the disciples—“I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now, but when the spirit of truth is come, it will guide you into all truth and show you things to come.” Again, when asked whether He would at that time restore the kingdom to Israel, He said, “It is not for you to know the times and seasons which the Father hath put in His own power.” Prior to His death and resurrection our Lord evidently did not know all details of the Divine plan, as He said, “Of that day and hour knoweth no man, not even the angels, nor the Son of Man (himself) but God only.”

What concerns us is that we should understand the Bible in so far as it is due to be understood. “The secret things belong unto the Lord, but the things that are revealed belong to us and to our children.” It is evident then, that much more of God’s purpose can be understood today than in Noah’s day, or Abraham’s time, or even by Moses or the prophets of Israel. God’s Word lights the path of the just “that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.” (Prov. 4:18.) Also as Peter says, “A light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts.” (2 Pet. 1:19.)

What is necessary if we would know God and understand His Word, is that we receive His spirit. We must first accept the provided way of approach to God, the redemption that is by Christ Jesus; then, if we realise what is only the reasonable next step, we say, “So I am bought with a price, I am not my own, I belong to Him who hath loved me and given Himself for me, as a lamb without blemish He shed His blood that I might have life.” (1 Pet. 1:19.) When this step of consecration is taken and the holy spirit is received, we are able to understand spiritual things, and to grow in knowledge and in grace. It is as we act upon and live up to the knowledge received that more is given.

But there are many hindrances, many ways and means of the prince of darkness, the god of this world who blinds the minds of men that believe not—those who do not gladly accept the light, the truth, in the spirit of the truth. They never get sufficiently emptied of their own spirit, to make room for the filling of God’s holy spirit. They become attached by social ties or agreeable associations in one sect or party, and imbibe so many false doctrines such as eternal torture, immortal soulism and many other teachings so contrary to God’s Word that neither their minds nor wills are open to receive the truth.

If we desire to understand the Bible we must be willing to come to it, to be taught by it, and to let go any preconceived ideas or preferences or doctrines of men, and just dig for the truth as men dig, for silver. With many it seems more difficult to dig away all false conceptions, doctrines of the dark ages etc., than it is to dig for the truth once such crusts are broken up.

These errors were accepted as truths by our forefathers, as they read the Bible without realising that it contained figures of speech and symbolisms which we use even in our own day in ordinary conversation. So they taught for instance (like Seventh Day Adventists) that the literal earth is to be burnt up, while the Bible clearly says, “the earth abideth forever.” (Eccles. 1:4.) “God formed it to be inhabited,” (Isa. 45:18), and that it shall be like the Garden of Eden, (Isa. 35). Also that God has promised never to destroy all living from off the earth, (Gen. 8:21), and that Palestine is to be given to Abraham and his seed. (Acts. 7:2-5).

Then why has the Bible been so constructed as to gradually reveal God’s purpose instead of making it all plain so “that the wayfaring man though simple may not err therein;” as it will be in the perfect day? (Isa. 35.) It is because the truth in season is the instrument of developing God’s purpose. It is the truth of any particular age that attracted those whom the Lord would call and select. In Abraham’s day truths concerning the Gospel Age were not revealed to him, but rather truths respecting the world of mankind generally in a wide sense, not in detail, and particularly truths regarding his seed Israel. Abraham’s faith was wonderful; he left Babylon in obedience to God—“Not knowing where he was to go.” He believed God that his seed should be through Isaac, yet he was willing to obey God and slay Isaac, “accounting that God was able to raise Isaac from the dead,” to fulfil His promise. He believed God that his seed should be “as the stars of heavens and as sand on the seashore for multitude,” even though he was so old and there was no sign of such being the case. But the way Abraham received the Lord’s instructions was rewarded by the Great Promise which embraced the great salvation, first of the heavenly seed and also of the earthly seed, to bless all the families of the earth.

Notwithstanding that the Lord told Abraham of the intention to destroy Sodom and Gomorrah, Abraham still believed the promise and no doubt again accounted that God was able to raise even the Sodomites from the dead, so that they could be blessed. The prophet Ezekiel informs us that this will be the case (Ezek. 16:48-63), and our Lord confirmed this in Matt. 11:23; 10:15. In Matt. 11:23, the Lord says that if the mighty works which He had done in Capernaum had been done in Sodom it would have (been converted) remained.

Then it may be asked why the Lord did not send Abraham as a missionary to Sodom and do such works and reveal to the people the one true God of mercy. Again, during the Law dispensation God did not send the Jews to convert the other nations; He dealt only with Israel and taught that nation His law. (Amos. 3:2; Psalm 147:19, 20.) He had hidden His face from mankind generally but dealt with Abraham’s seed for the purpose of developing His great plan of blessing all the families of the earth, in due time, and while Israel sought to keep the Law, the Lord's blessing for them was Numbers 6:24-26—"The Lord bless thee, and keep thee: The Lord make His face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee: The Lord lift up His countenance upon thee, and give thee peace."

The purpose of that age was accomplished; the Law demonstrated God's righteousness, His justice, and produced the foundation truths in the pictures, symbols, types and teachings which were to be understood and fulfilled in the Gospel Age when the kingdom of heaven was opened up, that is, the kingdom of heaven class was to be chosen. "The law and the prophets were until John (the Baptist), since then, the kingdom of God is preached." "Among them that are born of women there bath not risen a greater than John the Baptist: notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he." (Luke 16:16; Matt. 11:11.)

How was this kingdom class to be chosen or selected? It was to be done by an unfolding of God's purpose. The message or Gospel call given by the Lord and the Apostles was something that had not been known before. The Law came by Moses but grace and truth by Jesus Christ. The Law made nothing perfect because no one could keep it in its entirety. "By the deeds of the Law no one was justified," so no one could receive the reward of life. Paul tells us that Christ made an end of the Law and "opened up a new and living way." He brought "life and immortality to light." Paul again says, that this mystery was hidden from ages, but is now made manifest to his saints, to whom God would make known the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ in you (the church class) the hope of glory. (Heb. 10:19, 20; 2 Tim. 1:10; Col. 1:26, 27.)

Our Lord told us that the new way for the call of the "little flock" to whom it is "the Father's good pleasure to give the Kingdom," is a narrow way, and "few there be that find it." It was not intended that all should understand the call of the Gospel Age. The Lord is looking only for a certain class, suitable to be joint-heirs with Christ in the Kingdom. That is why it is that all cannot understand the Bible and God's dealings with the world which for the time being He has permitted to go its own way, getting the consequences of sin and disobedience—getting experience that will ultimately be a blessing to all, in that they will see that there is no lasting happiness and peace and joy and life apart from God and His righteousness. When the lessons are learned God has promised to cause all to come to the knowledge of the truth, the Books will be opened so that all (if they will) may turn to the Lord with one consent. (Zeph. 3:8, 9, etc.)

To have made the Bible so plain that all could understand it during the Gospel Age would have interfered with the purpose of the age. It is by the revealed truth that any are drawn to the Lord; it is by the truth these are sanctified.

The disciples wondered why the Lord 'spoke plainly to them but always spoke in parables to the scribes and Pharisees, and Jesus explained—"Because to you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom, but to them it is not given, etc. (Matt. 13:11-16.)

It was after the holy spirit was received at Pentecost that the disciples perceived that quite a new dispensation had commenced and God was not intending to convert the world at this time but only "to take out a people for His name;" that it would be in another age to follow this Gospel Age that the Lord would restore Israel to their land and to Divine favor, and that then, all the remainder of mankind would come to seek after the Lord; the Bible then being made plain and all shall understand and know the Lord from the least unto the greatest. (Acts 15:14-17; Heb. 8:11, etc.)

The great Divine Plan of the Ages was as a Book sealed with seven seals. No one but the Lord God knew of the wonderful purpose. In giving the prophecies to the prophets, particularly to Daniel, Ezekiel and St.

John in figurative language and in signs and symbols, the message was sealed, to be opened and understood in its due time, “meat in due season to the household of faith.” So the Books were sealed, but the Lion of the tribe of Judah by His death as a ransom sacrifice to pay the price of • sin, was found worthy to break the seals and the Divine purpose has been gradually revealed to the faithful followers of the Lamb during this Gospel Age. Revelation informs us that the Books shall be opened so that the words of the prophets and apostles shall be fulfilled and the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the earth as the waters cover the great deep.

So we see clearly, that when the Church, the Bride of Christ, is completed, a new age will open up. That will be a new world order, much better, more lasting and satisfactory than any that could ever be proposed by the best of mankind. It will be “the desire of all nations,” and all who will be disposed towards righteousness will be lifted up and blessed. Christ will be King over all the earth (instead of Satan) in that day.

We notice that all the world today is looking for the second presence of Christ, just as we read in the gospels concerning the first advent of Christ, “all men were in expectation of Him.” Then, when He came to His own, His own (people) received Him not.” So, it may not surprise us if Christendom today is looking for Him to come again as a man, and so fail to recognise His presence as a glorious spirit being, just as invisible to the human eye as is the present “prince of this world,” Satan.

We must keep ourselves in humble willingness to learn, while at the same time testing everything by the Word of God, if we would be among those to receive the present truth. “Light is sown for the righteous and truth for the upright in heart.”

Now we can understand why God has seemed not to mind about the terrible wars and great injustices and horrible crimes. God is love and does care but God is also just and wise. Mankind chose to disobey God and to obey Satan, and God saw that it was better to allow mankind to have the consequences of his sin, but His love and wisdom also provided a way to satisfy the justice of His throne and to deliver man from the penalty, death and sorrows, and give him the opportunity of life everlasting in happiness and peace. So the experience of the present life will be an everlasting lesson, for all who will love righteousness and hate evil.

The Scriptures have opened up in a wonderful way in these last days just as promised in Daniel 12 and elsewhere, and we can rejoice in the New Age so soon to commence, of which there is a great deal more stated in the Bible concerning the second presence of Christ and His glorious reign of righteousness than there is concerning the first advent. God’s New World of Tomorrow will indeed be, “the desire of all nations.”

The Harvest Work.

APPRECIATION of the articles on the manner of Christ's return, appearing in August and September "Peoples Papers," has been expressed generally, and the following short article is now submitted on the closely connected and most important subject of the harvest of the Gospel Age.

"I tell you that in that night there shall be two in one bed; the one shall be taken and the other shall be left"—Luke 17:34—omitted in Matthew's account.

The Lord, through the Prophet, informs us that though the Millennial morning draws near, a night also approaches. (Isa. 21:12.) It will be a night of trouble in the forefront of which the saints will be gathered out of Babylon. The "bed" here, in harmony with Isaiah's use of that word (Isa. 28:20), may be interpreted to symbolize human creeds which are long enough for "babes" in Christ, but too short for a developed "man" to stretch himself in it. This is true of the various "doctrines of men," substituted for but very different from the doctrines of God's Word whose lengths and breadths surpass human knowledge. For instance, the doctrine of Election, as taught by our Calvinist friends is a quite sufficient "bed" to rest many who are only "babes" in Christ, whose senses have never been much exercised; but as in the light of present day knowledge the babes get awake and grow in grace and knowledge, they will all surely find the old creed-bed too short for comfort; and as each attempts to wrap himself in the promises of God narrowed by an erroneous theology, he cannot satisfactorily cover himself: doubts creep in to chill him with fear that after all he is not certain that he and all his friends are of the "elect;" and by and by such developed Christians find it a relief to get out of such a predicament; and to such God generally sends the light of present truth to guide them to a "large place" of true rest supplied with abundant coverings for all who seek to know and to do the Father's will. Others, however, the vast majority, remain quite satisfied and comfortable in their various little cribs, because they are "babes" and not "men" in Christian knowledge and experience. "One shall be taken and the other left."

"Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left."—Matt. 24:40.

"The field is the world," our Lord explained; and in this discourse it represents a condition outside the nominal "house;"—outside of Babylon. Thus we are taught that not all "come-outers" will be "gathered," but that the "jewels" will be sought wherever they may be—"the Lord knoweth them that are His," and in this harvest gathering He is making up His jewels,—gathering His "elect," to be joint-heirs in His Kingdom.

"Two shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken and the other left."—Matt. 24:41; Luke 17:35.

A mill is a place where food is prepared; the ministers and theological schools do the grinding of the spiritual food for "Babylon," and turn out very poor grist—not "clean provender." The complaint is a growing one that the food supplied is largely husks and chaff, which will not sustain spiritual life and strength: and each grinder is obliged to prepare what is given him by his own denomination, and he cannot hold his position and yet provide the "meat in due season," "clean provender," for the household of faith. Hence "present truth" gathers some of the grinders and leaves others—one is taken and another left. Those who are loyal to God and to His flock will be taken; all others will be left. While the world and the nominal church declare this to be a time of union and "confederacy," God declares it to be a time of separating.—Isa. 8:12.

Whither Gathered—The Attraction.

“And they (the disciples) answered and said unto Him, Where, Lord? (Where will these be taken?) And he said unto them, Wheresoever the body (the carcass, the food) is, thither will the eagles be gathered together.”—Matt. 24:28; Luke 17:37.

The lesson is that in this day, when the Lord is gathering His “elect” from the four winds of heaven — from every quarter of the Church—He will attract them as eagles are attracted, by food, for which they have a keenness of vision and appetite; that in due time the Lord would provide the proper food, and His true people would recognise it and be gathered to it;—the ready and worthy taken and the others left.

The food of “present truth” now provided by our Lord, and the gathering of His saints by and to it, fits the description of this prophecy exactly. The present call is not out of one “mill” into another “mill;” not out of one “bed” into another of about the same size. It is not the gathering by one man or many men, to him or to them, into a new denomination; but a gathering together unto Christ Himself, the true and only Master and Teacher. Where and when before was there ever such a recognition of all who trust in the precious blood of Christ and who are consecrated to Him, as the one household of faith—all brethren — and the one and only Lawgiver Christ, regardless of human creed’s and dogmas upon other subjects? Never and nowhere since the days of the apostles, so far as we may judge.

Moreover, it is worthy of note that great human ability, oratory, etc., have been notably connected with other movements, but not with this present gathering to the Lord. Here the truth, the spiritual food which the Lord is supplying, is the whole attraction: human flourish and oratory find little room for exercise here; they are lacking but are not missed. The gathered and gathering ones come together because they “hunger and thirst after righteousness:” and they are finding the satisfying portion which the Lord Himself has provided; and each for himself is eating thereof.

Faithful Warnings.

(Heb. 12:25-29.) (Convention Address.)

HOW true it is that the storm clouds are all about us these days of our Lord's presence; and the darkness of gloom and perplexity and trouble deepens on every side. We inquire: why is this day of His presence such a time of trouble and distress of nations? It is because righteousness and judgment are the habitation of His throne, and He is judging the nations and weighing them in the balance. Judgment is being laid to the line and righteousness to the plummet, to the intent that before long equitable principles of His government may be established in the earth. And not only will all unrighteousness be made manifest, but "a fire goeth before Him and burneth up His enemies." This work of judgment and consequent time of trouble being a necessary preparation for the glorious reign of righteousness that shall succeed it, and will all be wisely directed by the high and holy One who is too wise to err. And we may discern in it the abundant cause for rejoicing and gladness. Indeed there is cause for rejoicing not only among the saints but in all the earth. It is in the midst of this day of trouble the word of the prophet is verified. "His lightnings enlightened the world; the earth saw and trembled."

God's lightnings are enlightening the world, and as a result there is a great commotion everywhere manifest; there is dissatisfaction, unrest, and the whole current of popular thought is set in revolutionary direction. The lightning flashes are revealing the corruption that is in the world; and the conflicting ideas and voices and theories and threats reveal the facts the prophets foretold. "The nations are angry;" and the whole earth trembles with the din.

And while the earth trembles, what is the condition among the Lord's consecrated people? How do they see it? It is written "Zion heard and was glad." It is because they dwell in the secret place of the Most High, and abide under the shadow of the Almighty. These dwellers in the secret place of the Most High are provided in these perilous times with a clear knowledge of the Divine Plan, which enables them to see both the necessity for the present method of divine discipline upon the world and also the peaceable fruits of righteousness which shall result because of this. In the midst of the storm and battle of this Day of the Lord, they hear the commanding voice of the Lord of armies, and their hearts rejoice because they have full confidence in His ability to bring order out of all the confusion. They realize that in the judgments of this day it is the Lord that speaketh from the high place of authority and control; and can give thanks because of His justice, wisdom and love, and that He doeth all things well. The Psalmist intimates that while the world at large would be in ignorance of the import of present events and in fear and dread; and while the saints will be rejoicing because of His judgments and their foreseen outcome, some, all heedless of the voice which speaketh from heaven, will boast themselves of idols. He says, "Confounded be all they that serve graven images, that boast themselves of idols." Psal. 97:7.

These words also call to mind the warning of the Apostle Paul, "See that ye refuse not Him that speaketh." The Apostle addresses these words to those who are acquainted with the Lord's voice, warning them against at any time refusing longer to heed it when it speaks in judgment. But there will be some who will refuse longer to obey it and be led by it; but turn away to the idols which their wayward hearts set up in His stead. These graven images are the work of their own hands, human philosophies and science falsely so called, of this evil day; and those who reject the testimony of Him that speaketh from heaven, having once heard it, invariably fall into some of the many forms of idolatrous worship now prevalent, or else drift from one to another in a restless kind of way. We see the gathering, darkening clouds, and how the whole earth trembles with fear, and for looking after the things that are coming; and the foretold events of this time speak in trumpet tones. How shall we regard these things? Shall it be with deep thought and reverence, lest the promise being left us of entering into the rest and glory of His kingdom any of us should seem to come short of it, or shall it be with that presumptuous irreverence which disregards all these manifestations of divine power, and, turning away from Him that speaketh from heaven sets up some idol of a wayward heart. May such beware of any conditions of heart that would lead to such a course. We, realize that the establishment of His kingdom is accompanied with the shaking of the earth and the mountains, and as the Apostle says, "the heavens (the ecclesiastical powers) shall be shaken." What is the object of all this shaking? It is the removal of these things and the establishment of a kingdom which cannot be moved; for only, the unshakable principles of truth and righteousness can endure, and all those who do not follow these principles will be shaken out of the company called to share the honours of the kingdom. The many snares and delusions are accomplishing this very work, they are shaking out all the unstable as well as the false and faithless ones; and in the end only the true will remain.

We have the warning of the Apostle Paul where he says, "Beware therefore lest that come upon you which is spoken of in the prophets. Behold, ye despisers, and wonder and perish, for I work a work in your days, a work which ye shall in no wise believe though a man declare it unto you." (Acts 13:40-41.) It is true today as it was near the end of the Jewish age, that there are many despisers of the truth, especially of the truth now due and coming to light. But nevertheless the work of the Lord goes steadily forward; He is doing as the prophet says (Isa. 28:21) "His work, His strange work; and bringing to pass His act, His strange act." It would seem a strange work to those unacquainted with His plan of salvation, which sets aside all human theories and imaginations, and pursues a course in direct opposition to them. The world beholds this work of the Lord and with fear and trembling as to the final outcome. And not only the world, but the vast majority of His professed followers too, who have not been living on such intimate terms with the Lord as to be led into a clear knowledge of His wonderful purposes, regard the future with fearful forebodings of His present strange work, as a preliminary preparation for the reign of the Prince of Peace and the setting up of Christ's kingdom.

Before that can be fully established, all power and authority of whatever sort it is, which belongs to this present order of things must pass away. The great crisis of this world's affairs has not yet been reached; but the preparations are progressing steadily both in civil and ecclesiastical circles, and all the wise will apply their heads and hearts to the instruction of the sure word of prophecy that shineth as a light in a dark place, for it is written (Dan. 12:10) that "none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." Not the wise of this world whose wisdom shall perish; but the spiritual wisdom which cometh from above.

Those who thus rely upon God, and take Him at His word, see light in His light; they realize the necessity for the great scourge of trouble which shall shatter all human pride and ambition, and humble the nations in the dust. They see too the vanities of human theories, and the fallacy of human arguments, and the futility of all human schemes for the uplifting and blessing of the world as they view them in contrast with the plan which God is working out.

In Acts 20:28 the Apostle, speaking to the elders, gives a warning which must not be despised. He says, "Take heed to yourselves and to all the flock." If those leaders need to take heed unto themselves first, we can see the seriousness of the situation. In these last days we need to take special care of the insidious and subtle deceptions we are apt to meet, and be alert to discern the craftiness of the Adversary, and that we may be of those of whom the Apostle says "We are not ignorant of his devices." Believing as we do that in this day of the Lord's second presence there has been a special unfolding of truth in accordance with Jesus' promise (Luke 12:37), we can glance over this latter day period and note the activities of the Adversary. At the first Advent there were Satanic attacks upon Jesus and the truth ministry, and so it is in these days of His second Advent ministry. It is the truth itself that the Adversary has sought to hinder and becloud, well knowing that this instrumentality, the truth of God, is the means the Lord is using to accomplish the spiritual transformation and sanctification of the consecrated believer. (Jno. 17:17.) If we review the periods of shaking, testing, and sifting, we note that nearly always they were occasioned by brethren of prominence who had great experience in the truth, but after a time were persuaded to join the Adversary's assault on the Truth. Why? Because it is like a two-edged sword cutting both ways from which there is no escape:

One of the most deceptive practices of Satan is to associate himself with what appears on the surface to be most logical and scriptural considerations. Among some of these in which the Adversary specializes is "Christian liberty," "progress," and "more light." God's Word has much to say concerning these subjects. Christians are advised to maintain their liberty in Christ, and to make progress in the knowledge of the Truth, His Word being a shining light that shines more and more unto the perfect day. The history of God's people definitely shows that the Adversary places himself in the front ranks of those who would walk in the light. His arts and devices in mixing truth and error are numerous. The Apostle warns us of the peril when he declares, "No marvel, for Satan himself is transformed as an angel of light." He would present himself in the vesture of light and holiness as though he were an emissary of God. He is a master at deceit. Thus the Apostle could point his finger squarely at some in the midst of the church of his time who were "false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves as apostles of Christ." What carefully discerning child of God is there, that cannot understand that the apostle is here issuing a solemn warning concerning the activities and practices of the Adversary as he makes use of prominent brethren in the church afflicted with secret pride, or 'some other spiritual malady, in the perversion of the real knowledge of God, and in placing it before the Lord's flock as the unadulterated truth, and as representing real progress in the path of light. We have recognized by past experiences that many fight most strenuously to oppose the true light, under the influence of Satan blinding them against the facts, being opposers of liberty in its true sense, preferring to be in bondage through ignorance. Thus Satan keeps one class this side of true liberty; and such as cannot be held, he goes along with them to help them on to more liberty on the other side, beyond what is true, so as to suit their various tastes and appetites; and to reason with either side becomes the problem.

Another has said, "Liberty is a grand word, yet it does not always spell true blessing and happiness." In Genesis we read how Satan broke loose from righteousness, and ship-wrecked his eternal interests. The history of the Jews shows what a rebellious people they were. They rebelled against regulations, desiring liberty to please themselves, and subsequently had experiences of sorrow and repentance. Would it surprise us that the Adversary still holds up the bait of liberty, and leads the world into all kinds of excesses. Should it surprise us that amongst God's people too, he uses similar tactics; telling them that they are enslaved when they hold closely to God's Word. He would urge them to break the bands of their consecration and re-assert their freedom. Nor is it peculiar that some in leaving the truth, begin a warfare against it, in that they promulgate new theories not really endorsed by Scripture.

Some imagine licence as liberty, which is certainly easier to drift along instead of fighting against the current. Let all the children of light rejoice in the only liberty that is really a blessing; the liberty wherewith Christ makes free those who become His bond-servants. These are set free from the bondage of sin. These are bound with the cords of love to their Master, and to the spirit of His teachings: bound to the altar of sacrifice with cords of devotion strengthening as the days go by.

Another deceptive device of Satan is that of placing so-called "unity," "harmony," and "love," as of more importance than God's truth, that constitutes the message for the last days. What wonderful consolation we have in those words of Psalm 91:1-7. The security we have in the secret place is a safe-guard against the wiles of the Adversary. Idolatry was a great besetting sin of Israel, through the machinations of Satan, and so it is handed down to these latter days, through subtle snares in indirect ways. Too often there are many tangible things assuming the place of supremacy in heart and mind which belongs only to God. The worship of the idol of self often drives out the worship of God. Satan sends out decoys not seen in their true import until the victim becomes ensnared by their influence. Sectarianism, an old form of pitfall, is now brought out in a new form by the great deceiver. Paul warned the Corinthian brethren and others against its dangers. Following the lead of a man or an organization may become a popular thing among those setting out to be footstep followers of Christ. An organization though once used as a vehicle for the promulgation of truth, may become an idol of substantial proportions. Thrusting itself forward as the only true way it may alienate many from their single-hearted devotion to God, into a slavish obedience to human mandates. How much we need to watch and beware in these our busy days of the subtle snares of Satan that hedge about us to draw our attention away from the narrow and only straight way. Let us be awake and beware.

Correspondence.

Victoria.

Dear Friends—Will you please send your Talks on last two Sundays, also any other literature you care to. I have listened to your Talks for some time, and have been pleased to find someone who has beliefs similar to my own.

Since a child, I have disbelieved in the doctrine of “Hell” as taught by the organized churches, also it didn’t appear reasonable to me that those dying in ignorance should have no chance of eternal life, which I am glad to see is clearly explained in your Talks.

Would you also let me know where you meet in the city, as I would be glad to attend your services. Yours sincerely.

To Frank and Ernest—Will you please send me copies of your last three Talks on the Trinity.

I would also like to express, on behalf of my wife and self, our deep appreciation of your Talks each Sunday morning.

May our Heavenly Father bless you in the work you are doing. Yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Having heard your inspiring message over the air this morning, I would deem it a great personal favour if you would forward me a copy of the book “Christ’s Return.” Yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest—I received your parcel with reading matter; thanks very much. I see you gave a Talk on “The Millenium” on July 30. Could you send me a copy; I would appreciate it very much, also copy of “Where are the Dead?” I enclose stamps to cover cost.

I would also like, say, three or four copies of your last Talk, last Sunday; it was very interesting and I would like to send it to my friends. Yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I was interested to hear your discussion on Sunday on this world passing away; however, there were texts that you did not quote and I would like to know how you could explain these away. Gen.

1:1—”In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.” Well, we certainly have the heaven and the earth as the Bible declared. In Matt. 24:35 we have Christ’s own words, this certainly describes our present heaven and earth passing away, as there are none other. In 2 Pet. 3:7, 10, 13 we read of the destruction of this present heaven and earth. I could never quite understand when this takes place. but I know definitely by God's Word, Rev. 21, 1, that the heaven and earth and seas and we now know them will pass away to be replaced by a new heaven and new earth with no sea.

I would be very grateful if you would please send me along a copy of your book "Good News." Hoping to hear from you and thanking you. I am, yours sincerely.

(Literature explaining from the Bible the passing of the symbolic "heavens" (ecclesiastical systems) , "earth" (present social order) and "sea" (restless masses of humanity) will be sent free to all. The book "Foregleams of the Golden Age" is also recommended on this subject. A careful reading of the article in this issue, "Why God Gave a Bible Hard to Understand" will also be found helpful.)

South Australia.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I am writing as a regular listener to your series on Sunday mornings. Would you forward me a copy of the Chart which you spoke of, for which I enclose stamps?

Here let me say how much joy it gives me to hear these dispensational truths spoken so faithfully. So little is known of the deeper things of God and by so few.

Wishing your work God's rich blessing, I am, Yours in Christ.

Dear Sirs,—I am a constant listener to your session on Sunday mornings which certainly is very interesting and true, but while you are so taken up with the Kingdom theory, I have not heard a single thought on Thess. 4, re Christ's return for His redeemed, or Church . . . What are your thoughts on this matter, or event, also given us in 1 Cor. 15:52? Yours in Christ.

(An article appeared in September "Peoples Paper" explaining in some detail 1 Thess. 4. August number also has an article on Acts 1:11, and Matt. 24:27, and both these copies are available free to all.)

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I am still a regular listener to your Sunday morning Bible Talks and was more interested than usual yesterday morning. Will you therefore be good enough to send me a copy of your Talk, also a copy of the tract or booklet on "Christ Return" as per your generous offer.

This is a subject in which I have been intensely interested for many years, but there are still some difficulties that need to be cleared up for me. It is by no means a simple study; perhaps your book will help to bring me to some more definite conclusions on certain aspects of this great truth. Thanking you in anticipation, Yours faithfully.

New South Wales.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I happened to hear your broadcast of questions and answers this morning, which looks to me like the "goods." They certainly deal with many contentious questions, this morning in particular; I would like a copy of them.

I am no stranger to this message, but the form of dealing with these questions should have a great appeal. Enclosed find cheque for one guinea to assist. Yours truly.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I enjoy your Bible discussion on Sunday mornings very much. It comes through 2CA very clearly, and I hope you continue it. Would you please forward the book and discussion heard this morning which I understand is free. I am not sure of the title of the book, but think it is "When Christ

Comes.”

Thanking you and wishing your session every success. Yours sincerely.

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—We listen with great interest to your Bible Talks 10 o’clock every Sunday morning, but missed your last Talk, The Coming of Christ,” and would very much like your leaflet, if we could have one, as your views and ours are so much the same. I am, your very interested listener.

Tasmania.

To Bible Institute, Melbourne, Dear Sirs—Will you please send me three copies of all your booklets you have mentioned in your Talks from 3GL.

Two friends of mine have asked me to send for them, that is why I need three of each. “Christ’s Return” and “God’s Plan” are two and any others, please, you have mentioned.

We are Baptists in Tasmania and I think the Talks are easily the most instructive of a religious nature that I have ever heard. Thank you in anticipation. Yours sincerely.

Western Australia.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—As we have been listening (that is, my son and self) to your Bible readings for some time and are interested in them, we are writing to ask you if you will kindly send us your free booklet as we would like to study it. Thanking you for your helpful explanations of the Scriptures. I remain, yours sincerely.

To Frank and Ernest—It has given me much pleasure to hear some of your broadcasts including that of Sunday last.

I would be pleased to get a copy of your script for the last three. Yours faithfully.

Volume XXVII. No. 12 MELBOURNE, 1st DECEMBER, 1944 Price—Threepence

THE message of the angels to the shepherds on Bethlehem's plains sounds more and more precious to each child of God in proportion as he grows in grace and knowledge. As his eyes and ears of understanding open more widely to the lengths and breadths of God's great plan of the ages, that prophetic message is the more highly esteemed as an epitome of the entire Gospel. Nor can our attention be too frequently called to the great event which lies at the foundation of that message—our Saviour's birth.

For four thousand years and more the promises of God, clothed in more or less of obscurity, had been given to mankind, intimating that ultimately the great curse of sin and death which had come upon the world through Father Adam's disobedience in Eden would be rolled away, and instead of a curse, a blight, would come a blessing of the Lord with life-giving refreshment. In various types, figures and shadowy promises this lesson had come down through the ages to the time of our Lord's birth, especially amongst the Jews, who were the divinely favored and covenanted people. And since the Jews were of a commercial spirit, many of them were to be found in all parts of the civilized world; and thus amongst every people the faith in the one God and the hope of Israel through a Messiah were more or less made known, so that at the time of our Lord's birth, we read, "All men were in expectation" of a soon-coming Messiah. Doubtless this expectation was built upon the interpretation of Daniel's prophecy, which we now see clearly marked the year of our Lord's majority, when He was thirty years of age and made His consecration to His work and received the begetting of the holy spirit, His anointing as the great antitypical High Priest and as the great antitypical King over Israel and the world.

The Angels and the Shepherds.

Noble shepherds those must have been to whom the Almighty sent the angelic message respecting the birth of Jesus, the Messiah, which has rung down the ages and reached our ears—the message which thrills us the more in proportion as we are able to grasp its meaning. First a single angel appeared to the shepherds and allayed their fears, saying,

"Fear not; behold I bring you good tidings." It would appear that fear is one of the dominating impulses of the human mind, especially in conjunction with any revelations from the Lord. Men realize—even the best of the race—that they are imperfect and that the Almighty and His laws are perfect. Instinctively the world seems to realize that a curse or condemnation of the Almighty rests upon it, and instinctively it fears a further curse and further condemnation, realizing its continual and increasing sinfulness. The same is true today with all except the comparatively few who are well informed respecting the divine character and plan. Thus the subject of religion is generally obnoxious to the world in general—a subject which they prefer to avoid, because of a feeling of guilt and a dread of further knowledge and condemnation.

It is for the true children of God today, as it was for the angels at that time, to assure the world that God is better than all their fears—that God so loved the world as to redeem them from the just sentence of death, the curse that came upon all as inheritors of Adam's imperfections and sentence.

“Good tidings” is another translation of our word “gospel.” How beautiful the thought that the Gospel is really and truly good tidings. Alas, for the misrepresentations of God's plan, under which so many of His professed people misrepresent His character and His Word, and apply the term “Gospel” to their various messages from the dark ages, teaching purgatory and eternal torment as the portion of the race. Let us get away from this false thought and get the truth that the Gospel is good tidings. The angel elaborated, saying that his message was good tidings of great joy, which should be unto all people. Ah, thank God, His plan is wider and deeper and higher and grander than anything we had ever conceived. The Gospel is not merely to be good tidings to the comparatively few that now have ears to hear and eyes to see its beauties, but in God's due time it is to be good tidings of great joy to all people.

As every member of Adam's race shared in his fall and in the curse of death which came upon him as a result, so every member of the race was included in the great redemptive sacrifice which our Lord Jesus offered and which was finished at Calvary. God's plan in Christ, as it is being worked out and shall ultimately be accomplished, will mean great joy for all people, and the tidings of this were given at the very moment of our Lord's birth, because He was the one through whom all the glorious things of the divine purpose and plan shall ultimately be accomplished.

Although nearly nineteen centuries have rolled away since that angelic message was delivered, it has not yet been fulfilled except in a limited measure by faith to those who have the eye of faith and the ears of faith, in all a “little flock.” But the tidings of great misery for nearly all people has been spread abroad in the name of Christ, much to the discredit of the divine plan and to the dishonor of the divine character. Instead of carrying joy the message has very generally carried grief and sorrow, especially to the kind-hearted and more generously disposed. Indeed we may say that no message of the Lord Jesus either true or false, has ever reached all people. Even today, after nineteen centuries of propaganda, only a comparatively small portion of the human family has ever heard of the only name given under heaven and amongst men whereby we must be saved—“nor is there salvation in any other.”—Acts 4:12.

What, then, shall we say of the salvation which is come to those who have truly accepted Christ as their Saviour, and who are today rejoicing in Him as such, and who by faith are seeing the salvation of God begun in their own hearts and yet to be fully accomplished under the whole heavens? This the Apostle calls the salvation by hope. His words are, “We are saved by hope.” (Rom. 8:24.) We are not saved actually; we are still surrounded by sin, pain, sighing, crying and dying; the curse is not yet rolled away. All that the best of the Lord's people have received is salvation by hope, by faith. Yet this anticipation of the future salvation, of the resurrection from the dead, of a participation in the glory, honor and immortality of the divine nature promised to the faithful, is so strong, so clear, that those who possess it are enabled to rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory, even in the midst of trials and difficulties and weaknesses and unfavorable conditions incident to the curse upon the race.

A Prophecy of Good Things.

Yes, the angelic message was a prophecy of good things to be accomplished for the Church and also for the world during the Millennial Age. The Church is to have the first blessing. The first resurrection is to be composed only of the blessed and holy who shall live and reign with Christ during the Millennium, the thousand years in which Satan shall be bound, and when the good influences of truth and righteousness shall enlighten the whole earth. The declaration of the Scripture is that the deliverance of the Church will come first, as the prophet declares, “God will help her early in the morning.”—Psa. 46:5.

But much as we rejoice in the glorious hopes of the Gospel set before us who now see, who now believe, who now rejoice with joy unspeakable, we are glad that the divine mercy and love are of such lengths and breadths and heights and depths as to encompass the whole world of mankind, and to provide a blessing for every member of Adam’s race through Him who loved us and bought us with His precious blood.

It will be during the Millennial Age that this prophecy of the angel will have its fulfilment, and the great Saviour who has already redeemed us by His sacrifice will stand forth as the King, the glorified Messiah, and establish His dominion of righteousness in the world for the blessing and uplifting of every member of the race. In harmony with the words of the Apostle, those will be times of restoration, “times of restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began.” (Acts 3:20, 21.) If the Lord had based the hope of the world upon some works of merit or righteousness of the world’s doing, then indeed we might have feared—indeed the more we know of the world, the less hope we would have. But, on the contrary, the Lord has based the entire proposition for the future blessing not upon our worthiness, but upon the worthiness and sacrifice of His Son—to you is born a life-giver, which is Messiah the Lord.

How it adds to our enjoyment of the coming age blessings to know that the trials and difficulties of this present Gospel Age are subject to the divine supervision in the interest of the little flock that is now being gathered in advance from amongst men—the “elect,” the Church. We see how the present trials and difficulties are the chiselings and polishing necessary to our development in the fruits and graces of the holy spirit in the character-likeness of God’s dear Son, our Lord, our Hope, our Bridegroom. How joyful the thought that soon the elect number called from the world to be the Bride, the Lamb’s wife, will be completed and enter into her glory. How precious the thought that then they shall be privileged with their Lord and Master to extend the divine favor of blessing and uplift to the world. What higher honor or privilege or blessing could possibly come to any?

It was after the giving of the message of good tidings and great joy by the heavenly one that a host of angels appeared to the shepherds, saying, “Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to men.” This, too is a prophecy. It is not yet true, but will be fulfilled in every particular in God’s due time, which we believe is now nigh, even at the door. Not yet does God receive glory in the highest, not yet is there peace amongst men. Quite to the contrary. God’s name is blasphemed, not only by those who vulgarly and in ribald jest take the divine name in vain, and not merely by the heathen who worship devils and think they are gods, but even by Christian people, God’s name is blasphemed every day. For be it known that blasphemy is any dishonorable misrepresentation of another. God be merciful to us, for at some time or other every one of us doubtless has blasphemed the holy name in this manner — by misrepresenting the divine character and divine plan, by picturing the God of love and mercy and justice and truth as the originator, the planner, the perpetuator of the eternal torment of the great mass of His creatures, born in sin and shapen in iniquity, born to sin as the sparks fly upwards.

But the Lord had mercy upon us because we did it ignorantly. And we also should have’ compassion upon others who still ignorantly misrepresent our God, and our energies should be continually bent to their assistance that the eyes of their understanding might open more widely to perceive the lengths and breadths and heights and depths and know the love of God which passeth understanding.

Noting that peace on earth and goodwill to men have not followed the Saviour’s birth thus far, and not discerning that this is a prophecy of what is to be accomplished during the Millennium, many have been inclined to change the translation of this verse so as to have it read, "On earth peace amongst men, in whom he is well pleased." However by thus changing it, the statement would not be true, for even the Lord's people have no peace on earth. Whatever peace they have is in their hearts, and based upon their faith in the Lord and in the glorious things which He was promised. Our Lord Himself and the apostles testified to this, assuring us that whosoever in this present time would live godly should suffer persecution, that a man's foes would be 'they of his own household, etc. (2 Tim. 3:12; Matt. 10:26.) Let us not confuse ourselves nor abridge the testimony of the Word, but with the eye of faith look forward to the day of Christ in which all these glorious things shall have their fulfilment, in which peace shall indeed fill the whole earth with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, bringing divine favor and rolling away the curse from the entire groaning creation, as pointed out by the Apostle.-Rom. 8:22.

Not even with the inauguration of the Millennium will this prophecy be fulfilled: not until , its close, when the human family shall have been lifted by the kingdom regulations out of sin, sickness, pain, sorrow and death, up, up to all that was lost in Adam-not until then will there indeed be glory to God in the highest, not until then will there be peace amongst men. Nor are we to understand that the entire race will be appreciative of the divine love and favor even after they have fully seen the righteousness of God in Christ manifested. On the contrary the Scriptures seem to clearly teach that there will be a class who will then prove unfit for life eternal, unappreciative of the divine favor and we learn that all such shall be utterly destroyed from amongst the people in the second death. Thus eventually by the close of the Millennium, Satan and all wilful wrongdoers having been destroyed, the time will come as declared in the Scriptures when all voices in heaven and in earth and under the earth shall be heard praising God, Him that sitteth upon the throne, and the Lamb forever and ever. Hosanna! Glory to God in the highest! Peace and goodwill to men, will be the final shout of a redeemed race when the great salvation shall have been fully outworked according to the divine plan set forth in the Scriptures.

He wakeneth morning by morning, He wakeneth mine ear to hear as the learned. The Lord God bath opened mine ear Isaiah 50:4, 5.

Lord, in the stillness of the dawn Before the world breaks in To flood the mind with its concerns Its hurry and its din,

Let me breathe deep of heavenly air,
And may my inner ear
The music of the heavenly land
In all its sweetness, hear.

PEOPLES PAPER AND HERALD OF CHRIST'S KINGDOM.

The Witness by Radio.

IT is now six months since the last report on the Radio witness was presented in these columns together with the balance sheet covering this feature of the Institute's work, and it is a pleasure now to present a brief account of the privilege of sounding forth the Gospel message in this manner, made possible by the loving co-operation of a number of our friends, through the Lord's overruling providence.

That the Lord has blessed the message of truth sent out in this way to a considerable number throughout the various states is well indicated by the appreciation expressed by listeners. And one of the most pleasing results is that the radio sessions have found a number of friends who had rejoiced in the truth years ago and for various reasons had become discouraged; it is pleasing to know that the short session on the air on Sundays has brought much help and refreshing to these, as well as to those who have come in contact with the truth message for the first time.

Early in July this year radio stations 3B0 (Bendigo, Vic.) and 2CA (Canberra) were engaged, and 3SH (Swan Hill, Vic.) was discontinued shortly afterwards. In this way new areas are covered and some very good responses have been received through these stations. With stations 3GL (Geelong, Vic.) and SAD (Adelaide) which cover the larger cities, as well as country areas, there is a steady response from new cases, as well as a regular listening circle of friends. It is encouraging to know that some real help and comfort is being conveyed to listeners, and also to realise that the Lord will give the full increase in His own time and way.

Some of our brethren have done good work in making the radio sessions known, and all who are able to engage in this work, as unto the Lord, should esteem it a privilege to have some part in the service of the truth. Truly the time is short now for opportunities of this kind, for the time of trouble must be expected to close in on all lands within reasonable time, and then no one can work. There is a blessing received also by those friends who seek to point others to the only hope of life and comfort. Advertising cards are available to all free, supplied from the Radio Fund.

Another service made possible since the radio work has been undertaken is the sending out of the dialogues in 'printed form. After each broadcast a copy of the discussion is offered to all listeners, but in addition to this, large numbers of copies are mailed each month with the "Peoples Paper" to subscribers and others who desire them. These copies are often used as tracts for passing out where good may be done; all our friends are welcome to samples of the dialogues.

The balance sheet presented below shows some details of the financial side of this work, covering the past six months, and while the credit balance has been greatly reduced, there has been a reluctance to discontinue any of the radio stations for the time being, knowing that each area being covered has its circle of appreciative listeners. Any changes that may be necessary later, will be announced in the "Peoples Paper." It is felt that in these days the Lord's people have the last privilege of proclaiming the Gospel message, while the heavenly calling is still available to "as many as the Lord our God shall call." While it may seem that the radio witness is expensive, who can value, in this world's treasures (which after all must soon pass away), the privilege of being used of the Lord to enlighten and comfort some of His little ones, for whom Christ died?

The many sacrifices of our friends generally to enable this witness to go on, under the providential care of the Lord, is most encouraging, and the desire is to use faithfully, as unto Him, the means made available for this service of the truth. It is requested that the prayers of our friends be offered for the Lord's guidance and blessing, that His will may be done in this, and all features of the harvest work.

Booklet Replacing January “Peoples Paper”

Instead of the usual issue of “Peoples Paper” for next month, a booklet entitled “The Offerings for Sin” is taking its place, and copies are being posted out with this issue under the one cover. It is felt that this booklet will be found helpful on the subjects covered, and subscribers desiring extra copies may obtain these while the supply is available.

Melbourne Christmas Convention.

As announced last month, the Melbourne Class has arranged for the Annual Convention to be held (D.V.) for the four days 23rd December to 26th December, and all friends able to attend these assemblies will be very welcome. A very profitable time may be expected, by the Lord’s favor.

The gatherings are to be held at Masonic Hall, 254 Swan Street, Richmond, which is only a few minutes from Melbourne city. Programmes will be ready shortly, and these and other information may be obtained from the Class Secretary, Mr. J. B. Hiam, 44 Heath Avenue, Oakleigh, S.E.12, Victoria.

Patience and Comfort of the Scriptures.

(Convention Address).

“For whatsoever things were written aforetime, were written for our learning that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope.” (Rom. 15:14.)

PERHAPS the best meaning of hope is fervent expectation with the desire of receiving it. If we let our memories go back to the time when we first saw the light, what was the hope that first gladdened our hearts? Would it not be God’s wonderful Plan of Restitution and the destruction of death? How poets and bards of every age and clime have written of death, the old, old fashion which came in with our first parents and will last unchanged until this age has run its course. Longfellow wrote:

“There is no home—but has some vacant chair, There is no flock, however well attended, but one dead lamb is there.”

Then from I. G. Whittier:

“Still memory to a grey haired man
That sweet child face is showing,
Dear girl the grasses on her grave
Have forty years been growing.
Touched by a loving hand,
Wakened from Slumber, ‘
Chords that lie shattered
Will vibrate once more:” .

What say the Scriptures? “Thus saith the Lord: A voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation, and bitter weeping; Rahel weeping for her children refused to be comforted for her children, because they were not. Thus saith the Lord: Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord; and they shall come again from the land of the enemy.” (Jer. 31:15, 16.) Glad will be that day when all shall know the Lord. Isaiah tells of a day when the whole world is at rest, and they shall break forth into singing.

What is the patience of the Scriptures?—”In your patience possess ye your souls.” When Jacob had to give up Benjamin and cried, “All these things are against me”; when the water bottle gave out and Hagar cast herself against a juniper bush and lifted up her voice and wept, that she might not see death of her child; when Naomi cried, “Call me not Naomi (pleasant), call me Mara (bitter): for the Almighty hath dealt very bitterly with me. I went out full, and the Lord hath brought me home again empty: why then call me Naomi, seeing the Lord hath testified against me, and the Almighty hath afflicted me?” These are experiences that were written for our admonition, but whatever be our experiences, as God’s children we may always have the comfort of the Scriptures, for no other book is like the Bible.

In the Scriptures are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, and they have a message of help for our every need;—whether weary with the trials of the pilgrim way, perplexed with what is the will of God concerning us, or when we are, so to speak, on the mountain tops.

That sweet singer, F. R. Havergal, in “Evening Radiance” wrote:

“His spirit shines upon His Word,
And makes it sweet indeed:
Just like a shining lamp held up
Beside me as I read.

And brings it to my mind again,
Alone upon my bed;
Till all abroad, within my heart,
The love of God is shed.”

“Leaves which grave experience ponders,
Soundings for her pilot charts;
Pages which we read adoring
Him who writes on human hearts.”

“Thy words were found, and I did eat them; and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart.” (Jer. 15:16.) “For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart.” (Heb. 4:12.) “Give ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth. My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass.” (Deut. 32:1, 2.) There are many lovely and comforting verses in the Scriptures and they are most precious to God’s children, because it is in the study of the Scriptures that we may meet with the Lord in sweet fellowship. “Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causest to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts.” (Psa. 65:4.) This beautiful verse of the Psalmist is expressive of the calling of this age. “If we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.” (1 John 1:7.) Chosen from the “Camp” of alienation and brought into the “Court” of friendship. Fellowship means oneness; atonement brings peace with God in justification and the removal of all condemnation at consecration. Having access to God by His spirit makes possible increasingly close fellowship as we walk in the light of truth and feed upon His Word. Our fellowship deepens in the course of time, becomes more precious, more intimate, and we learn what it is to dwell in the antitypical Holy—to walk in the light of the golden candlestick, to feast on the shewbread of truth, and to offer up incense acceptable on the altars of the will of God. "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death." (Phil. 3:10). "While the king sitteth at his table, my spikenard sendeth forth the smell thereof." (S. of Sol. 1:12.)

As our pilgrimage lengthens and God's wonderful plan unfolds through His Word the spiritual treasures and beauty of holiness, how the fragrance of our devotion rises to our Lord. A Christian writer recently wrote that when the employees of a perfume factory come out for lunch the whole street smells of the fragrance because the employees had been in contact with the very essence of the perfume. As a woman might take into her bosom an aromatic sprig of myrrh, so we may take the Lord Jesus into our hearts—"More dear, more intimately nigh, than e'en the sweetest earthly tie."

What is a Christian-perfumed life? It is one that lets its light shine in kind and loving deeds; by your prayers for others; winsome words for the Master's use made meet, that all who come in contact with you perceive an indwelling Christ, and go away helped. "The Lord is my strength and my shield; my heart trusted in him, and I am helped; therefore my heart greatly rejoiceth; and with my song will I praise him." (Psa. 28:7.) But good perfumes are never cheap. A holy, fragrant life is not obtained without cost. It may be gathered in the crucible of difficulty and perplexity, of pain and suffering, or of sorrow and bereavement. Incense is liberated by the action of fire. Your own physical suffering may have particularly fitted you to help others, when they come to learn your secret.

"Dear name! the rock on which we build,
Our shield and hiding-Place:
Our never-failing treasure, filled
With boundless stores of grace!"

"That the trial of your faith being much more precious than 'gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire.'" But then, "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

F. R. Havergal left this testimony: ,

"Then hush, oh hush, for the Father
Whose ways are true and just,
Knoweth, and loveth, and careth,
And waits for thy perfect trust.

The cup He is slowly filling,
Will soon be filled to the brim,
And an infinite compensation,
Forever be found in Him."

Waits for thy perfect trust. How meaningful those words from one who went through tribulation, as we might say, to the very swelling of Jordan.

"Have faith in God." Oh, what power and comfort are in these words of our Master's when they flash into the mind of the child of God in the furnace of affliction. God waits to be gracious. "It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord." (Lam. 3:26.) Those who will be with Jesus in the Kingdom must expect trials, to develop faith, and God will permit the trials. Take as an example of suffering affliction, Job. He had lost his sheep, his oxen and cattle and camels; his ten children had been taken from him; he was covered with boils; even his wife turned against him; every one was trying to discourage him, but Job said, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust him." God did not deliver Job out of his difficulties, but let him go through with them; nor may He deem it best to deliver us quickly. The Lord is good unto them that wait for Him, to the soul that seeketh Him. God will not suffer us to be tempted above what we are able to bear, but He wants us to go through with our trials rejoicingly as Job did. "Behold, I go forward, but he is not there; and backward, but I cannot perceive him: On the left hand, where he doth work, but I cannot behold him: he hideth himself on the right hand, that I cannot see him: But he knoweth the way that I take: when he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold." (Job 23:8-10.)

"Thy cheeks are comely with rows of jewels, thy neck with chains of gold." (S. of Sol. 1:10.) Gold represents the divine nature. This chain of gold which we are each making for ourselves is composed of the sacrifices we willingly and understandingly make for the Master's cause. Every time we do something for the Lord in the way of sacrifices, that costs us something in suffering, we add a link to that chain. The greater number of links, the more beautiful the chain. "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!" (Isa. 52:7.)

"Rejoicing in hope; patient in tribulation; continuing instant in prayer." (Rom. 12:12.) Here the apostle gives us excellent advice in tribulation. Wilhelmina Stitch's "Prayer in Adversity" is helpful:

"Lord, keep Thou my temper sweet."
Thus, I used to hear her say,
As she trod life's lonely way,
Faced so often by defeat.

"Lord, keep Thou my temper sweet."
Phrase of wisdom; how it clings,
Troubles now I never meet,
But within my heart there rings,

"Lord, keep Thou my temper sweet."
Sullen is the storm-swept sky,
Everything is going wrong.
That's no reason you or I

Should broadcast a bitter song.
Fret not with life when things go wrong,
Chant this helpful little song—"
Lord, keep Thou my temper sweet."

This is very good advice amidst the irritations and tasks that sometimes seem never to end, and troubles that come so unexpectedly.

In Luke 21:36 the Saviour gives us a remedy how to keep our minds from being too much occupied with the cares and distractions of earthly things—"Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man."

How lovely was Jacob's prayer at Bethel in gratitude for the Lord's providences in his life—"Who answered me in the day of my distress, and was with me in the way which I went." This seems to harmonise with the walk to Emmaus—"And Jesus drew near and went with them."

Hagai's experience was an acute one, but how lovely was God's providence—"And God opened her eyes, and they saw a well of water; and she went, and filled the bottle with water, and gave the lad drink."

(Gen. 21:19.) These things were written for our admonition, upon whom the end of the ages have come, and we too have acute experiences.

Then, above all things, strive to let the peace of God rule in your hearts and minds, for without peace there can be no true healing; worries weaken reasoning power and darken the outlook on life. Remember, "Every tomorrow has two handles; we may take hold of it by the handle of anxiety or by the handle of faith."

Then, why not determine to cultivate an abiding trust in God, with confidence and fortitude, and thereby gain inspiration and a daily uplift. "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." (John 14:2 7.)

WHAT SORROW SAID.

'Look thou beyond the evening sky," she said,
Beyond the changing splendours of the day:
Accept the pain, the weariness, the dread—
Accept, and bid me stay.

I turned, and clasped her close with sudden strength,
And slowly, sweetly, I became aware
Within my arms,
God's angel stood at length,
White robed and calm and fair.

And now I look beyond the evening star,
Beyond the changing splendours of the day;
Knowing the pain
He sends more precious far,
More beautiful than they.

Have You Been in the Valley?

Have you been in the valley of sorrow and grief
Where there's nothing but death And despair?
Where the mists are so dark
And your life seems so stark
And there seems to be no one to care?

Though the storm that is beating around you today
Destroy all you have cherished so dear,
Though your loved ones forsake you,
Temptations o'ertake you,
Look up for the Master is near.

There'll be light in the midst of your sorrow and grief
If you'll just take the hand he extends.
He'll stay close by your side,
With His wisdom will guide,
Relief for your trouble He'll send.

There'll be visions of joy in the valley of grief
Which Christ in His love will unfold.
Then lift up your eyes
To the light in the skies
And His love and His mercy behold.

In the depths of the valley of sorrow and grief
The stars of His presence appear.
Come close to His side,
With the Saviour abide
And the shadows will soon disappear.

There'll be hope in the valley of sorrow and grief
When once you've discovered His love.
And the way will grow bright
To your wondering sight
When the Father smiles down from above.

Dear Christian Friends—I am one of the listeners to your broadcasts privileged to receive the typed dialogues who finds it hard to express in words my gratitude and appreciation of the service that is being rendered to the public on subjects so clearly defined. I commend you also on the splendor of the “Peoples Paper.”

If I may be permitted to do so, I bring to your notice an omission in the dialogues for October—the one on “The Sorrows of Satan” broadcast on 29th October, which was not included in those I receive. These copies I do indeed cherish.

I am enclosing a list of booklets that I would be pleased if you send along to me, possibly when the “Peoples Paper” and this month’s dialogues are despatched, thus making one package do.

I enclose 10/- note to cover cost of booklets, and whatever remains for the expenses of bringing the glad tidings within reach of a vast majority. May God continue to bless you in this glorious work. Yours in Christian grace.

(It is regretted that the dialogue “The Sorrows of Satan” was not broadcast on the majority of stations on 29th October. It will be heard (D.V.) early in the new year, copies of it then being available.—B.B. Institute.)

Frank and Ernest, Dear Christian Friends—It is many months since I wrote to you but I have been studying your booklets, also “Foregleams of the Golden Age,” and enjoyed them all, especially “Foregleams.” I think one could truly say it is indeed a beautiful book and showing the divine plan so clearly too. ,

I am sending 10/- postal note, 3/- for renewal of subscription to “Peoples Paper” which is I think due and would you send me another copy each of August and September issues of same, and enclose two extra dialogues with them; the last two I require, as I wish to send them to a friend who is interested in the Kingdom message. Balance of money to be put to General Fund.

I am a very busy person, but would be glad if you have any copies of “Peoples Paper” for 1942 you could spare. I do enjoy it: I think it is a most instructive and helpful little paper to have on Bible truths. May God bless you in your good work. Yours sincerely.

(Back copies of “Peoples Paper” covering past years are available for those who desire them.—B.B. Institute.)

Frank and Ernest—Dear Sirs—I have been listening with interest to your talks over the air of a Sunday morning and I find them very helpful. Will you kindly send me both last Sunday’s and today’s talks and the booklet on the parables, also the booklet you spoke of last Sunday. I did not quite catch the name but I think it was “Life Beyond the Grave.- Anyway, if that is not the title you will know the one that I am alluding to. Trusting you will send them on to me and thanking you in anticipation. I remain, Yours sincerely.

Frank Ernest, Dear Sirs—I would like you to send me copies of the Sunday mornings’ talks; they have

It is thirty years since I first heard the good news myself through Vol. 1, "Divine Plan of the Ages." and have seen strange things happen to the publishing of the truth since, so you can imagine the surprise and pleasure I feel in hearing the message go out in such a proper manner as it does over the air every Sunday morning at 10 a.m. I pray the Lord's blessing and guidance to be with you in your work. It surely must bring much comfort to some.

Any balance left from cheque enclosed please keep for benefit of the work. With kindest Christian regards. Yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Would you please send me a copy of your talk broadcast over station 2CA this morning, also if possible would you please send me any back copies.

Do I have to write each week for further copies, or will you continue to send them each week? May I add that I am a regular listener to your sessions and that I find your talks very interesting. Thanking you.

(The copies of dialogues are usually sent out monthly, with "Peoples Paper" where desired.—B.B. Institute.)

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Friends—Your lovely packets of booklets and broadcasts reached me safely. . . I was so pleased with all; they helped me greatly. I haven't a wireless so the broadcast copies were such a treat; I hadn't heard any for quite a while; will pass these on to my friends when finished with them.

Have been away for a few days and on my return received your little book for which I thank you. I am sending you the money for the "Peoples Paper"-3/- per annum. I would love to have a few more of any literature; they are all interesting to me and so helpful. Again thanking you for your helpful explanations of the Scriptures. Yours sincerely.

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I have recently seen several copies of the "Peoples Paper" magazine. . . I have not a wireless so am unable to listen in to the dialogues but I would be exceedingly grateful if you would send me a few copies, also the "P.P." from month to month. And have you any back copies which deal with subjects on "Our Saviour's Return," "Salvation," and "The Holy Spirit"? Enclosed 5/. . . Yours for the extension of Christian living.

Western Australia.

Dear Sirs—Many thanks for the book "Atonement." I received it this afternoon and have just glanced through the index. I am sure I shall thoroughly enjoy reading it. I frequently hear from Mr. Nicholson and it is a treat. I also thank you for the monthly "Paper." I think it very good. I have also had several of the dialogues of Frank and Ernest; also I always listen in each Sunday evening. I had the three dialogues on the Trinity and loaned them to our Methodist minister; he thought them very good, had no fault to find with them. Also he thought the two articles in your "Paper" on the second coming of Christ very good, likewise "The Unity of the Father and Son." He has just had the latest, "Why is the Bible Hard to Understand?", also likes that, and is now reading "Foregleams of the Golden Age." Sundry others I have loaned to also like them very much, and you may be sure I do.

Please find enclosed postal note for 3/-. If I understand correctly the book is 2/6, so 3/- should pay for it, plus postage. You might kindly let me know if that is correct. Again thanking you and wishing you all the best. Believe me,

Yours sincerely.

Volume XXVIII. No. 2 MELBOURNE, 1st FEBRUARY, 1945 Price—Threepence

The Work and Ways of God.

(Revelation 15:1-4.) (Convention Address.)

WE have here described a class of people who are represented as singing a song, and judging by the few lines that are given it is a very beautiful song. The theme is lofty and exalted. They sing with great reverence, admiration and exaltation; they sing not of themselves but the praises of the Almighty God. They have seen and experienced some of the wonderful works of their Lord and that is why they sing.

There is, as you know, special rejoicing for those who have come through a great conflict and have gained the victory, and indeed these are said to have gained a victory. (Verse 2.) Yes, it is a great joy, not merely a thrill, but an abiding joy to be on the winning side. These had opposed all that unrighteousness, misrepresentations, deceit, falsehood, flattery and abominations represented here by the beast and his image---a counterfeit religion, a counterfeit worship; yes, a counterfeit king of nations, and kingdom—which all worshipped but those who learned this song of Moses and the Lamb.

Note also, that this song is sung at a time when the wrath of God is about to be poured out upon the nations, and in fact continues to be sung while the various agencies (represented by seven angels) are bringing calamities upon the rest of mankind, as described in Chapter 16, finally ending in Armageddon, in which every man-made system and worship will forever cease.

Now the point is: these singers know all this in advance; they are witnesses of great and marvellous works which they see coming to pass. Their spiritual lives are not affected or troubled by these calamities. Why? Look at their position. In symbolic language they are said to stand "on a sea of glass." You know, off the Queensland coast runs the Great Barrier Reef. I am told that parties are taken out to it in a glass-bottomed boat, through which they can see the ocean bed and the wonderful coral gardens below, the marvellous formations of coral built by millions of tiny sea creatures.

The position of these singers in Rev. 15 is, as it were, above the sea, above the masses of mankind. They figuratively stand on a higher level and from that position, through the eye of faith, see the judgments of God upon the nations; they are calm, serene, untroubled. Their life is hid with Christ in God. To the eye of faith all is transparent as glass. Furthermore, they are very joyful; they see the great and marvellous, just and true works and ways of God.

But who are these standing upon the sea of glass? They are a part of that class which appears before us continually throughout the Book of Revelation. They are first referred to as servants; the Apostle John who wrote the Revelation speaks of himself as a servant also. They are referred to as those "loved of Jesus and washed from sins"; as kings and priests; as a congregation or church—seven churches. They are described as suffering and enduring great persecution; as in deadly conflict with the powers and rulers of darkness. They receive the special care, discipline, encouragement, chastenings, love and overruling providence of the Lord Jesus. They are described as redeemed to God out of every nation, also as witnesses of God and His truth, and at one time as almost overpowered and silenced by Antichrist.

Then again they are infused with new hope, zeal and life which strikes fear into the hearts of their enemies. Later they come to view again, but this time in association with One for whom they have fought such a good fight. "And I looked, and lo, a Lamb stood on Mt. Sion, and with him an hundred and forty-four thousand." (Rev. 14:1.) They are represented as singing a new song—as guileless and faultless—and as the firstfruits. And now here in this chapter 15 they had gotten the victory over the beast and his image, and stand upon the sea of glass, a position which they have not previously occupied, for it is a time when national judgments of God come upon the nations. These are no others than the true followers of Jesus, the saints of God, from Pentecost down to the present time. With such a long and varied experience is it any wonder that they sing, "Great and marvellous are thy works.. just and true are thy ways, thou King

A song symbolizes a beautiful and harmonious expression; it represents the proclamation of the Gospel, the good news in all its various phases. It is here the song of Moses and the Lamb. The followers of the Lamb, the overcomers, rejoice in the beautiful harmony of Moses (the Law and the Prophets) and Jesus and the Kingdom of heaven.

Now they sing of the great and wonderful works of God. Have we discerned, ourselves, some of the greatness of God? Where would we begin to find out about the greatness of God? Well, generally you would say, the Word of God. We see everything there necessary for our life and godliness. Looking about us, as Paul says in Romans, God is known or discerned by the things He has made. So that we see the great and wonderful works of God in creation, the things that God has made. There is a scripture which speaks of this in the Old Testament. “The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge. There is no speech, there are no words, their voice is not heard; but their line is gone out through all the world, and to the end of the earth their words. In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sun, which is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber.” So when we consider the heavens and the wonderful things He has created, surely they are great and wonderful works. I was reading some time ago in “The Dawn” a piece concerning discoveries astronomers have made regarding other planets. It will just serve to show some of the wonderful works of the Lord.

“Astronomers say there are millions of island universes in infinite space, all spinning in a circle so great as to be beyond our conception, and around some mighty sun from which all power proceeds, the seat of the omnipotent, eternal God. Scientists have given much time and study to the motion of these heavenly bodies. It is difficult for us to realize we are travelling at a great speed on three or four different journeys at a time, but scientists say we are wheeling like a merry-go-round on the earth’s axis, at a speed of more than 1,000 miles an hour, while at the same time we are travelling with the earth on its journey round the sun nearly 19 miles a second, nearly 60 times the speed of our own merry-go-round. Besides this, scientists say we are rushing towards the constellation Lyra at the rate of 121 miles a second.

“Then they say the delicate misty quality which may be seen like a milky band across the heavens is not only composed of myriads of stars, but that it really forms the outer rim of our universe, but not the entire known cosmos or order of things in the heavens, which may be more properly called ‘multiverse’. They have discovered that the great circle of the heavens is like a disc or a double convex lens, its diameter in the plan of the Milky Way being 6-10 times greater than the diameter perpendicular to the plane. Every unit in this vast system is in motion, possessing several motions like our sun and his family. More than this, astronomers have discovered huge conglomerates of 30 thousand million stars, and each one like our sun, and doubtless many with planet families, so vast in its dimensions that light, which travels at 186 million miles a second, requires one hundred thousand or more years to travel from boundary to boundary across the Milky Way, and this rotating around its centre just as the earth is rotating around its axis.

So it seems not only is every unit in this universe in motion, but the whole thing is moving too. For instance, with a flock of sheep, every sheep may be in motion, but not travelling. With the universe, every unit is travelling, and the whole mass is travelling. It is extraordinary. Our sun, they tell us, is almost one-quarter of the way out from this great centre, and its speed about that centre is estimated to be at the rate of about 200 miles a second. How much greater, then, must be the rotating speed on the perimeter of the Milky Way.

“Furthermore, scientists tell us that they have discovered many thousands of similar universes located a vast distance from each other and from our own island universe. Indeed, the further men advance in their explorations of space, the more astounding become their discoveries. . . All these bodies are possibly travelling in systematic order around one great Centre of Centres, called in the Scriptures the Heaven of Heavens, the throne of the Eternal, the habitation of God, from whence the great Creator directs all the operations of His illimitable sphere of action. How truly do His works speak of the greatness and grandeur of His infinite power, and the depths and perfections of His unsearchable wisdom. ‘Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty!’”

These heavenly bodies, displaying the glory and magnificence of the Creator’s works, should inspire reverence and awe for that wonderful and incomprehensible Being whom we worship. The Psalmist was inspired to exclaim, “When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; what is man, that thou art mindful of him?” The little speck, here today and gone tomorrow. The whole nations are just as a drop in a bucket, or as the dust of a balance, you would hardly take the trouble to blow away. Yes, this God, He is concerned about man.

Now the next thing we could keep before us in the wonderful works of creation would be man. When we consider man, what a wonderful creation he is. Man is made in the moral and intellectual likeness of his Creator. He is able to reason and arrive at conclusions, which is not given to the lower animals. He is endowed with a free will, able to choose between right and wrong principles, even in his fallen condition. What shall we see when he shall again be restored to his perfection and have the power to live on indefinitely!

David said, "I am fearfully and wonderfully made." Now, whether a man stands at the equator, where the temperature is 125 degrees, or whether he stands at the pole, where the temperature is about 75 degrees below zero, the temperature of the body remains the same, about, it is said 98 to 99 degrees, and a change of temperature of 200 degrees does not immediately affect the body temperature very materially. That is because the Great First Cause, the great Creator, was a master mind, a master builder, a master creator. Yes, this is a wonderful organism.

David goes on to say, "I was curiously wrought." Now that word "wrought" literally means "embroidered", and the figure evidently is that the human form is compared to a variegated garment, beautifully and wonderfully knit together, producing beauty and harmony and strength. I suppose most of you have seen a diagram of the human body, with the plan of the nerves and veins and arteries. That is a wonderful picture to look at, so complicated yet so marvellous and contributing just what is needed for the body to function perfectly, and also to produce strength and harmony.

Now take the power of thought. That is very wonderful when you come to think about it. Thought is invisible, and flashed in a moment from the brain to any part of the body. It becomes visible in word or look or action. The potentialities of thought and speech fill us with awe or fearfulness or with joy and gladness. This is especially so with those who have become Christians and given their lives to the Lord. It was Paul who said we are to glorify God in our bodies and in our spirits, which are His.

Now going a little further, there is still another creation of God which is not yet finished. It is quite separate and distinct from anything yet been made. Solomon said once there was nothing new under the sun. Well, there is something of which he never knew, and that is the New Creation. This New Creation of God is a wonderful thing. It began with Jesus, and then since Pentecost we are spoken of as God's workmanship, God's creating. Being so, we know it will be a pretty good job. We have experienced that ourselves and we can sing, too, "Great and marvellous are thy works."

So don't you think, then, that the transformation of the lives of us and others who have been by nature sinners, condemned, disobedient, faulty, weak, don't you think it is wonderful, a miracle, the change that He has made in our lives? I think it has been said, and truly said, that the Christian life is a miracle of grace.

One would naturally think that God would choose the best material for this New Creation, seeing it is something extraordinary and distinct from every creation, and when finally completed it is to be Divine and possessing His own qualities and nature. One would think, naturally, that He would find the best material for this, but no, we have His word for it that He does not use the best from this world's standpoint. In Corinthians Paul says, "You know your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called; but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things that are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are. Why does He choose these things that are despised and weak? I suppose you know yourselves. "That no flesh should glory in his presence." That is, that none should glory in their own attainments, but in the Creator, who is the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

The true church in due time, as described in another place, is "all glorious within". "Her clothing is of wrought gold", or inwrought with gold. Then again in the New Testament, she is presented "without spot or wrinkle or any such thing." This describes to us her purity and holiness, the inward purity and holiness that must and will be attained by every individual of the Church of the Firstborns, as well as collectively. She will, when perfected, dwell forevermore in the presence of God. So in due time, when perfected and completed, she will possess all that beauty and splendor and purity and the beauty of holiness which will just fit her for her position. Mark you too, we have to attain to that condition before we come into that presence, then we will be quite at home, won't we? The best way to do this, and the only way to attain to this beauty of holiness and perfection of mind at the present time, and the beauty in the resurrection, is by faithful application to our lives of the truths of the Word of God, and constantly keeping before us the glorious perfections of the hope of the New Creation, Christ Jesus. Let us keep before us the words, "So shall the King greatly desire thy beauty; for he is thy Lord, and worship thou him".

This brings us to the question, What constitutes greatness? "Great and marvellous are thy works". I would put it, that greatness is really the beauty of holiness. That makes up a lot. That is why the Lord is great, He is great in holiness. There are many Scriptures which bear that out. "The Lord is great in his kindness toward us." Joel says too, "The loving-kindness of the Lord is great". Then we read in the Psalms, "The Lord is gracious and full of compassion, slow to anger and of great mercy." "His merciful kindness is great toward us." Again, "Great are thy tender mercies, O God." Can't we say the same things—the Lord has done us marvellous kindnesses. "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereto we are glad." That is because He is great in holiness. Now if we can just get this view of the greatness of God, then we can take up our position with those singers and sing, "Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty. Just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints." So we can sing this song, can't we—not whisper it, but sing it out.

It is not always those persons who make a great commotion or great noise that accomplish the greatest things. Most things that create noise are not so powerful. Take for instance the story of Elijah, when the Lord passed by. First of all there was a great, strong wind that rent the mountains and burst the rocks. The Lord was not in that. Next followed the earthquake. The Lord was not in the earthquake. Then followed the fire, the electrical storm. The Lord was not in that. After this followed a still, small voice. This frightened Elijah more than the upheavals of nature. He is spoken of as covering his head with his cloak. So the still, small voice many times does display His mighty power by a few calm yet commanding words. You remember how Jesus spoke to the raging sea of Galilee, "Peace, be still", and there was a great calm. Just a few quiet words changed that lunatic who dwelt amongst the tombs. A few quiet words, and he was restored to peace, quietness and soundness of mind, and sat at Jesus' feet. Peace and quietness are often where greatest power is.

We can consider, too, what David said, "Thy gentleness hath made me glad." Can't we say the same thing?

"Knowest thou not that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance?" Yes, we have seen something of the greatness and gentleness of God. It is because of the Lord's great kindness and mercy in dealing with us, and not dealing with us according to our iniquities, but according to His great mercy which He has shown for us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Lord, that makes this such a wonderful thing. Indeed, the very fact that He has not marked our iniquities but has granted us this grace, has shown up His greatness more. By nature we are undone and imperfect and disobedient. His great kindness is shown to us through Jesus Christ, so that through taking up the provisions of faith and consecration we are able to be called sons and daughters of God. As each counts his many blessings which he has received since coming into Christ, and compares these to what he might have been without it, then the contrast will be all the more. Yes, the gentleness of God has indeed changed our lives. There is great power in love and mercy, and it does indeed transform where nothing else will do so.

So the Lord, as we can experience, has not made us great because we were deserving of it. By nature we were all so imperfect, but have now been able to see how this transformation has been brought about, therefore we can join in with the singers and praise Him for this great and marvellous work He has shown towards us. All His ways are righteous and true. We have seen that. He has a true way of doing things. He is not only wonderful and great and marvellous in His works, but has great and true ways of doing things. Many people have great and wonderful power in their own direction, but have not just and true ways.

We can see then how His justice, true dealings, and righteousness are shown in man's creation in the beginning. Man was given his home, everything as supplied to him, and the only thing required was to be obedient. It was more than just, it was generous. But man, as we know, disobeyed and came under the Lord's displeasure. The death sentence came upon him because of disobedience. The Lord was under no obligation in the first place to bring man into existence. There was no obligation to raise him out of death. But he allowed things to take their course, and arranged things in such a way that a greater demonstration of His power might be manifest. Then as the Scriptures tell us, the race is dying through one man, so for the welfare of the whole creation it was just and righteous that God should destroy evildoers. It was just and true that Adam must return to earth from whence he was taken.

So it seemed as if things had ended. It is just and true as the Lord said, Man cannot be released except by a ransom. Man can only be redeemed in one way, by someone else taking his place. "Jesus, by the grace of 'God, tasted death for every man.'" Jesus voluntarily gave Himself, put Himself in the sinner's place so that the sinner might go free, and therefore again we have a demonstration of God's justice. So we read now that God can be just, yet the justifier of him that believes in Jesus. That is something too, that the singers know. We know God is just and true by the way He deals with us and with the whole human race. This is part of the song of Moses and the Lamb. Therefore, in view of this, hey 'can have absolute confidence and trust in God that He will carry out His warnings, and also fulfil His promises. Through faith and justification we have been acquitted from that condemnation.

In due time the glad tidings will be proclaimed to all mankind, because the Apostle says so. "God will have all men to be saved", saved out of this Adamic condemnation, and then come to a knowledge of the truth about Him and His way of regaining all they had lost. That will come about, as Paul says, "in due time". That, then, is another reason why the singers sing. God has an absolutely just and true way of doing things. Aren't you glad all the families of the earth are to be blessed? And he has prepared a kingdom, which will fully be able to cope with all this, and this kingdom will have the backing of Divine power and give mankind a chance to make good what they lost through Father Adam, and this will entail a marvellous demonstration of power, the recreation of millions of beings who have died. There will be a resurrection of the just and the unjust, all that are in their graves. It will mean reproducing again each individual identity, and also the knowledge of their past experience. That will be a great and wonderful work! He alone could do it. Perhaps you can reproduce the voice of a man who died sixty years ago. We could bring a machine in to do that.

If mankind can make a machine to produce something which has perished, it is surely no great thing that God should raise the dead. It is a simple matter for Him to reproduce, not only the voice, but everything pertaining to it, because He has divine power. We might have thought at one time the phonograph was wonderful, but it gives us a feeling of awe to think what God will do. This is a marvellous demonstration of the wonderful works and ways of God.

It is just like God to do that. Wouldn't you give mankind a fair chance too, to regain the things lost, if you had half the power? We would like to do something like that now, but we know we have not the power and it is not the time, but in due time the Church and Christ shall be glorified, and "greater things than these shall ye do". It is a wonderful time to come to the millions who from bondage will return.

It would not be so very wonderful to save a few of mankind as we used to believe at one time, and condemn all the rest; not only condemn them, but leave them in torment for ever and ever. That would not be very great, would it?

But there will be great and wonderful works when God's plan is finished, giving everyone a chance to make good, and not condemn those to misery or eternal death who have not had a chance to hear the Gospel. It would not be very wonderful to save a few, and have all the rest good for nothing. But it will be a wonderful thing to see a world full of restored human beings at the end of the next age. I am proud of that Gospel, aren't you? It is just and true of God to do this, and He will do it. How do we know? Because the singers say so. "Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? For thou only art holy; for all nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy judgments are made manifest." (Rev. 15:4.)

Yes, God will reveal His mighty acts in the great overthrow of evil, the great judgments coming upon the nations, and the fact will be that the nations cannot come to any other conclusion but that the Lord has humbled the proud looks of men. He alone shall be exalted in that day. Yes, He will be the King of kings, and He will uncover to the astonished mind and vision of the world His great and marvellous works. His judgments will be made manifest.

The Lord has wonderful ways of dealing with us, too. Sometimes perhaps He sends us various experiences that we might think very strange, things perhaps we cannot understand. He may permit strange trials or difficulties to come to us. Sometimes we might feel distressed with the storms of life. If you feel like that sometimes, just read the 27th chapter of Acts, where you can see and consider and visualise Paul's journey to Rome. There was that ship, driven and tossed unmercifully by the violence of the storm. The tackling and gear had to be thrown overboard, the travellers were wet and cold and drenched with the sea spray, the vessel was leaky. For fourteen days there was no change, the ship filling with water and still no relief from the fury of the storm. Then, when neither sun nor stars appear, and when all that is visible seems to fail you and all hope of deliverance is gone, say to your fellow travellers, as Paul did, to those to whom sometimes we might be giving advice and they have not hearkened and bring us and ourselves even into danger, "Sirs, ye should have hearkened unto me, and not have loosed from Crete, and to have gained this harm and loss. And now I exhort you to be of good cheer. . . I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me."

Now the Lord, even though He does not always make the storm a calm, does overrule and control and direct the issue involved so that a way of escape is provided. But you may even have to abandon things like the tackling of the ship. You might have to throw overboard things you once thought necessary, but which now must go in order to keep your spiritual balance. Even things which you depend upon — if they are wrecked while sailing through the ocean of life, still say, I believe in God. We shall get to land without loss of life. Yes, this is full assurance of faith in the great and wonderful, just and true ways and works of God.

PEOPLES PAPER AND HERALD OF CHRIST'S KINGDOM.

Published by the Berean Bible Institute, 19 Ermington Place, Kew, E4, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia.

(Monthly) 3 - (70 cents) per annum, post paid,

Europe Simmering, Unrest after War.

UNDER the above headings the following despatch from Osmar White, Melbourne “Herald” War Correspondent in France, appeared some few weeks ago in the Melbourne press, and will no doubt be of special interest to students of the Bible. While the Lord’s people seek to promote peace with all whom they come in contact, they realise that the present social and political order (as well as the ecclesiastical and financial elements) must pass away preparatory to the establishment of Christ’s Kingdom, in the near future. (See Heb. 12:26-28; 2 Pet. 3:10-13.) Reports such as this indicate fulfilment of prophecy before our eyes; it is as follows:—

Political and military observers who came to the Continent with the armies of liberation are now ruefully aware that the collapse of Germany will not necessarily mean the end of war in Europe.

The unhappy business in Greece and the recent Belgian riots are merely the first superficial evidence of a great revolution which inevitably will sweep Europe when the Nazis are finally broken—indeed, a revolution which has begun to sweep Europe even before the Nazis are broken, and whose symptoms are repressed only by the presence of powerful British and American armies which must maintain a semblance of order and stability behind their own lines while finishing off the Germans.

The repressive effect of these new armies of “occupation” does not offer, and is not likely to offer, any permanent solution of the problems which are causing deep-seated unrest among the European populations.

Stirrings in France.

It is extraordinary to observe how clearly this is realised by the Continental public and how ignorant of the true situation are the public in the United States and Britain.

If you talk about “the end of the war” to a Frenchman today, as likely as not he will shrug his shoulders and inquire cynically, “What war, monsieur?”

He does not regard the possibility of a new civil war in Spain to overthrow Franco, the settlement of the Polish question, or questions about the reconstitution of Middle European States like Czechoslovakia and Jugoslavia as mere odds and ends to be tied up after the victory march in Berlin. He does not believe that the fall of the Hitler gang will necessarily end Fascism in Europe.

He will point out with ice-cold realism that only about 30,000 French Fascists and collaborationists fled to Germany with Petain and Laval and a few thousand were arrested in the “purification.” Ten or twenty times as many remain behind, and there is not the slightest reason to believe that they have seen the democratic light or have put away political ambitions.

A Frenchman will also point out that the same thing is true of Italy, Belgium, Holland and Rumania. What was liberation for some was defeat and exile for others.

Allied Intervention.

Extreme Leftist elements accuse the British of having fired the first shots in the open war to protect and install in power the Continental property-owner class, which either fled overseas before the arrival of the Nazis or who stayed and, at best, played a passive collaborationist role to save their investments.

The Leftists allege that the big property-owners who stayed, with a few exceptions, failed completely to identify themselves with the active resistance elements. Those who fled gained control of the Governments in exile and planned a return to the Continent, after the Allied armies, with ready-to-wear administrative systems with which they aimed at re-establishment of capitalism and abortion of the political success of proletarian movements.

Whether or not these allegations are wholly or partly justified, or wholly unjustified, is beside the point.

They represent the convictions of millions of people who probably are prepared to fight for those convictions —and resist Allied intervention as stubbornly as they have resisted German occupation.

Probably the most humiliating part of the whole business is that the logic behind the Nazis’ determination to resist to the last man to gain time at all costs now becomes apparent.

If German resistance lasts another six or seven months it is not beyond the bounds of possibility that the solution of "the German problem" will have taken second place to the solution of a new "European problem."

Adelaide Easter Convention.

Word is to hand from Adelaide advising that the Easter Convention is to be held there by the friends over the three days, Good Friday to Easter Sunday, March 30th and 31st and April 1st.

A hearty welcome awaits all who may be able to attend these gatherings, and further information will appear in March "Peoples Paper" and may also be obtained from the secretary—Mrs. H. Bartel, 10 Winston Avenue, Clarence Gardens, Adelaide, South Australia.

Passover Memorial 1945.

The Jewish date of the anniversary of the institution of the Memorial of Christ's death falls this year on Tuesday evening, 27th of March. After sundown on the 27th March will therefore be the appropriate time to keep the Memorial of Christ's death, by all consecrated followers of the Master. "This do in remembrance of Me," were our Lord's words, and Paul adds, "Christ our passover (Lamb) is sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast"—on its anniversary, and in spirit and truth throughout the Christian's whole life.

Convention News.

THE Convention arranged by the Melbourne friends and held over the four days at the Christmas season proved once again a time of real blessing and refreshing in the highest sense. It is with much thankfulness to the Lord, we feel sure, that all who attended these gatherings meditate upon the spiritual good things provided throughout these assemblies.

It was a pleasure to welcome visiting brethren from Adelaide, Canberra, and country parts of Victoria, and these members assisted greatly in providing the feast of fat things around the Lord's table.

Each day the sessions were opened with appropriate praise and prayer to the Giver of every good thing. A series of Bible studies was conducted, the passages of Scripture considered being Eph. 4:1-6, Heb. 12:22-29 and Luke 21:29-36. As will be realised, these studies were very instructive and encouraging. For the fourth day a Question Meeting took the place of a selected passage of Scripture and this also proved a very helpful study session.

A series of eight addresses, delivered mostly by our visiting brethren, were very profitable indeed, and will no doubt be a means of much encouragement to all in attendance, for the days ahead. Some of these addresses will appear in the columns of "Peoples' Paper" from time to time, and in this way it is hoped that some of the good things from the Convention will help greater numbers in this and other lands. One address arranged particularly as a public witness was well appreciated also by some strangers who attended. The full list of subjects for the addresses is as follows:—"Wherefore Comfort One Another with These Words" • (1 Thes. 4:18); "Made Perfect Through Suffering"; "The Resurrection of the Dead"; "To the Law and to the Testimony" (Isa. 8:20); "The Mercy of God" (Rom. 9:16); "Knowing the True God" (John 17:3); "Christian Constancy"; and "The Work and Ways of God".

The two sessions for praise and testimony gave opportunity for testifying to the goodness of the Lord and the faith and confidence which the brethren have in the outworking of God's plans and promises both as respects His people and the world generally. The many messages of greeting, encouragement and exhortation received from the Classes and friends in various parts of Australia were very much appreciated, and the Convention message, to go to all these friends, as also to all who love the Lord, together with the Christian love of all assembled, is contained in Heb. 12:25-28.

The closing session of the Convention came all too soon, but the Love Feast was a fitting close to this season of blessing and refreshing from the presence of the Lord. As usual the two beautiful and appropriate hymns, "Blest be the tie that binds", and "God be with you till we meet again", with the closing prayer of thankfulness and supplication for God's protection over His people, brought to conclusion this Convention held in the name and spirit of our Lord.

Go Ye Also into the Vineyard.

THE Following comments on the privileges and responsibilities of serving the Lord are passed on for the encouragement of all who wish to please Him above all else:

“On the day after Christmas a party had gone to Largs, that is a seaside suburb, and did some distributing of the Radio Cards. Also on New Year’s Day a party of five of us again went to the same locality and spent the day distributing. We got to our territory about 10 a.m. and worked till about midday, then after refreshment started in again and worked till about 3.30 p.m. or little more. The weather was pleasant and we all thoroughly enjoyed the outing and felt glad to have the privilege of witnessing in this way to the Lord’s coming Kingdom. We trust that some hearts may have received a blessing by the little witness. We know that there were five who got a blessing from the service anyway, and they were ourselves. Last Saturday afternoon was our monthly distribution again and six friends were able to serve the truth again in the distribution of the Cards. We hope and pray for the Lord’s blessing on these efforts.

I was able to go out again last Monday afternoon.

“The little Card contains a very fine message; the ‘Do You Knows’ are a splendid little witness and interested folk can hear the Radio Talks and avail themselves of the offered free literature. We hope it may be possible to continue this service if it is the Lord’s will. In harmony with our Lord’s direction we are praying the Lord of the harvest that He will send forth laborers into His harvest. (Matt. 9:37, 38; John 3:35-38.)

“This service offers privileges to all the Lord’s people. Some can use their talents in arranging the Dialogues, some can use their voices in broadcasting the Dialogues, some can use their time in distributing the Radio Cards thus inviting the people to hear the message, still others can use their means to meet the cost of the broadcasting, advertising, etc., while those who cannot engage in any of these services can, with earnest supplications at the throne of grace, request the Lord still further to bless this service to the honor of His Name, and for the good of His people, and for the blessing of many more of those around us who have not yet heard His wonderful Plan of Salvation.

“The Psalmist’s inspired prayer in Psalm 67 may very properly be the prayer of all the Lord’s people today.. How full of significance are the expressions: ‘God be merciful to us, and bless us; and cause His face to shine upon us; That Thy way may be known upon earth, Thy saving health among all nations. Let the people praise Thee, O God; let all the people praise Thee.’ People cannot praise God intelligently until they know something of His character and Plans, and it is the privilege of His true church to make these known to all who have ears to hear and hearts that are willing to obey. While we know full well that the principal work of actually enlightening the world will take place when the church is glorified, yet we, as footstep followers of Christ, need to be on guard against a tendency to minimize the work of witnessing to the truth which it is proper that we should do at the present time. Some of the Lord’s dear people seem to be in need of a reminder that the reason the Lord gave us the truth was first of all that we should be sanctified by it, and secondly that we should be active in letting it shine out so that others may also be blessed by it. Let us not be found hiding our light under a bushel of worldly cares or business activities which might be avoided. The consecrated heart, the sacrificing priest, will be careful to ‘touch lightly the things of this earth’ ever remembering the Master’s words ‘Seek ye first the Kingdom of God, and His righteousness.

“Christ taught His disciples to pray, ‘Thy Kingdom Come, Thy will be done on earth as in heaven.’ Can we sincerely pray thus and yet not feel within our hearts an earnest longing to ‘Tell the whole world the blessed tidings’ of the coming Kingdom which we know to be so near? As ambassadors of Christ, and heralds of His Kingdom, do we not feel impelled by the gracious spirit of our Lord and Head to go forth in His blessed Name and strength to our neighbours near and far, proclaiming both with our lips and by the printed page, the message of God’s grace in Christ which has so comforted and blessed our own heads and hearts? ‘He that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal.’ “

Correspondence.

Victoria.

My Dear Christian Brothers—I received your letter and was very pleased to hear from you; I thank you for your paper you sent along to me dealing with “When Christ is King” and find it a great comforting message. I thank you also for papers I receive from you time and again.

I continue to hear your messages put over 3B0 every Sunday morning and enjoy them very much indeed; the only thing I regret is that they do not last longer than the 1 hour. I will be very glad to receive any further papers you may send along that would help me on my Christian journey which I find is not a path of milk and honey: it is a hard fight to declare the Gospel in the world today, but still Christ has left me His promise that He would not leave me or forsake me. I will now draw to a close wishing God’s blessing on your future broadcasts, from Christian Brother in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Dear Brothers in Christ—It gives me great pleasure and comfort to listen to your discussions on the Bible on Sundays at 10 a.m. Would you kindly send me the booklet on Christ’s return. Thanking you in anticipation. I remain, yours sincerely.

Dear Sirs—Would you kindly send me a copy of this morning’s Talk: I missed the first part and it is a subject I don’t quite understand. We know Lazarus was raised from the dead but never heard any more of him. Thanking you, yours faithfully.

To Frank and Ernest—Many thanks for sending the “Paper” and reading matter which I enjoy. I would be very pleased to have it regularly: I am enclosing postal note to help the good work along. Wishing you all God’s blessing for the New Year. Yours faithfully.

Dear Friends—Would you please send a copy of your Talk “The Three Ways” also the booklet you advertised last Sunday. I was unable to get down for the Christmas services but hope to be down in the next two or three weeks; it is very difficult to get away at this time of the year.

Wishing you God’s richest blessings in the New Year. Yours sincerely.

Sirs—I shall be pleased to receive from you the literature sponsored by the Berean Bible Institute, as I should like to know the full meaning of the prophecies under the title. “Do You Know ?” I am deeply interested in this kind of knowledge. Sincerely yours.

South Australia.

Dear Frank and Ernest—We have been listening to your Talks for a couple of years now and we have been very interested in them and we would not miss them for anything.

We would like your Talks for the last six weeks if possible, but if not, we would like last Sunday’s and all of your following Talks, if you could possibly send them to us as we are Christians. I am your friend.

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Having heard your Talk today, I found it very interesting and helpful and would like very much to have a copy of it to pass the same thoughts on to my S. School Class (young ladies) . If you would send me one, I would be very pleased. Thanking you in anticipation. Yours sincerely.

N. S. Wales.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Friends—I had forgotten that my subscription to the “Peoples Paper” had run out; I am enclosing a postal note to cover the year’s subscription and the balance to go to the Radio Fund.

I see by your latest balance sheet that the credit balance is not great, but we know that if it is God’s wish that the message should go out, He will make the way, and I feel that He will.

I would like to say “thank you” for the help and comfort there is in the last issue of the “P.P.” especially the article “Patience and Comfort of the Scriptures.” I always find it, good reading. Wishing you both God’s blessing for yourselves and your work. Kindest regards.

To Frank and Ernest, Gentlemen—Would you kindly send me your literature bearing on your Sunday morning Talks and as I have two members of my household Sunday School teachers and we have heard your Sunday Talks for some time back, we are all interested.

Wishing you both God's blessing, and a brighter New Year. I remain, faithfully yours.

Western Australia.

To Frank and Ernest, Gentlemen—Having listened to your most interesting conversation over the air today I wish to take advantage of your generous offer and would thank you to forward to me a copy of your book entitled "Hope Beyond the Grave."

There are many quotations in the Bible re "Hell-fire" etc., which I have never been able to get a satisfactory understanding of, as for instance Matt. 13:35-42 and another, Matt. 25:41-46 and Luke 16:23 and 2 Pet. 2:4 and particularly Rev. 14:8-10. However, perhaps on reading your little book I may be given light on these matters. Thank you for your Talk; I enjoyed it very much. Yours in His service.

Another friend writes—"I am very pleased with the book 'God's Plan in Brief.' It gives me great joy and seems to proclaim God's great love. I would like to have attended the lectures very much but am not able to travel. . . Thanking you for your kind helpfulness and may God bless you and your work."

The Lord's Supper.

THE first Passover for Israel meant deliverance and safety. Long had the nation groaned under the taskmasters of Egypt. The Pharaohs had used the Jews for the aggrandizement of the Nile country — in building aqueducts, highways and public buildings. The burden became more and more severe, until finally God wrought deliverance at the hands of Moses, meanwhile revealing His mighty power in ten terrible plagues, the last of which brought death to all the firstborn of the Egyptians, while the first born of Israel were spared.

Had He seen fit, God might have, preserved the firstborn in Israel from destruction without any special preparation for their deliverance, but such was not His method of procedure on this occasion. He also would have them play their part in a great typical program which He had in hand. Hence He gave them explicit instructions how to keep the angel of death away from their homes. Compliance with these orders meant security, and anything else meant destruction. It was a serious matter. There was no other way open for them but the one way indicated by the Lord.

God instructed the Hebrews through Moses that on the tenth day of the first month (the month Abib, later called Nisan) a male lamb, as perfect as it was possible to secure, must be selected by each family from their flock. This lamb was to be placed under special care until the fourteenth day, when it was to be killed. Its flesh was to be roasted so that it might be eaten during the night, and its blood must then be sprinkled upon the lintels and the door-posts of the house, so that the angel of death might see the blood and not come into that home.

In accordance with instructions, each Hebrew family drew together to the feast of the Passover in the night of the 14th of Nisan. This feast consisted of the lamb's roasted flesh, together with bitter herbs and unleavened bread; and each participant in the feast was to have his loins girded, his shoes on his feet, and his staff in his hand—thus indicating that he was fully prepared for a journey—and the ceremony was to be performed in haste.

To Christians, the events described in the 12th chapter of Exodus would be but a matter of history, were it not for the fact that the Bible states that what the Jews did in that first Passover celebration so long ago, was intended to be a type or picture to us of "things to come." In speaking of the children of Israel the Apostle Paul says: "Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples (types), and were written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world (age) are come." (1 Cor. 10:11.) Then again Paul says: "Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us therefore let us keep the feast, not with the old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice nor of wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." (1 Cor. 5:7, 8.) Thus the apostle shows that the Jewish paschal lamb was a type of Christ, and suggests also that the various other features of this great national festival of the Jews were invested with pictorial or typical significance for Christians.

And just where does the antitype or fulfilment of these things come in? First of all, as the Israelites were under the bondage of Pharaoh, so the whole world of mankind is under the bondage of sin and death. Thus the Apostle says: "Indeed, the earnest expectation of the creation longs for the revelation of the sons of God. For the creation was made subject to frailty (not voluntarily, but by Him who subjected it), in hope that even the creation itself will be emancipated from the slavery of corruption into the freedom of the glory of the children of God. For we know that the whole creation groans and travails in pain together till the present time."—Romans 8:19-22. Diaglott.

As God delivered the Israelites through Moses, so will He deliver all the world through the greater Moses, even the great Christ company—which consists of Jesus the Head, and the church His body. But before God delivers the whole world, He is first to deliver His "first born" ones. These are the followers of Jesus. Concerning them, in the epistle of James we read: "Of His own will begat He us with the Word of truth, that we should be a kind of firstfruits of His creatures." These "firstfruits" are the only ones on trial for life during the present dispensation. The statement, "Judgment must begin with the house of God," applies to them. In order to secure their salvation, they have been feasting on the "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world," and first of all, they have applied the Lamb's sacrificial blood to their hearts by faith, thus obtaining the grace of justification, which is the standing of perfection before God.

The Christian "eats" (i.e., appropriates to himself) the Lamb during the present "night time" of this Gospel age.

As in the type there was to be nothing left over till the morning, so the follower of the Master realizes that he cannot wait and have his portion of the benefits accruing from the ransom sacrifice in the morning of the Millennial age—he must take his portion NOW, and must use it in the present time. The "roasting" of the typical lamb with fire pictures that the Christian must come in direct contact with fiery trials; the "bitter herbs" typify bitter persecutions; and the "unleavened bread" is a symbol of pure, unadulterated truth on which we must feast.—1 Con 5:7, 8.

Having the loins "girded" is important. The girdle was a symbol of service. The Apostle Paul says, "having your loins girt about with truth." He means that the Christian is to be the servant of truth. When Jesus was about to serve the disciples by washing their feet, He first "girded" Himself with a towel. On one occasion He said, "I stand among you as one that serveth." Thus we see that Jesus was the great Servant of the Truth, and in serving Truth He was serving us, and God Himself.

As the Israelites were to have their shoes on their feet, so the spiritual Israelites should walk in newness of life. The Israelites also were to eat with their staff in their hand. The "staff" would seem to illustrate the Word of God, for that is the staff or support upon which the Christian continually leans. David said, "Thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me." The staff always should be held in readiness for instant use. By effectively using it Jesus foiled the great Adversary in the hour of temptation. It is an equally wonderful weapon for our protection. The Apostle elsewhere speaks of it as the "sword of the spirit."

"Unleavened bread" represents the pure truth. The Jews were not to have any leaven in their homes at the Passover season. They must have a general house cleaning to remove all leaven. In reference to the antitype of this, the apostle says to those who have been guilty of misdemeanors, "Know ye not that a little leaven leaveth the whole lump?

Purge out therefore the old leaven (typical of sin), that ye may be a new lump." Unleavened bread was used in connection with the temple sacrifices of the Jews, and was placed in the sanctuary. In the great antitypical feast, the apostle says that we are to eat "not with the old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice nor of wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth."

It was the sacrifice of Jesus, then, that introduced the great realities pictured by the types and shadows of Old Testament times. It was God Himself Who spread the Christian's banquet. This fact was set forth by the Master in the parable of the Great Supper. The first who had a chance to attend this "supper" were the Jews, to whom the gospel was first preached. But they as a people failed to respond to the message, hence eventually the call went out to those beyond the pale of Judaism—referred to in the parable as those in "the highways and hedges," in other words, the Gentiles. Because of this fact, those who have the truth today can rejoice greatly that God has extended such a favor to them as to call them "out of darkness into his marvellous light," and to spread before them His wondrous feast of truth and love. Because of this fact it is their one desire to show forth His praises, and to glorify Him in their bodies and in their spirits, which are His. In the gratitude of their hearts their mental attitude is,

"I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord,
O'er mountain or plain or sea;
I'll do what you want me to do, dear Lord,
I'll be what you want me to be."

Those who love the Lord take heed to the apostle's injunction to partake of the feast which God has spread, "Not with the old leaven." Who among us does not know of that "old leaven?" Perhaps we were at one time in some Babylonish system. We may have believed in the dreadful hell promulgated in the creedal teachings. The sermons we heard were full of the leaven of error. Then the Lord delivered us and revealed His gracious plan for human salvation. And how our hearts rejoiced! We do not want any of that old leaven to get in and become mixed up with the truth now; we don't want to give it any chance to trouble us again, for now we stand in the "holy place" of the Sanctuary, enjoying the light of the "golden candlestick," and feasting on the "shew bread of presence."

And as for the "leaven of malice and wickedness," oh, no, we do not want any of that. It has no proper place in the hearts of those who have been feeding on the Word of God. God's banquet is a banquet of love.

“Blessed are the pure in heart,” said Jesus, “for they shall see God.” In a sense they see God in this life, and they are the only ones who do. They see Him in the sense that they behold His plan and purposes; they see His goodness, they see His love. They follow the instructions laid down in the apostle’s words: “Be not conformed to this world, etc” (Rom. 12:2.) These hate evil in its every aspect and form; and whatsoever things are “true, honest, just, pure, lovely, and of good report,” they set their minds to think on these things.

On the night of His betrayal Jesus celebrated the typical Passover of the Jews, and then instituted a memorial of the antitype of the Jewish Passover. His disciples were no more to keep the Passover feast set down in the law to Israel, but were to keep the Christian’s feast. This, as we have said, was to be a feast of truth, having as its great central fact the ransom sacrifice of Jesus; and it was to be symbolized by the elements of bread and wine. That is what the Master meant when He said, “This is My body which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of Me.” And then referring to the wine, He said, “This cup is the new testament in My blood: which is shed for you, this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of Me.”

Various meanings have been taken from Jesus’ words, as oft “as ye drink it.” Some think the memorial celebration should be a weekly festival, others have adopted the system of holding it once a month. But when we understand that Jesus was the antitypical lamb, it becomes clear that the proper time for the Memorial of His death is the day on which He died, viz., the fourteenth day of the first month; so that the symbolic feast is to be an annual one, while the real feast itself, which is thus symbolized (i.e., the truth) is a daily and hourly one, a something that takes place in the heart of the Christian throughout his earthly career.

A further thought is that not only do the elements of bread and wine symbolize the death of Jesus, but they picture our own participation in the sufferings and death of the Christ body. The great promise held out to the Christian is: “If we suffer with Him we shall also reign with Him.” Then the apostle says, “The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion (common union) of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ? For we being many, are one bread and one body, for we are all partakers of that one bread.” (1 Cor. 10:16, 17.) Here we get the thought that we are all united in Christ, because the truth draws us together in this great unity.

Then, as we break the bread in the symbolic feast, not only does it speak to us of the broken body of Jesus but also of our own consecration vows. It calls to mind the fact that we covenanted to be broken with the Master, to suffer reproaches for His sake, to present our bodies a “living sacrifice,” holy, acceptable to God, which, says the apostle, is our “reasonable service.” (Rom. 12:1.) And the “wine” suggests that we are willing to follow in the steps of Jesus by laying down our lives, shedding our blood, spending our best powers in the service of the truth. Thus we see that the Memorial has a double significance to us—first, pointing to the Master’s sacrifice; and second, picturing our own willingness to suffer with Him.

The apostle warns against a careless celebration of the Memorial. He says, “Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread and drink of that cup. For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily eateth and drinketh damnation (judgment) to himself, not discerning the Lord’s body. For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep.” (1 Cor. 12:28-30.) This indicates that it is important to discern the Lord’s body. “Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular,” said the apostle. A real appreciation of this fact causes us to be awake and to be strong and active (not sickly) in the Lord’s service.

Truly, “The night is far spent, the day is at hand!” Let us put on the “whole armor” of light. Let us cultivate love for the truth and for the brethren. Let us “be not weary in well-doing, knowing that in due time we shall reap if we faint not.” Let us come to the Memorial, in fullness of faith and joy, realizing that all things are as loss and dross in comparison with the inestimable riches of truth that God has entrusted to us, and with the incomparable favor of His love that He has extended to us through our Saviour and Redeemer, Christ Jesus our Lord.

Cards, Desolation-Restoration.

This poem is now available in post card size, in a variety of colours. Many of our friends will know the very helpful message it contains for the bereaved. It is also very useful in conveying the hope of salvation in a general way. It is supplied at 3 for 6d., 1/8 per dozen ; or 1/6 per dozen in 3-dozen lots.

Little Opportunities.

“We all might do good where we often do ill :
There is always a way, if we have but the will ;
For even a word, kindly breathed or suppressed,
May guard off some pain, or give peace to some breast.

“We all might do good, in a thousand small ways;
In spurning ill rumour, reproving wrong done,
Forbearing to flatter, yet giving due praise ;
And treating but kindly the heart we have won.

“We all might do good whether lowly or great-
A deed is not judged by the purse or estate;
If only a cup of cold water is given,
Like the mite of the widow, ‘tis something for heav’n.”

Bible Studies.

THE method of conducting Bible studies and the co-operation given by the members of a Bible Class has much to do with the benefits and blessings received by each member of an assembly.

It is very noticeable that the tendency of chairmen generally is to speak too much when conducting a Bible Class. This may result from various causes, one of which is, that the members of a class may not be sufficiently alert in giving their thoughts, thus leaving too much time for the chairman who feels he must speak to prevent a lull in the meeting. Another reason may be that the chairman becomes so absorbed in a subject that at times he leaves little opportunity for members to take part. This is noticeable at some Conventions when there is much in a study to be brought out in a limited time, but this tendency is something to be overcome by class leaders, thus preventing a habit of giving short addresses, so to speak, after each remark by a class member.

In introducing a class study the leader should seek to be brief and to the point in giving a resume of the previous study. No doubt very often much could be said that would be very helpful, but at a Bible class anything approaching a short address should be avoided, so that the study can proceed. Other meetings for addresses can be arranged.

The successful class leader will seek to draw out the thoughts from all members in the gathering. -The members have their responsibility in being prepared to take part, which means that the lesson should be well studied at home; this is a most important point for profitable Bible study in class. Lengthy expressions are not required; indeed, the most helpful remarks are usually short and directly on the subject, with Scriptural support.

Class members can assist greatly by keeping to the subject under discussion; this is really essential to make a Bible study the blessing it should be to all, and makes the task of the leader so much easier. Above all the Lord's spirit should be invoked so that the guidance and blessing from above may be fully realised by all, the one desire being to be built up by the truths of God's Word to His praise.

In last month's "Peoples Paper" the following corrections should be noted. Page 10, 1st column, 2nd paragraph, 3rd line—"around some mighty sun," should read "around some mighty centre." Same column, 3rd paragraph, 4th and 5th lines from bottom—"186 million miles a second," should read "186 thousand miles a second." The Mercy of God.

WHILE all who have any knowledge of the true God and His great Plan of the Ages, wherein He has determined to reconcile all things to Himself, will agree that the Scriptures reveal God as One Who is most wonderfully merciful and kind, yet to the uninitiated the mercies of God appear intricate.

If, as the 18th verse of our chapter says, God has mercy on some and hardeneth others, are we to understand that God has special favourites on whom He bestows all His providences, and cuts others off entirely from them? Though it may seem paradoxical, we may answer both yes and no to our question. If all could see everything through the eyes and mind of our God, all would be able to realize fully the absolute justice, love and mercy that He extends or will extend to every creature under heaven. But because so many weigh things according to the fleshly, imperfect, immediate present, it is little wonder that the character of God is maligned as one who takes sides, bestowing favours on some and forsaking others. So much of the true mercies of our God are bound up in these three small words, "in due time." (See 1 Tim. 2:4-6.)

Those who have tried putting a jig-saw puzzle together will know there is no satisfaction gained until the last piece is inserted in its place. The more complex and ingenious the device the greater the satisfaction realized by the one who solves the puzzle and views the finished whole. On a much bigger and grander scale it is just so with all who will ever come to the full knowledge of the salvation of God. There is only one way to fit the various pieces of the jig-saw puzzle together — the one ordained by the Maker or Creator. The same thing exactly applies to all who ever solve the great mysteries of God.

The world as it is today, in the throes of tremendous upheavals, naturally enough turns to religious elements in the hope of finding some serenity of thought and explanation of world events, but the "heavens" as well as the "earth" is being burned up in the fiery time of trouble now doing its work, and no light is gained that helps men very much to solve the riddle of present unparalleled trouble and suffering. Why? Because generally men spurn the real medium from which an answer could come,—the pure, unadulterated truth of the Bible. Then again, the great majority of those who claim to be using this medium in solving the jig-saw puzzle of present events are, and have been for years, putting blocks in the wrong places, and because of traditions passed on by their fathers have refused to remodel their blocks and set things right.

As far back as we can go in Biblical record, one theme we find—the love of God and His desire for life and happiness to extend to all His creation. True, we know man has not, since Adam's transgression, complied with the Creator's requirements for attaining to life and happiness, but it is right here where God's mercy steps in. In distinct contradiction to what we have been taught, that God will take vengeance on those who have not complied with His will, by tormenting them to all eternity in some fiendish place, we know that in God's plan there is a time, yet future, when all the hosts of men that have ever lived will perceive the justice, love and mercy on the part of their Creator.

There is also much in Scripture that prominently and rightly speaks of judgments that fall upon men for wrongdoing, but they are, when rightly understood, of the nature intended to discipline mankind. These disciplinary measures are close linked with the long suffering of our God, that allows a man to live the present lifetime alienated from Him through wicked works. The full extent of God's love and mercy, as well as the full import of His justice, will be realized by such through a resurrection of the dead. Rom. 1:18-32, and in the second chapter 1-11, is a good passage for those sufficiently interested, and this passage covers a very long period of time. From earliest times there has been much fulfilment of the first portion of this passage. Men who could and should know better, have more or less deliberately flouted God's holy laws of righteousness. (Read Rom. 1:18-32.)

After reading that passage we may feel like saying, serve them right, they deserve all they get. But in chapter 2 we find what appears to amount to a rebuke to any such thoughts. The first two verses say, "Therefore thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judgest: for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same things. But we are sure that the judgment of God is according to truth against them which commit such things."

The more we know of God's plan the more we rejoice that God's judgments will be according to truth against those that commit such things. Judgment, justice and mercy will be so perfectly blended together that no right-minded person will be able to find cause for complaint. "As a man sows, so shall he reap," applies not only to the spiritual class of this age, although we know that the particular scripture does indeed refer to the spiritual class, but the same principle must surely apply to natural men who sin against any light they receive. A noble man must come back in the awakening from death a noble man, while those who have some knowledge of God but do not want to retain Him in their knowledge, and more or less deliberately work unrighteousness will suffer for it by having built a character that will need much retracing of their steps when they are called upon to "obey that righteous Prophet" of the new incoming Age, or suffer second death. (Acts 3:23.)

As we peruse the first half-dozen verses of the second chapter of Romans, how clearly we see it is not our commission to judge in the present time. True, we are clearly told, "Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world." But that would be when our probation is over and when we are with Christ on the throne. Meanwhile, we are to remember that we still have our great treasure of heavenly or spiritual things in an earthly vessel, and are very prone to do ourselves the things for which we hastily condemn others. (See Rom. 2:3-7.)

We learn so beautifully in John 12:46-48, "I am come into the world, that whosoever believeth on Me should not abide in darkness. And if any man hear my words, and believe not, I judge him not: for I came not to judge the world, but to save the world. He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." And so there we see that Jesus Himself at the first advent did not come to judge, but to save the world. All who heard and believed on Him were delivered out of darkness into light, while those who rejected Him and did not receive His words will find themselves judged in the last Day, the thousand years of Christ's reign, by the very words He then spoke. What a contrast we find in the attitude Jesus adopted towards those who turned a deaf ear to His message, and many today who profess to declare the same message. There are well-meaning people who for a long time have declared that all who do not join their particular sect or denomination will forever be lost. Jesus calmly and quietly told all who repudiated His message in that day, that another Day was coming when He would be in greater authority, King over the whole earth, and able to enforce righteousness. Sad at heart after their rejection of Him, He said to His own people, the Jews, "Your house is left unto you desolate," but a glimpse of His mercy is discerned in the following verses. "Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." (Matt. 23:38, 39.) He whom they pierced will yet give them an opportunity of receiving and rightly understanding the whole of the Gospel message. Tyre and Sidon, Capernaum, and so on, will return to the land of the living and have an opportunity to repent of their ways and follow righteousness. (See Matt. 11:21-24.) God's mercy alone is responsible for such an arrangement.

In the Old Testament we learn of men after God's own heart and yet when we learn more about them we are surprised at their failures, and wonder how it could have been so said. Truly, indeed, they were men of like passions as we, men who sometimes, if not often, did those things that displeased God. The same God who was merciful to them is also merciful to us, and will be to all. Not by any good of our own, nor by willing or running can we work ourselves in to the favour of God. "Other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, Jesus Christ," and if any in this age or the coming age are to rejoice in the mercy of God, it must be in this one God-appointed way.

We read in some Scriptures of God hardening the hearts of some. In the 18th verse of the chapter containing our text we read that God will have mercy on whom He will, and that He will harden whom He will. At first then, we feel like asking with Paul's imaginary questioner, Why then cloth God find fault with any, if He so arbitrarily hardens the heart of one and extends mercy to another? Why should He love Jacob and hate Esau, as recorded in Rom. 9:13, and so express Himself before they were born?

The omniscience of God is sometimes not fully realized. The fact that God can so speak of loving one before another can only be satisfactorily answered by His foreknowledge of the characters they would form as they mature to manhood. Another translation gave much enlightenment to me. It suggested that "hatred" was a poor rendering, and should have read "Jacob have I loved, and Esau have I loved less." This rendering gave me a greater understanding of the limitless bounds of the love and mercy of God. Though Jacob ranked higher in God's estimation, yet Esau was not completely outside the bounds of God's love, but it will take the new incoming age to reveal this to all.

A little careful thought reveals that disobedience to God's commands was the cause of Pharaoh's heart being hardened, and wherever we read in the Old Testament of people's hearts being hardened, we are left in no quandary as to why. It was the erring ways they pursued, that hardened their hearts. We read of God doing it, for the simple reason that. He was the Creator of all things, and omnipotent. "I create good and I create evil." But He created evil only in the sense of it being a natural outcome of disobedience.

Yet the hardening of Pharaoh's heart and of all such like is to be wisely over-ruled for good in God's own time.

Just as clay in the potter's hand sometimes forms an impression that requires the potter to remake it, so God is able to remake those characters to His praise. Meanwhile these characters, vessels of wrath fit only for destruction are gone, but in the next age, if they become plastic in the potter's hands, they will be remade. God endures with much long suffering because they are working out His purpose now, making known the riches of His grace or favour on the present vessels of mercy He has before prepared for His highest glory, even us, the Church of the Gospel Age.

We do not always fully grasp the great favour that God has extended to His faithful Little Flock of believers now. The more we do so, the deeper realization we have of our unworthiness of it. Nothing we did or could have done merited it. Nothing done on our own account could have brought salvation. No, that scripture in Eph. 2:8, 9 is clear, "By grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast." It is not of him that willeth or runneth, but God that showeth mercy. Our salvation was wrought and God's mercy extended to us by the gift of His Son Jesus Christ, and "no other foundation" can any man lay. Yes, and the only works that avail anything are those we build upon that foundation. We are God's workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works. No amount of good works are of any avail before. The only good works of real value are those that follow salvation. These constitute the working out of our salvation "with fear and trembling," because God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. (Phil. 2:12, 13; Eph. 2:10.)

If a man in a large business concern required a partner or second in command in whom he could confide, he would not choose a man who did not show a proper interest in the concern and who did not show proper respect for the manager and head. Therefore those who constitute God's family of this Gospel Age are those who show genuine interest in God's plans and methods, and study His Word to learn of His ways and conform to them. This is the basis upon which God shows mercy to whom He will (believers) and by which He hardeneth others (wilful rejectors of the Truth), in the present time. The Apostle Paul exhorted the Church to, "by the mercies of God, present their bodies living sacrifices," reminding us that we are bought with a price, and in this we are to continue faithful, lest after all God's kindness and mercy to us We, through disobedience, should harden our hearts. There is a scripture I would like to read in Heb:3:13,14—"Exhort one another daily, while it is called Today; lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin. For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence stedfast unto the end."

If we could only keep in mind the magnitude of God's mercy towards us at all times, it would help us considerably in many a difficult situation. No doubt that is why some experiences are permitted to come to us along life's way, to remind us of our own imperfection, that our great treasure is in frail earthly vessels. It is often in small ways that the fruits of the holy spirit are perfected. To be able to show mercy to others in little things pays big dividends, crystallising our own character and increasing our ability to help others. We may have to live in a house with some person, or work with one, who has strong tendencies to annoy us. We may with kindly disposition point out to that person a better way of doing things. Maybe it is only in preparing a meal, but our companion insists in his or her own way. At the end of a trying day nerves become frayed, the various members of the home have been working hard and things have not gone right—result, hasty judgments are given, unkind utterances are made. It might be said, We know this is so amongst the world, but surely not so with the brethren. They are able to overcome such occurrences. But no, it seems such things occur with greater pressure where brethren are concerned, for our great Adversary grasps every such opportunity.

How can we overcome better than in the past? Let us try thinking mercifully in our own mind, and make excuses for the erring one, endeavour to see his point of view. Remember our own failings of the past and present. The other fellow is not always the only erring one. Where would any of us be but for the continual mercy of our God? Remember, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us." "If ye do not from the heart forgive, neither will I forgive you."

We have learned wonderful things from God's Word. We are able to rightly divide the Word of Truth so that it is not only a meaningless number of jig-saw blocks too hard to assemble. But we have no room to ride the high horse. It is not by our willing or running, but by the mercy of God we are saved at all.

There is a verse or two in Psalm 130:3, 4 I would like to read—"If thou, Lord, shouldest mark iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand? But there is forgiveness with Thee, that Thou mayest be feared."

Then there is a comment in the Manna Book also that I thought would be very nice to read again, that for 14th December—"Blessed are the merciful; for they shall obtain mercy." Matt. 5:7.

"All do not know it, but it is a fact that the grandest quality that man can exercise, and the one which brings the largest amount of blessing itself, is the exercise of the God-like quality of mercy, compassion, benevolence. The Lord lays great stress upon this quality of mercy, declaring that whatever else may be our attainments of knowledge or of grace, if we have not this one we can never be acceptable to Him—if we do not have mercy upon others neither will our Heavenly Father have mercy upon us. And to ensure that we do not consider this mercy to be merely an outward form, an expression of forgiveness and benevolence, our Lord expounds the matter, saying, 'If ye do not from the heart forgive one another, neither will your Heavenly Father forgive you.' . . . Only the merciful shall obtain mercy: and if we have not mercy at the hands of the Lord all is lost; for by nature we were children of wrath, even as others, and under just condemnation."

Then just to close with, we have a few words also recorded in Eph. 4:29-32—"Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers. And grieve not the holy spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption. Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice; and be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

Correspondence.

Victoria. Frank and Ernest, My Christian Comrades—Please accept my sincere thanks for the Peoples Paper” and leaflets which I received. I believe that there are many blessings in this literature if we only look. I would very much like to know how much money I have to send each month for the “P.P.”

I enjoy listening to your programme each week, and would like a talk and leaflet each week if possible, as I think they are a great spiritual help.

Wishing you every success in the publishing of God’s Word and the Gospel of the Kingdom. I remain, Yours in His service.

(The subscription to “Peoples Paper” is 3/- yearly. When this sum cannot be provided and the “Paper” is desired, it is supplied free, upon request.—B.B. Institute.)

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I listen with great interest to your Sunday morning Talks over the air, and would like you to send me your booklet “Hope Beyond the Grave,” also any other reading. Yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I listened to your Talk this morning on “The Sorrows of Satan,” and notice that you will send a copy of same, so I am writing to ask you for one. The subject of Hell has often puzzled me and I would like to study what the Scriptures really say about it, for I think the popular conception of it was (as you said) born in the Dark Ages.

If you have any other literature on the same subject I would like to have it, and would willingly pay for it. Thanking you, Yours sincerely.

Dear Sir—We received the literature and were very pleased to receive it. My father said he believes every word you say. He would like a copy of last Sunday’s and every Sunday morning’s address.

We are sorry about the other letter, but we had put the wrong address and had it sent back to us. I remain.

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—For the past few months I have listened to your radio broadcasts of a Sunday morning and am pleased to say that, as a Bible reader, I think your most interesting Talks would be helpful to me in understanding the verses of my Bible.

Would you please post on to me any of your future broadcasts and also any booklets concerning your radio Talks.

I will be pleased to receive them weekly, and will cover all costs if necessary. Keep the Good Work going. I remain, Yours truly.

South Australia.

Dear Brother—Thanks for your letters, and glad the meetings continue helpfully. “Tabernacle Shadows” is a good study; we also are finding it very helpful. . .

The broadcasts have come out very well the last few Sundays. “Frank and Ernest” have both improved nicely and are getting more “natural.” That is desirable—naturalness combined with humble dignity of expression, including, of course, distinctness and clear enunciation. This is the safe middle-ground between the somewhat pompous and affected style of some ministers on the one hand, and the cheap hail-fellow-well-met style of the modern entertainer on the other. We are on the air not merely to entertain people, but to impart a blessing to their eyes of understanding, and this is best done by a simplicity and sincerity of manner and expression, which we are pleased to be able to say accompanies the broadcasts. We pray the Lord’s blessing upon this service and upon those engaged and co-operating in it.

At the same time, we have noticed what we think is a tendency for some of us to take it a bit easy and sort of allow the Frank and Ernest broadcasts to represent almost the sum total of our witnessing. While we greatly rejoice in the witness thus being given, we hope we will not slacken our zeal in the service of the truth. The circulation of the Radio cards and tracts in suitable localities, the calling from door to door service which it is still appropriate for us to engage in and blessed are those who are alert to the opportunities in these directions. . .

Much Christian love to yourself and all the friends; Yours in Christian bonds.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Friends—I have been listening to your broadcasts on Sunday mornings for some time and enjoy them very much; they are very plain and easy to understand. I also sent for some of your free literature and was very pleased with it.

The Bible is not a stranger to me; I have been through it many times and love to talk of it and read other's talks. The worst is, I am up in years and my memory is very bad.

I would like you to send me "Daily Heavenly Manna," "Armageddon" and "The Greatest of These is Love." I am enclosing 10/- to pay cost of books and mail, also "Peoples Paper" that I have had and if there is any over will you kindly use it in your good work.

Wishing you every success in your glorious work. Your sincere friend.

Dear Sirs—I am writing to ask you will you send me the address which you gave over the air on Sunday, also please can I have the booklet, 'Hope Beyond the Grave' ? I was reading the Correspondence of "Peoples Paper" which you sent me, dated 1st December. It was stated that the leaflet "An Open Letter to Seventh Day Adventist" was supplied to readers; please can I have a copy? Yours faithfully.

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I enjoyed your Talk over the air, and you offered to send the same by post. One is "Hope Beyond the Grave," the other "A Vision of the Kingdom." I enclose stamped envelope and thank you very kindly.

N. S. Wales.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Lately I have been listening to your broadcasts from 2CA on Sunday mornings and find them of great interest.

A few Sundays back you broadcast an address on "Baptism." Is it still possible to get this address. If so, I will be very grateful if you would send it to me. Wishing you the best of luck. Your faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I find your Bible Talks on 2CA very interesting and I read every leaflet I get. . . I would like you to send me the booklet "The Plan of God—in Brief," and "Christ's Return." I am enclosing 1 /- in stamps for them, and would you send me the papers on "Has God No Pity," and "Why Sorrow, Sin, Death and Evil is Permitted" ? Will greatly appreciate if you would. Yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Christian Friends—Your very welcome letter to hand, and literature, for which I am very grateful. It is all very heartening and comforting, apart from being helpful to folk that do not often have the opportunity of attending meetings, or getting in touch with any of the brethren.

I did not expect to hear from you any sooner, as I know that it is a very busy time with you. I sincerely hope that the Convention proved a help and pleasure to many—you hold them annually, I suppose.

About the money that I sent down for the "Peoples Paper," I would like it to be put to the work of the Berean Bible Institute. I got word from Mrs. after I had sent it down, that she had paid for my paper for the next year. She also enjoys the little paper and the broadcasts.

Trusting that your work will continue to be blessed, and kindest regards to yourselves.

To the Law and to the Testimony.

“To the law and to the testimony : if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them. --
Isaiah 8:20.

(Convention)

FROM this verse we gather that it is necessary for us to have a guide for our faith and walk in life, and this faith and walk in life is discussed to a very large extent, in fact all our directions come from God's Word, which is here referred to as being the law and the testimony.

We read in 2 Tim. 3:15 that the Scriptures make us wise unto salvation, and we all need that wisdom unto salvation. We realize that we have inherited the condemnation that has passed upon Adam, and that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. We are in a very desperate condition so far as life is concerned, and without the Scriptures we would have no hope of a future or a continued existence. But the Bible does hold out hope for us, and it does make us wise unto salvation. Especially is that true as far as the Church is concerned, because our Lord brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel, and we have that very great blessing from our Heavenly Father, and we are exhorted to so run that we may obtain that prize.

But it is not only for the Church that life is discussed or brought to light from God's Word. God has a Plan by which all mankind may have a continued existence on a plane that is acceptable to them, such as they would enjoy having for all eternity. That may sound very strange when we are associated with the conditions that are in the world today, but these conditions will not always continue thus. God's Word surely tells us that sin and unrighteousness and even death itself will pass away, and a reign of righteousness will exist wherein all mankind will love their neighbours as themselves. Would God that that condition did exist today, but in His own wisdom, in His own good time it will surely come to pass.

Now we have before us in the world today very many kinds or colours of religion, based upon God's Word to a greater or less extent, and their adherents claim that what they believe, what they teach, is the law and the testimony. Our purpose is to examine the principles that are laid down in God's Word to guide us in understanding what is Truth. It is necessary for us to have those principles clearly in our minds, that we may understand what God wishes us to know. Although there are so many different religions today, so many sects in Christendom that name the name of Christ, yet in the Kingdom which we all look forward to and pray for when we repeat the Lord's prayer, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven," there will be but one religion, because God has said He will turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon Him with one consent. What a wonderful time that will be, when mankind dwell in harmony, and there will be no burning at the stake as there has been by professedly Christian people in the present age.

From the great Reformation until the present time in particular, there have been numerous efforts made to understand God's Word more perfectly, and as the time has drawn closer to the glorious Day, the Millennial Age, much light has shone upon the sacred page, and we realize that the Day is thus drawing closer, as we are told that it would be just so.

We may ask, which is right and which is wrong, in all the conflicting dogmas and creeds? I call to mind a verse which many of you no doubt know,

“Some read to prove a pre-adopted creed,
Thus understand but little what they read;
And every passage in the Book they bend
To make it suit some all-important end.
So people, I have often thought,
Read to teach the Book, instead of being taught.”

But that is not the attitude we should adopt when we approach God’s Word. In Psa. 25:14 we read that the secret of the Lord is with them that reverence Him, and He will show them His covenant. Thus, it is the reverence of God that is the first requisite for us to approach His Word. When we approach that Word in a humble attitude and seek to understand it, instead of trying to teach the Lord what we think should be right, if we approach the Word to learn of Him, then we will have that attitude that is acceptable in His sight and in which He can show us the way of salvation, the way of life.

When we speak of the Bible, we mean the whole of God’s Word. It is not just a passage here and there that it is necessary for us to take notice of and discard the rest. That only leads to very great confusion, and has been the cause of many arguments, especially with our atheist friends, because they set one passage against another and then say the Bible contradicts itself. But when we take the whole of the Bible, we find that it is one harmonious message from our Creator, and that instead of being so confusing it is helpful to us, and instead of bringing discord, brings us harmony and peace.

There is a principle laid down in God’s Word that we do well to note before we continue with our subject; it is a guide that is given us to guard against interpolations creeping into God’s Word. We know that the Bible we have in the English language today has been translated from different languages, from the Hebrew and Greek in particular, and sometimes from the Greek to Latin and then to English. But it has been very hard to translate these old manuscripts from one language to another without errors creeping in, but the principle that helps us to guard against such things is that “by the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established.” Jesus, when speaking to the Jews on one occasion, said, “It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true.” (John 8:17).

Thus, if we find in the Bible one passage which apparently teaches one particular thing and is at variance with the remainder of the Bible, then that passage would immediately be classed as doubtful. We might illustrate that point by quoting Rev. 20:5, which reads, “But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection.” When we read the preceding verses it all looks very confusing. But, we have found older manuscripts than the ones our translators had for the King James Version, and they show us that the first portion of that fifth verse is an interpolation, and thus the correct translation is harmonious with the remainder of the Bible.

The same thing applies when we look into the doctrine of the Trinity, which is described in 1 John 5:7, 8. There we read “There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one. And there are three that bear witness in earth, the spirit, and the water, and the blood: and these three agree in one.”

We have found by the older manuscripts that that passage, too, has been added, and when it is eliminated from our minds we have the teaching on the Father and the Son and the holy spirit most harmonious in God’s Word. There are other passages, too, that bear out the same thought, and if we find any that are unreasonable and contrary, by themselves, to the remainder of God’s Word, and we apply this principle that two or three witnesses are required, then we will be helped to understand the matter more fully. There is another passage in Job 33:14 which tells us that “God speaketh once, yea, twice,” and if we remember that Scripture too, we will be prepared for those passages which have, probably accidentally crept into Holy Writ.

Now we come to the law and the testimony with those thoughts in mind, and the first thing we should look for in our guide to understand Truth is the character of our God. We refer to it as being “God’s Word,” and if we know what God’s character is, then we know that His Word is always in harmony with His character. There is much of the Bible taken up by a description of the characteristics of God. We will mention just a few; there are many others with which we may be acquainted, but these will be sufficient as a basis. There are four great attributes of character possessed by God—wisdom, justice, love and power—and these four attributes always work in harmony. From the Bible, we learn of the operation of these attributes. But first of all, let us see just what the Bible says about them and about their application to God.

Take the attribute of Justice. In Psalm 89:14 we read, “Justice and judgment are the habitation (basis) of thy throne; mercy and truth shall go before thy face.” Now that is a very comprehensive statement, and if we realise particularly that God would not do anyone or anything an injustice in any shape or form, it helps us to realise that the Lord our God is a just God. Then in Deut. 32:4, “He is the Rock, His work is perfect; for all His ways are judgment: a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is He.” There are many other Scriptures which describe the justice of God.

Now let us think of Wisdom as being one of His attributes. In Prov. 3:19, 20, we are told “The Lord by wisdom hath founded the earth; by understanding hath He established the heavens. By His knowledge the depths are broken up, and the clouds drop down the dew.” When we consider the wonderful works of creation, just as David said, when we “consider the heavens, the work of Thine hands,” we are filled with admiration and adoration for a God who displayed such great wisdom in the provision not only for the wants of mankind, and the needs of all His earthly creatures, but for the glories of the heavens, the extensivity of those bodies in the universe which we do see, as stars; and we are assured that there are millions of these working in harmony and retaining their orbits. God shows a wisdom in the work of His hands in that way. We marvel at the provision God has made for mankind in the mineral kingdom, and also in the animal and vegetable kingdoms, with which we come in contact day by day. These things become everyday matters to us, yet if we think over them and the intricate care that God has taken in providing these things, it helps us to realize that He is a very wise God. Job tells us, too, that He is mighty in strength and in wisdom, and in Rom. 11:33 we read, “How unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways past finding out.” Indeed, they are past finding out, without the revelation of His Word.

Now we will pass along to the attribute of Love. In John’s Gospel we read that “God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.” That displays a love which is far greater than that with which we come in contact in the world today. It shows a love for one’s enemies, just as John tells us in his epistle, “Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He first loved us, and while we were yet sinners Christ died for us,” and so provided a way of escape from condemnation that is upon the human race. So it is that “God commendeth His love to us,” and He wants us all to emulate Him in that way as well as in the way of His justice, to be just and right in our dealings with those with whom we come in contact.

There is another attribute we wish to mention, Power. We read in Psa. 62:11, “God hath spoken once; twice have I heard this; that power belongeth unto God.” And in Gen. 17:1 He is spoken of as the Almighty God. Thus we find that the God we worship, and His character as shown to us in the Bible, is wonderful, and His Word is in harmony with that character.

But is that so? We might refer to that character as being four gates of gold. They would be the gates or the entrances through which any doctrine which is reputed to be based on God’s Word may come to our minds. Does it pass those four gates of gold, those four attributes of God so often mentioned in His Word. There is one doctrine which will not, although many of us believed it in days gone by, and that is eternal torment. We will put this test upon that doctrine. Will it pass those four gates of gold? Could He torment mankind, those who are wicked, day and night for ever? There is no doubt in our minds that God could do that if He chose to do so. He has the power. Therefore that doctrine of eternal torment could pass that gate of gold. But would it pass the one of Justice? We answer, No, because “the wages of sin is death,” not life in torment. It would be impossible for God to deny Himself and to give a penalty that He has not pronounced. When He said, “In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die,” He just meant what He said, and did not mean they would spend an eternity in torment in the Bible hell. So we find that doctrine fails at that test. But we will apply the other tests, of God’s Wisdom and His Love. No one would say, surely, that it would be an act of love towards anyone, because they had transgressed God’s law—because Adam had eaten an apple—that they would spend an eternity in torment. It does not pass that gate of gold. Neither would it pass the test of God’s Wisdom, because no good could come of such a thing.

But there are other things to which we could apply that test, and we know that if they do not harmonise with God’s character then they are not of Him. We find that the whole of God’s Word is in harmony with this glorious character. Take the doctrine of the Trinity. Would that pass those four gates of gold? We find, No. It might pass two or three but we will mention one it does not pass, and that is Justice. Justice required a life for a life, a corresponding price, and our Lord came to be a Redeemer for mankind, and to give His life a ransom for all, as we read in 1 Cor. 15:22, “As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.” The doctrine of the Trinity would be impossible, for Christ could not have given a corresponding price as man’s redeemer if He were equal with God.

When we come to consider the doctrine of the Ransom, that wonderful way in which God has shown us the plan of salvation, we find that everything associated with that is in harmony with this glorious character of God. In His wisdom He saw how he could use the wrath of man to praise Him, and He could use this reign of sin and death at the present time to bring many sons to glory. In all His works throughout the reign of sin and death He is not letting the time slip by, but in His wisdom is using that time for the accomplishment of His purposes in the deliverance of all mankind.

Then there is Justice. We have mentioned a little on that point once before, that it was necessary for a life to be given for a life, and thus God opened a way whereby a New Creation could be established, and our Lord became the first-fruits unto God of His creatures in that way, and the Church are invited to follow in the steps of the Master and become co-labourers together with God and with the Lord Jesus in the glorious Kingdom which He has promised. The Love that is shown in the ransom transcends anything that we have seen. We read in the Scriptures that a woman may forget her sucking child, yet will not. God forget us. His love is one that would even bring his enemies from the grave and give them a full knowledge and opportunity, that they may obtain life, and be in harmony with their Creator.

Now with these thoughts in mind here is a verse of a hymn that is very precious to me and I think to all of us- -Who trust in that Word has the sweet hope of life,

And end of confusion and error and strife,
His grace He imparts to the truth-seeking soul
Who humbly submits to His righteous control.
On that sacred page, oh what glory now shines
As God's holy spirit illumines its lines,
Displaying His plan, in which all may rejoice,
And praise Him forever with heart and with voice."

It also brings to mind the words of the Psalmist, "How sweet are thy words to my taste, yea, sweeter than honey in my mouth." When we realise what a wonderful character God has, as shown to us in the law and the testimony, His Word, we all feel like joining in that glorious chorus mentioned in the fifth chapter of Revelation, "And I beheld, and I heard the voice of, many angels around about the throne and the beasts and the elders; and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands; saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing. And every creature . . . heard I saying, Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever."

The Lord's Call to His People.

WHILE the joint statement from the Crimea Conference, published about the middle of February, to the effect that—"It is our inflexible purpose to destroy German militarism and Nazism, and to ensure that Germany will never again be able to disturb the peace of the world," was expected from the leaders of Britain, United States and Russia, a rather surprising outcome of this Conference of the "Big Three" was revealed early last month with the declarations of war against Germany on the part of Turkey, Egypt, Syria and Finland.

Such is the state of world politics 'today that we find the leaders of the great powers setting a time limit on smaller countries, requiring them to enter the war by 1st March in support of the Allied cause, to enable these countries to be represented at the forthcoming San Francisco Conference to be held towards the close of this month.

If ever there was necessity for Egypt to enter the war it was surely when the invader was within her country; likewise, Turkey was menaced in previous years, but not today, yet the fear of being left out of a political Conference is sufficient to induce these and other countries to declare war. With such requirements enforced by the great powers the prospect for some satisfactory outcome of the San Francisco Conference, even of temporary duration, does not seem bright. Indeed, the press reports of the preliminary arrangements for this world Conference reveals much of disharmony between the nations concerned. For instance, it was reported that France had registered a protest at not being selected as one of the sponsoring powers, to which Russia retorted that she would stand "no more bickerings from France." Poland's position is but one other cause of difficulty prior to this Conference.

But what say the Scriptures respecting man's best efforts to arrange a new order of things, with peace and happiness for the world, following the most destructive war of all history, a war which still continues with increasing severity for Germany and Japan? God's Word leaves not the slightest doubt on this matter, and to be forewarned is to be forearmed, that is, if the Bible's message can be accepted and acted upon. In 1 Thes. 5:2, 3, St. Paul, the greatest expounder of truth the world has known (apart from Jesus Christ), declares, "The day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape."

"The day of the Lord" here mentioned by the Apostle is elsewhere described in the Scriptures as "the day of wrath," and "the day of Jehovah" and refers to a comparatively short period of time at the close of "this present evil world" (age), and is not to be confused with the thousand years of Christ's Kingdom mentioned by our Lord as "my day" in John 8:56.

St. Peter uses the same expression in confirmation of St. Paul and adds some details when he states—"The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein, shall be burned up." (2 Pet. 3:10.) A point of special note in this statement of Peter's is the fact that not only "the earth and the works therein" (social, political and financial elements) are to be destroyed, but also "the heavens shall pass away with a great noise."

These "heavens" can be none other than the religious systems, Roman and Greek Catholic and Protestant etc., which comprise Christendom.

This is a hard saying for many adherents to the various churches. How often we hear it expressed that other churches may come under the heading of Babylon, but surely not my church. However, the Lord made no mistake when He declared that the Laodicean church, the seventh and last church on earth prior to the setting up of His Kingdom, being a combination of all systems of Christendom, would be judged "neither cold nor hot." "So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of My mouth," are our Lord's own words—Rev. 3:14-16.

Surely no sincere Christians would knowingly allow themselves to be cast off from the Lord by adherence to any of these lukewarm churches of the present Laodicean period of church history! No, the Lord has made provision that this should not be so; the earnest Christians will no doubt hear His voice, through His Word, calling—"Come out of her, (Babylon) my people, (the call is to His people only) that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities." (Rev. 18:4, 5.)

It may be asked, What are the sins of Babylon, these church systems of the Laodicean period, which have so displeased the Lord as to cause Him to cast them off forever? One of • the greatest sins has been the general acceptance throughout Christendom of the God-dishonoring doctrine of the immortality of the soul; in other words, the acceptance of Satan's lie—"Ye shall not surely die." So destructive is this erroneous teaching that it cancels all necessity for the sacrifice of Christ, for if there be life in death, Christ's sacrifice to redeem mankind from death and give them life in the resurrection day was wholly superfluous. Other erroneous teachings such as the Trinity, Eternal Torment, Purgatory, etc., coupled with worldly affiliation on the part of church leaders and followers as a whole make up these sins which have "reached unto heaven." Where are the church leaders today who are not associated with the world in politics, war activities, etc., as well as adhering to and preaching the errors of the systems they represent. If there are any, the call is clear and distinct—"Come out of her (Babylon) my people." Where are the church adherents who are ready to examine their Bibles and accept its truth rather than the man-made creeds handed down from the Dark Ages? To all such, the Lord's requirement is also—"Come out of her, My people"-if you be My people. What benefit can there be by continued association with systems already spued out?

Someone may say, but my friends belong to the church where I attend, and we have really helpful times together.

If association with friends who condone the errors and worldliness of church systems is preferred before the Lord's truth and favor, then such a one is demonstrating that he or she is not of the class "My people," and by remaining in Babylon shall receive of Babylon's plagues as necessary lessons prior to the setting up of the Kingdom on earth. And of course, such a one would also indicate that he has no desire for the heavenly hope, now offered to those who will follow the Lord faithfully, even unto death. "He that loveth father or mother more than Me, is not worthy of Me: and he that loveth son or daughter more than Me, is not worthy of Me. And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after Me, is not worthy of Me."

The San Francisco Conference will, end similarly to many Conferences before and after the establishment of the past League of Nations; that is, without bringing lasting benefits to mankind. The League of Nations was a noble effort on man's part to keep the peace of the world; however, God has in store a much better "League of Nations" which will be Christ's Kingdom. But first of all mankind, great and small, must be humbled to the dust, so that never again shall they forget their Lord. In the remaining period prior to the complete overthrow of present-day systems, religious, social, political and financial, the Lord is finding the last members of His people, those who, by responding to His call to leave all connections with Babylon, demonstrate that they never were in heart harmony with the sins (erroneous teachings and worldliness) which have reached unto heaven. "Come out of her, My people."

God's Rainbow Covenant.

FOLLOWING the flood it was natural that Noah and his family might dread another Deluge, not clearly understanding the origin of that great advent which had overwhelmed the world. Very appropriately God called their attention to the rainbow, when He assured them that never again would the whole earth be overwhelmed in water.

We can see the philosophy of this, whereas Noah and his family merely had the matter by faith, not discerning the philosophy. We can see that when the last of earth's "rings" had come down there could not be another deluge, because there were no waters above the firmament to be precipitated. Since the Flood, we merely have the moderate supply of moisture, in the form of clouds in our firmament, and none in the form of a great envelope beyond the firmament.

Now we may see how it was that Noah had never seen a rainbow; because prior to the Flood, when the sun shone through the watery envelope as merely a great ball of fire, its rays did not strike directly through, and hence no rainbow was possible. But since the watery envelope broke, the fine vapors in the direct line of the sun's rays cause, naturally, the rainbow effect. And, as God declares, so long as there is a rainbow, there can never be a flood. God's words and ways are not less reasonable when we come to see their • grand philosophy. On the contrary, the more we understand the Divine methods and operations the more we appreciate their wisdom.

The Tower Of Babel.

Generations afterward, when the family of Noah had multiplied, the meaning of the rainbow as a covenant between God and man — the guarantee against another deluge—was forgotten. The worldly-wise if that time were foolish enough to undertake the building of a great tower, to whose top they could go in the event of another deluge. Since they had neglected the Lord's message and disregarded His promise, He let them alone to make manifest their own folly in labor and sweat of face, which could prove of no avail.

Finally, however, when they were measurably wearied with their herculean task, and when they had, to some extent at least, learned a valuable lesson, the Lord confounded their language so that they could not understand each other, nor co-operate with each other in any such vast enterprise. Separated in tongue and in interest, they scattered. Their interests became diverse, and gradually manners and customs and color of skin, during the centuries, became more and more dissimilar. Thus the various races with their peculiarities of temperament and language had their start.

St. Paul tells us all this was a premeditated plan on God's part, as being to the best interests of humanity and most favorable for the outworking of the Divine purposes. He says, God "hath made of one blood all nations of men, for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation, that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after Him and find Him."—Acts 17:26, 27.

How one part of God's Word sheds light upon another! Thus we are enabled to see how Divine Wisdom has had a supervision of the ultimate interests of humanity. Even though God has allowed man in his ignorance to become the servant of Satan, He still has protected him in a measure, and shaped his affairs for his ultimate good. That good, as we realise, is to be fully attained by the world in general at the Second Coming of Jesus and the establishment then of His Messianic Kingdom, which will bind Satan and scatter the power of darkness and sin. It will shine forth as the Sun of Righteousness, to heal and bless and uplift the willing and obedient of mankind.

But the matter of separating the human family into different nationalities has been specially useful during the dark time preceding Messiah's Second Coming. More or less the nations have been occupied in watching each other and guarding themselves against each other. The barrier of language for centuries served to keep apart peoples living in close proximity, to hinder the running to and fro which has been going on, particularly within the last seventy years, since steam power became effective for transportation.

The commingling of all nations within the last sixty years is breaking down the national barriers wonderfully. It is fulfilling the word of prophecy, "My determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms." (Zephaniah 3:8.) The world of mankind is being brought into close touch, barriers of language are breaking down; and the breaking down of these barriers is favorable to human co-operation, either for good or for evil. Since mankind are sinners by nature, their co-operation is most likely to be along selfish lines, and therefore most likely to be evil. How this is manifest in the present world-war.

We find today that rich corporations have built together a great tower of Babel for their protection against every kind of calamity which would come upon their riches. The laboring classes are doing likewise. The mechanics are building up a great Tower of Babel of Unionism, which they trust will deliver them from all adversity and in which they hope to be safe forever. Had it not been for the dispersion and for the language-barriers, no doubt these worldwide organizations of Capital and Labor would have developed long ago and the final great catastrophe or conflict between these great giants would have come so much the sooner, precipitating all its terrible anguish and disaster on humanity—"a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation."—Daniel 12:1.

Fire, The Next Calamity.

St. Peter divides the history of mankind into three great epochs, called "worlds" in our common version Bible, but more properly designated three great Epochs. The first Epoch of earth's experience ended with the Flood, and then the present Epoch began, styled by St. Paul "this present evil world," or Epoch, because during this time evil holds preponderance of power amongst men, even though they do their best.

The first Epoch, or order of things, was overwhelmed and brought to an end by a deluge of water; and St. Peter tells us that the present "world," or order of things, is to be brought to a conclusion by a deluge of "fire." But following the fire, there will be a new "world" or new Epoch, or order of things, much better than anything yet experienced by mankind. "The world to come whereof we speak" will be an Epoch of righteousness, because it will be under the direct rule and supervision of Messiah's Kingdom."—2 Peter 3:10-13.

At first many Bible students were inclined to understand St. Peter's words to signify that the fire which will terminate the present order of things and usher in the New Age would be a literal fire, which would consume the physical earth and the heavens. However, closer study reveals the fact that the fire is of symbolic kind, which will merely consume present institutions — everything of the present time that is contrary to the Divine will—everything that is unjust, inequitable.

The "elements" which "will melt with fervent heat" will be the capitalistic and labor elements, and the strife between these, the friction, is already great. A little more and it will burst into a flame, as St. Peter prophesied. The "heavens" that will be involved will not be the Heavens of God's residence, but the ecclesiastical heavens — the church institutions. These will become involved in the strife between Capital and Labor, and they also will perish in that trouble time. But, thank God! the New Dispensation will, in the midst of the trouble, intervene; and it will prove to be as prophesied: "The desire of all nations." —Haggai 2:7.

As Noah and his family were the only ones spared from the physical wreck of the old order of things before the Flood, so St. Peter intimates that Christ Jesus is the Ark of Safety now for all who will be saved out of the present order of things. Christ's faithful followers of all denominations and nations will become, with Him, the Royal Priesthood of the future—the "new heavens"—the spiritual ruling power of the New Dispensation, or Messiah's Kingdom. Under their supervision, speedily a "new earth"—a new social order—will be inaugurated, in which selfishness will be wholly eliminated, and in which righteousness will prevail. Of this new order of things we read: "We look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."—2 Peter 3:13.

Although, doubtless, many human lives will be lost in that greatest trouble the world has ever known, with which this age will end, nevertheless the great mass of humanity will still remain. But all their ingenious arrangements of the present time, social, financial and ecclesiastical, will have perished, and everything will have been put upon a new basis by the Great Messiah.

The Lord, in the prophecy of Zephaniah, describes the time of trouble that is coming, as a fire to consume; and then tells us that following the fiery baptism of trouble, He will send to mankind "a pure Message, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord to serve Him with one consent." (Zephaniah 3:9.) This teaches that mankind will not be wholly destroyed by the fiery trouble of that Day, but it teaches that the confusion of doctrines given forth in the name of the Lord will all terminate with this present Age. The Message of Divine grace and Truth which will be promulgated in the future will be pure, and the blessing to all who will receive it will be great.

Correspondence.

Victoria.

Dear Brother—Just a few lines again today ; I received yours yesterday and pleased to note its contents. . . Yesterday I was out again with the cards and had one or two happy experiences. While passing along a street I handed a card to a lady working in the garden and was almost on to the next place when she called me back to say they had been listening to Frank and Ernest for a long time and enjoyed the Talks very much. They are Church of Christ people and she said that she knew several of the Congregation who listened also, particularly one other man she knew whom she had asked if he listened to Frank and Ernest and he said, “Yes, always, they’re real good.” We had quite a conversation and I gave her what I had at the time—a couple of Dialogues in print and a “Golden Future.” She said they would certainly read them. . .

Later in another street I went down one side and on returning back the other side another lady hailed me from the doorway. She too had been listening for some time and evidently getting something from them. . . Later again I met two ladies to whom I offered cards ; they accepted them and looked them over and one said, “I would like very much to hear this, but I have no wireless”—whereupon I did the next best by offering her a couple of the printed Dialogues.

. . Another man whom I met in the street gave the card the once over and said, “Yes, I’ve heard this, very good too,” and then passed on. Several -other persons in the street also accepted the cards appreciatively and it was the most encouraging afternoon I have spent. . . I would like another 300 or 400 of the Radio cards if you have a good supply. .

. Warm Christian love; Your Brother in Christ, by grace.

(Good supplies of Radio cards, printed Dialogues and papers are available to all who can use them to advantage.—B.B. Institute.)

To Frank and Ernest—I have been listening to your session for a few Sundays now, and would be pleased if you will send papers and addresses for a few Sundays back, or I would like if possible back to when you spoke of the second coming of Christ.

Will you also please send them to Mr. . Thanking you for your most interesting Talks, and the help your sessions are to me in knowing my Bible. Yours sincerely.

Berean Bible Institute, Frank and Ernest, Dear Christian Friends—I am in receipt of “P.P.”, also Dialogues enclosed, for which I thank you. I would like to renew my subscription for the “P.P.” ; enclosing 10/- to cover same and as usual, please put balance towards general funds.

Some time ago I was called away owing to sickness in the family, hence my silence, but nevertheless, my interest in your good efforts has not waned ; in fact, I haven’t missed one Sunday morning of your radio Dialogues, and look forward with keen expectation of hearing something worthwhile in the realm of spiritual values.

In closing, we pray the Lord to continue to bless the efforts of Frank and Ernest, and all Christian brethren associated with the Berean Bible Institute. Best wishes for 1945. Yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Friends—I am writing these few lines to kindly ask you for a copy of today’s Talk over the air, and also for the previous Sunday.

I sincerely wish to thank you for your Talks ; I would never miss listening in, as they are a great help for me to understand the Bible.

May God bless you for the good work you are doing. Thanking you in’ anticipation. I am, Yours sincerely.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sirs—Thank you for sending the Dialogues and “Peoples Paper” along when sending some months ago for’ one of the Sunday morning Talks which I enjoy each Sunday, but I am sorry to say I am able to read or write only one hour daily by Dr.’s order. Enclosing 3/-for the “Peoples Paper” ; you may send the “Paper” to some one whom you think would like it. Yours truly.

N. S. Wales.

Dear Brother—Am sending along our Good Hopes—£ 2/4/0 from the family, also 6/- from Mrs. for the Radio Fund.

The session came over good and clear this morning; it is a real pleasure to listen to the truth going forth in this manner each week, and we constantly pray that the witness may do some good in awakening those earnest souls who are still in bondage to Babylon. The announcements both before and after the Talk seem good to me, as also is the Theme. The words—”O Come let us adore Him—Christ the Lord” strike a responsive chord in my heart. When we know the truth and have been sanctified by it ‘we cannot help joining in the chorus, “Blessing, and honor, and glory be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne and to. the Lamb for ever.” \ I regret that I cannot do more to spread the truth that makes us free indeed.

With Christian love; Yours in the Lord.

Dear Christian Friend—I have read the valuable book “Fore-gleams of the Golden Age” and now I will go over it again in closer study. In it .I have found great joy ; it has solved much that I desired, in fact a thought I got over thirty years ago. When a lad I talked the Scriptures with my mate in Scotland—what we would be when death had come. I would go to church but never got the proof of what was said; something said, “I can’t take that.” The belief that we would be like our first parents was always in my mind; now I have found what I was looking for, I am indebted for the book and to you, but this I believe ‘tis the slow but sure way that my Saviour opened the truth to me.

Would you please send a book on baptism. I heard Arch-Deacon talk on the wireless about it ; it was interesting but he gave no Scriptural, reference for his talk, no foundation, it seemed just man-made. I will forward the price if you will please give same with book. With best wishes ; Yours faithfully.

(The resurrection to human life, like our first parents, is for mankind in general, but the sure hope of the faithful follower of Christ, is to the heavenly, spiritual life, like unto Christ since His resurrection. Literature on these two salvations is available free to all.—B.B. Institute.)

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sirs—Have you any back issues of January and May, 1-943, “Peoples Papers”? If so, please send them to me and price of same, and I will send the amount.

This morning I found a copy in some rubbish, etc., left behind by some men who were repairing a bridge here. We often listen to Frank and Ernest and much enjoy these sessions, and was very interested in the “Many Mansions” in the “Peoples Paper” I found today. Yours faithfully.

Should Christians Observe the Jewish Sabbath?

WE are aware, of course, that in taking up this question we shall be dealing with a matter that some have adopted as an essential to salvation. We have respect for those who think they are bound to keep the Israelitish sabbath and conscientiously endeavour to do so. However, the fact that their conscience leads them to do this, is no proof that such is the Divine will for the followers of Christ during this Gospel age.

Conscience of course should be obeyed, but conscience is not a sure guide as to what is God's will. Conscience has led many people to do strange things, and, very wicked things. No doubt some of the priests 'of Israel thought they were obeying the Law when they crucified the Lord Jesus as a blasphemer. Paul persecuted the church in all good conscience, and our Lord foretold that some would think they were doing God. service in killing others. It necessary that our consciences be regulated by the Word of God; that must be our guide.

The question then is, do we find anything in the teachings of Christ and the apostles to lead us to think that the church should keep the Jewish sabbath? Why call it the Jewish sabbath? Some would assert that the sabbath was in existence from the beginning of man's creation. However, the Bible does not mention any instruction to any from Adam to Moses to observe any sabbath.

The first mention of a seventh day observance would seem to be in regard to the institution of the Passover and the deliverance of Israel out of Egypt. Then comes the fourth commandment, given to the nation of Israel as a "shadow," a "type," reminding them of the days of creation, those long periods of time in which God prepared this earth for human habitation, and also pointing forward to the great anti-typical sabbath, when the Divine purpose respecting humanity and the earthly home shall be completed, and all will be at rest in perfect life, perfect environment, under the Divine rule of righteousness and peace.

Our Seventh Day Adventist friends would have us believe that the great Creator did all His wonderful creative work in seven days of twenty-four hours each. However, neither scientific research, nor reason, nor. Scripture support this small view; facts of nature contradict it. God takes time to accomplish His designs and works along the lines of His own ordered nature. The church of Christ is a new creation and it has been over nineteen centuries in course of creation.

The seventh day of Israel was evidently fixed at the time of the deliverance from Egypt, when Moses was told that that month should be the beginning of months to them. The lamb was slain on the 14th of this first month, Nisan, and Israel went out of Egypt on the first day of the next week and had to keep the whole of that week holy, with a holy convocation on the first and seventh days. Then came the Law Covenant, the ten Commandments being part of it.

This Covenant was made with Israel only. (Deut. 29:1.) "He hath not dealt so with any nation; and as for His judgments, they have not known them." (Psa. 147:20.) "You only have I known (recognised) of all the families of the earth." (Amos 3:2.) God had special reasons for dealing only with Israel during that age, in harmony with His promise to Abraham. The Law demonstrated Divine justice and would reveal the Messiah, as He only could keep it. That nation might have passed on into the favour of the Gospel, and the church, the heavenly seed of Abraham, would have been exclusively from Israel. They failed to enter into the rest of faith, into the real sabbath, because of unbelief, and so the Gospel came to the Gentiles "to take out a people for God's name."

Jesus had come to Israel with a new offer of salvation. They had failed under the Law Covenant; it was a "yoke on them that they were unable to bear," and He came saying, "Come unto Me all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest. . . For My yoke is easy, and My burden is light.” (Matt. 11:28-30.) Yes, “the Law came by Moses but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.” (John 1:17.) Jesus came and kept the Law and then died under the Law that He “might redeem them that were under the Law.” He opened a new and living way —the narrow way, the way of faith. (Gal. 3:9-14.) “And if by grace, then it is no more of works: otherwise grace is no more grace.” (Rom 11:6.) So Christ redeemed those that believe of the Jewish people from under the Law, so that they could be married to another, even become the Bride of Christ. (See Rom. 7:1-6; Col. 2:14.)

“Then said he, Lo, I come to do Thy will, O God. He taketh away the first (the type) that he may establish the second (the reality or antitype). By the which will we are sanctified, through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.” The Law and the prophets were until John (the Baptist), since then the kingdom of heaven is preached. There was the great change of dispensation and Jesus indicated this in Matt. 5:27-48, in which He quoted what saith the Law and contrasts it with what He says.

It took the apostles quite a time to realise the great change and a vision was necessary to reveal to Peter that Gentiles were to be acceptable as members in Christ; he was instructed to go and use the second key of the Kingdom and to open the door to the Gentiles, Cornelius being the first Gentile convert. Then Paul was appointed of the Lord to be the apostle to the Gentiles. However, the apostles were still clinging to the Jewish religion and ceremonies, as Christ had said to the two disciples on the way to Emmaus, “O simpletons and slow of heart to believe.” The question arose as to what it was necessary for Gentile converts to observe, some thinking that they must observe the Law as well as believe in Christ. So a council of apostles and leading brethren was called at Jerusalem. James was the presiding elder at Jerusalem and evidently was chairman. We have the account and the decision reached in Acts 15:5-11. We have Peter’s expression and then Paul and Barnabas speak and James as chairman sums it up. See verses 19-29. This was the decision of the Council and there is, not a word about keeping any of the Law’s commandments — no mention even about keeping the fourth commandment. Certain men are reproved in verse 24 for having troubled the Gentile Christians with words subverting their souls and saying that they must be circumcised and keep the Law—”to whom we gave no such commandment.”

If it was essential that Christians should observe the Jewish Sabbath then the apostles would certainly have said so, but their decision was otherwise, that Gentiles were not to have the yoke which they could not bear put upon them; they were not to be troubled in the matter either of circumcision or keeping the Law. That ought to be sufficient to settle the question. There is, however, much more in the New Testament to make the matter plain. In fact, there is no ground whatever to support the Seventh Day Adventists’ teaching on this subject.

In Col. 2:16-17 the apostle says, “Let no man judge you in meat, or drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of a new moon, or of the sabbath, which are a shadow (type) of things to come; but the body (the reality) is of Christ.” As verse 14 states, Christ has blotted out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to His cross. Our S.D.A. friends ask us to believe that it was the ceremonial part of the Law Covenant only that was done away. Then the apostles should have said so at the council at Jerusalem and Paul should have said so in Col. 2:14, but instead he goes on to particularly mention holy days and the sabbath.

In 2 Cor. 3:7 Paul definitely speaks of the difference of ministration under the Law and that under Christ and particularly mentions the Law written on tables of stone as being the ministration that passed away.

Rev. 22:14 has been quoted as referring to the ten commandments given to Israel, but that is not so. The “words of Jesus” can be referred to as the commandments of Jesus, also the apostles’ instructions are referred to as commandments, as noted in Acts 15,—”to whom we gave no such commandment.” The Greek word for commandment may mean instruction, prediction or exhortation. (Crudens Concordance.)

The Apostle in Heb. 7:11, 12 in mentioning that Jesus as the great Melchisedec Priest was not of the Levitical priesthood, for under it the people received the Law, asks what further need was there that another priest should rise after the order of Melchisedec and not after the order of Aaron? And states “For the priesthood being changed there is made of necessity a change of the Law.” Then read verses 17-19. . . “For there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before, for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof. For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did; by the which we drew nigh unto God.”

In Heb. 3 Paul again contrasts the arrangement under Moses with that under Christ. Moses was head over a house of servants, to whom it was necessary to give the Law—thou shalt and thou shalt not—for as Jesus said, a servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth, but I have called you friends. (See also Gal. 3:9-14, 18-29; Gal. 4:1-11, 21-31; Gal. 5:1-4.)

How did it come about that the early Christians chose the first day of the week (which of course is every seventh day) to be their day for fellowship, instead of continuing the Jewish day? The S.D.A. friends assert that Constantine changed the day by edict. Constantine no doubt made it nationally legal, but the early Christians had practiced it ever since our Lord rose from the dead and made Himself known to the disciples on the first day of the week. During those six weeks of His invisible presence it was usually the first day of the week that He appeared to them. That did not make the first day of the week a sabbath under the Law in the sense of the Jewish sabbath, but it seemed to be and was evidently taken to indicate the Lord's will that the first day should be their day for special fellowship—emphasising the great change of dispensation and the passing away of the Law Covenant with Israel. The Law of commandments had been nailed to the cross.

This was evidently so understood by the apostles and disciples as is shown by an epistle written by Ignatius who lived in the days of the Apostle John and was martyred about 107 A.D. He wrote (See Milner's History, page 58):—"If we still live according to Judaism we confess that we have not received grace, for the divine prophets lived according to the Gospel of Jesus Christ. For this they were persecuted, being inspired by His grace to assure the disobedient that there is one God who has manifested Himself by Jesus Christ His Son, who is the eternal Word. If then they have cast off their old principles let them no longer observe the Jewish Sabbath but live according to the resurrection of the Lord, in whose resurrection from the dead our resurrection also is assured." That was what Ignatius wrote about 200 years before Constantine made the day nationally legal by edict.

Our first parents in Eden had no instructions to keep any seventh day sabbath or rest, for it was an eternal sabbath, a continual rest there, and each evening they might "hear the voice of the Lord God walking in the cool of the day."

The Jewish sabbath was given as a type of the restored rest that is to be for the whole creation (that is groaning and travailing in pain until now, waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God), in the seventh 1000 year day when Christ and these sons of God, now being chosen during this Gospel age, will reign to bless and restore all the willing and obedient and bring them into that eternal rest of harmonious reconciliation with God, the fellowship, the peace and joy of Eden restored.

These sons of God who are at present being chosen have the privilege of entering this sabbath-rest even now, ahead of the world. (See Heb. 4:1-9.) "We who have believed do enter into rest. . . and there remaineth therefore a rest (sabbath) for the people of God."¹

Love Not the World.

“Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever, therefore, will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God.”—James 4:4.

THIS text brings to mind another one somewhat similar—”Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world; if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him.” (1 John 2:5.) From these Scriptures we should not get the thought that we are to have no worldly people as our friends, nor to have them consider us as their friends; otherwise it would imply that we were their enemies and they our enemies. But we are to be the enemies of none, and are, therefore, to be the friends of all.

One can, however, scarcely read the above advice from two of the Lord’s Apostles without having another Scripture suggested to his mind—and this, too, from the lips of our dear Lord himself—which at first sight may seem contradictory, viz., “God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.” (John 3:16.) The two, however, are not antagonistic, but are in full harmony when rightly understood.

How, then, shall we understand that we are not to have friendship with the world, and yet are to love the world?

The key is found in the word “world.” As, for instance, if one should go into politics, he would find that politics is so interlaced with evil things that it would be practically impossible for him to engage in it without compromising his relationship with God. In former times no one could associate very much with any one in the world unless he were, more or less, in politics. Therefore, it would mean being in accord with sinful practices — not, perhaps, directly, but indirectly.

Very few people know how political affairs are carried on. A man in politics forgets his conscience; he is almost compelled to “give and take” with others. Otherwise, the district or ward or state that he represents would proportionately lack representation, because he would be ignored; and anything that he would be inclined to say, would result in driving him out of politics, which would cause his ward or district or state to suffer injury. So, then, the broad thought connected with this text would be that God’s people will recognize the things of the world in general, as being in opposition to the service of God, and that they are not in sympathy with the methods of the Prince of this world.

There is a worldly side to every question, every business; and for us to conform ourselves to these arrangements and to co-operate with them, would be sin on our part. Nevertheless, as the Apostle says, we cannot go out of the world, and must, more or less, have contact with worldly people. The proper course is, therefore, as indicated in the Scriptures, that the Lord’s people walk circumspectly, seeking to keep themselves loyal to God and to all of His principles; seeking to separate themselves from the world and to be burning and shining lights that the world may see their good works and glorify their Father in heaven.

We Are To Do Good To All Men As We Have Opportunity.

If God so loved the world, even while they were yet sinners (Rom. 5:8), as to sacrifice the dearest treasure of His heart in order to redeem and save them, then such love and such benovence toward the world on our part cannot be out of harmony with His will. Indeed, such is the direct teaching of the Word—”As you have therefore opportunity, do good to all men; love your enemies, do good to them that hate you; pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you, that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven; for He maketh His sun to rise on the evil and on the good and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust.”—Gal. 6:10; Matt. 5:44-48.

To love the world as God loves it, is not the sentiment against which the Apostles warn the Church. That is a grand and ennobling love which, without having the least fellowship with the impure, pities the fallen and longs for the time when they may be rescued from their degradation. The love which is worthy of our emulation is that which benevolently ignores personal antagonisms and animosities, and, overleaping all selfish considerations and vengeful feelings, considers only the possibilities and the ways and means for peace and reformation and salvation.

But the love of the world, the friendship of the world to which the Apostle refers, is the love of fellowship, which implies the partaking of its spirit—its aims, ambitions and hopes, and its methods of pursuing them. If any man love the world in this sense, surely the love of the Father is not in him.

As children of God we have been called to a position of great favor and advantage. Our Heavenly Father has revealed to us His plans and purposes and has condescended to take us into His fellowship and active co-operation; and so grand and glorious and extensive is the outlook of the future that we are able to view the things of the present life in a vastly different light from that in which the world views them.

So we are not to love the present order or arrangement, nor the things that are part and parcel of it, identified with it; but rather we are to love the Kingdom of God and its righteousness, for which we pray, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth." We are to love the world only in the sense of having sympathy with it, as our Heavenly Father has, while we are unsympathetic with its arrangements.

Convention News.

ADELAIDE.

THE Convention at Adelaide has once more proved to be an occasion of very helpful and refreshing fellowship in the things pertaining to our faith and hope in Christ. Our hearts are filled with thanksgiving to our Father in heaven for His goodness to us in giving us again such a lovely Convention. The perfect weather conditions enabled us to enjoy to the fullest extent the many good things set before us on the Lord's table.

It was a pleasure to welcome our visiting friends, three from Melbourne, three from Murray Bridge, and two from Gawler. The attendance averaged about thirty. The largest attendance was on the Sunday afternoon when 39 were present at the public meeting. This number includes ten who were new-corners to our meeting, and it is to be hoped they derived some help from what they heard respecting the resurrection hope. Some expressed pleasure and satisfaction at what they heard, and accepted further reading matter. Some had been listening to the "Frank and Ernest" dialogues, which have been a means of comfort to them. •

The theme for our Convention was expressed in the Master's words "One is your Master even Christ, all ye are brethren." It is an unspeakable privilege to serve Christ in His members, and we are deeply grateful to our Father that He is enabling us more and more to see our privileges in this direction.

Our study in 1 John 4:9-16 served to remind us again of the very great love of our Father that prompted Him to give the dearest treasure of His heart in order that we, who by nature are sinful and imperfect, may come into fellowship with Himself through Christ. The apostle reasons that since God has loved us with so great love, we surely should be loving, forgiving and kind one to another. If we fail to love one another it shows that we do not know God, for God is love. .

On the Saturday afternoon the portion for our study was in Psalm 19:7-14, where the Psalmist shows the very great value of the teachings and instructions of the Word of God. Surely the cleansing power that will effect our sanctification is found in the Scriptures. But it is not sufficient to know where it is. In order to get any benefit from the Word, we need to receive it into our hearts with child-like faith, and humble, earnest endeavour to obey it and practice it in our daily lives. Knowledge alone will puff us up, but combined with love it builds us up in Christian character.

On Easter Sunday night our study was in Romans 12:9-16; here again the lesson of the practical living of the Christian life was impressed. The Lord evidently sees that we need to have these matters brought to our attention.

While giving knowledge of doctrinal matters its rightful place, it seems impossible to over-estimate the importance of keeping our hearts very tender and kind in all brotherly love one toward another, in honor preferring one another.

There were five addresses given during the Convention, the topics being "Numbered with the Transgressors," "A Few Reflections upon Stone," "The Christian Warfare," "If ye love Me, keep My commandments," "Do you believe in the Resurrection of the Dead?" There was also a discussion respecting our "privileges and responsibilities as members one of another"; also a Question Meeting, and Praise and Testimony Meeting. The Convention came to a close with the usual Love Feast, and singing of the farewell hymn "God be with you till we meet again."

Although the Convention proper concluded on the Sunday night, Easter Monday found about 30 friends assembled at Uraidla, about 12 miles from Adelaide in the beautiful Mt. Lofty Ranges. After spending some time wandering around the orchard and garden, and enjoying the natural beauty of the surrounding scenery, we partook of refreshment at the home of our dear brother and sister whose guests we were for the day. During the afternoon our minds were refreshed by a meditation on the beautiful 91st Psalm. This was an appropriate closing to a very happy and enjoyable Convention. "Happy Zion, what a favored lot is thine," we sometimes sing. Well may it be. Dwelling in the "secret place of the Most High," we "abide under the shadow of the Almighty." Praise God from Whom all blessings flow.

The Scriptural greeting sent by the Convention to all those who had kindly sent messages to us, is found in Rev. 3:10-12.

SYDNEY.

THE Sydney Convention was held during the Easter holidays and was indeed a season of rich blessing. The chairman in his opening remarks of welcome referred to the 133rd Psalm—"Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity," and this spirit proved to be the keynote of the whole Convention. Love, joy and unity were the predominant features of each session.

The Bible study was from Romans 8:1-7 and quite a helpful discussion centred round verses 2 and 3, the law of the spirit of life, the law of sin and death, and the law given to Moses.

The Symposium conducted by various brethren was much appreciated, the topic being Phil. 4:8—"Whatsoever things are true etc." The following are some thoughts from the talks:

Things that are true, the value of truth and its sanctifying influence.

Things pure, the necessity for purity of heart.—"Blessed are the pure in heart (intention) for they shall see God."

Things honest, not in £s.d. only, but more especially in things pertaining to the truth, most of all our relationship toward God.

Things just, justice being the basis of all right living, and the need to incorporate it in our character.

Things lovely, the beauties of nature, God's gift to mankind, the beauty of the Divine character.

The addresses were very helpful and showed deep spiritual insight on the part of the speakers. Just to mention a few of the many thoughts expressed—Remembrance: The memory of sweet seasons of fellowship in the past and the pleasure it brings. Malachi 3:16, "A book of remembrance was written. . . and they shall be mine saith the Lord of Hosts."

Abiding in Christ: "I am the vine, ye are the branches." The need of abiding in the vine to receive the nourishment from the root, also the need of the husbandman's care, to prune, etc.

The Kingdom: Conditions at present leading to chaos and disaster. The heavenly kingdom the only remedy and its near approach.

Counsel for the closing days of the age: Signs of the end, "Men's hearts failing them for fear," the King present with the risen saints already directing earth's affairs, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord—they may rest from their labours and their works do follow them." (Rev. 14:13.)

Psalm 40: Our rescue from the pit. of condemnation, our feet placed upon the solid rock (Christ Jesus), our way of life settled and directed. Praises to God for all His mercies (which cannot be numbered) our constant theme.

A time of sweet fellowship was brought to a close with a love feast and the hymn "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love."

Memorial Observances.

VICTORIA.

The anniversary of the institution of the Memorial of Christ's death, March 27th, was the occasion for the Melbourne brethren to observe the Lord's Supper in response to the loving request of the Master, "This do, in remembrance of Me."

Each year this simple yet solemn service is a means of rich blessing to all the followers of the Master, as it impresses the sacred truths concerning the sacrifice of Christ—"the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." Additionally, the depth of the meaning of consecration to God is so clearly revealed as the followers of the Lord are invited to participate in the sacrificial death of Christ, so that they may "drink anew with Him in the Father's kingdom."

It was a pleasure to have two country members present at the Memorial, but through sickness some others were prevented from attending. However, the Lord knoweth those who are His, and wherever His people remembered the great sacrifice on Calvary no doubt a blessing was imparted from above. It was our privilege on this occasion to especially remember in prayer the Lord's dear people everywhere, that the Lord's grace and strength may be realised fully, enabling them with us to "keep the feast" in spirit and in truth throughout the remainder of the earthly pilgrimage, to His praise.

He called me out, the Man with garments dyed.
I knew His voice—My Lord, the Crucified;
He showed Himself, and oh, I could not stay ;
I had to follow Him, had to obey.

It cast me out—this world, when once it found
That I within my rebel heart had crowned
The Man it had rejected, spurned and slain ;

Whom God in wondrous power had raised to reign.
And so we are "without the camp"—My Lord and I,
But oh, His presence sweeter is than any earthly tie,
Which once I counted greater than His claim :
I'm "out" not only from the world, but to His Name.

—Hy. P.

From Digby, Victoria, the following has been received—Our little Class of four held the Memorial of our Lord's suffering and death on the evening of the 27th of March. The Scriptures we read and spoke of were Isaiah 53; 1 Cor. 11:23-34; and Matt. 26:26-30; and the hymns were 437, 438, 18 and 166. The Merino friends were unable to come down, so would celebrate on their own.

An isolated Brother writes as follows:—I was not able to be with you for the Memorial, at least not in the flesh, though I was in the spirit. I was able to steal away on my own beneath the moonlight sky to quietly remember Him who so long ago endured so much for our sakes, and by whom we have the privilege of entering the narrow way that leads to our celestial home. If we suffer with Him, we shall reign with Him. I thought how appropriate is a verse quoted by a Sister in a letter appearing in Feb. "Watchers of the Morning":

"When thou passest through the waters,
I will be with thee;
Sure and sweet and all sufficient
Shall His presence be.

All God's billows overflowed Him In the' great Atoning day;

Now He only leads thee through them—

With thee all the way."

SYDNEY.

The Sydney friends observed the Memorial of our Lord's death on Tuesday evening, 27th March, the service being very impressive. The fact of our nearness to that day when we would drink it new with Him in the kingdom added to the solemnity of the occasion.

We were reminded that another mile stone had been reached in our pilgrim journey, and that God's goodness and mercy had followed us during the year, and that by His grace we had been kept in the narrow way.

Our thoughts were directed back to the institution of the Passover in Egypt; particularly to the blood of the typical lamb sprinkled on the side posts and upper post, which protected the typical firstborns from the avenging angel, showing that the precious blood of the Lamb of God is our protection, and that we are safe while under the blood.

The 53rd of Isaiah was quoted, the 5th verse being emphasised,—“Surely He hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows.” We were also reminded of our privilege to participate in His sacrifice (according to 1 Cor. 10:16), in order that we might share in the glory to follow. “If we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him.”

The meeting closed in the usual way by singing a hymn, each going his way, glad of once again having the opportunity of showing forth the Lord's death till He come.

CANBERRA.

On the 27th March the Class here kept up the Memorial of Christ's death. There were seven of us and two of our members were in Sydney—they were going to have it together in the hospital. We had a great blessing. Four had not had the Supper with us before and expressions of pleasure were made afterwards regarding the service, saying it much enjoyed.

For ourselves, we must say that our determination to continue in the narrow way of sacrifice was reiterated. We want more completely to drink the Lord's cup, that we may be with Him and drink it new in the Kingdom. That time cannot be far distant now.

ADELAIDE.

Once again at the Memorial season our little Class met together to commemorate the Lord's death. We are glad that this service has been provided for by our Lord, because it serves to remind us each year of the great debt we owe to Him who so loved us as to lay down His life for us. It also serves to remind us that we also have made a covenant of sacrifice with the Lord to be dead to self and live unto Him.

After reading appropriate Scriptures and singing hymns in line with the spirit of the occasion, a Brother presented some thoughts in harmony with the meaning of the symbols and we partook with grateful hearts thanking God for His great goodness to us, and seeking supplies of grace that we and all the dear people of God everywhere may be blessed with renewed appreciation of the meaning of the service, and that we may be enabled throughout the coming year to continue to abide in Christ, feeding daily upon the supplies of His grace, and striving to purge out the old leaven of malice and of every sort so that we may be the more filled with His own spirit of love and loyalty to God and to the brethren, and also to all men. Thanks be to God for His unspeakable gift.

BURNIE, TASMANIA.

The 27th of March is now a sweet memory of the past. We met at a Sister's; four in all. The afternoon was spent in general converse on the primary cause of our meeting, as we avoid a class study, that individually we might keep the thought before our minds, “In remembrance of me.”

The chief points brought out during the afternoon were, our dear Lord's perfect and finished work; our marvellous privilege of being allowed to follow in His footsteps to enable us to be exalted with Him to the Divine nature; the necessity of keeping the blood sprinkled on the doorposts and lintels of the heart; that as we stand, staff in hand and loins girded, ready to lead the world out of sin and death conditions, we have to remember the vital importance of putting the last touches to the bridal robe, assisting each other to do the same, that as the Beloved. Bride we may soon drink it anew with our glorious Bridegroom in the kingdom. As one Sister said, It was a blessed thought how the Master steadfastly set His face to go up to Jerusalem, knowing what was before Him. Truly we do not know “our time,” but by grace may we set our faces to Jerusalem knowing the journey is nearly over and longing for the consummation of our hope. To this end may 1 Thes. 4' 117, 18 strengthen and enthuse us all.

After tea the emblems were quietly partaken of, to enable those at a distance to get home.

PERTH.

On the evening of Good Friday, the Perth Ecclesia celebrated the Memorial of our Lord's death. Twenty members were present. It was with solemn thankfulness and joy that we partook of the bread and the cup in commemoration of our dear Lord's suffering and death, and in recognition and appreciation of our participation with Him. It was good to meet again in this way, and once again we felt that it was a time of spiritual stimulation, a time when, being reminded of our common-union in the body and blood of Christ, we resolved to keep pressing along diligently in the race set before us.

Several, too, gathered on the previous evening at Fremantle at the home of an elderly Sister, and experienced a similar time of blessing.

He Cometh with Clouds.

"Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him."—Rev. 1:7.

THIS Scripture is generally quoted as a proof that our Lord Jesus at His second coming will be visible to the whole human family; that they will all have great mourning when they see Him; that it will be a sad day for them—especially for the Jews. Our thought respecting the passage, in the light of other Scriptures, is different from this. In the first place, the Lord himself said, "Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more, but ye shall see Me." Only the Lord's faithful followers were to see Him. The Apostle Paul explains that Jesus' followers will see Him because they are to be changed in the first resurrection, "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." The Scriptures clearly indicate that our Lord's present condition is the heavenly, the spirit condition, not only as high a condition as before He came into the world, but still higher.

The Lord prayed to the Father that He would glorify Him with the glory that He had with Him before He came into the world—"before the world was." The Father assured Him that He had glorified Him and would glorify Him again. (John 17:5; 12:28 Vatican M.S.). The Scriptures also assure us that our Lord in His glorified condition is far above angels, principalities and powers. (Phil.2:9, 10.) When He was a man, He was a little lower than the angels." (Heb. 2:6-9.) The Scriptures declare that the Lord is now the express image of the Father's person (Heb. 1:3), and also declare of Him, "whom no man hath seen nor can see."

Another Scripture tells us that the coming of Christ will be for the blessing of the world. The very object of His coming will be for the lifting up of the poor and fallen race. St. Peter tells us that there will be "times of restitution of all things, which God hath Token by the mouth of ALL. His holy prophets since the world began." —Acts 3:20, 21.

How shall we harmonise this last statement with that of our text, which says that He shall come with clouds; that every eye shall see Him; and that all mankind "shall wail because of Him"? The answer is that in harmony with other Scriptures the coming with clouds would signify the coming in a period of trouble—the word "clouds" being used to signify trouble—in the dark day. He is coming in clouds, in that the time in which He will first manifest Himself to the world will be a very dark day to the world—"a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation," and, we are told, never shall be again. (Matt. 24:21.) That will be a dark, cloudy day, and we are approaching that time now.

In that time, ultimately all eyes shall be opened; and all mankind shall see Him with the eyes of their understanding—see Him in the sense that we agree Him now, and have knowledge of Him and of the Father. A blind man sees in the same sense. He says, "I see now"—meaning that he sees with his intellectual sight. It is far better to see with the intellect than with the natural sight.

Darkness now covers the earth. "The god of this world hath blinded the minds of all those who believe not." (2 Cor. 4:4.) There are a great many blinded minds at the present time. They do not know the object of Christ's coming. They do not have the Scriptural teaching as to why He comes. But their blinded eyes shall be opened. Every human being shall come to an understanding of the fact that the Lord's Kingdom is for the blessing of "all the families of the earth" according to God's promise made to Abraham and all the prophets after his day.

The Jews will come to recognise Him. The Apostle Paul says, "Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved" (Rom. 11:25, 26) from their blindness, from their ignorance, from their misunderstanding at His presentation of Himself at His first advent. Another Scripture says that when they see Him, recognise the “sign of the Son of Man in the heavens, then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory.” (Matt. 24:30.) The prophet says that those that “pierced Him” shall mourn for Him as a man mourns for his only son. (Zech. 12:10.) Thus they will appreciate Christ, and their eyes will be the first eyes that will be opened. But at the same time, when their eyes begin to see out of obscurity, there will not be anything that they can see with the natural sight.

There is first of all a parousia, or presence, of Christ, which is known only to His church, His bride class. This presence of Christ, “the days of the Son of Man” has been with us for some time, and the culmination of His work in the parousia will be the gathering of the church to Himself in the first resurrection. The Scriptures go on to say that He shall be revealed in flaming fire, taking vengeance.

The “clouds of heaven” well represent the confusion in general. The world for a time will be in ignorance of His presence. But gradually they will come to know that they are in the time of trouble, the day of wrath, in which this age is to close. Then they will mourn. The whole world will be in mourning. If the world has mourned in the past, much more shall we expect it to do so when the trouble will be general. In the midst of that trouble, they will gradually learn of the grace of God. Human selfishness, they will find, has been so overruled as to lead up to the glorious kingdom of Messiah, through which are to come all the blessings which God has promised.

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Brothers in Christ—I was much interested in your Talk to-day on “Baptized for the Dead.” Will you kindly forward me a copy to pass on to others. Thank you also for sending me the “Peoples Paper.” The print is small. I cannot read it myself and most of my friends are in a like condition. I had thought of asking you not to send it, but have at last found someone who will be glad to have it.

I like your Talks very much, and quite agree with Frank nearly everything. I am in my 88th year, and have been watching events most all my life ; my father looked for and taught the return of Christ for many years. I learned much from him. . . . Yours in the love of Christ.

P.S.—April 8th : I have delayed sending this, and should like your Talk for to-day. Please also send me “God’s Restitution Plan.”

Dear Frank and Ernest—It was my privilege to hear part of last Sunday’s Talk and whole of to-day’s. I am very interested and am requesting you to send me copies of ‘these Talks, also booklet “God’s Restitution Plan.” I intend, after reading, to forward them on to one of my sisters. I am enclosing stamps for postage, and thanking you in anticipation, I am yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I am writing for a free copy of Frank and Ernest Talk of the resurrection (8th April) , also the free booklet which was mentioned, please. I enjoyed their Talk very much.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs-I have been listening-in to your Talk every Sunday, and I would like a copy of your last two weeks’ Talks ; that is, Easter Sunday and last Sunday—”Joy in the Morning.”

One question I would like to ask. Do you believe that all will rise from their graves at Christ’s second advent, and then judgment ? I remain, Yours faithfully.

(In John 5:28, 29 Jesus explained the resurrection of the taints—”they that have done good”—and also the world in general—”they that have done evil”—the latter coming forth “unto the resurrection of judgment”—not “of damnation,” see Revised Version. This resurrection of judgment will take place during the thousand years of Christ’s Kingdom as shown by Acts 17:31—”God hath appointed (still future) a day, in the which He will judge the world in righteousness . . . by that man . . . raised from the dead.” Isaiah adds confirmation to this truth—”When Thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness” (Isa. 25:9.) Those individuals who will not “learn righteousness” in that day but wilfully disobey “that prophet” shall be “destroyed from among the people.” (Acts 3:23.) —B.B. Institute.)

South Australia.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I was very interested in your Talk over the air on Sunday morning last (8th inst.) re resurrection. I think the title was “Joy in the Morning.”

I should be grateful if you can forward me a copy of the Talk as indicated by the announcer. Yours faithfully.

Dear Frank and Ernest—Enclosed please find subscription of 3/- for further copies of the “Peoples Paper” to be sent to us. We still both enjoy your Sunday morning discussions and look forward to further Talks. May God bless you in your work yours faithfully.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sirs—Just a line to renew my subscription to “Peoples Paper” for another year. I have been able to listen to the broadcasts on Sundays lately, and enjoy them very much ; my wife also listens ; the only fault she finds is that the Talks are not long enough.

Please send us the Talks in print; send them with “P.P “ every month will do. I am sending 10/- , please renew my sub., and send me one each of “Armageddon” and “The Golden Future,” any balance is for Radio Fund. With kind regards, yours sincerely.

To Frank and Ernest—Please will you forward to me your little booklet “Good News,” also your pamphlet of April 8th Sunday morning Talk. In a recent Talk on the “restitution of all things” given one Sunday morning, is one given to understand by your exposition of the words “all things” that the “wicked dead” are to be restored to earthly blessings too? If so, how do you interpret Revelation 20:10-15 where it states that “those whose names were not found written in the book of life were cast into the lake of fire,” the place where “the beast and the false prophet are” and were evidently to be “tormented day and night for ever,” or “to the ages of the ages” as used in Heb. 1 :8, eternal, in the sense of unending. Would you explain this passage more fully for me?

(The statement in Rev. 20:15, “And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire” refers to the wilfully wicked at the close of the Millennial age, and not at its beginning. By reading this 20th chapter of Revelation carefully it will be seen that Satan is bound at the beginning of the thousand years “that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years were finished.” (Verses 2 and 3.) During this time mankind in general have the opportunity of accepting the laws of Christ’s Kingdom ; then, at the close of the thousand years, Satan is loosed (verse 7, etc.) to test the obedience of all who have had the blessings of that time. Those who are then proved wilfully wicked “not found written in the book of life”—not worthy of life—are destroyed, together with Satan, in the same manner as the systems “the beast” and “false prophet” had been destroyed at the beginning of the thousand years. (Verses 8-10.) Even death itself and hell (the grave) is then destroyed (verse 14) , because after this there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain : for the former things are passed away.” (Rev. 21:4, etc.) To avoid confusion it is well to mention that Rev. 20:5, with the exception of the last five words, is spurious, not being found in the most reliable manuscripts. Information respecting the “lake of fire” and “torment” is found in the booklet “Hope Beyond the Grave,” which is supplied on application—B. B. Institute.)

New South Wales.

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Brethren—I have been so interested in your Talks on the wireless, as they do make one understand the Bible when we seem all in the dark at times.

I have been going to write for your booklets sooner, but somehow in these very distressing and drougthy times I have put it off; one always feels things so much easier and brighter after listening to you, so thanking you for your Talks and to send the booklets. I will be looking forward to receiving them; again thanking you and wishing you every blessing, I am, Yours sincerely.

To Frank and Ernest—Please send me a leaflet on your Talk each Sunday morning, as I am a keen listener, and love for Sunday to come.

Christian Constancy.

(Convention Address.)

MR. CHURCHILL promised the British race “blood and tears,” and what followed was such that it was necessary to adopt all sorts of expedients to try and maintain the people’s morale. We are not under any illusions, as New Creatures, regarding the future. We know full well what the Master said, that the servant is not above his Lord, and whilst He was persecuted, they would be persecuted. We know that through much tribulation will we enter the Kingdom.

I was one of those who used to count the days until October, 1914. It is thirty years since then. As we begin to wonder how long things will last, there is some excuse for a topic like “Christian Constancy,” or endurance, or steadfastness. At any rate, we long ago came to the conclusion that it was not until such-and-such a date we were consecrated, it was until death.

The inspiration for this topic, I might say, came from various things; one was a splendid series of articles by a Brother in England, “As always, so now.” But another inspiration was the expression, “Old Faithful.” I endeavoured to some extent to find out what that meant. I have heard that it was an old faithful steed, a farm horse, or—something of the kind, and as a reward for his faithfulness he was turned out to pastures green in his old age. I had the idea it must have been some faithful old servant. If we take it in the final analysis it is a symbol of faithfulness or constancy.

Now constancy can be interpreted as steadfastness or firmness of mind, or loyalty. It is not always in the limelight that this constancy or steadfastness is demonstrated. It may be at some lonely outpost, or in some place unseen. But still it is required, for the simple reason that we know full well the determining factor will be character.

Now let us read a passage of scripture, Heb. 3:6, 7, according to Moffat. “Christ is faithful as a Son over God’s house. Now we are this house of God, if we will only hold on confident and proud of our hope.” “Hold on”—constancy or steadfastness. “Confident, proud of our hope.” The association between that text and the word “character” is this, that if we are going to become part of that house of God, the New Jerusalem, we will have to demonstrate that character and the strength of that character. This is more pronounced, too, when we come to think of the fact that 144,000 is the specified number that will constitute the elect. Spread over 2000 years, it is not many, even allowing for the fact that there will be more at the beginning and end of the period. The fact remains it is going to be a severe test, we are to be tried to the utmost in order to qualify for the glorious work that belongs to the future.

Now the necessity for such testing is the fact that to become a part of this New Jerusalem, this House of God, we will be as under-priests, and will have a gigantic task to deal with the fallen human race. You know the “old man” you have to deal with. Now just think of it, and then think of all the various dispositions and habits and preferences and perversities and weaknesses, and the ignorance and superstition in the world. Now what an enormous amount of work, lies in the future! Consequently those who are going, to be instrumental in blessing all these members of the fallen race, the groaning creation, have to be tried to the utmost.

The architect for the Federal Capital said that the data he was supplied with for the construction of the city was perfect in every detail, but was lacking in two most important things, and one was the beauty of the gum trees every one was a poem --4 and ‘the rarity of the altitude. He went into raptures over it. I quote that to prove this point. Familiarity breeds contempt. The compilers of that data did not bother mentioning those facts because they were so familiar to them. We are so familiar with these weaknesses of the human race that they do not seem to carry the weight they should, and we are so familiar with the Truth, with the Scriptures, that they become more or less commonplace with us. That is why I am quoting Moffat, as it will perhaps cause us to think.

We see a great deal of misery and suffering around us, and want of respect for law. Even the children want to please themselves. It even affects us, and that is why it is necessary for us to be on the alert to demonstrate our loyalty, our steadfastness, firmness of mind: Now how is this loyalty to be demonstrated or manifested? There is an expression well known to many of us, "I will be faithful to the Lord, to the Truth, to the brethren, and to all with whom I have to do, not only in the great things of life, but in the small things." You know that in electrical installation, if a thing is not insulated properly there is likely to be a leakage, and so unless we are in contact with the Lord there will be a leakage, Consequently we will have to see there is nothing to withdraw the spirit. So our loyalty, our steadfastness, will be demonstrated towards the Lord. We will take notice of His words, they will abide in us, and we will keep His commandments. Not the ten commandments given to the Jews, but something higher than that, as you know. It will be to "Love the Lord, with all our heart, and. mind, and soul and strength, and our neighbour as ourselves," but it will go further than that, to love one another "as I have loved you."

Then regarding the truth, we will be faithful to the truth. When we speak about being faithful to the Truth, we read in 2 Cor. 11, words to this effect: "I wish you would put up with a little 'folly' from me. Do put up with me, for I feel a divine jealousy on your behalf; I betrothed you as a chaste maiden to present you to your one husband,. Christ, but I am afraid of your thoughts getting seduced from single devotion to Christ, just as the serpent beguiled Eve with his, cunning." Now, when we endeavour to serve the Truth, we are tempted to adopt expedients, and sometimes the Adversary might trip us up. Curiosity was the trouble with' Eve, and curiosity would sometimes entrap some of us. Nevertheless we might be well-meaning, and try to investigate strange ideas and doctrines. It is a dubious, undertaking. I have found from my own experience that you are wasting your time, pulling to pieces a straw man. so it is not worth while. We should be true to the Lord. "I am determined to know nothing among you save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." Just put the Truth in the forefront, and be loyal to that; you will then be oblivious to many other things, otherwise you will be only chasing illusions. ,

We are to be faithful to the brethren, and in this we will be doing as the Apostle advises us, as, we read in Philippians, "Well, then, my brothers, for whom I cherish love and longing, my joy and crown, this is how you are to stand firm in the Lord, O my beloved." It is done by forgetting the things which are behind and pressing toward the mark. But I want to stress the' next verse. "I entreat Euodia and I entreat Syntyche to agree in the Lord. And you, my true comrade, lend a hand to these women, I beg of you; they have fought at my side in the active service of the gospel, along with Clement and the rest of my fellow-workers whose names are in the book of life." That allows for diversity. We often want to have people similar to ourselves, and try to force them to our way of thinking. On fundamentals, we should think alike. But these two sisters apparently had differences of thought, and that was why the exhortation was necessary, to be true or faithful and to agree in the Lord. _ If we agree in the Lord it will allow a diversity, differences of opinion on non-essentials.

Then there is another passage that we cannot neglect; it is found in 2 Pet. 3:17,18, and reads: "Now, beloved, you are forewarned: see that you are not carried away by the error of the lawless and so lose your proper footing; but go on growing in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." We have to watch against lawlessness creeping into our company. I mentioned that anarchy was prevalent everywhere. We have to be on guard against lawlessness, want of respect for law.

Then we have mentioned being faithful to all with whom we have to do. That is, people outside, in the world. Love is summed up in little things. You have to do something. "If ye do these things," that is the stipulation laid down. Then we have to develop that loyalty and firmness of mind which will demonstrate our worthiness to obtain ' that glorious reward, to be joint-heirs with the Master in helping the poor groaning creation out of their undone condition.

We have mentioned the conditions that prevail in the world, the wickedness waxing worse and worse, and errors everywhere, and consequently it is important for us to have some way in which we can maintain that confidence and steadfastness. Of course, there are various ways. Gratitude is responsible for people being faithful. Gratitude causes us to respond, when we think how much has been given us. We think of the Scriptures—"The Lord will not forget thee," we have that assurance, and also—"I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." We have proved that over and over again. Then there is the gratitude that must go forth from us towards the Master—He who, having loved His own, loved them to the end. He would not leave them comfortless, but would send them the holy spirit. There must be gratitude welling up in our hearts and causing us to strive to the utmost to do His will. We look around us and think what the soldiers in the war are going through. We read of their suffering, and the changes through which they are passing. They are not doing it for anything like the reward we are promised. They certainly think they are fighting for a New Order. Some of them have a doubt about it, but some enthusiastic ones are fighting on, thinking they will get a New Order, but I think we have a better guarantee of a New Order than anyone else. So that causes us to be confident and firm in our endeavour to press on in the race.

Then when we think of the example of the Master, it is a great stimulus to us. There was also the Apostle Paul. The Master was perfect, but Paul was a man of like passions to ourselves, yet he won through. There are several passages of Scripture which I will read, and I think you will agree with me that these Scriptures give us a fair indication of what a wonderful example the Apostle left. us.

2 Cor. 11:23-28—"Ministers of Christ? Yes, perhaps, but not as much as I am, with all my labours, with all my lashes, with all my time in prison—a record longer far than theirs. I have been often at the point of death; five times have I had forty lashes (all but one) from the Jews, three times I have been beaten- by the Romans, once pelted with stones, three times shipwrecked, adrift at sea for a whole night and day; I have been often on my travels, I have been in danger from rivers and robbers, in danger from Jews and Gentiles, through dangers of town and of desert, through dangers on the sea, through dangers among false brothers through labour and hardship, through many a sleepless night, through hunger and thirst, starving many a time, cold and ill-clad, and all the rest of it." The Apostle was compelled to blow his own trumpet, as some would say, because of the way he was attacked. But it was well for us, or we would not have had such a record.

Phil. 1:19-27—I picture the Apostle before Nero, expecting to lose his life. "The outcome of all this, I know, will be my release, as you continue to pray for me, and as I am provided with the spirit of Jesus Christ—my eager desire and hope being that I may never feel ashamed, but that now as ever, I may do honour to Christ in my own person by fearless courage. Whether that means life or death, no matter. As life means Christ to me, so death means gain. But then, if it is to be life here below, that means fruitful work for me. So—well, I cannot tell which to choose; I am in a dilemma between the two. My strong desire is to depart and be with Christ (Better translation—I have a desire for the returning, and being with Christ), for that is far the best. But for your sakes, it is needful that I should live on here below; I am sure it is, and so I know I shall remain alive to serve you all by forwarding your progress and fostering the joy of your faith. Thus you will have ample cause to glory in Christ Jesus over me—over my return to you." The Apostle was weary and tired, he wished the end was there. Seemingly the conditions were such that he felt it was his duty, his loyalty to the Lord, that he should remain, so he did remain, but he was looking forward to the time of the Lord's return when the righteous Judge would give him a crown, and also all those who loved His appearing.

Another means of maintaining that constancy and loyalty is by assembling together. You know we need that exhortation as the Apostle said, "so much the more as ye see the day approaching." Therefore it is a great privilege to take 'advantage of the company of the brethren. Another way is by taking advantage of the assistance that we will receive from our Elder Brother. We have this record which is very timely, Heb. 4:14-16—"As we have a great high priest, then, who has passed through the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast to our confession; for ours is no high priest who cannot have sympathy with our weaknesses, but one who has been tempted in every respect like ourselves, yet without sinning. So let us approach the throne of grace with confidence, that we may receive mercy and find grace to help us 'in the hour of need.'" Let us note there the reference to constancy—"hold fast."

If we can be stimulated to exercise that constancy and firmness of mind to the end, we will merit the "Well done, good and faithful servant." Have we ever tried to conjecture what that glorious condition will be when we are ushered into the presence of the King? There is a great deal of excitement with many people to get to Canberra for the advent of the Duke. But I can tell you there are many people who are glad when they can put off their fine clothes, and to whom it is an ordeal to have to appear in the presence of such people. I have seen the Prime Minister reading a book on etiquette. The point I want to make is, they do it so they can gracefully deport themselves in the presence of these high personages: Now we are going to be ushered into the presence of the King of kings and Lord of lords. How do you think we shall shape? Will we be at ease, will we be happy, will we have the right spirit? Or be like fish out of water? I will leave that thought with you. "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord."—I Cor. 15:58.

BEREAN BIBLE INSTITUTE Ermington Place, Kew, E 4, Melbourne, Vic., Aust. PEOPLES PAPER. AND HERALD OF CHRIST'S KINGDOM.

Published by the Berean Bible Institute,

Berean Bible Institute

WITH the close of April another yearly term for the Berean Bible Institute has been completed, and in presenting this report and balance sheet it is with sincere gratitude and thankfulness to the Lord for all His favors and overruling providence manifest upon the efforts to serve His cause of truth in these last days of the harvest time in this corner of the harvest field.

With the Lord's blessing and the loving assistance of so many of our brethren the work of the Institute generally has been maintained and in some features has been extended over the past year. Reference to the Radio work is contained in a separate report in this issue, so is omitted here.

Our monthly periodical, "People's Paper and Herald of Christ's Kingdom," now in its 28th year of publication, carries its message regularly each month 'to our brethren and readers generally. The words of appreciation of the contents of the "Paper" expressed by the brethren, and also by a number of new friends, shows that it is a means of good help and encouragement to many in their Christian way; it is encouraging to know that this is so, by the Lord's grace. Again at this time our thanks are extended, to various friends for their contributions to the columns of the "People's Paper." A further increase in the number of subscribers is in evidence, and some of our readers also assist by sending subscriptions for their friends, and in this way other literature is also introduced to those who desire the spiritual things.

On the financial side the "People's Paper" still requires to be supported by the General Tract Fund, but this is compensated to a good extent by the considerable number of the periodical being used in the general witness work. Three months' free copies are forwarded to all enquirers for literature, 'or other names sent in, and where some interest is shown the "Paper" is continued free for longer periods. Lists of names and addresses may also be sent in for samples of "Peoples Paper" and extra copies are available to our friends for distribution personally.

Considerable quantities of books and booklets have been" supplied over the past year throughout Australasia and to Britain, U.S.A., and Canada, and while extra time is still required in transit only minor losses have been suffered as the -result of the war.

The work of witnessing with tracts, cards and newspaper coupons has been carried out in various parts, and while the printing of tracts is necessarily curtailed, this has been offset to some good extent by the use of the Radio Dialogues in printed form. Supplies of tracts and the Dialogues are available for all who can use them to good advantage. The work with the Consolation Cards has been continued to good advantage amongst the bereaved. Considerable numbers of cards have been sent out by various Classes, and many people have received much comfort and help from the literature on the hope beyond the grave. These cards are supplied to all who desire to engage in this work of comforting those in the sorrows of bereavement.

Most of our readers are aware that the work of the, Institute is carried on by voluntary financial assistance from our friends generally, and the General Tract Fund has received amounts, by the Lord's overruling providence, which have been sufficient over the past year to cover all expenses and leaving a credit balance of L14/18/4 towards the work of the year ahead. Much sacrifice is no doubt involved in this loving provision from all who desire to assist the cause of truth, as unto the Lord.

-As we enter upon another year, the prayers of the brethren are requested upon the work; our one desire is to serve faithfully the cause of Christ, together with all who love the Lord in sincerity. That the Lord has thus far granted the privilege of service, when in some lands this would be impossible, is cause for thankfulness; this service is that of "doing good to all men as we have opportunity, but especially to the household of faith." May all the dear friends grasp the privileges still at hand, building up themselves and others of like precious faith in spiritual things, and letting their light shine for the blessing and encouragement of those .who may yet be feeling after God, if haply they may find Him. "Unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy; to the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen."

THE RADIO WORK.

THIS feature of the work undertaken by the Berean Bible Institute in recent years, with the generous support of the brethren generally in this land, and the hearty co-operation of our brethren in U.S.A., has been blessed of the Lord very truly again over the past twelve months. Our thanks ascend to God for enabling this witness to be carried on so that the truths of His Word may go out over the air from week to week and reach those who are hungering and thirsting for the glad message which His truth alone supplies.

While a half-yearly report and balance sheet was presented in last December's issue of "People's Paper," these remarks and the balance sheet appearing below cover the full twelve months period just past—up to 1st May, 1945.

Our friends will be pleased to hear that the responses to the broadcasting, while not as numerous as in the first year of the sessions, are still good and most encouraging. It does us all good to hear of the numbers of listening friends who say they never miss the sessions, that they look forward to Sunday mornings, and feel refreshed and strengthened after hearing the message over the air. Our faith is such that we know the Lord will bless all sincere hearts and lead them on to know Him more fully as they respond in appreciation of what they have heard.

The offering of the complete Dialogues in print to all listeners after the broadcasts has been most successful; this enables and encourages listeners to prove all things from the Bible for themselves, and is the first step towards individual study of God's Word. Quite a number of our radio friends have become established in the truths of God's Word and it is a joy to note their progress as they appreciate more and more of the spiritual things. The various booklets and books have assisted and the "People's Paper" is received regularly by numbers of these friends, and above all the Lord's blessing is in evidence upon those sincere of heart.

Commencing with Sunday, 1st July, some changes in the radio stations will be made. In N.S. Wales a new station is engaged, namely, 2HD Newcastle, and the new time for this station will be 1.15 p.m. on Sunday afternoons. It is felt that this time should be very suitable for most people, and it is expected that 2HD will be heard in Sydney, especially in the winter months. The last session on 2CA Canberra for the present will take place on Sunday, 24th June, at 10 a.m. In Victoria, 3SH Swan Hill will commence again, on Sunday, 1st July, at 10 a.m., and it is expected it will reach many of the listeners to 3B0 who cannot hear 3GL. Sunday, 24th June, will be the last session for 3B0 Bendigo for the present. It would be appreciated if friends receiving the "People's Paper" would inform their friends of these changes in stations, notice of which is also given in another part of this issue. As announced in May "People's Paper," a change has also been made in Perth to GKY at 7.15 p.m. on Sunday nights.

That the messages over the air are also refreshing to the brethren themselves is clearly manifest, and a considerable number of subscribers to the "People's Paper" receive the copies of the Dialogues enclosed with their papers each month; in this way, those who live outside the range of any of the radio stations may still read the Dialogues and use them for passing on to those who may be helped.

An important part in making the broadcasts a success is the necessity for advertising, by distribution of the radio cards, and using suitable papers where opportunity exists. Our friends generally are invited to enter into this work of making the broadcasts known, and encouraging people to listen to the sessions. Advertising cards are supplied free on application.

From the balance sheet below the generous support to this work on the part of our friends generally, in the Lord's providence, will be seen, and all the sacrifices made in the interests of the Lord's cause will be rewarded as only He can do. After covering the expenses over the year to May 1st, it will be seen that a credit is in hand in the Radio Fund to the amount of L 121/17/- with which to commence another year. As with the work generally, so with this witnessing to the truth, the prayers of our brethren are requested that the Lord's guidance and blessing may be upon the efforts in the interests of His people.

DISSENSION TAKES GILT OFF EUROPEAN VICTORY.

Under the above heading the London representative of the Melbourne "Herald" gives the following picture of conditions in Europe to-day. He states:

"What a spectacle of turmoil this European continent presents even after V-E Day cheers have died down.

"General de Gaulle, with a France weighted down with internal troubles, seeks to control areas in Germany and Austria far beyond the capabilities of his sick country.

"His troops are quietly annexing parts of Italy. His procrastination over the treaty of independence with Syria. and Lebanon threatens serious complications with Britain..

"King Leopold's future in Belgium has produced already a bitter political issue.

"And there's the Trieste crises bringing Britain and Jugoslavia against each other..

"And' Poland is the master dissension between west and east, the Russians are not standing still on this deadlock. Even inside Germany adjustments are being made which the peace settlement could alter only by force.

"The Russians have directed the Lublin Poles to establish their administration as far west as the Oder, but no United Nations' published decision has ever announced this degree of dismemberment for Germany.

"Bulgaria and Rumania become completely Russian spheres, where no freedom of movement is accorded British and American military missions.

"In Czechoslovakia, Czechoslovak Spitfire squadrons, which left Britain for Prague, could not assist their own people. They were ordered to land in Germany, because the liberation of the Czechs had to be left to the Russians.

"The Russians in Austria have established Austrian provisional Government unrecognised by the British, Americans and French.

"This is a brief catalogue of Europe today. It is summed up by House of Commons member and commentator Vernon Bartlett thus:

"The hard, harsh fact which must be faced is that there is now more distrust between the British, Russians and Americans than at any other time since Hitler and the Japanese brought them together.' "

While we are very thankful that the terrible war in Europe is stilled, yet how truly the above account fulfils the words of Isa. 57:20, 21.—"The wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." What extreme lessons are yet necessary before mankind are thoroughly humbled and prepared for the time when the Lord's will is done on earth, as in heaven:

A new edition of the booklet "Good News" is now ready, and is most appropriate and timely for the present, showing how the Lord will make wars to cease unto the ends of the earth. Friends desiring a helpful message for today to pass out should procure these. The price is 4d. per copy, or 3/- per doz., post paid.

PILGRIM WAY ENDED.

A member of long standing with the brethren in Melbourne, in the person of elderly Brother Paine, finished the pilgrim way early on the morning of May 23rd. Our dear Brother was well loved and respected by all the Lord's people who met him, and especially by all the members of his home Class in Melbourne.

Of most kindly disposition our Brother Paine finished the earthly journey in harmony with his whole Christian life—without murmur or complaint, fully submissive to the Lord's will. We rejoice that all the weariness and trials of the way are finished, and that our dear Brother in Christ has entered into his „reward.

Our sympathy goes out to Sister Paine in the loss of a devoted Christian husband. As Christians we surely "sorrow not as those without hope" but look forward to the glad union with Christ and reunion with all the dear members on the other side, in the Kingdom of God's dear Son, from which will flow the blessings to restore and heal all-the families of the earth. "Precious in- the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints."

Consecration to the Lord.

IN times past we did not clearly distinguish the Lord's people from the world. Whenever we met a man with kind, gentle manners, whether an infidel, a Brahmin, a Mohammedan, a Presbyterian, a Methodist, or merely one of the world, we said to ourselves, "Here is a man who has the spirit of the Lord." Then, we did not know what we were talking about; now, we can recognise the difference. We are certainly glad to acknowledge good traits of character in heathen as well as in Christians, but we are not to accept gentleness and kindness of manner as evidence that their possessor has the holy spirit.

We have all seen people who have very proper sentiments of justice on some subjects, who are yet manifestly not God's people, begotten of the holy spirit. Such persons are usually fine characters. Nevertheless, their conscientiousness causes them to admit that they are sinners and have need of divine forgiveness. We are glad that there are such people, and we should encourage rather than discourage them.

The explanation of this condition of affairs is that these fine characters are not so fallen as some others. God made man in His own image and likeness. With the fall of man came the impairment of, that godlike disposition, but the image of God is not altogether lost. For our part, we wish to show that our Redeemer is the only channel for that forgiveness, the need of which they recognise, and that the only condition of their full acceptance with God is the entire consecration of all that they possess to the service of the Lord.

On one occasion our Lord said, "No man can come unto me, except the Father which sent me draw him." 1 John 6:44.) No one will receive the holy spirit without having been drawn to Christ, but some may be drawn without receiving the holy spirit. Possibly in these persons that endowment which God gave to Adam and pronounced "very good" has been less impaired by the fall than it has been in others. Such naturally desire to have God's approval and the blessings which He is willing to give to those who seek Him.

Having this disposition, such persons are said to be drawn to God. -But the Father points them to the Son, through the knowledge of simple truths. For instance, they may be influenced through hearing a hymn sung; such as

"There is a fountain filled with blood,
Drawn from Immanuel's veins;
And sinners plunged beneath that flood
Lose all their guilty stains."

These words contain the truth of God to any one who is in a right condition of heart, and are a very valuable hint as to the way to approach God. If those who are seeking to know God desire to inquire further on the subject, they will probably be led to consult with some of the children of God.

Upon the inquiry of those under the conviction of sin as to what must be done to be saved, we tell them, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved. (Acts 16:31.) Make a full consecration of your life unto God, and thus you may become a son of God. If any one is obedient to the drawing, the next step for him to take is to say, "I give myself to the Lord and trust Him fully, for I realise. how unworthy I am."

The course which we are describing is that which one must follow in order to be acceptable to God. But first of all, he must desire to approach the Lord. If we should find any one who is, totally depraved, there would be no use to attempt to draw such a one toward righteousness, truth and God. Even those who have the right attitude of mind may not be equally impressed at all times. It may be that some circumstances awaken them to the need of consecration- before they will take the step which will enable them to become sons of God.—Rom. 12:1.

The High Calling -not for All.

No man, however, takes this step of consecration unless he is called of God. There must be the call, or invitation as there was with Aaron and with our Lord Jesus Christ. (Heb. 5:4, 5.) This call comes through the proclamation of the Gospel. Each must hear for himself before he can accept. "And how shall they hear without a preacher?" (Rom. 10:14.) So then, it is for God to begin the work with the unjustified by drawing them to Christ for justification; and it is for our Lord Jesus to continue this work with the consecrated. Furthermore, it is the privilege of all who come into God's family to proclaim these truths to others, to set forth the terms by which those who receive the call may accept it, while "it is called to-day," before this age of sacrifice ends.—Heb. 4:7; 2 Cor. 6:2.

None come to God in this Gospel age except those who make a sacrifice. Others may turn ‘ toward, God; they may look toward God; they may be converted from a wicked life to a better one. But none except the class who are adopted into God’s family are begotten of the holy spirit. The invitation of this age is not an invitation to do the best we can; we are all called in the one hope of our calling (Eph. 4:4.) “Gather my saints together unto me, saith the Lord, those who have made a covenant with me by sacrifice.”—Psa. 50:5.

It is good not to do wrong. But more than a righteous life is required of those who would be sons of God. Consecration has always been proper; it is the normal attitude for all of God’s intelligent creatures. The Creator is the one to whom all are properly under obligations for every blessing which they enjoy; and heart, mind, tongue and hand should be ready for consecration to do the Father’s will. Whether angels or men or new creatures in Christ—all should be in this attitude.

Since consecration is the only reasonable attitude, then, when the 144,000 of the elect church shall have passed their testing it will still be appropriate for God to permit people to consecrate, and to be pleased with their consecration. Therefore, we may expect that, in the end of the reign of Christ, all the worthy ones shall have made consecration to God. It was thus in the Jewish age, although there was no “high calling” then, nor privilege to understand the deep things of God.-

The privilege of becoming joint-heirs with Christ will end as soon as the elect number is completed. During the thousand years of Christ’s reigns those who consecrate will come to- understand all human things; but not being begotten of the holy spirit; they cannot understand the things of the spirit.

Knowledge of Deep Things a Gradual Development. ‘

We believe that there are still some now living who are consecrated to God and whose consecration has been accepted, but who are not in the light of present truth. This number may include some who are what the Scriptures term “babes” in Christ, and others to whom the Scriptures refer as the “great multitude.” (Heb. 5:12-14; 1 Pet. 2:2; Rev. 7:9.) The “foolish virgin” class are probably in large number all around us. The fact that there are some of these in Babylon seems to be indicated by the command, “Come out of her, my people.” (Rev. 18:4.) If they are in Babylon, their presence there shows that they are not yet well developed and if they are God’s people, they are not enjoying the full strength of the present truth, although spirit-begotten.

This fact does not signify that they may not receive present truth. On the contrary, we think it quite likely that some may be helped out of Babylon and into a better understanding of the divine plan; for some of the babes may be strengthened, built up, to a full appreciation of the things of the spirit. We are to have in mind the fact that God has so arranged that “the deep things of God” cannot be known instantaneously; this knowledge comes gradually as an evidence of faithfulness to God.

Those who have not yet learned fully to reverence God and who have not yet made progress in the development of the graces and fruits of the spirit cannot expect to understand the deep things of God. It is our duty and privilege, not only to assist these brethren, but to build one another up and to strengthen one another. Let us see that we do these things.

Praying the Lord’s blessing and keeping on you and your co-workers, and with kind Christian regards from Yours very sincerely.

To Frank and Ernest, My Dear Friends—Thank you ever so much for the leaflets which I wrote and asked for; they were gratefully received. The “Peoples Paper” has been received safely and with my thanks also. I am sorry for being so long in replying.

I have not been able to listen to), our session not since my first letter to you as, my radio is out of order and I don’t know when I will be able to get it repaired. So I am very sad at not being able to listen as I love this session. I used to think 10 o’clock would never come on Sundays, and “Come all ye Faithful” is my favourite hymn. My young daughter was also interested and my son also, but he is in the army now.

I would very much like the book “Foregleams of the Golden Age” so I will enclose the price of same in my next letter to you, also a small donation. Until then I will close with my sincere thanks and trusting it will not be too long until I can again hear your cheerful voices. When my radio is in working order it is very powerful and the reception is very clear and a joy to listen to. I pray that God will grant you both good health and many of His richest blessings so that you may long continue in this good work which I am very sure thousands and thousands of listeners like . myself must find a boon.

So now, my new found friends, I will say, Au-revoir, till we meet again whether it be on the air or through the post. And I’ll remain, Your sincere Friend.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I am interested in your Bible Talks on Sunday mornings. I would like to have a copy please, or as many as you can send me, as I am seventy-one and a bit deaf and cannot hear it very well over the air. I read the Bible and your explanations would help me very much. I remain, Yours faithfully.

Western Australia.

To Frank and Ernest—I would like to thank you for forwarding to me the radio script “Baptized for the Dead,” and also the booklet “Hope Beyond the Grave.” As you state, you visited me a few years ago, but I am afraid I must admit that at that time I was very much immersed in the superstitious doctrines of the churches. However, after your visit (some time after) I realised the fallacy of the Trinity doctrine and in doing so many of the Scriptures became clear. But I still clung to the “consciousness after death” and “immortal soul” doctrine, . but trying to search for the definite truth I must admit the booklet “Hope Beyond the Grave” has revealed the truth to me and made the Scriptures clearer than ever. I think the booklet a marvellous little book, and I would not be without it.

Knowing the True God.

John 17:3; 2 Peter 1:2-3. (Convention Address).

“This is eternal life, that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent.”

IT will be manifest to the careful student that there is a deep significance in this expressed desire of the Master, that those who ‘ had been (or were to be) given Him might heartily enter into the fulness of the relationship to which He was inviting them, in fulfilment of the Divine Plan which centered in Himself. The knowledge here implied is not the merely superficial kind that would make one content to affirm belief in the existence of God, and in acknowledging that there should be some measure of conformity to such knowledge. Those who enjoy properly the privilege of communion with God cannot remain satisfied with mere outward forms and ceremonies. Nominal Christians may derive a certain measure of satisfaction from the merely superficial kind of knowledge. Of these our Lord said, “O righteous Father, the world hath not known Thee, but I have known Thee, and these have known that Thou hast sent Me.” (John 17:25.)

These words of our Lord show that the merely nominal believers are outside of the true, real acquaintance-ship enjoyed by those who know God; for such as really know the Father have a personal knowledge of Him, and to them He is near and precious. Out of a living faith and honest heart, they have sought to know His will and conform life and character to the standards and principles so grandly displayed in Him. Such know Him in the sense contemplated in our text.

We may ask, Is it possible for us to have much head-knowledge of God and the Bible, and still be deficient in the true knowledge of God—still fail to understand and appreciate His gracious character? It would seem to be so. Truth people, as well as others, need to be on guard on this matter. Some of them seem to get the false impression that head-knowledge is the basis of brotherhood. While encouraging Bible study and growth in knowledge we must still recognize heart-salvation as the aim and object of all our studies, as well as of our proclamations of the Gospel. Head-knowledge is a means to an end; it is merely the lamp which guides the way toward heart salvation,—“sanctification of the spirit through the belief of the truth.” Let us beware then lest our head-knowledge causes us to become “puffed up” with self-importance. The true knowledge of God which our Lord prayed we may have, will not cause us to become harsh judges of our brethren, and general fault-finders; rather it will cause us to be very humble before God; it will make our hearts more thankful to Him and enable us to have proper reverence for Him, and for our Lord and Head. It will bring us more peace and joy and love for the brethren, enabling us to have proper respect for the rights and interests of the fellow-members of the Body. It will make us more kind and considerate toward all men.

The Apostle Peter’s words (2 Pet. 1:2-3) show the importance and value of the knowledge of God. Grace and peace, he says, will be multiplied unto us through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord. The knowledge of God here referred to by the Apostle means an intimate acquaintance with the Father and the Son, a knowledge of the “mind of Christ,” which is a full and clear representation to us of the mind of the Father. And how does the consecrated believer grow into this knowledge of God and of Jesus Christ? Growth in the knowledge of God takes place as the result of study of His Word and by using the divinely-provided helps which enable us to understand it more completely. Our studies of God’s Word enable us to understand the underlying principles which govern the divine conduct, as to how divine justice, wisdom, love and power operate. These are progressive studies. Through faith in the cross of Christ we realize the forgiveness of our sins and peace with God; (Rom. 5:1.) then coming to the point of full consecration to do the will of God we receive of ‘His holy spirit begetting us to newness of life in Christ. (2 Cor. 5:17.) The spirit-begotten new creature is to grow more and more in grace and in the knowledge of God and of Jesus Christ. Each day we should be learning something more of the glorious attributes of our Heavenly Father, as we discern these in His Word, and seek to have them impressed more and more upon our own hearts and minds.

How, clearly the Scriptures show that if we would “know God” in the true sense of our Lord’s words in John 17:3, we must do so by cultivating in our hearts all the fruits and graces of His spirit. As our intimate knowledge of the divine plan and character, increases, so must also our grace increase; for those who do not attempt to come into harmony, step by step, with that which they see of the divine character will soon lose interest in such knowledge, while those who have the interest which leads to further and further study must of necessity be growing in grace continually.

The Apostle assures us that through this knowledge of God is imparted to us ‘as by divine power “all things that pertain to life and godliness.” What an assurance! This statement of the importance of knowledge for our Christian development in every direction reminds us of our Lord’s words in our text, “This is life eternal; that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent.” To know God, as the Apostle here explains, signifies an intimate acquaintance with Him—an understanding and intelligent participation of the qualities of His character. It is only as we realize something of the greatness and perfection of the divine character that we are able to estimate our own littleness and imperfection; only as we see the beauties of His gracious character can we become intimately acquainted with God, familiar with His graces and virtues. The influence of this knowledge and fellowship with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, reacts upon our own hearts, and has a cleansing and sanctifying effect. Thus the Apostle prays for some that they might grow in the knowledge of God so as to be able to “comprehend with all saints what is the length and breadth, depth and height of the love of Christ which passeth knowledge.” (Eph. 3:14-19.) Those beholding the divine character, even though but dimly, as through a glass, are thereby changed from glory- to glory as by the spirit of the Lord.” (2 Cor. 3:18.)

We notice how closely our text associates the thought of knowing Jehovah, the true God, with our knowing Jesus Christ as the One sent of God. Jesus said, “I am the way, the truth and the life, no man cometh unto the Father but by Me.” Again in the beautiful picture of the Vine and the branches is shown the very close association which exists between Christ the Head, and the Church—the members of the Anointed body. Just as the branch could bear no grapes unless it received its sap and nourishment from the Vine stock, so the Christian could bear none of the fruits of Christ’s spirit unless he abides in Christ, by faith and obedience.

Yet history shows how easily this important lesson of maintaining our personal relationship to Christ may be forgotten. How disposed many in the past have been to lay special stress upon relationship to, or association with sects, leaders, or organisations, and to point to their affiliation and co-operation with such as the most conclusive evidence that they are the special favourites, of heaven, and in the sure and certain enjoyment of the Lord’s approval.

The Lord’s Word, on the contrary, makes it clear that individuality of character, ‘personal relationship with Himself, and individual faith; love, and obedience, are the unalterable requirements set before each individual believer, and the one and only basis, upon which Divine approval may be expected. Let us endeavour always to keep this thought in mind, while remembering also the necessity of the assembling of ourselves together in larger or smaller gatherings,

,for mutual benefit and for the purpose of cooperation in the furtherance of the message of the truth.

Faithfulness in carrying out the Lord’s directions will mean prosperity in things spiritual to such assemblies; whereas, their neglect will result in spiritual decline and the loss of much of the blessing reserved for the faithful.

What marvellous privileges are opened up to those who now have the opportunity of knowing God; those who, the eyes of their understanding being enlightened, are permitted to know “what is the hope of His calling, and what the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints.” (Eph. 1:18.) Surely to such has been given a vision of the Lord that must obscure every other object, and rivet the mind and heart upon Him in such a way as to banish every cherished earthly ambition, and enthrone Him in the life and affections as Lord of all. To these there has come the blessed realization of the fulfilment of the Master’s promise, “He that loveth Me shall be loved of My Father, and I will love him, and will manifest Myself to him.” (John 14:21.) And what deep and holy manifestations of “love divine, all love excelling,” the one thus devoted to the Lord may enjoy as he presses on to know the Lord!

What privileges of association and participation in the most sacred and lofty relationships and purposes into which he may now realize himself introduced, as there unfolds before his mind the lengths and depths of the love of God so gloriously displayed in the great Plan of Redemption! This manifestation will discover to him the astounding revelation of the purpose of God to select from amongst men, from such as have ears to hear and hearts to appreciate, a class to be His special treasure, to enjoy the greatest privilege, of all that wondrous Plan that has been of absorbing interest, not only to holy men who in all ages have sought to know the purposes of God, but also to angels, as the Apostle Peter tells us. (1 Pet. 1:10-12.)

To be favored with such a vision, to be granted participation in such a privilege, must fill the receptive heart with a joy unspeakable and full of glory. To know oneself as having been admitted into the great mystery “which hath been hid from ages and, from generations, but now - is made manifest to His saints, to whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery . . . which is Christ in you, the hope of glory;” (Col. 1:26-27) is surely to realize every responsive chord of mind and heart strung to the keenest pitch, and all that is within us reverberating with love and devotion to Him whose love aft(‘ goodness arranged it all. To enjoy this privilege means that we are being introduced into that blessed oneness expressed by our Master, the oneness of the Divine family of Heaven, which is oneness of purpose, a oneness of confidence, a oneness of sympathy, a oneness of love, a oneness of honor, and a oneness of mutual possession,— a sharing of joys, privileges, and positions beyond our .power to grasp or to believe possible, were it not that in His own message to us the Lord has told us that so great is His love toward us, that these are the things in reservation for those that love Him supremely. And the influence of all this upon the receptive heart, is’ to awaken every proper and noble element in our souls to gratitude and the desire to serve and honor Him.

We have found in Him the One altogether lovely, the fairest among ten thousand. “None other could with Him compare, Among the sons of men; He’s fairer, too, than all the fair who fill the heavenly train.”

In Him we find the perfection of every grace, every grand and noble quality; every ideal of character is there, and we are captivated by His love, willing and glad to be the bond-slave of Jesus Christ, bearing about in our body the marks of the Lord Jesus; happy in the knowledge that we are not our own, but belong to Him, and into our souls there comes the sweet refrain: “Since my eyes were fixed on Jesus, I’ve lost sight of all beside — So enchained my spirit’s vision, Looking at the crucified.”.

This, we believe, is in harmony with what we find set forth in the Scriptures as being the proper viewpoint from which to consider our part in the Divine Plan. It would seem that all who in sincerity of heart have laid hold of the privileges of this Gospel Age, have surely experienced something of the joys of salvation. How could it be otherwise d Could it be that we could walk by the side of the Master, and hear from His lips the unfolding of the truth of our Father’s Plan, revealing to us its depth and height and its possibilities to ourselves, and not have our hungry hearts burn within us with a holy joy? Could it be that we-could behold in Him, not only a Saviour, a Deliverer from the curse and penalty of death, but over and beyond all, our prospective Bridegroom, whose throne and glory we shall share, in whose presence we shall live—beholding I-Inn as He is and being like Him, and sharing with Him in. all the eternal ages, to come the privilege of carrying forward the Father’s Plan—and ‘still not realize ourselves transported with an unspeakable joy, far beyond the highest sensations of joy or pleasure known to the human heart? Surely we must realize these results, which are the clearest indication of having entered the’ way of life-drawn by the love of God and thereafter constrained by His love to lay hold on all the privileges of the child of God.

Strange as it may seem, notwithstanding all of these incentives ‘to love and devotion found in the Word and Plan of God, and the fact that they exercise such a powerful influence upon the life of the one laying hold of them, yet the Scriptures abound with warnings of the danger of losing our appreciation of these priceless truths and privileges. That such warnings have not been/ unnecessary has been abundantly proven time and again. Only the Lord may know how many, during the Gospel Age, have entered the race with unbounded joy and enthusiasm, and a real _determination to reach the goal, only to fall by the way when the trials and testings promised overtook them.

Against this danger our Lord Himself repeatedly warns us. How clearly He has sought to give us the proper understanding of the cost of discipleship. He has not minimised the difficulties and besetments of the way. His method has been -to clearly portray these in their true light, so that the one desiring to follow Him may have clearly in mind that the way to • the Kingdom and joint-heirship with Him is to ,be gained by way of the cross—self-denial and sacrifice. While, therefore, appreciating the love that might prompt to enthusiastic zeal in beginning the race, He seeks the love that will be of an enduring nature; the love that will be so centered in Himself, that it can never be displaced by any of the enticements of the world, the flesh, or the devil; the love that will become more fixed and unshakable with the passing of time, and that will be made stronger by the trials and difficulties of life which link us so closely to Him, as to make us sharers with Him in His cup, His baptism, as members of His body. Since, then, we find so many references to this danger in the words of Jesus and the Apostles, it behooves us to give them our prayerful consideration; and this necessity is the more clearly. recognized by those who can grasp the underlying truths relative to the importance of that “first love,” so greatly desired by the Lord, and which plays so vital a part in the Lord’s judgment of His people.

The importance of maintaining our first love for the Lord is ‘brought to our attention in the Lord’s message to. the Church at Ephesus.. Examining this message we find it contains much in the way of commendation. In His inspection of this Church, the Lord found the spirit of labor, of endurance, of hatred of evil, and that notwithstanding difficulties, they had not fainted; and yet for all that, He had something against • them, and His words indicate that the matter is of supreme importance. He found not that which they had once possessed—their first love; and because of this, He calls them to repentance, and the regaining of this most important virtue.

The love sought by the Lord, and which had once been in evidence in the Ephesian Church, is that deep, personal love and devotion to the Lord Himself—that love that finds in ‘Him that which satisfies every desire of the heart, and enlists every power possessed in His service, and causes such to sing:

“Though all the world my choice deride,

Yet Jesus shall my portion be ;

For I am pleased with none beside;

The fairest of the fair is He.”

A question then of deep importance •to each one of us would be, Am I maintaining my “first love” for the Lord?

Is His truth more precious to me today than hitherto.? An examination of our hearts to see if we are maintaining our first love for the Lord would seem to be both timely and profitable to all in these days when issues connected with the eternal interests of all who are the Lord’s are under discussion. Such as belong to this class will recognize that the judgment now upon the Church is for the very purpose of making manifest the approved ones, those who will be found acceptable to the Lord in the final gathering together of His jewels. Who that so understands the matter could fail to be interested in the examination of his own heart, sincerely desiring to find the Lord ruling supreme in his life; and to find there the careful observance of those vows of allegiance made in the warmth and ardor of our ‘earliest love, when our minds were illuminated with the vision of the Master and there came into our lives the all-absorbing desire to pour upon Him all our love and devotion.

How helpful, then, the thought gathered from this our Lord’s message, that the greatest safeguard against the enemies within and without, and the thing most pleasing to the Lord, will be for us to show unmistakable evidences of our love for Him; to have Him fixed in our hearts as the One above all others, and have as the one great, burning desire of life, to please Him, and to be transformed by contact with Him into His own glorious likeness, and thereby be fitted for His presence and the future association with Him in “the glory to follow.” A recent Christian writer has well said: “The worthiness of the espoused virgin to be the Bride, the Lamb’s wife, consists not merely in sinlessness, though she will be ‘holy and without blemish’—without spot or wrinkle or any such thing’ (Eph. 5:27), made ‘whiter than snow’ in the great fountain of redeeming love, her Redeemer’s merit. . . But to be the Bride of the Lamb, she must not only be a virgin in purity, and in addition be free from sinful alliance and coquetry with the world, but she must be more, much more than this.. . She must prove that she possesses a consuming love for the Bridegroom, and an untiring devotion to His name and principles, so as to be willing to be despised and rejected of the worldly, as He was, for the sake of obedience to His doctrines.” ‘

What language could better emphasize the thought to be borne in mind; that refraining from wrong-doing and living separate and apart from unholy associations, while essential and commendable, are not the most important features of the life and conduct of the prospective Bride of Christ. The expression, “a consuming love for the Bridegroom,” seems so very appropriate when applied to this class, for the reason that it covers all the different, phases of the love and service which must be manifest in the devotion and consecration of the believer. Such love would meet every desire of the Saviour’s heart, who in the very nature of things must always find Himself occupying the chief place in the affections; the heart’s most precious treasure; and such love would always be alert to give the fullest demonstration of the completeness of that devotion. Nothing would be undertaken without having Him as the centre of it. In the study of the Scriptures, He would be always before the mind, because the end in view would be to know Him better, to become better acquainted with His will and character; and the sure result would most certainly be to find oneself developing in that knowledge that brings ,”grace and peace” through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord. (2 Pet. 1:2.)

The desire to know God and Christ in this deeper, grander sense, will become the inspiring incentive, to study the Divine revelation, and will make that study the most absorbing and blessed occupation of life. This thought seems clearly expressed by the Apostle Paul (Phil. 3:8, 10); “Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss, for the excellency of the knowledge of, Christ Jesus my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but refuse, that I may win Christ; that I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection; and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable to His death.” With the Apostle, all things were simply a means to this end. Many things might have absorbed his attention—his remarkable visions and revelations superior to anything enjoyed by the other Apostles; or, his special position as a “chosen vessel,” more widely used than any of the original eleven, might have inclined Him to clothe himself in a halo of glory—but not so, Christ eclipsed everything else; he believed Christ; he preached Christ; and he lived Christ. (Gal. 2:20; 1 Cor. 2:2; Phil. 1:21.) What a lesson is here for all the footstep followers of Christ, and more particularly for those in the position of leaders or teachers! What a power for good all such would be •if all were endeavouring to copy .the Apostle in these things.

Also it is well for us to keep in mind that the Christian life is not to be thought of as a one-sided system of ethics that would be content to simply sit at the Master's feet and contemplate His beauties of character, and become so absorbed in the study of the "Christ life" that we would forget to do Him service, or fail to remember that the life of Christ was pre-eminently a life of service. To have a consuming love for His glorious personality must then exert a powerful influence upon the heart, and inspire the recipient of His grace with the sentiment of the poet:

"I'm not my own, dear Lord to Thee
My every power by right belongs;
My privilege to serve I see,
Thy praise to raise in tuneful songs."

"And so, beside Thy sacrifice,
I would lay down my little all,
'Tis lean and poor, I must confess
I would that it were not so small."

Truly, such will assuredly find the fire of love within the heart consuming everything—all we are and all we have or might hope for as human beings—and never being permitted to burn low or become, extinguished until every vestige of the offering has been fully consumed. Yea, more; there must be a growing appreciation of such privileges as time goes on, on the part of the sacrificer. Again we quote: "In proportion as his love and zeal for the Lord grow day by day through a knowledge of the Truth and the attainment of its spirit, he will find himself giving more and more of time, more and more of his influence, and more and more of such means as are at his command, for the service of the Truth;—and planning, additionally, how he may—curtail the various personal and family obligations so as to be able to increase his offerings and sacrifices."

As we think of these things dear brethren, how do they affect our minds? Do we find ourselves lifting up our hearts in prayer to God that such devotion, love and sacrifice may ever characterize our lives? Do they quicken us to renewed appreciation of the greatness of the privileges enjoyed, and send us forth to glorify our God, and be a blessing to those about us, imparting to them something of the knowledge and the joy that have transported us above the trivial things of earth? Or do we think of this picture of consecrated zeal as being merely a beautiful ideal, and go on our way much as we might do if, we were not making claims of special consecration, of self-denial, of giving up of human rights and privileges? Do we feel no burning zeal to herald forth the Message of God's grace that we so often sing of as being a theme so rich and so engrossing that even in the Ages to come it will continue to be our employment- and joy to tell the old, old story of Jesus and His love?"

The position in which we may find ourselves in respect of these things, it seems, will be largely determined by the degree of our heart-knowledge of Him, and the measure of that "first-love" which we have kept alive in our hearts by the Lord's grace.

The Scriptures abound with assurances that the end of the Age would be a time of special trial, not only upon the false systems of that time, but also those most highly favored ones who would have a share in the special light and privileges of the Harvest period. "Unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required," is a very searching truth connected with the unfolding of God's plans and purposes; and nowhere is this more emphatically moot than in its application to our own day. "Judgment must begin at the house of God." Recognizing this, it is not difficult for the watchful saints to interpret the meaning of the present tests of endurance, alertness and faithfulness now being experienced by the brethren throughout the world; and these trials are being recognized by the faithful as being most appropriate indeed, in view of our Lord's statement, previously quoted, to the effect that such as had been thus highly favored must expect severe testings.,

As might be expected, there is a great diversity in the trials peculiar to this our day. Loyalty to the Truth, and the possession of its spirit, will surely be on trial. Our love in all its various features will also be tested. Our consecration will be proven to be full and complete, or half-hearted, by the experiences through which we pass. Our services will be manifested as being either acceptable or unacceptable by the motives that prompt them. Will they be inspired by a pure unselfish love for the Lord, the Truth and the brethren, or will they be the results of partisan zeal, or consecration to systems, organisations, or great works? "The day shall declare it," says the Apostle.

Others, again, are being tried by present experiences on the point of "faithful continuance in well-doing." Many seem to have experienced an interruption in their well-doing that has seemed to amount almost to a full stop, and in whose minds there seems to be the thought that the Lord's providences indicate that all individual or concerted activity on the part of God's people should cease; that each by himself and for himself must be the attitude of the faithful. Here we seem to have the two extremes of thought; on the one hand, works and co-operation stressed beyond their true meaning; on the other hand, an apparent oversight of the Scriptures' most emphatic teaching regarding the inseparable oneness of the Body of Christ, and the duties and responsibilities of every member, looking toward the well-being of the whole body.

Therefore, we believe the importance of that “first love” may again be seen as having a very real application to these experiences, and all the ways and means now being over-ruled by the Lord in the testing of His people. In this instance let us refer to the words of St. Paul (Heb. 3:6, 14), where he has something to say about the importance of first things: “Whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end.” “For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence stedfast unto the end.” It seems only necessary to turn our minds back to those earlier days of our introduction into the’ wonderful secrets of our Father’s Plan to appreciate these words of the Apostle. How strong was the beginning of our confidence! How firmly fixed our determination!

And oh, how great was our joy when we realized ourselves in the days of our Lord’s presence, and standing in the very midst of the great dispensational changes that had been the theme of the holy Prophets and Apostles; that we had reached the time of that great event which had been so earnestly and prayerfully hoped for on the part of the faithful Church of Christ—the Second Advent of our Lord—the hope that had inspired the true Church all through the Age, as she went forth to fulfil her Divinely ordained mission; for it was for this hope that she has endured the fires of persecution, the rack, the dungeon and the stake, triumphant in the faith that -the One she loved and to whom she was espoused, would return to take her to Himself and fulfil to her the rich promises of His love. We may surely read in the signs about us, in the reflecting light of inspired prophecy, the unmistakable evidence that her triumph is all but complete! And •the language of the Prophet has found its fulfilment in our hearts. “Oh the blessedness of him that waiteth, and cometh unto the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days.” What unbounded joy was ours, and how precious and valued were the privileges of knowledge and service then before us; what a delight to spend and be spent in The -service of our present Lord How. much would we have been influenced then by the petty opinions of others? Flow great’ would have been the trial to find ourselves -shut off from , participation in service; how disinclined we were ‘then to deprive -ourselves or others of the privilege of hearty co-operation and fellowship; and what a blessed kinship we found in others of like precious faith. In every country and clime .God’s true people have been found gathered around the same Lord and Master; and He who understands every language, heard in every tongue the same song of joy. “Oh the blessedness!” .

Friends, let us call to mind these things! Let not the fact that certain circumstances which have been permitted of the Lord, and which will eventually work out our highest good, rob us of the joy and confidence and the holy zeal of those days ‘which marked the beginning of our confidence and our hopeful rejoicing; and so long as the door of opportunity for service and suffering stands open, let us do with our might what our hands find to do. What matters it to us where we may be on the stream of time insofar as serving our God is concerned? Whether here or there, sowing or reaping, in earth or heaven, the sweetest of all privileges will always be, serving Him.

“My highest place is lying low
At my Redeemer’s feet;
No real -joy in life I know,
But in His service sweet.”

As a concluding, thought may we not again refer to that important feature ‘of the various texts that we have been considering, putting all the emphasis where the Lord puts it, namely, personal contact and association with Him, and an all-consuming love for Him that gives Him absolute sway in our lives—ourselves His willing and devoted servants, and every power of mind and body consecrated to Him. Examining ourselves in the light of our study of this subject will assist every sincere and honest heart, we trust, in the effort to maintain the degree of love and zeal’ necessary to a place in the Kingdom. In such examination of our hearts, we may well inquire, Have I maintained my first, love? And in view of the fact that I may not point to my works, or my patience, or my endurance, or my hatred of error and evil, as an indisputable proof that “first love” has, been maintained, how searching is the question. Remembering the Master’s words that after we have done all, we are still unprofitable servants, do we not feel something of the helplessness of Peter, and with tearful eyes, look up into His face and say: “Lord, Thou knowest all things; Thou knowest that I love Thee”? We know that He will then read in our zeal, our labours, our endurance and our patience, the sure testimony of true love for Him. Every opportunity then for serving Him in all the ways provided will be eagerly grasped—privileges great or small, for serving the brethren, for pro; claiming the blessed tidings of the Divine Plan, for comforting and encouraging those about us. A love as wide as the globe will take in every member of the Body, and these will be carried in the arms of our faith and love before our Father’s throne; and our interest in them will be rewarded, we may be sure with our Master’s smile, for has He not taught us that every member of His body in the flesh represents Himself, and the service is recognised as done to Him. Under such circumstances the heart will ever remain satisfied and will never cease to sing:

“All for Jesus! All for Jesus!
All my being’s ransomed powers:
All my days and all my moments,
All my thoughts and all my hours.”

Service will continue to • represent true devotion, and will never become mere formalistic service, without the power—such as is evidenced by others less enlightened. It will be devoid of all partisan strife, all vain glory, all effort to make a fair show in the flesh. All will be done to the glory of God and in the highest interests of His people. None will surely know just how few or how many may be the years before us—perhaps it may not even be a matter of years for some of us; and such meditations make very precious to us the hope which as an anchor holds fast within the veil, and create the desire to live each day as though it were our last day of privilege this side the veil. How we would want to spend that day, were we to know that its close would finish our life of opportunity here! What zeal and love, and earnest waiting and looking for the Master, it would bring to us! A related thought it well expressed by a late beloved Christian:

“Truly ‘wise’ will those of the consecrated prove to be who, neglecting worldly enchantments, and earthly hopes arid prizes, and with hearts yearning and waiting for the Beloved, are found ready and proved worthy of the great exaltation promised, as the Bride, the Lamb’s wife.”

“Bride of the Lamb, thy charms, Oh, may’ we share.”

UNDER the heading, “Blunt Talk by Minister to Congregation,” the following news item from Adelaide, South Australia, appeared in the Melbourne “Herald” of 5th June:

“Many of the people attending , church tonight (Sunday) have come because the Governor is here,” said the Rev. A. G. Jones, preaching at the Whyalla Church of England evening service, at which Sir Willoughby and Lady Norrie were present.

“This is probably the first church visit this year for many of you. There was a large gathering here to give thanks for victory in Europe, but there is only the merest handful at the weekly services when there are always special prayers for the men and women of the services. . . . Too many people use the church for convenience, having two links with it—for marriage and for burial.”

From the above statements it would seem that the Rev. Jones places the responsibility upon the congregation for their small attendance at the regular church services, and apparently ,presumes that the services, including the particular church doctrines, are in no way at fault. Even if the Governor could attend this church every Sunday, would this be sufficient inducement to attract the same number of people as when the Rev. ‘Jones made the above statements? If so, it would demonstrate that it was not the Gospel message that attracted, and if attendances were satisfactory for any other reason, what real good would be accomplished?

Apart from some city churches where entertainment is provided in the way of organ recitals and well trained choirs and leading soloists, the difficulty of empty churches is more and more apparent, and sincere ministers and church workers are naturally greatly concerned, but does this concern lead to an investigation of the cause of the difficulty?

Do they examine the Word of God to determine if church creeds are really true, and whether the pure Gospel of Jesus Christ is really preached, so that it may attract and supply the need of those who wish to worship God in spirit and in truth?

A sample of a present-day church sermon was published in the Melbourne “Age” of 18th June, under the heading “Climax of Life,” and reads 4 follows:

“In opening a series of winter lectures at Wesley Church last night on the subject, Death and Life Beyond, Rev. Dr.

C. Irving Benson said death was a crisis, because life was critical throughout. There was something seriously at stake in man's life, the climax of which was death. What happened after death depended upon what had happened before it, and, similarly, upon man's relation to God. Death was not a state, it was an act. It was not a condition, but a transition ; not an abode, but an experience through which they passed. There were no people in cemeteries. It was as natural, to die as to be born. Human bodies, so wonderfully made, were by their very nature temporary—the prick of a thorn or an invading germ might destroy them any day. They were bound to wear out in time. Not only did life survive death, but personality endured.”

If the preacher's name had not been included in the above report of the sermon on Death and Life Beyond, it could reasonably have been attributed to any other religious leader than one of Christianity, for these statements by Dr. Benson are in direct opposition to the teachings of the Bible as a whole, as expounded by Christ and His Apostles and prophets throughout the Old and New Testaments.

If it were true that “It was as natural to die as to be born,” why did the Prophet Ezekiel, as a mouthpiece of the Lord, declare: “For why will ye die, O house of Israel? For I have no pleasure in ‘ the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God: wherefore turn yourselves, and live ye.” (Ezek. 18:31, 32.) Then Jeremiah, another faithful prophet of God, declared that death is “the land of the enemy.” We quote: “Thus saith the Lord, A voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation, and bitter weeping; Rachel weeping for her children refused to be comforted for her children, because they were not. Thus saith the Lord, Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord and they shall come again from the land of the enemy. And there is hope in thine end, saith the Lord, that thy children shall come again to their own border.” (Jer. 31:15-17.) There certainly is nothing “natural” in going to “the land of the enemy” and St. Paul explains so clearly why death is the land of the enemy when he declares—“Wherefore, as by one man (Adam) sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned.” (Rom. 5:12.) Again this same Apostle declares: “The wages of sin is death.” (Rom. 6:23.) There is nothing “natural” about sinning, so death, the penalty for sin, must be most unnatural. Indeed, so unnatural is death that after about 6,000 years of dying, mankind, in losing its loved ones today, whether at home or away at the war, is as grief-stricken as were our first parents with the loss of Abel, so terrible is the wages of sin. On one occasion, Jesus Himself was so touched with the grief of the sorrowing relatives of Lazarus that it is recorded of Him—“Jesus wept.” Our Lord did not tell them that it was quite natural for Lazarus to die, and that what seemed like death was really a transition — a passing to life in another realm.

Seeing then, that death really means death and not life in any sense, in what way is the prophet's words fulfilled — “They shall come again from the land of the enemy”? The answer is found throughout the Bible in the assurance that there shall be a resurrection of the dead. Let us note carefully St. Paul and the Lord Himself as follows: “Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried, and that He rose again the third day according to the Scriptures.” (1 Cor. 15:3, 4.) In Rev. 1:18 we have the words of Christ: “I am He that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell (hades—the death condition) and of death.” How satisfying is the assurance again, that “Jesus by the grace of God tasted death for every man,” (Heb. 2:9), in contrast to the supposition that life survives death, as stated by Dr. Benson.

St. Peter in his 2nd Epistle, 2nd chapter, declares: “There shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them.” There can be no doubt that the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, as advocated by Dr. Benson, denies the necessity for the sacrifice of Christ, for if the penalty for sin—“dying thou shalt die”—were not true, Christ need never have died “the just for the unjust that He might bring us to God.”

While it is true that “there are no people in cemeteries” that is so not because there is no death, but rather, because the Lord has the gift of life in His keeping, and on account of the sacrifice of Christ He has provided a resurrection day, when He will create bodies anew and give again the breath of life and personality to each body, thus constituting living souls. For the saints in the first resurrection, spirit bodies will be created, and they shall inherit the heavenly kingdom with Christ; and for the world of mankind in the general resurrection, earthly bodies will be created and they shall inherit the restored earth, if they obey the laws of Christ's Kingdom. Both the spiritual and earthly resurrections are shown by St. Paul in 1 Cor. 15:35-40. (See also Acts 24:15; John 5:28, 29, Revised Version.) •

It is very evident also, that the no-death theory supports the erroneous teachings of Spiritualism and- of Evolution which are now more prevalent than ever. St. Paul had to combat much worldly wisdom in his day, as shown by his letters to the Corinthians in particular. In 2 Cor. 11:3 he declares: “I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ.” The deception of Eve was accomplished through Satan's lie—“Ye shall not surely die,”—and today this lie is still accepted by the majority of church preachers, with the result that their teachings are corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ. Our Lord's prayer in Matt. 11:25, 26 shows to whom the truths of His Gospel are , revealed—"At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father; for so it seemed good in Thy sight."

Another matter that is at present exercising the minds of thoughtful church people is the fact that their ministers do not encourage them to study their Bibles. When most ministers visit the homes of people 'it is stated that they talk about almost all other things than the Bible, and as for desiring questions on the Scriptures or teachings of their church, this is not at all encouraged. One lady recently stated that since she started to question the minister -of the church she had attended in past years, he has kept away from her home; others have expressed dissatisfaction at the way the ministers avoid such subjects as the second advent and the resurrection. The truth is, that church creeds cannot satisfy those who really wish to know God's Word and become Christians, and the church ministers, being educated only in their creeds do not know the truths of the Bible, and are helplessly confused when questioned on the Scriptures.

What, then, are sincere seekers for the truths of God's Word to do in these circumstances; are they left in any doubt in the matter? Not at all; the Scriptures foretell the 'very condition of the churches today, and show that the Lord has cast off these systems and is calling His sincere people out of sectarian and creedal bondage into the light of the glorious Gospel of Jesus Christ. In Revelation 3, from verse 14, we have a description of the seventh and last church systems existing in the world prior to the setting up of Christ's Kingdom. The true and faithful witness (the Lord Himself) declares: "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot; I would thou wert cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will .spue thee out of my mouth." Again in Rev. 18:4, the Lord, in using the term "Babylon" to describe present-day church systems, exhorts His people, saying, "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." Jeremiah prophesied of this same time when he declared: "Flee out of the midst of Babylon, and deliver every man his soul. . . . Babylon hath been a golden cup in the Lord's hand, that made all the earth drunken: the nations have drunken of her wine; therefore the nations are mad. Babylon is suddenly fallen and destroyed; howl for her; take balm for her pain, if so be she may be healed. We would have healed Babylon, but she is not ,healed: forsake her." (Jer. 51:6-9.)

The Feet of Him.

IT is necessary for the discipline, trial and final proving of the church of God that they should be subjected to adverse influence; for "to him that overcometh" is the promise of the great reward. If we would reign with Christ, we must prove our worthiness to reign, by the same tests of- loyalty to God, of faith in His Word, of zeal for the truth, of patient endurance, of reproach and persecution, even unto death, and in the unwavering trust in" the power and purpose of God to deliver and exalt this church in due time. To such faithful ones are the blessed consolations of Psalm 91, which we believe is a picture of the church in the end of this Gospel Age—a picture of The Christ. Hearken:

"He who dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High (typified by the Holy .of the Tabernacle) shall abide under the shadow of .the Almighty." We thus place ourselves under the divine protection when, having come to a knowledge of God's willingness to accept us as His children we gratefully accept the invitation and approach in His appointed way, through Christ our Redeemer, and consecrate ourselves fully to His service. Such may sweetly rest in the precious promises of God; all of which are yea and amen in Christ Jesus. (2 Con 1:20.) The world does not see the overshadowing wings of divine protection, but the faithful have a blessed secret realisation of it. Praise the Lord!

"I (Christ Jesus, whom David here as elsewhere personifies and who thus addresses His body, His church) will say of Jehovah. He is my refuge and my fortress, my God; in Him will I trust, that He will surely deliver thee from the snare of the fowler and from the noisome pestilence"—from the deceptions of Satan, into which all those not protected shall stumble; for our Lord said that so subtle anti deceptive will they be that, if it were possible, they would deceive "the very elect." But this is not possible; for those who are making their calling and election sure abide under the protection of the Almighty. Such shall be delivered, not from the destructive pestilence of physical disease, but from the moral and spiritual pestilence of destruction—from the sinful propensities of the old nature, which in unguarded moments are liable to assert their mastery and overwhelm the souls of those who are not 'abiding under the secret protection of the Most High; and from the spiritual pestilences of false doctrine which, with subtle sophistry, destroy the faith of the unwatchful.

Such pestilences are already abroad in the world in the shape of so-called Christian Science, Spiritism, and the various no-ransom theories which take the name of "The Larger Hope," and which bid fair, both from present prospects and from the prophetic outlook, ere long to become epidemic. From all these pestilences the Lord's elect shall be protected, resting safely and sweetly under the shadow of the Almighty.

"He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust; his truth shall be thy shield and buckler." So close to His heart does Jehovah gather His loyal and faithful children that they feel the warmth of His love; and the responsive language of their hearts is, "I will abide in thy tabernacle forever; I will trust in the covert of thy wings; for thou hast been a shelter for me and a strong tower from the enemy; for thou hast heard my vows; thou hast given me the heritage of those that fear thy name." (Psa. 61:4, 3, 5.) Yes, His truth—that grand system of truth comprised in the divine plan of the ages—is an ample shield and buckler to. all who in simplicity of heart receive it and prove faithful to it. It is the armour of God, which the Apostle urges all the faithful to put on—to appropriate, to meditate upon and to store up truth in mind and heart—that they may be able by its use to withstand error and evil in every form presented to them in this evil day.

Jehovah shall keep the feet of His, saints.

"Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night; nor for the arrow that flieth by day; nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness; nor for the destruction that wasteth at noonday." This is the "night," the dark night of which the Prophet Isaiah spoke and to which our Lord also referred, “The morning cometh, and also the night”; “The night cometh when no man can work.” (Isa. 21:12; John 9:4.) The Millennial morning comes, and just as surely the great time of trouble will immediately precede it—the night wherein no man can labor for the dissemination of divine truth; so great will be the “terror,” the tumult and trouble and, persecution of that night; the arrows—even bitter words” of the opponents of the truth =will fly by day—at the present time, which in comparison with the ‘dark night that is coming, is called day. The various besetments and difficulties from infidelity, Higher Criticism and other false doctrines are pictorially represented as the shooting out of arrows, as pestilences, as stumbling stones. None of these are to injure the “elect,” of which Christ is the Head and the church His members, as specially indicated in this Psalm. The church shall be immune, and nothing shall in any way hurt them. As the Lord said, the difficulties of this day would, if possible, deceive the very elect; but -this will not be possible, for “the feet” class shall be kept. No; the church need have no fear of the moral and spiritual pestilences that walk in darkness, spreading and making their victims amongst those who are ignorant of the truth, or who are unfaithful to it and are, hence, unworthy of it, and who, therefore, lack the divine protection and are subject to the “strong delusions” of error that subvert the faith and hope of many, just when the light of divine truth is shining clearest upon the faithful, as it is shining Upon us to-day.

“A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee.” Great will be the falling away from the truth, even amongst those who, like ourselves, received it once with joy and who did for a time run well; but the church, because of their loyalty and uncompromising faithfulness and because of the ample armor of truth and righteousness, shall stand and not fall.

We are not to think of those who will be injured and who will fall (“A thousand at thy side and ten thousand at ‘thy right hand’”) as of the world, , but rather as being friends of the church; closely associated with the church. *

The world could not fall from divine favor, for ‘it has not been in divine favor. The whole world “lieth in the wicked one,” and, therefore, could not be overthrown. This verse seems to apply to those who were actually begotten of the holy spirit or who have assumed a position such as those begotten of ‘the holy spirit; as, for instance, the tares which claim to be wheat. They never were wheat, and will not be garnered with the wheat class. Time will show that they are not of this class. So in this picture we see the fall of those in general and of the consecrated in particular. There is a distinction between the thousand falling at the side and the ten thousand at the right hand. We might infer that the one thousand may fall into total unbelief, and the ten thousand, the “great company,” into the great time of trouble to wash their robes white and to purify themselves. They will be partakers with Babylon in her sins and have ‘part in ‘her great fall.—Rev. 14:18; 18:10.

‘None too extravagant is the prophetic declaration, “A -thousand shall fall at thy side.” Only the sanctified in Christ Jesus, copies of God’s dear Son, will be able to stand complete in Him. These will be the very elect, and it will not be possible for them to be deceived and ensnared; few God will give ‘His messengers a charge (message) for them (“present truth”), and thus these “feet” of the body of Christ shall “be upheld that they stumble not.

“Only with thine eyes shalt thou behold and see the reward of the wicked,” who’ reject the truth and prove unfaithful to it. We know that we are already passing through some of these troubles (including the troubles upon the nominal church incident to its testing), and that ‘we are escaping, ‘while many on every hand are falling into error and infidelity. We escape, not by being taken away from the scene of trouble, but by being supported, strengthened and kept in the very midst of it all by the. Word of the Lord, our shield and buckler.

“No Evil Shall Befall Thee”

Because thou hast made the Lord, which is my refuge, even *the Most High, Thy Habitation, there shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling”—no evil of the kind referred to; and any other seeming evils shall, under divine providence, work together for your good.—Rom. 8:28.

God has so arranged that only the truly consecrated will be kept from stumbling into error in this evil day Every day we learn to appreciate more and more the divine favor which has anointed the eyes of our understanding, and permitted us to see the internal strength and beauty of the divine Word and plan. If then, we are thus, by divine favor, made strong in the Lord, and enabled to “stand fast” while thousands are falling from their faith and steadfastness, let us “rejoice with fear” (reverence’). Let him who feels strong and well supported “be not high-minded,” but “take heed lest he fall.” Humility and zeal for the Lord are the terms upon which we received the great blessing, and are also the terms upon which we may retain it to the end—until our “change” comes and establishes in glory what grace began in our weakness.

“For he shall give his angels charge concerning thee, to keep thee in all thy ways.” That is, God will raise up some faithful pastors and teachers who will “watch for your souls as they that must give an account.” True, there shall arise false teachers, perverting the Word of • the Lord, and seeking by cunning sophistries to subvert ‘your souls; but if in simplicity of heart the Lord's children require a "Thus saith the Lord" for every element of their, faith, and carefully prove all things by the Word, they will be able readily to distinguish the true from the false, And having done so, the Apostle Paul (Heb. 10:35) counsels us to have confidence. The Lord, our Shepherd, will care for the true sheep.

The Apostle Paul assures us that the angels of God are ministering spirits sent forth to minister unto and serve those who shall be heirs of salvation, the saved ones of this Gospel age—not only the overcomers of the "little flock," but also the overcomers of the "great multitude." Our Lord Jesus sets forth practically the same thought in His declaration, "Their angels do always behold (have access to) the face of my Father." (Matt. 18:10.) The Master's words seem to imply, at least, that one or more angels have charge over the consecrated ones, the "very elect. Nothing can by any means, therefore, harm these, except as the heavenly Father sees that the earthly injury 'or disadvantage would prove profitable either to the individual new creature or to the' Lord's general cause. This is in full accord with his general assurance that all things shall work together for good to those that love him.—Rom. 8:28.

Such, a use of the heavenly messengers by no means invalidates the thought that the Lord's earthly children are frequently, used 'of Him as ministers, servants, the one to the other. Indeed, we may be assured that the invisible messengers or servants, generally, if not always, are required to act through human instrumentalities—preferably through "the very elect." Of this kind of service done by the brethren, one for the other, we have illustrations in the harvest work for instance—supervised by our present Lord and His heavenly hosts, yet in The main carried on by the members of, His body still in the flesh. ,

The Harvest Message God's Keeping Power.

"They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone"—"thee"—all the members of the body of Christ, individually and collectively, using all their strength to protect against any stumbling-stone of false doctrine, and especially that great fundamental rock-doctrine of the redemption through the precious blood of Christ; that "rock of -offense and stone of stumbling" to both the houses of nominal Israel. (Isa. 8:14.) "The feet" of the body are its last members; the saints now living are members of "the feet of Him" (Christ), the ones who are now in danger of being stumbled, as the feet of the Jewish house of servants were in danger in the end, or harvest, of the Jewish age.

How do such messengers bear up the feet of Christ? By helping them to a clear understanding of the truth, and teaching and encouraging them by word and example how to be faithful to the truth, and how to run so as to obtain the prize of our high-calling.

While doubtless the heavenly messengers are connected with this work, yet it is surely done through the church in the flesh, as already intimated. The Lord in this present harvest time has given His messengers, the leaders of His consecrated people, a "charge," a message, a word of warning, counsel, advice—an opening of the Word of truth, an enlightening of their understanding—that they should bear up all the members of "the feet" class, all of "the very elect" in this time of serious trial, testing and stumbling, lest at any time any of this class should stumble through the peculiar trials of the present time. How manifestly this is fulfilled. The harvest message in its various features, bearing on every phase of truth now due, and every phase of error now brought forward, is God's keeping power by which, according to His guarantee, we know that nothing shall by any means hurt "the feet" members of the body of Christ. • fie

It is for us to rejoice in these blessings and favors of the Lord and to increase our faith; and we remember that even before the "House of Sons" was organized the Lord had power and exercised it in the "House of Servants" in a way that, illustrates to us the abundance of that power.

Satan would like to have us walk by sight, not by faith; he would like to have us continually tempting, God, and demanding some ocular demonstration of His favor and protection, instead of accepting the testimony of His Word, and relying thereupon implicitly, in faith. In the light , of the unfolding of the Scriptures we see that Satan, probably unwittingly, quoted this passage of Scripture wholly out of its proper meaning and interpretation,. a passage which referred, not to the literal. feet of Jesus and to literal stones and to literal angels, but to the 'symbolic feet-members of the body of Christ to-day, and to the stones of stumbling, doctrinal and otherwise, which are now permitted in the path of the faithful and to the angels, or ministers of divine truth, who in the present harvest time would be commissioned to bear up "the feet" members with such counsels, admonitions and expositions of Scripture as would be necessary for them.

"Thou shalt tread upon the lion and adder; the young. lion and the dragon thou shalt trample under feet." Thus borne up in the hands. of the Lord's faithful messengers and guarded by their vigilant watchfulness, and under the constant protection of the Most High, God's trusting, faithful children 'shall triumph over every device of Satan either to overpower or to beguile them—whether he goes about like a roaring lion, or whether, serpent like, he stealthily lurks about to insert His venomous poison.

“Because he hath set his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him; I will set him on high, because he hath known (appreciated) my name.” On account of the love and loyalty of each individual composing “the feet” class, the heavenly Father will deliver him from the pestilences, etc., and will exalt him to joint-heirship with Christ, make him a member of the “royal priesthood” and a partaker of the divine nature.

“He shall call upon me and I will answer him; I will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him and honor him. With long life will I satisfy ‘him, and show him my salvation”—He will make him understand His plan. As individuals they are known unto the Lord, who judges not merely by the sight of the eye and the hearing of the ear, but who discerns and judges the thoughts and intents of the heart. And, however widely they may be scattered, whether standing alone as “wheat” in the midst of tares, or in company with others, God’s eye is always upon them. Dwelling in the secret place of the Most High (sanctified, wholly set apart unto God), they shall: abide under the shadow of the Almighty, while the judgments of the Lord are experienced by the great religious systems that bear His name in unfaithfulness. They have no share in the judgment of Great Babylon, but are previously enlightened and called out of her.

Praise the Lord for such assurances of His loving care! “Bless’ the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, praise His holy name!”

Weeping for a Night—Joy in the Morning.

FROM Osmar White, the Melbourne “Herald” War Correspondent, the following appeared in the press of 9th July:—

Berlin, Sunday.--Between 30,000 and 40,000 Berliners have committed suicide since the fall of the city.

This information was given me to-day by Dr. Ferdinand Friedenslatirg, President of the German Institute of Economic Research, who was Director of the Berlin Police in the days of the Weimar Republic. His estimate was confirmed by a number of responsible physicians, and also by district. police leaders, from whom I have made independent inquiries.

Doctors state that the cause of suicide in , the overwhelming majority of cases is neurasthenia, caused by ,the intolerable strain of the last months of war, the surge of terror when the city was-occupied by the Russians, and by the depression and hopelessness which followed the people’s realisation of final defeat.

“We realise,” a doctor told me, “that famine and great erring are inevitable next winter, and, however generously we are treated, there will be nothing better than hard work, short rations and sparse comforts for the German people for many years.

“To many people already nervously and physically exhausted, the ,future seems to hold out no hope. Since they can expect neither security nor comfort, they take what they believe to be the easy way out. ‘There have also been many cases of parents killing young children before committing suicide themselves. Nazis are by no, means the only people who despair.”

The above report surely shows how terrible are the feelings of the people of Berlin in what appears to them as a time of utter despair and the conditions thus revealed no doubt have been repeated again and again in many other cities in Europe over the past six ‘years.

While the Lord’s people truly sympathise with the position of such unfortunate people, the question that may be presented to our minds is why God permits..much more tragic experiences in many countries of Europe and China than in our own Australia and such as the U.S.A. The answer is revealed in the Scriptures, showing that a most severe time of trouble is yet to be experienced throughout to-day lands, and what is taking place in some countries today is but a beginning of “great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world’ to this time.” (Matt. 24:21.)

But why does God, who is almighty and loving, allow such tragic’happenings amongst His human creation? The Lord was in His heavens at the time of all the appalling conditions over the centuries—at the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70; when the French Revolution was raging, and other national calamities, and yet He did not intervene.

It would seem that God, in His wisdom, sees that His intelligent human creation can the better learn the necessary lessons of the sinfulness of sin by being permitted to experience the awfulness of degradation and corruption that results from disobedience to God.

However, God did intervene in the days of Noah-when the corruption in the earth reached such a level that the Lord sent the Flood and took away mankind as He saw good. So, too, He will intervene in the tribulation that is yet to reach world-wide proportions, but, not before mankind have been so humiliated by their own wickedness that the majority will never wish to taste the sour grape again. The Lord evidently foresees that only by the permission of great tribulation throughout the world could the blessings of Christ's Kingdom be fully appreciated in contrast, and desired and accepted by mankind for all time.

Many are the vivid descriptions of the impending tribulations upon the world given by the Lord's prophets of old. Referring to the trouble upon the Jews, we, read in Jeremiah 30:5-7, "For thus saith the Lord, We have heard a voice of trembling, of fear, and not of peace. Ask ye now, and see whether a man does travail with child, wherefore do I see every man with his hands on his loins, as a woman in travail, and all faces are turned into paleness? Alas, for that day is great, so that none, is like it; it is even the time of Jacob's trouble; but he shall be saved out of it." As with Israel, so all other countries are included by the prophet Zephaniah 3:8, where he declares: "All the earth (social order) shall be devoured with the fire of my (God's) jealousy. Then in verse 9 the prophet adds the comforting assurance, "For then will I turn to the people a pure language (truths of Christ's Kingdom) that they may all call upon the name of the Lord, to serve, Him with one consent."

Knowing that all the suffering populations of all countries to-day, along with all mankind of past calamities, back to our first parents, are to be raised to life during Christ's Kingdom, while not lessening our sympathy for all in tribulation, does enable the Lord's people to look by faith beyond the troubles 'of "this present evil world" and truly thank the God of our salvation who has provided such a wonderful redemption for* all through Jesus Christ. "For His anger endureth but a moment: in His favour is life: weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." (Psa. 30:5.)

While it is necessary, then, for the followers of the Master to proclaim "the day of vengeance of our God," explaining the necessity of such tribulations upon the world, they are privileged "to preach good tidings unto the meek, to bind up the broken-hearted; to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord (the heavenly calling during this Gospel 'Age) and to comfort all that mourn," and happy are those who seek to do this in the remaining days, now very few, prior to the night coming when, no man can work. (Isa. 61:1-3; John 9:4.)

Pilgrimage Ended.

In the early hours of 25th July the earthly course of another elderly member of the Melbourne Class was brought to a close, with the 'passing of our dear Brother Hiam. ,

Being of a Christian disposition in his early life, our Brother Hiam first came to appreciate the Lord's plan of the ages, through a volume sent to him as early as 1908, and from that time his appreciation and love for the Lord and His truth increased throughout the years.

While the greater part of our Brother Hiam's life in the truth was spent with Sister Hiam and family in country parts of Victoria, this really gave opportunity for family worship in a manner that was delightful to see, and which has brought its reward, by the Lord's overruling, in the whole family becoming Christians and the majority appreciating the light of present truth. The Apostle Paul's exhortation to fathers in Eph. 6:4, "Bring up your children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," was ably and grandly performed in reverent and patriarchal manner by our dear Brother Hiam. Further, the message of the Kingdom was also commended to all others who had ears to hear whenever Brother Hiam had the opportunity.

Failing strength and loss of memory for the past two years had prevented our elderly Brother from attending Class, but for some years previously he was very regular and delighted in the studies and fellowship at the gatherings. The end came peacefully after only a short period in bed, and amongst the last words distinguishable could be heard: "We love Him, because He first loved us." We rejoice, that our dear Brother in Christ has entered into the joys of the Lord, the inheritance promised to all who love Him supremely.

Sincere sympathy is extended to Sister Hiam and all members of the family residing in Victoria and West Australia, and while feeling the parting very much, the truths of God's Word will no doubt be a sure source of comfort and strength to them, as they continue to walk in the light of the Lord as did the devoted Christian husband, and father, by the Lord's grace. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, from henceforth; Yea, saith the spirit, that they may rest from their labours, and their works do follow them."

The Deluge Effect.

SCIENTIFIC Bible students are rapidly reaching the conclusion that we are fully justified in disregarding the so-called scientists who have denied the Bible story of the Deluge. The Bible is corroborated by Geology, Astronomy and History. The oldest records of Babylonia tell the story of the Deluge—of Noah and his ark.

To discredit the Bible, these archaeologists declare that the Genesis account was merely copied from the Babylonian records. How foolish! Who does not know that there were no records of ancient times that will at all compare with our Genesis account. None other even professes to give a connected history of the human family, a chronological line of 1565 years from Adam to the 'Flood, or a definite record, as the Bible does, of just how long it rained, just how high the floods rose and just how long was the period required for the waters to drain off.

,"Blind unbelief is sure to err 137
And scan God's Book in vain."

But, says one, the theory of a deluge, whose waters would cover the hills and the mountains, might be thinkable if the earth were flat; but how could it possibly be true since we know 'that the earth is a sphere.

Geology comes to the rescue of the Bible 'student and points out distinctly that there have been several great deluges. It shows us great beds of sandstone, clay, shale, etc., all of which Science declares must have been placed where they are as the settlements of great floods. Some of these deposits are hundreds of feet below the surface.

When we ask where such floods could come from, Astronomy answers us, pointing us to Saturn and Jupiter, with their "rings." Scientists declare that these rings consist of minerals and water thrown far off in a gaseous state when the planets were at white heat. They subsequently cooled and formed into various strata or rings. Because of their great distance from the planets their motions are different, and they are held in suspense by the same laws which hold the planets themselves in space \ Nevertheless the superior weight of the planets draws them nearer and nearer.

The ring nearest the planet, and approaching it, is still held off by the "firmament" of circumambient air. The rotation of the planets on their axis gives least resistance at the poles; and these rings, after spreading out great envelopes, gradually thin at the centre, or equator, and thicken at the poles, until the weight at the poles becomes so great as to overcome the power or the strength of the firmament, and then breaking through from both poles, causes deluges.

No Rain on the Earth.

The astonishing statement that, prior to the Deluge, there had been no rain on the earth (Genesis 2:5), is in full agreement with what we have seen from the foregoing. The earth once had similar "belts" or "rings." These were precipitated, as we have described, one after the other, at long intervals during the Creative Days. By means of these deluges, our minerals were deposited and our coal beds buried.

God, foreknowing all things; foreknew the necessity of the Noachian Deluge, and hence so timed the features of His Plan that the last of earth's "rings" was still unbroken when man was created. But it was no longer in the form of a ring. The waters above had approached the earth and formed a great watery canopy or veil, merely held off by, the

There could be neither rain nor storm under such conditions. The temperature of the whole earth was equable, the sun's rays acting upon the watery canopy as they do upon the white glass of a hot-house. The temperature was the same at the poles as at the equator. This accounts for the remains of tropical animals and of plant life found imbedded under hundreds of feet of ice in the polar regions.

Why the Polar Ice?

Geology testifies to a Glacial Period, when great icebergs, carried by floods of water, rushed from the poles toward the equator. Geologists have traced great valleys cut by these icebergs. On their findings they base the theory that the earth was once ice-covered. Instead of attributing the ice to the period of the Deluge, about 4400 years ago, they add a handful of naughts; and the more they add the prouder they feel of their achievements, because they think that they are getting away from the Bible and discrediting it.

But scientific Bible students are having their faith in God's Word established more and more. Without effecting the torrid zone, the warmer temperature is now extending itself into the frigid zone quite rapidly. “Greenland's Icy Mountains” will later be things of the past. The poles are warming up. The ice caps are dissolving.

“Thy Word is Truth.”

The fitting of these facts to the Bible narrative is not only intensely interesting, but conducive to faith in God, in His providences, and in the Bible, and very conducive to a disregard of the wild guesses of “professors,” who have no faith in the Bible and are seeking to discredit it.

The sudden break of the canopy of water would not only cause a deluge to come down at both poles, and the flow of great tidal waves toward the equator, as geologists show was the case, but it would also produce a sudden and intense cold at the poles. The water froze so rapidly that out of the solid ice animals have in recent years been dug, which have grass between their teeth.

We have only to put two and two together to have a chain of evidence linking us to the Bible. For instance, is it asked why it was colder at the poles then than now? The reply is: The more direct rays of the sun then, as now, fell on the equator; but the torrid zone was hotter than now, until the trade winds sprung up, which carried the heat and distributed it all over the earth. And the waters of the equator must have been hotter then, as the poles were colder, until the ocean currents set in—which, like the Gulf Stream, carry the water from the equator and distribute it along the shores of America and Europe—and the Japan and other currents, which in the Pacific carry their water warmed at the equator to the poles.

These processes, going on for 4400 years, are gradually thawing out the polar regions, as all scientists agree; and this has in past years caused large numbers of icebergs from the glaciers of the polar region to break loose and float down, to the distress of mariners.

Still there remains the question, Why was not Noah's ark carried off by this swift current towards the equator? Why did it apparently remain not far from the place where it was built and come to rest on the top of Mounts Ararat? A suggestion which fits well with the Bible narrative is as follows:—The geological evidences are that the swift currents of water, laden with icebergs and rolling rocks, visited various parts of Europe and America, and perhaps Asia, but seemingly avoided the vicinity of Mount Ararat. There alluvial deposits are of extraordinary depths. The geologists say that while there was a commotion round about, there was an eddy and back water in that particular vicinity.

Is it too much for the child of God to believe that the Great Creator, who intended to preserve alive Noah and his family to begin afresh the population of the earth, was fully competent to regulate the currents of that Deluge? It is pleasing to us, additionally, to note that the time required for the draining off of the waters (Genesis 8:1-14) is reasonable and in harmony with the scientific investigation conducted from the Bible standpoint.

The Cause of the Deluge.

We have already seen that physical causes led up to the Deluge. Next let us inquire, Why did Divine Providence decree the obliteration of man, except Noah and his family? Why did He who knew “the end from the beginning” purposely allow that last canopy to remain to cause the Flood, instead of precipitating it before man was created?

The answer is that God foreknew the rebellion of Satan and his attempt to become the “Prince of this world.” God also foreknew that His human son, Adam, would fall before the temptation which would come upon him. He permitted the temptation and the fall solely because He foresaw a way by which, ultimately, good would be accomplished thereby and valuable, instructive lessons be given both to angels and to men. These lessons test the love and loyalty of every creature in Heaven and on earth, and when rightly learned, will serve their purposes to all eternity.

All of God's dealings with His intelligent creatures are along the lines of absolute Justice, guided by Love Divine. But while Love can guide Divine Justice, Justice must rule, as we read: "Justice is the foundation of Thy Throne." (Psalm 89:14.) The Bible record is that at the time of the Flood wickedness had become so great that the conduct of mankind and the thoughts of their hearts were "only evil continually,"—Genesis 6:5.

This great increase of wickedness for 1600 years 'explained to have come,, not merely from human depravity, but by the connivance of some of the angels. These, although created holy, perfect, become enamored of sin through humanity, until they became disobedient to God, and by their greater intelligence led humanity into depths of iniquity.

The Bible cites many instances in which holy angels have materialized, assuming humans bodies and clothing. Thus three spirit beings, naturally invisible, appeared to Abraham as men and did eat and talk with Abraham; and he 'knew not that they were angels, until afterward. This power appears to have been possessed by all the holy angels before the Flood. It was then that some of them, 'becoming enamored of the beautiful daughters of men, took to themselves wives, and lived in their materialized bodies, preferring to live as human beings.

The Apostle Jude declares that thus they "left their own habitation," or condition as spirit beings, in violation of -the Divine Law. Thus, instead of using their—permission to appear as men to help and instruct mankind, they used this power to still more rapidly degrade humanity. Moreover, the children born of those angelic sons of God by human mothers were human beings of a new order—different from Adam's family. We read that they were giants—physical and mental—"men of renown."

The fact that they grew to manhood and became renowned proves, that this improper relationship between angels and humanity continued for centuries, because in that primitive time full manhood was not reached in less than a hundred years. Those giant sons of the angels, begotten in lust and in violation of the Divine Law, would not, naturally, be renowned for their virtues or holiness, but the reverse. Therefore, it does not surprise us to read further that those sons of the angels tyrannized over humanity, and that the whole earth was filled with violence.

The time had come when God's displeasure with those conditions should be manifested—not by sending those angels and 'their giant-renowned sons and the depraved antediluvians of Adam's race to a hell of torture, but by merely overwhelming them in the Deluge. God thus set an example of His opposition to sin and His determination that, eventually, it should be fully stamped out. But neither in this, nor in anything else, did God ever suggest any thought of torturing sinners, or anybody, throughout eternity.

On the contrary, all those antediluvian sinners of Adam's race were as much redeemed by Christ's sacrifice as other sinners of the race at any time. They belonged to the great mass of mankind, with whom Messiah will deal during His Millennial Reign of righteousness. They will all be 'brought to an accurate knowledge of the Truth, like the remainder of the race. The object in so doing will be that after lessons of chastisement for any wilful disobedience, they may be, if they will, fully recovered from sin and death, and brought back to all that was lost—human perfection and everlasting life in an earthly Paradise restored—world-wide—at Jesus' cost.

As for the sons of the angels by human mothers, there is no hope for them. Their begetting and birth were not authorized of God. They were cut off in death. They were not redeemed. They will never be awakened nor resurrected.

As for the fallen angels themselves: The Bible tells us that for these 4400 years they have been exiles from God, restrained "in chains of darkness," "until the Judgment of the Great Day."—Jude 6; 2 Peter 2:4.

Frank and Ernest—I always enjoy listening to your Talks from 5AD on Sunday morning; it is just what the world needs to hear and to realise the great truth of it all. Oh that thousands more would listen. It seems to me that the majority of our preachers are afraid to touch on that great truth, the second coming of our Lord. You have my prayers for the success of your mission. Keep on talking about this, our blessed hope: God prosper you. Please send me several of 'your latest Talks and booklets. Yours in Christ Jesus.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Friends—I am accepting your invitation to write for a free copy of your Dialogue on the two kingdoms. heard over the air this morning from 5AD at 9.30 a.m.

Do you believe in the Resurrection of the Dead?

Jer. 31:15-17; Matt. 2:16-18; Job 14:14-15; Jno. 11:21-25; Acts 24:15; 1 Cor. 15:12-18.

WHEN we remember that the word “resurrection” is used no less than 37 times in the New Testament, besides other words of similar import, and that all the prominent creeds of Christendom declare faith in a resurrection as an integral and essential part of Scriptural doctrine and of the hope of eternal life—in view of these facts, and of the strong language of the texts above quoted, Whose inspiration is conceded by all Christians—it may seem strange that we should ask any Christian the question, “Do you believe in the Resurrection of the dead?”

Nevertheless, we have serious reason to doubt that a belief in the resurrection of the dead prevails amongst Christians to any considerable extent; and it is because we believe the resurrection to be a very important doctrine in its connection with other doctrines of Scripture (throwing light upon other doctrines), that we desire to call general attention to this subject and to invite an examination of our question in the light of facts and of Scripture; our hope being that after a careful examination of the subject many more of God’s people will come to believe consistently, logically, Scripturally in a resurrection of the dead. True, it is customary on every funeral occasion to read the words of the Apostle Paul, in which he sets forth the resurrection as the Christian’s hope (1 Cor. 15) but this seems to be a mere concession on the part of the officiating minister. He feels it to be his duty to read something on the subject, but his remarks following the reading prove most conclusively that, .so far from believing that the person whose corpse is about to be buried is dead, he believes, and instructs his hearers that they should believe that their friend, and neighbour is “more alive than he ever was.” Frequently, indeed, he plays directly into the hands of the “Spiritualists,” and “Christian Scientists,” by telling the audience that the spirit of the dead friend is with them in the room, hovering over them; and that if permitted to speak he would say to them, “Dry your tears, weep not for me; I am far better off in glory.”

Indeed, it has come to be the- general belief among Christian’ people that death is a delusion, and not a reality; that people merely seem to die, and do not die; that they merely experience a change to a higher form of being that so-called, “Christian Scientists” are quite correct in saying, “There is no death.”

Whoever holds such views does not, cannot consistently believe in “the resurrection of the dead;” because if no one is dead, how can there be a resurrection of the dead? Wherein would be the sense in speaking of a resurrection of the dead to life, if they already have life more abundantly than they possessed it before they seemingly died?

But thousands of ministers would answer us, saying, “When speaking of the resurrection, we merely mean a resurrection of the body—the bodies which we bury are all to come forth again from the grave, and the spirits which parted from them in death are to be rehabilitated in those bodies in the resurrection. This is what we mean by resurrection.”

Well, well! Who would have supposed such inconsistency on the part of so many learned and well-meaning men!

(1) They tell us that the deceased is “far better off,” in that he has gotten free from the “fetters of the flesh,” and that now “his free spirit wings its flight to God, no longer hampered and hindered by the mortal dust.” They go into ecstasies in describing the grandeur and liberty and blessedness of the one who has died, and who, by reason of getting rid of the body, has attained to a life more abundant, knowledge a hundredfold, and blessings indescribable.

(2) In the same breath they quote the Scriptures referring to the resurrection and (wholly misconstruing those Scriptures) tell us that by and by, at the second coming of the Lord Jesus Christ, the same bodies of flesh that were buried will be re-organised. A. “prominent Methodist -Bishop, in his famous resurrection sermon, pictured the resurrection morning, and the entire sky darkened with the fragments of human bodies coming together from various parts of the earth, where a finger, a foot, or a hand has been lost by accident, disease or amputation. They tell us that then the spirit beings, which, they say, left those bodies at death, will return to them as their everlasting habitations. Then, inasmuch as the resurrection is Scripturally- set forth to be the grand and glorious result and consummation of our salvation, they feel compelled to go into ecstasies, over their erroneous presentation of the resurrection, and to tell how grand and glorious will be the result.

They seem to overlook entirely the inconsistency of these two propositions; and they expect that their hearers will be similarly inconsistent and illogical; yea, many of them seem to think that the more inconsistent and unreasonable their belief may be, the more reason they have to congratulate themselves that they have a very strong faith. However, the real fact is that they have a very strong credulity. But they will have no reward for believing unreasonable things which God’s Word has not taught, but has contradicted.

Who cannot see, if he will, that the man who dies at fifty years old, if in dying he obtains life more abundant and knowledge a hundredfold, and freedom to “wing flight,” etc., would be sadly disappointed by a resurrection—if it should mean to him reimprisonment in a tenement of clay, with physical restrictions and human limitations? And then, if he had thus for centuries been a “free spirit, roaming at liberty throughout the universe, untrammelled by a body and bodily limitations,” where would be the consistency on God’s part of reimprisoning such an one in a human body?

And if to be without a body is “perfect bliss,” as the funeral orators ..tell, how could there be anything added to perfect bliss by .a resurrection of the body, and reincarnation therein?

With this preface to our subject we go to the Scriptures to learn from them what is meant by “the resurrection of the dead,” and in what manner and why the Scriptures speak of the resurrection as the hope, the only hope, the blessed hope, not only of the Lord’s people, who are to have part in the “first resurrection,” but of the world in general, who are to have an opportunity to share in the resurrection of judgment, improperly translated, “the resurrection of damnation.” (John 5:29.)

Whoever would believe the Scriptural doctrine of the resurrection must also believe the Scriptural doctrine respecting death—that death is death, the cessation of life. Then, and not until then, will he be able to understand the

Apostle’s words in our text, “If there be no resurrection of the dead, . . . then they which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished.”

Nor is this statement by the great Apostle Paul an exception to or different from the teaching of the Scriptures elsewhere. Their unanimous testimony is that the dead are dead; that “in that very day their thoughts perish.” (Psa. 146:4.) Of the dead the Scriptures further declare, “His sons come to honour and he knoweth it not; to dishonour, and he perceiveth .it not of them,” “for there is neither wisdom nor knowledge, nor device in the grave whither thou goest” (Job 14:21; Eccl. 9:10.)

Here is a direct conflict between modern theologians and the inspired Word, the Scripture claiming that the dead know not anything, the modern theologians claiming that they know everything.

The entire Plan of Salvation is connected, with this question. If death was not the penalty of sin, incurred through Adam, then “life and that more abundant” is not the reward and blessing of God secured through Christ by a resurrection. Satan’s proposition, which has been so widely accepted by ,Christian people, and which exercises so blinding an influence upon their minds, is the reversal, in every sense of the word, of the Divine proposition that death is the curse or penalty of sin; that Christ died to release man from this sentence or curse, and that the, release comes by the resurrection of the dead, who otherwise would never have future life, as says the Apostle in our text. Satan’s theory declares death a blessing which brings the fullness of life and liberty and joy, and would make of the resurrection a curse, bringing imprisonment and difficulty and restriction.

No wonder that, blinded by this deception of the Adversary, the majority of the great theologians are leaving the doctrine of the atonement, which declares that “as by a man (Adam) came death, so also by man (the man Christ Jesus) comes the resurrection of the dead; that as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive.” (1 Cor. 15:21, 22.)

If the reality of death is denied, it is no more difficult to deny the reality of sin. If it is claimed that •father Adam was not created in the image and likeness of God, but was created a very close image and likeness of the monkey, it follows that in that low condition of intelligence he was unfit for trial for eternal life; and it is only a further step to deny that he ever had a trial, and that he ever failed and fell from grace. And if the fall is denied, and, instead, the claim is put forward that man has really been advancing even to the present time, losing his likeness to the monkey and gaining in likeness to God, then it will be consistent also to take the next step, and declare that since man did not fall he did not need to be redeemed from the fall.

And hence, with all such reasoning upon un-scriptural basis, it appears logical[^] to deny the oft-repeated declaration of God's Word, that our Lord Jesus is our Redeemer, and that "He is the propitiation for our sins (the Church's sins), and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world," giving for us, as our ransom or corresponding price, His Own life, that He might buy back the forfeited life of Adam.

The apostle of old "preached Jesus and the resurrection" —Jesus as the Redeemer of mankind from sin and its curse—death—and the resurrection as the grand result of that redemptive work, by which the blessings secured by the ransom-sacrifice will be made applicable to and available for whosoever wills.

The testimony of our senses, like the testimony of God's Word, is that death means the loss of life, and not an increase of life. Watch the dying one and note his weakening powers, mental and physical, until the spark of life becomes extinct. You have seen nothing go from him, you have heard nothing but the death-rattle; you have felt the gradual cessation of the pulse, and noted the gasping for breath; and all of your senses which you can exercise upon the subject tell you that your friend, your loved one, is dead—alive no longer. You look about you and study the subject and inquire of others, "What next?" The answer to your senses is, "the next thing is corruption; when the spark of life has gone the corpse must be buried; 'dust to dust, ashes to ashes.'" "You note the similarity between the death of your friend and loved one and the death of the brute beast, and your senses can discern no difference between them; and the Scriptures declare, "As dieth the one, so dieth the other; they have all one breath." (spirit of life.) (Eccl. 3:19.)

But with a longing for a future life, implanted in our nature by our Creator, we inquire: Is there no hope; hath a man no pre-eminence above a beast? The Scriptures answer our question, assuring us that, physically speaking, man "hath no pre-eminence above a beast." But the Scriptures assure us that although mankind is not possessed of any power of life beyond that of a beast, the Creator has, nevertheless, made a provision for man that He did not make for the beast, and that provision is the very thing for which we long, namely, everlasting life. The Scriptures point out to us 'that this provision for man's everlasting life, was made by the Lord in the beginning—not by implanting a deathless quality in the man's constitution, but by providing in the life-sustaining trees of the Garden of Eden, the means of continuing his life everlastingly; nevertheless, the provision was conditional, dependant upon man's obedience to his Creator.

The Scriptures point out that man's disobedience brought upon him the sentence of death, and that the execution of that sentence was effected by driving him out of the garden and away from the life-sustaining fruit of its trees.. Thus driven out, the sentence, "Dying, thou shalt die," took effect upon father Adam gradually, and he lived out nearly to the end of the first thousand-year day. His posterity, becoming weaker and weaker as the generations rolled by, are today (notwithstanding the many advancements in science, and medicine and sanitary arrangements), reduced to an average of about thirty-five years—"and if by reason of strength they be four-score years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow," and they are soon "cut off from the land of the living," to go into "the land of the enemy"—into the great prison-house[^] of death, in which it is estimated that over twenty thousand millions of our race are already—"where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest." (Job 3:17-19.)

death, they nevertheless declare that our Creator is a God of mercy and pity, and that when there was no eye to pity and no arm to deliver us, His Arm brought salvation to us. The Scriptures, moreover, point out to us the Lord Jesus Christ as the Arm of Jehovah, stretched down for our relief from sin and sickness and pain and trouble, and for our deliverance from the prison-house of death, and for our restoration to the liberties and privileges of the sons of God.

It was in harmony with this Divine sympathy that, in due time, God sent His only begotten Son into the world for our redemption—to give for us the ransom-price, and ultimately to recover all who will accept of Divine mercy, from all the consequences of the fall by a resurrection from the dead. But Divine love could not make void Divine justice; it was necessary that God should be just, if He would be the justifier of them that believed in Jesus, hence the demands of justice—the penalty for sin—must be paid by our Redeemer, before the work of release and restitution could begin. And here we have the best of evidence respecting what is the penalty of sin, and what it is not; because, since our Lord Jesus pays for us the just penalty, of sin, what He laid down for us will prove what was the penalty against us. What did He do for us? The Scriptures answer: He laid down His life for us; "He died for our sins;" "He died the just for the unjust;" "He poured out His soul unto death;" He "Made His soul an offering for (our) sins," and "by His stripes we are healed." (Rom. 5:8; 1 Pet. 3:18; Isa. 53:4, 6, 10.)

Nothing is more evident than that our Lord Jesus did not suffer an eternity of torment as the price of our redemption; and hence, if the matter needed proof we have here the proof that eternal torment was not the penalty for our sins. On the contrary, the fact that our Lord Jesus died for our sins, and that the heavenly Father accepted of that sacrifice of His life on our behalf, proves that it was our lives, that were forfeited by sin: that the full penalty of the Divine law against us as a race was the deprivation of life. The whole race, under sentence of death, has gone down to the great prison-house of death, the grave, Sheol, hades. And so our dear Redeemer, when He gave up His life for us, went also to shed, hades, the grave. He took our place, and suffered for us the penalty for our sins.

But as Jesus' death ransoms man from the sentence of death, so His resurrection from death became the assurance of the justification of all who accept and obey Him. The heavenly Father gave evidence that the ransom price was entirely satisfactory; and our Lord, who was thus obedient to the Father, was raised from the dead and, as the Father's agent and representative, will soon begin the work of blessing the entire world redeemed by His precious blood.

The blessing of the world means the breaking open of the prison-house and the setting at liberty of the captives, who for six thousand years have been going into the, prison-house of death. For this reason our Lord is called the Life-giver, because His great work will be to give back life to the world of mankind, who lost life in Adam. And since the restoration of life to mankind will mean the removal of pains and sickness and troubles, which are a part of the dying process, our Redeemer is styled the Great Physician.

The prophecy which mentions the breaking open the prison-house of death, and the setting at liberty of its captives (Isa. 42:7), was applied and unquestionably correctly, by our Lord to Himself; but He did not break open the prison-house of death, and set all the captives free by resurrection immediately upon His own resurrection. He tells us when this work will be done, saying (John 5:2829) "The hour cometh in which all that are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man, and come forth;" "and they that hear (obey His voice then), shall live."

Our Lord thus passed over the interim of the Gospel Age, and pointed to the grand consummation of His work in the incoming age because such was the Father's prearranged plan. "The Father sent the Son," and the Son willingly undertook the work of redemption, at a time sufficiently in advance of the "times of restitution," or resurrection, and the general blessing of the world during the reign of Messiah, to leave the interim of this Gospel age for another work, namely, for selecting from the world a "little flock," a "royal priesthood," a "peculiar people," a "holy nation," to be joint-heirs with Christ Jesus their Lord in the honours of the mediatorial kingdom. These shall be associated with the Redeemer in the grand and glorious work of destroying the Prince of Darkness and breaking open the prison-house of death, and setting at liberty the captives of sin and ignorance and superstition; and in fulfilling generally all the provisions of the gracious promises of God made to father Abraham that in his seed (Christ, and His elect Body, the Church), "all the families of the earth shall be blessed." (Gal. 3:8, 16, 29.)

This brings us to the Scriptural proposition, that there is a first, a chief or special resurrection, and a general one later. The first or chief resurrection includes the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ and of the entire elect "Church which is His Body"—no more, no less. "Blessed and holy are they that have part in the first resurrection; on such the Second Death hath no power, but they shall be kings and priests unto God and shall reign on the earth"—the Messianic Kingdom class. Those who will share in this first resurrection will be "changed" from the human nature to the Divine nature—the highest of the spirit natures; not human, not flesh and blood, for "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God." Their trial and perfecting of heart takes place beforehand, and only the "overcomers" will receive the blessings. Some of the characteristics of their change are indicated by the Apostle as a change from weakness to power, from dishonour to glory, from corruption to incorruption, from a natural (human) body to a spirit body.

The time for this best, or chief resurrection, is everywhere in Scripture indicated to be at the close of the Gospel age, at a time when the entire Gospel Church will be completed. This includes the living members, whose "change" to spirit nature will be instantaneous, so that the moment of their dying as human beings will be the moment of their "change" to perfect spirit beings. Meantime, the Scriptures declare that the Lord's people who have died, like the rest of mankind, are really dead, as human beings, and know not anything; but inasmuch as God has provided for their resurrection, and inasmuch as they have been informed respecting it, and have hopes therein, therefore they are spoken of as being merely asleep—resting from their labours; waiting for the "crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only," as the Apostle declares.

And, likewise, the world of mankind, even though they know not the Lord as yet, are spoken of as being "asleep," because, as, the whole world was under condemnation of death through Adam, and that without knowledge or volition on their part, at the time of the Sentence, for they were then in the bins of their father, Adam, so now, since Jesus laid down His life a ransom for all, and because they all shall be, awakened from death, therefore it is proper for all those who are aware of the Divine provision for the awakening, by faith to speak of the interim figuratively as a sleep.

Thus the Scriptures exhort us to trust and hope in the resurrection as respects all, our dear friends who go down into the prison-house of death. "There shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust," says the Apostle. (Acts

24:15.) “All that are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and come forth,” said Jesus. (John 5:28-29.) “For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.” (1 Cor. 15:21-22.) How glad we are that God has provided for the resurrection of all the sleeping millions of Adam’s children who have ever lived. Whether our loved ones have gone down into death in battle, or as the result of accident, or through sickness or disease, matters not. God’s power exercised through Christ, will bring them all back again in the resurrection morning. Hear the words of our Lord, “The hour is coming, in which all that are, in the graves shall hear His voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of judgment.”

As the “first resurrection” is the resurrection of the blessed and holy, of the sanctified in Christ Jesus, His Body, so the general resurrection, which is for the world, is designated as “a resurrection of Judgment,” mistranslated in our common version “resurrection of damnation.” It is styled a “resurrection of judgment” because while all preparation has been made, so far as God is concerned, for granting to the world of mankind a full resurrection or restitution back to all that was first given to Adam, and lost by his disobedience, to be recovered by our Saviour’s precious blood, yet there are certain conditions attached to this blessing upon which it depends, namely, the conditions of the New Covenant.

God does not propose to give eternal life through Christ to any others than those who earnestly desire it, and who are in heart sympathy with the principles of righteousness which must always be the law of the Divine government. Hence the first work of Christ and the Church in the world, for those who have gone down into death, the prison, will be their awakening to physical conditions, similar to those in which they died. The surrounding conditions of society will then be greatly improved; knowledge will have taken the place of ignorance, and the reign of righteousness and the law of love will at that time have superseded the rule of sin under the law of selfishness; and Satan will be bound, that he shall deceive the nations no more for the thousand years. Under the favorable conditions of that mediatorial kingdom, all mankind will be required to make progress in the knowledge of the Lord and in the bringing of their hearts and lives in accordance with His law of love. Whosoever then will make no effort in the right direction will be cut off from life, in the second death, after one hundred years of trial (Isa. 65:20), although he would then, under the changed conditions, be properly reckoned as only a lad.

But while judgment will thus pass against one who fails to make progress, and will cut short his further opportunity, the same judgment, by the same Judge, will operate favorably to all who seek righteousness, and make progress in harmony with the laws of the Kingdom; so that year by year they will be growing stronger mentally, physically and morally—approximating gradually the full, complete standard of perfect manhood, the image and likeness of the Creator, as first represented in father Adam. Thus the world of mankind awakening from the sleep of unconsciousness will be on trial; the conduct of those who are on trial being either approved or disapproved; and culminating either in their sentence to the second death, incorrigible, and unworthy of the gift of God, eternal life—or in their perfection, and their final adjudgment of worthiness to have and enjoy the great boon of life eternal, under the blessed conditions which are then promised to prevail—when there shall be no more sighing, no more dying, no more crying, because there will be no more sin, and none of the penalties for sin, for all the former things have passed away. (Rev. 21:4.)

The condition of the dead, up to the time when the resurrection begins, is one of total unconsciousness: “There is neither wisdom, nor knowledge, nor device in the grave whither thou goest,” “His sons come to honour and he knoweth it not, to dishonour, and He perceiveth it not of them.” Of each of the patriarchs of the past it is written, “He slept with His fathers;” “He fell asleep.” And so also in the New Testament we have a similar record: “Stephen fell asleep.” The apostle Paul speaks of those who saw the Lord after His resurrection and says, “He was seen of above five hundred brethren at once, of whom the greater part remain to the present time, but some are fallen asleep.” (1 Kings 2:10; 11:43; Acts 7:60; 1 Cor. 15:6, 18.)

The apostle shows that this sleep-condition will prevail, even as respects the Church, until the time of the second coming of Christ, assuring us that the living members of the Church at the time of the Lord’s second advent will not be blessed prior to those that have fallen asleep, but contrariwise, the living “shall not prevent (hinder) them that are asleep,” for the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we who are alive and remain will be blessed, and ultimately experience our “change.”

The moment of reawakening will seem to the awakened ones to be the next moment after their death—for there is neither wisdom, knowledge nor device in the grave.” The bodies in which the world will be awakened will be practically the same as those which died, though not the same atoms of matter; for in the hands of our Creator one atom of dust is as good as another in this great work. Thus the apostle says, “Thou lovest not that body which shall be.” The bodies of the world, as they shall be when awakened, will be really new bodies in the sense that they will be different atoms of matter; but they will be old bodies, in the sense that they will be duplicates of those which went to dust. We cannot wonder that the worldly mind, which knows not God and knows not His power, cavil at the thought of resurrection. It will be a most stupendous work, more wonderful by far than man’s original creation; it will thus be to the world of mankind, and to the angels of heaven also, the grandest exhibition ever given. Divine omnipotence.

He who formed man in the beginning, in His own image, has the power not only to form him again of the dust of the ground, and to re-kindle the spark of life, but yet more than in these will He exhibit both His omnipotence and His infinite wisdom in the restoration to each being of a brain like his present one, having recorded therein the events and circumstances which have transpired in the present life—just as the wax cylinder of a phonograph bears in itself the recorded words of the speaker, which, can be reproduced at another time and place. None but an Infinite Being could claim the power thus to reproduce the very thoughts of the billions of mankind. He of whom it is said that He knows the very hairs of our heads and their number, and that not a sparrow can fall to the ground without His notice—only He could do so great and wonderful a thing; and only as we have learned to have confidence in Him through the revelation of His Word could we exercise faith in such a stupendous miracle as He has promised shall be performed. Nor need we expect that the world of mankind will all be awakened simultaneously, but rather that the great work of the Messianic kingdom will begin with those who have not gone down to the tomb, but who are nevertheless in death, in the sense that they are not alive in the complete, full measure of freedom from the power of death. When the work of restitution shall have progressed to some extent with these, we may expect that some of those who have previously fallen asleep in death will be awakened, and share in the blessings of that glorious day. Later, others, and still others will arise, until eventually it will be true that, in that day, the day of Christ, “all that are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man”—shall obey the mandate, “Come forth”—and shall be brought to a knowledge of the goodness and love and mercy of God; and, if they will, ultimately to the full perfection of human nature—the earth, meanwhile, being fitted and prepared as a Paradise of God for His restored family.

Meantime, the exhortation to all the “called” in the present age is that we should seek to make our “calling and election sure” to a place in the kingdom class, to a change of nature, from human to divine, and thus have a right, under the Divine arrangement, to have a part in the “first resurrection”—the Chief resurrection, the resurrection to the perfection of the Divine nature with its glory and its honour.

Listen to the voice celestial, ye whose eyes with weeping fail, God reveals His gracious purpose to the soul in sorrow’s vail ; There will be no hopeless sadness in the new earth’s golden years,

Blissful years replete with gladness, “God shall wipe away all tears.”
Ev’ry tomb shall be deserted, harps of jubilee shall ring ;
“Ruthless grave, where is thy triumph?” Cruel death, where is thy sting ?”
Sing the blest emancipation, ev’ry creature that hath breath,
Life shall quicken all creation, there shall thenceforth be no death.

No more widowed hearts repining, no more hungry homeless souls,
When the earth shall bloom as Eden and the Prince of Peace controls;
When the ransomed hosts are singing, not an echo of despair
In His vast dominion ringing, “There shall be no sorrow there.”

With the living waters flowing and His saving health made known,
Ev’ry cheek with beauty glowing ; ev’ry friend of, evil flown ;
God will scatter leaves of healing for each loyal heart and brain,
All His matchless love revealing, “There shall thenceforth be no pain.”

UNDER the headings “Koreans Want Freedom,” “Oppose Division of Country” the following appeared in the press. New York, October 2 1st. (A.A.P.)

Dr. Syngman Rhee, former president of the Korean Provisional Government, who has returned to Korea after 33 years' exile in the United States, voiced publicly for the first time Koreans' determination to resist the country's present division into Russian and American zones.

Addressing 50,000 Koreans during welcome celebrations for American troops, -Dr. Rhee said :—”We remained unconquered and undivided under Japanese oppression. We will fight to remain so at the cost of our very lives. The Allies may as well know this now.

Are we going to have our whole country back, or shall we remain divided? This question is being asked me day and night. It will be easier to get the answer if we co-operate with each other, also the United States forces.

“I hope,. before very long, we will show the world, the United States Government and the American Army we are quite able to run our own affairs.”

These statements of Dr. Rhee, on behalf of the Koreans, is but a sample of the attitude of many of the lesser educated races of mankind, as indicated by the present violent opposition to the Dutch in Java and to the French in IndoChina. The fact is that these less educated people are now becoming enlightened and they naturally question the right of other human beings to rule over them. This is a most significant sign in the world that we' living in the last days of this age, “the days of the Son of Man.”

An explanation of St. Paul's prophecy in 1 Thes, 4:16, with reference to the effect upon the world generally of the “days of the Son of Man” is of much interest in view of present day events. It is based on the words, “The Lord Himself, shall descend from heaven with a shout.” We quote:

“‘With a shout.’—The Greek word here translated 'shout' is keleusma, which signifies a shout of encouragement. A shout implies a public message designed for the ears, not of a few, but of a mixed multitude. It is generally designed either to alarm and terrify or to assist and encourage. Or it may have the one effect upon one class, and the reverse effect upon another, according to the circumstances and conditions.

“The aspect of affairs in the world for years now very strikingly corresponds with this symbol, in the outbursts of world-wide encouragement for all men to wake up to a sense of their rights and privileges as men, and to consider their mutual relationships, the principles upon which they are based and the ends which they should accomplish. Where on the face of the earth is the civilized nation that has not heard the shout and is not influenced by it! The entire civilized world. has, in past years been studying political economy, civil, rights and social liberties as never before in the annals of history; and men are encouraging each other, and being encouraged, as never before, to probe these subjects to the very foundation. The shout of encouragement started by the increase of knowledge among men /Ins already encircled the earth, and under its influence they are banding themselves together, encouraged and assisted by 'men of brain and genius, to contend and strive for both, real and fancied rights and liberties; and as their organizations increase and multiply, the shout grows louder and longer, and will by and by result as foretold, in the great time of trouble and tumult of angry nations. This result is graphically described by the Prophet—The noise of a multitude in the mountains (kingdoms) like as of a great people; a .tumultuous noise of the kingdoms of nations gathered together; the Lord of hosts mustereth the host of battle.'—Isa. 13:4.”

Other significant Scriptural references to the closing days of “this present evil world,” are strikingly presented in the following explanations.

“So complex and peculiar will be the conflict of this Day of Vengeance that no one symbol could describe it. In the Scriptures, accordingly, many' forceful symbols are used, such as battle, earthquake, fire, storm, tempest and flood.

“It is the ‘Battle of that Great Day of God Almighty,’ when He shall gather the nations and assemble the kingdoms to pour upon them His indignation, even all His fierce anger; for the Lord of hosts Himself mustereth the hosts' of the battle.—Rev. 16:14; Zeph. 8:8; Isa. 13:4.

“It is ‘a Great Earthquake such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake and so great,’ which shall ‘shake, not the earth only, but also heaven.’—Rev. 16:18; Heb. 12:26.

“It is The Fire of Jehovah’s jealousy, which shall devour all the earth.’ Both the present heavens (the ecclesiastical powers of Christendom) and the earth (the social organization under both church’ and state influence) are reserved unto fire against this day of judgment. The heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements (of present ecclesiasticism) shall melt with fervent heat; the earth (society) also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.

. . The heavens, being on fire, shall be dissolved.’ All the proud and all that do wickedly shall be stubble, and this fire shall burn them up. It ‘shall leave them neither root nor branch.—Zeph. 3:8; 2 Pet. 3:10, 12; Mal. 4:1.

“ ‘His way is in the Whirlwind and in the Storm.’ ‘Who can stand before His indignation? and who can abide in the fierceness of His anger?’—Nahum 1:3, 6, 7.

“ ‘Behold, it cometh mighty and strong from the Lord, as a Tempest of Hail and a Destroying Storm, as a Flood of Mighty Waters overflowing, and shall cast down to the earth with power the crown of pride.’ ‘He rebuketh the sea and maketh it dry, and drieth up all the rivers . . . The mountains quake at Him, and the hills melt, and The earth (symbols of the entire present order of things) is burned at His presence; yea, the world and all that dwell therein. . . With an overrunning flood will he mate an utter end of the place thereof, and darkness shall pursue His enemies.’—Isa. 28:2; Nahum 1:4, 5, 8.

“That these are not to be literal floods and fires, destructive of our planet Earth, and its population, is evident from the statement (symbolic) that the present order of things, when destroyed, will be followed by a new order —a new heavens (ecclesiasticism, God’s glorified Church) and a new earth (human society reorganized under God’s Kingdom on a basis of love instead of selfishness): Referring to that new order of things after the fire of God’s retributive vengeance shall have burned up present evils, God, through the Prophet, says:—Then will I turn to the people a pure language (the truth), that they may all call upon the name of the Lord, to serve Him with one consent.’—Zeph. 3:9.”

Thus we have vividly portrayed in the Scriptures, the passing of the reign of sin and death and the inauguration of the reign of righteousness with everlasting life to all the obedient. All who can grasp the impending changes in world affairs and the glorious outcome with the establishment of Christ’s Kingdom should surely be moved to a greater reverence and love for God, and seek to serve Him because of His great love in providing such, a mighty deliverance, through Christ, when humanity had descended to chaos and despair. It is the privilege also of those who know the Lord and His great plan of salvation to exhort those with whom they come in contact to “Be still and know that the Lord is God,” and that the sooner this attitude is adopted, the sooner the blessings of Christ’s Kingdom will flow out to heal, restore and bless all the families of the earth. (See Psa. 46:9, 10; and’ Psa. 2:10-12.)

Broadcasts in South Australia.

Will our friends in South Australia please note that while the Frank and Ernest Dialogues are now discontinued over stations 5AD-5PI, as from October 28th, enquiries are under way to determine if these broadcasts can be continued through other stations in that state. It has been most encouraging to receive the numerous responses and expressions of appreciation of the broadcasts through 5AD-5PI over the past two years, and it is felt that some real good has been done, by the Lord’s overruling. Announcement will be made in these columns of any satisfactory engagement that may be possible with other radio stations in South Australia_

Pilgrimage Ended

EARLY last month word was received of the passing of Brother Tosh of Sydney; reports are as follows:— “I have the sad task to announce to you the death of our dear Brother Tosh, who passed beyond the veil last Friday the 5th inst. Though our dear Brother had been suffering for some time, when the end came, it was as a severe shock to all of us here. The humble, kind Brother was a staunch champion of the truth, and a great loss to us. He was buried on Saturday in Rockwood cemetery, and there was a full attendance of the friends to pay their last respects to him on this side of the veil. They came from Canberra and Glenbrook, and from far and near. All paid their loving tributes to one who had endeared himself to the hearts of all.

“ ‘The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, praised be the name of the Lord.’ In humility we submit to His will;

He is wiser than we are, and we know that the end is nigh. With the passing of each saint we realise it more and more.

. . Our hearts may be weary and sad, but joy, joy unspeakable is just around the corner.”

Another of the brethren writes:—”I presume you have heard of the passing of our dear Brother Tosh; it came so sudden; he was at the Class within about three Sundays. He was very much respected and loved by all the Class and was always so meek, gentle, forbearing, never dogmatic, always respected the thoughts and opinions of others. He had the truth and kept it for the love of it. As Peter says (2 Pet. 1:10), he certainly gave diligence to make his calling and election sure; I have no doubt about his case. . . we are going to miss him very much but the good Lord will still be with His children.”

A Brother who had known Bro. Tosh for many years states:—”Regarding our dear Bro. Tosh, I first made his acquaintance on board ship coming out from London to Australia in 1909 and from then till the time of his decease, or rather his change by the dissolution of the old body and being clothed upon with the new, I had the privilege of his fellowship not only at the Class but also by correspondence. . . I think from the time he came to Australia he matured very rapidly not only in his knowledge of the Scriptures but in his growth showing forth the fruits and graces of the spirit. He was truly a Brother one could take as an example to follow, even as he followed the Master, and while we all miss his fellowship yet we mourn not our loss but rather rejoice in that, our loss is his gain, believing he is one of the company mentioned in Rev. 14:13—Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, from henceforth; yea, saith the spirit, they rest from their labours but their works do follow them.’ . . . I’m sure we all join in praying the dear Lord will bless and comfort Sister Tosh and her boy by giving, unto them that comfort and peace wherewith we are comforted.”

Frank and Ernest, Dear Friends—Very much have I enjoyed your Talks for the last three Sundays. I am taking another advantage of your offer ; would you kindly send me your last three Talks. As I read the press news from day to day of happenings in the land of Palestine, this thought comes to me—what tremendous difficulties face the Jews, in the strength of the Arabs in the land, and how are they to be driven out? But, faith in God takes the long view and says, when God's time comes, the door will open and no power on earth will be able to close it, and at last the Jews will return Home. Yours in His service.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I have been told that you \ have stocks of the Diaglott, and would you let me know the price of them so that I can forward the necessary money. I listen to your broadcasts when I find it convenient, and I might say that I enjoy them very much. So thanking you for your trouble and hoping that I shall hear from you soon. (The Emphatic Diaglott, Greek and English translation of the New Testament is available at 1 6/- post paid.—B.B. Institute.)

Frank and Ernest, Gentlemen—Please forward me a copy of above date's (14th Oct.) discussion and leaflet. Thanking you for all the knowledge I have received from your discussions and have told others to listen in. I am.

Dear Brother—Time slips away and although it is only about a month since I last wrote to you there seems to, be quite a few things happening in the world that further indicate. we are, in the day of reckoning with the nations. The Dutch in the East Indies are finding, that the people there who have been carrying them for so long have other , ideas anti aspirations and so do not want to return to pre-war conditions. Native populations will come into their own when the Kingdom is set up, and so it is not surprising to see them making efforts in that direction now.

What strife there is in the whole world ; the peace so much acclaimed is now one great headache. The Big Five cannot agree ; their recent conference being a failure. Unrest in our own country seems to be assuming very great control over a widening section of the community ; we usually find how large a matter a little fire kindleth, especially when the tinder is fully dry. It is with a certain amount of satisfaction that we see these things taking place because we realise ale Kingdom is very near and the end of our journey is at hand ; may the day soon come, is our prayer. . . .

.£ 2 is enclosed from our family for Radio Fund. Would be glad of a few "P.Ps.", 8 or 10 of last issue (October T. It's a good one. Yours in the Lord.

Secretary, Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sir—I have been listening with interest to your Frank and Ernest session over 2HD. I would like to have a copy of last Sunday's script, which dealt with the question of universal resurrection—a doctrine which has quite an interest for me. Any further reading matter would be appreciated. Yours - faithfully.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I have had much pleasure on recent Sundays in listening-in to your session. . . Your views as expressed in your Dialogues exactly coincide with my own. I would like to hear your views on the eternal damnation theory. It kept me for years from true Christian faith and belief and has, I believe, turned millions away from the truth. There is the definite assurance in Isaiah and other prophets and in Christ's life that God does not punish for ever, for He is not a monster but a God of love and mercy as well as justice and all shall be taught of Him and hear His voice we are assured. . . .

The literature you mention I should like to peruse. You are following the right track in your discourse. With best wishes, Yours sincerely.

(A leaflet "Some Thoughts on Eternal Punishment" is available free to all, upon request.—B.B. Institute.)

Messrs. Frank and Ernest, 6KY Perth, Dear Sirs—I listened in to your Dialogue last night for the first time, and was impressed by your treatment of the Jewish question from a Biblical standpoint.

I have lately retired from the ministry with the Presbyterian Church. Since being here have conducted evening services in the local Picture Hall on Sunday evenings. . . As I have discontinued the evening services, yesterday was the first opportunity I had to listen in to your session. As I am a student of prophecy I shall be glad to receive your booklet, and if you have any books on prophecy for sale will be pleased to have list of same. Thanking you, Yours sincerely.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I've been listening to your broadcasts the last few Sundays, and have been very interested in your Bible Talks, and do hope many others will listen in. I think as it says in the book of Daniel 12:4 that knowledge will be increased and we shall have a better understanding of God's Word. Will you kindly let me know the price of the book you were speaking about in tonight's Talk. I would like to read it. With best wishes, I remain, Yours sincerely.

Preaching the Gospel.

“This Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nation.; and then shall the end come -- (Matt. 24:14).

IN the words of our text our Lord Jesus Christ makes a statement as to the purpose of the Gospel Message of the present Age. That purpose is quite different from what Christian people in general have thought it to be. Many have supposed that the object to be attained during this Age has been the conversion of the world. But not so, according to the Scriptures. The end mentioned in our text is not the end of the world, but the end of the Gospel Age. The work of this Gospel Age, as laid out by the Master, is, not the conversion of the world, but the preaching of the Gospel as a witness to “all The nations.

There is a distinction between the Gospel of the Kingdom and the Kingdom itself. The Gospel of the Kingdom is the message concerning the Kingdom, the glad tidings of the Kingdom. When this message shall have accomplished its work of gathering out a special class from amongst the people to constitute the Bride of Christ., then the Kingdom itself will be inaugurated and will begin its work, which will be for the salvation of the world at large. So we make the distinction between the Gospel of the Kingdom and the Kingdom. The Gospel is the announcement beforehand that the Kingdom is coming. When the Kingdom comes, of course, the preaching that it is coming will be at an end; for the entire object of ,This preaching is to prepare for this coming Kingdom.

Why But Few Have Hearing Ears.

The Scriptures inform us that since our Lord’s ascension to the right hand of the Majesty on High; He has been waiting until the time shall come for the Heavenly Father to make His enemies His footstool, (Heb. 10:12, 13; Psa. 110:1). In other words, He is waiting until His glorious Kingdom shall be inaugurated for the blessing of all the families of the earth. Meantime, those who hope to reign with Him have an important work to do, in themselves, co-operating with their Lord in the preparation of themselves for their great future exaltation. Additionally,, they are to proclaim the, Gospel, preaching it to every one who has an ear M. hear, in order that the ‘full number of the Bride class may be gathered in and fitted for their positions in the Kingdom.

But not many will hear this message of the Kingdom. The great majority of people are filled with their own ideas. Some are engrossed in money-making, in pleasure seeking, in art, in music, etc. As a result, comparatively few have an ear for the Truth of God, but upon the few who have the hearing ear, this glorious message has, a marvellous effect; for it transforms their entire lives.

In calling out this class God uses no force, no coercion. It is strictly a voluntary matter. The Gospel message is only for those who appreciate it; and they will receive a great blessing. As the Master said to His disciples, “Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear.” (Matt. 13:16,17). When our Lord was preaching in Palestine, comparatively few had an ear to hear. The majority were too full of their own ideas and projects. And thus it has been all down the Gospel Age.

However, God is not blaming those who have no ears to hear the message of the Gospel; and neither should we. We do not smite a blind man because he does not see. On the contrary, we sympathise with him. So we’ should do with those who have no spiritual sight. There are very many who’ lack spiritual sight, many who cannot exercise faith in what they cannot see; and according to the Scriptures they are not responsible for their failure. As the Apostle Paul says, “The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not.” For this reason they cannot see. (2 Cor. 4:4). Later on, under the Messianic Kingdom, these blind eyes will be opened. —Isa. 35:5-10.

God never purposed that the Kingdom message should convert the world during this Age, but that the Kingdom itself should do that work when it is established in the earth. The message is at present designed for only a “little flock.” “Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father’s good pleasure to give you the Kingdom/” said the Master. (Luke 12:32). All others will be the subjects of the Kingdom. -

The Priceless Pearl Now Offered.

The earth is the one rebellious province in God’s Universe. There are only a few members of Adam’s race who to listen to the Word of God, and to follow its instructions. By -nature our minds are all more or less twisted through the Adamic fall, and not one is fit to be a member of God’s Royal Family. But there are some who have a’ disposition of heart to do right, who hunger and thirst after God and righteousness. It is to such that the good message of the Kingdom appeals. The gospel attracts those who have an interest in the things of God, but passes by those who lack such interest.

God, is seeking .for those who, when they learn of His wonderful Plan for human salvation from sin and death, will become so thoroughly engrossed in it that they will practically forget everything else. Thenceforth His Plan will be the only thing of special value to. them. Some of us have found it even so in our own cases. All other things are but secondary—eating, drinking, the kind of clothing we wear, whether we are poor or rich, etc. We desire merely to be neat in person, and to have sufficient food to give us the strength required for what our Lord has given us to do. •

With us the main object in life is the attainment of the great Heavenly treasure to which the Gospel called our attention. We are like the merchantman who was seeking goodly pearls, and who, when he had found one pearl of great price, sold all that he had and bought that pearl. (Matt. 13:45, 46). The Kingdom of Heaven, the Messianic Kingdom, with its glory and honour, and with its privileges in connection with the world’s uplift to human perfection, constitutes the great prize peculiar to this Gospel Age. Never before this Age was this prize possible of attainment; and the opportunity to attain it will end with this Age.

Everybody is seeking something in life.’ The vast majority have before their minds some object or aim, to the attainment of which they expend their energies. Some are seeking the pearl of large financial influence in their community. Others. seek the pearl of ()Teat wealth, the’ finest house in town, etc. Still others t end every effort to become famous musicians or great singers. A young woman may have before her mind the pearl of a cosy home, with a kind husband and little children.’ So there are pearls of many kinds and sizes. Whoever has no worthy object in life, no high ideal before his mind, is indeed; a pitiable creature.

But the Pearl of Great Price presented to us in the Scriptures far eclipses all other pearls in value. Whoever possesses this Pearl will be in harmony with God. The majority of mankind have no God, although everybody really needs Him; for we were created so. The highest organs in the human head show that worship of our Creator is a natural requirement of man’s being. But the race is so fallen from its original perfection, and our God has been so grossly misrepresented to us that few realise their need. What we were told concerning Him was so terrible that we did not care to know anything more about Him. Contrary to our nature, we turned aside because of these misrepresentations of His character. Nevertheless, the first step is to come into harmony ‘with God to become His child, and to learn that “like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that reverence Him.”—Psa. 103:13.

How To Secure This Great Pearl.’

As we examine this pearl more closely, we see a .marvellous beauty that we had not noticed before. - We see that God has made a wonderful offer to those who will renounce the world and consecrate themselves fully to Him, to follow in the footsteps of their Redeemer; faithful even unto death. For these the Heavenly Father has in reservation great glory, high honour, and a change of nature from human to Divine. (2 Pet. 1:4). These constitute the • Church of Christ, and the Church will be joint-heir with Christ Jesus in His Kingdom, through which God ,has purposed to bless the world.

Whoever gets the Pearl will have the. privilege of being associated with, our Lord Jesus in the work of helping the world up out of ignorance, superstition and sin. For a • thousand years this wonderful privilege will be afforded to Christ and His Church—the privilege of raising to human perfection and everlasting life all of the poor, fallen race of Adam who will accept the offer. Who would not rejoice at the prospect of uplifting the world from sin and death conditions to perfection and life! What would we not give thus to bless and uplift all our relatives and friends who are not now interested in the Kingdom! How glad we are that all mankind will have the privilege-of hearing and knowing about God.

But this is not all. After Christ and the Church shall have brought the poor world back to perfection, righteousness and life, the Church will be forever associated with her Lord, to show forth the riches of Jehovah’s grace throughout the ages of eternity. (Eph. 2:4-7). Surely this is a wonderful prospect.

Are we asked what we must give to secure this pearl? In the parable, the Merchantman sold all that he possessed—to obtain that pearl; and so must we. It makes no difference whether we have much or little, we must give our all. We must yield ourselves wholly and unreservedly to God, through our Lord Jesus Christ. In one sense the pearl is very cheap—practically a gift; for the most that any of us may possess is as nothing in comparison. Yet in the sense that in order to purchase it we must submit ourselves fully to the Lord, henceforth to have no will of our own in anything, to suffer reproachful scorn, persecution, loss of friends, tribulations—all necessary to our preparation for future service—the cost is considerable. But whoever has once gotten a glimpse of the pearl will gladly pay the price.

Conditions For. Obtaining The Pearl.

Whoever accepts this wonderful offer which God has made must enter into a Covenant of Sacrifice with - Jehovah. (Psa. 50:5). Day by day he must thereafter carry out his Covenant. He must study the course, by our Lord Jesus Christ, who is our great exemplar; then he must walk in the Saviour's steps. He must deny himself—put himself fully into the hands of our Lord.—and enter the School Of Christ, learning daily lessons of faith and obedience.

After, we have consecrated ourselves fully to the Lord, all that we have is His; and we are only His stewards, who must render to Him an account for our use of time, influence, means, strength, and all. We have very little to render to the Lord at best. When the time necessary for eating, sleeping, earning a livelihood, etc., is deducted, we have not much left for active service for God. Therefore, we are, so far as we are able, to redeem the time from earthly affairs, spending as little as possible commensurate with duty and necessity in housework, business, etc. Some of the earthly treasures can be relinquished in the interest of the Heavenly treasures, that more time may be given to the study of God's Word, in helping the brethren along the good way, and in proclaiming the message of grace to others, that they may be blessed.

Doing Good To Others.

The number who will obtain this pearl is limited. During the entire Gospel Age only 144,000 are to be selected to form the glorified Church class. This number, we believe, is very nearly complete. Therefore, if we wish to be winners of the prize we must be up and doing. The time is short; and we must be about our Father's business. It is the Father's business that we cultivate "the fruits of the holy spirit—putting away malice, hatred, strife, and putting on meekness, gentleness, patience, brotherly-kindness, love. This is the Father's business; and by so doing we are getting ready to carry on His business by and by. He wishes us to attend to our own education now and to do all that we can to help others to get their education also. This is not the time to attend 'to the interests of the world.

This does not mean that we shall do nothing for the world, however, for we are to do good unto all as we have opportunity, especially to the Household of Faith. Seek first the Kingdom of God for yourself; and afterwards look after the brethren and those needing your assistance. Be kind and considerate toward all, and watch for opportunities to give a pleasant word or a smile. It will be seen that you are different from others, and that you are not trying to pick a flaw in everything that they have. This does not mean that you are willing to be taken advantage of, but that you are showing a kindly spirit 'towards them. By so doing you may pave the way for peaking the Gospel message to them afterwards.

We cannot know how much good may result from these seemingly small things. Thus doing, we shall be showing forth the Lord's praise, which is to be our constant aim. All of this is preparing us for the Kingdom; laying up treasures to buy this great pearl. To do so will take all we have, however much or little. There is no other Way to secure it.

With the majority, the sole object in life seems to be 'something to eat or to drink, a little pleasure, some attractive apparel, etc. Comparatively few know for what they are living or why they are in the world. To live in this way is to live like an animal. But how glorious it is to lift our thoughts and minds to things above, to live for God and for the eternal future! Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive the glories which God has prepared for 'then that love Him above all else.

Gospel Witnessing Almost Completed,

The Gospel of the Kingdom has been preached in all the world as a witness unto all nations. The end of the present Dispensation is at hand. The shaking process, which is to remove everything not in full harmony with the incoming Messianic Kingdom, 'is progressing. The Bride of Christ will soon be complete beyond the veil. The time of the deliverance of the Church is at hand. The end may come very suddenly. We wish only our Father's time and way. Let us, then, be faithful unto death. Daily we are learning patience; cheerful endurance, submission to the will of the Lord. All this, is shown in the faces of the Lord's dear people. Let us continue thus to let our light shine; and soon, we trust, we shall gain the Pearl of Great Price—in the Kingdom.

I Trust in Thee.

Across the varied sea of time,
A twelve-months' space;
I trace the Father's guiding hand,
The work of Grace.

When trials came, and testings,
Ah! did I then
Turn to the One who never fails,
Comfort to send!

And when the cares of life
Crossed o'er my way,
Did I with hope and trust invoke
My every stay?

The days when doubts and fears
Assailed my breast,
Did I with simple faith look up,
And, looking, Rest?

And when the hosts of Satan
'Gainst me arrayed,
Did I the sword of spirit wield,
E'en while I prayed ?

Ah, yes, full well I know ,
It must be done,
Before my crown is gained,
And victory's won.

So let me with a childlike faith
Keep near my Lord:
E'en though it means a straiten way,
The way to God.

And through the coming days
Of earth's dark night,
Lord ! grant me grace and strength
To live aright.

And when my pilgrimage is o'er,
And Jordan's past,
O Lord, I pray that Thou wilt bring Me home at last.

The Radio Work.

IT is a pleasure at this time again to report respecting the witness by radio over the past six months. Many of our friends have co-operated energetically and have gladly used their various talents in this work, as unto the Lord, and God's blessing has been manifest upon all these efforts in the service of the Gospel.

While the number of enquirers for copies of the broadcasts and other literature has been fewer than previously, yet the responses and continued interest and appreciation of the sessions by so many listeners have been most encouraging. It is with thankfulness to the Lord for the privilege and opportunity of spreading the glad message of His truth that the past six months are thus reviewed.

In July last a change from Station 3BO Bendigo to 3SH Swan Hill was made in Victoria, while in N. S. Wales a change was made from 2CA Canberra to 2HD Newcastle and some good enquiries have been received from the new areas. The change to 6KY Perth was also made by the friends there earlier in the year.

At the close of October the management of 5AD Adelaide and 5PI Port Pirie did not renew our yearly contract, and the appreciation of the Dialogues by listeners to these stations was clearly revealed by their disappointment of not having them continued. However, it may yet be possible to commence again in South Australia at a later date, but up to the present no such arrangements have been possible. In the meantime all interested friends may procure the printed Dialogues along with the "Peoples Paper" each month.

Enquiries are being made in other parts to test the possibility of reaching new localities, and if it be the Lord's will to open up other avenues for spreading the glad news of the Kingdom, it will be a further privilege and joy to extend this work accordingly.

Strength and Peace.

“The Lord will give strength unto his people; the Lord will bless his people with peace.”—Psa. 29:11

AS we look back over the years that have passed since first we learned to “know the joyful sound” of the true Gospel and consecrated ourselves fully to the -Lord, we view with sorrow the imperfections of even our best efforts; and as looking forward we see the difficulties that seem to obstruct our onward course, we shall greatly need to reinforce our waning courage with the special promises of Divine grace to help in every time of need. Among others, we have the blessed assurance that “The Lord will give strength unto His people”; “Call upon me in the day of trouble and I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me.*—Psa. 50:15.

As soldiers under our great Captain, we have enlisted in no uncertain struggle, unless our own faint-heartedness or unfaithfulness should make it so. We are fully supplied with the whole armour of God, which will amply protect us against the fiery darts of the Adversary, if only we accept it and carefully buckle it on. We have with us the constant presence of our Captain, so long as we are closely following His leading. Above the din of battle His inspiring voice may be heard saying, “Fear not, little flock; for it is the Father’s good pleasure to give you the Kingdom”; “Be of good cheer; I have overcome!” (Luke 12:32; John 16:33.) If we are weak, and incline to faint-heartedness, we have only to remember the blessed promise, “The Lord will give strength unto his people”; and by our faithfulness we shall glorify God, who will deliver us from all our foes, both seen and unseen.

Like all others, the Lord’s people need fortitude and patience, else they might soon become discouraged in the conflict with the world, the flesh, and the Adversary. They need strength; they need encouragement. In the text under consideration, the word strength means, in large measure, courage. The Lord will give courage to his people. He encourages us in a variety of ways; He encourages us through each other, as we build one another up in the most holy faith.

Milk For Babes—Strong Meat For Those More Developed.

We, nevertheless, look to the individual, innate strength and to its importance. “Be of good courage, and He will strengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the Lord.” (Psa. 31:24.) We are assured that we shall be strengthened in the “inner man” through the spirit of the Lord. None have this particular kind of strength, that of the “inner man,” except those who have become New Creatures in Christ, to whom “old things have passed away, and all things have become new.” (2 Cor. 5:17). With this particular spirit-begotten class all of the Lord’s dealings are intended to develop character.

“Desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby,” and become strong. (1 Pet. 2:2.) This milk of the Word the Lord gives at first to His children, that the new nature may grow thereby and become able to digest stronger food and thus develop in character-likeness to Our Lord. To all His own He has provided nourishment—milk for babes, strong meat for those more developed. (Heb. 5:12-14.) And any who would be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might (courageous) will avail himself of the Divine provision.

Our faith, however, is the basis of both our strength and our peace. No matter how fiercely the storms of life may assail us, we must never let go of our anchor and allow ourselves to drift; but always remember that “The foundation of God standeth sure”; that “His truth is our shield and buckler”; that “What He has promised He is able also to perform,” notwithstanding our human imperfections and frailties; that, covering these, we have the imputed righteousness of Christ, our Surety and Advocate; that “The Father himself loveth us,” and that “He knoweth our frame and remembereth that -we are dust,” and so has compassion for the sons of His love and is very pitiful and of tender mercy. (2 Tim. 2:19; Psa. 91:4; Rom. 4:21; John 16:27; Psa. 103:14.) Indeed, “What more could He say than to us ;He hath said” to assure our faith and to steady and strengthen our hearts to patient endurance in the midst of the trials and conflicts in the narrow way of sacrifice?

With abounding compassion and tenderness our Lord, on the last night of His earthly life, bestowed upon His beloved disciples His parting blessing, His legacy of peace. It was the richest legacy He had to bequeath, and was of priceless value. It was the promise of that tranquility of soul, that rest and ease of mind which He himself possessed—the peace of God. It was the same peace which the Father has always enjoyed, even in the midst of all the commotion which the permission of evil has brought about; but it was not derived from the same source. In Jehovah, this peace is self-centred, because He realizes in himself omnipotence and Infinite wisdom; while the peace of Christ was centered not in himself, but in God, through faith in His wisdom, power and grace. So also, if we would have the peace of God, the peace of Christ (“my peace”), it must, like His, be centered in God; by faith.

The peace promised is not the short-lived peace of the world, which is sometimes enjoyed for a little season; but “my peace,” the peace of God which Christ himself by faith enjoyed, who, “Though He was rich, yet for our sakes became poor” (2 Cor. 8:9); who lost friend after friend, and in His last hour was forsaken by all of the few that remained—the peace that endured through loss, persecution, scorn and contempt, and even amidst the agonies of the cross. This peace is something which none of the vicissitudes of this life can destroy and which no enemy can wrest from us.

“There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked.” (Isa. 48:22.) “The wicked are like the troubled sea, continually casting up mire and dirt.” Their hearts are not in accord with peace and righteousness, but are filled with selfishness. The wicked are self-seeking and grasping; filled with anger if they cannot always get what they want; with malice if they see some one enjoying what they cannot have. All of these things indicate a lack of peace.

To the extent that any of the Lord’s people have any of these evil propensities they cannot have the “peace of God, which passeth all understanding”—which passeth all description. It is a rest of heart by faith. In this peace lies a satisfaction for all the various qualities of the mind; in proportion as the mind develops the ambition of pleasing the Lord, of communicating to others the knowledge of the truth and the blessed opportunity of salvation, it becomes our ambition to do good, instead of evil. So ambition, being turned into a right line, the peace of God, which none can comprehend save those who possess it, comes to the mind and heart.

It is not an outward peace, however, for the Lord’s people, individually and collectively, have most distressing experiences. The church has always been persecuted, as Jesus forewarned us: “Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you”; “If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.”—1 John 3:13; John 15:19.

“In The World Ye Shall Have Tribulation.”

The peace promised is not such as the world can always recognise and appreciate, for the possessor of it, like the Lord and the apostles and prophets, may have a stormy pathway. They did not have peace outwardly. They were beset, harassed on every hand; they were persecuted and obliged to flee from place to place; some of the saints of old were stoned to death; some were sawn asunder. Yet the peace of God, abounding in their hearts, enabled them to endure all these trials joyfully. Indeed, that it must be so with all the faithful until all the purposes of God in the permission of evil are accomplished, we are distinctly forewarned, but with the assurance that through all the ,storms of ,life this peace shall abide—"In the world ye shall have tribulation," but "in. me ye shall have peace." —John 16:33.

This promise, that God will give peace to His people, seems to apply only to a peace of heart but Lord and the Apostles possessed it to such an extent that they enjoyed themselves much more than did their enemies. While Paul and Silas were in orison they sang praises to God, instead of berating the governments and threatening what would be done to them; instead of butting their heads against the bars and saying, "God does not care for us; we will go about our own business, hereafter." So with us. In proportion as we see matters from the Divine viewpoint and appreciate the precious promises and let them inspire our hearts, we shall rejoice in those promises, and our hearts will be blessed. Even if we have trials and difficulties that we are not able to surmount, if these are working out for us the fruits and graces of the spirit, we may rejoice and give thanks for these evidences of God's love.

"My Peace I Give Unto You."

We see that the peace of God is compatible with great commotion and with sorrow and pain of various kinds; for it is not dependent upon outward circumstances, but upon a proper balancing of the mind and the condition of a perfect heart. Such peace—the peace. of God—was enjoyed by our Lord Jesus in the, midst of all the turmoil and confusion of His' eventful life. - And this brings us to the consideration of our Lord last legacy to his disciples when He was 'about to leave the world, as expressed in His own words: "Peace I leave with your thy' peace give unto you; not as the world giveth (in stinted measure or in perishable quality), give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."—John 1.4:27.

The promise in our text—"The Lord will bless his people with peace"—evidently belongs this this age, When all creation groans and travails in pain. (Rom. 8:4') When the Millennial age shall have been ushered in, there will be prevailing conditions of peace and thus He will give peace to all people. ,

Let us, then, have for our watchword, "LOYALTY" to God and to the principles of righteousness; and let each , of us write upon his heart the gracious promise—"The Lord will give strength unto His people." Let us be faithfully "His people," and let us earnestly desire and faithfully use the strength promised. "Faithful is He that calleth you, who also will do it"; "He is faithful that promised-1 Thes. 5:24; Heb. 10:23.

So then, if we lack the strength or the peace promised, the fault is our, not God's. Either we have not the interests of His service closely enough at heart, or else We do not make use of the strength He provides. "The Lord will give strength unto His people (His trusting, faithful servants, those who are using to His praise the talents consecrated to their Master, however many or few those talents may be); the Lord will bless His people with peace."

Christian Courage.

"Stand but your ground, your ghostly foes will fly;
Satan trembles at a heaven-directed eye.
Choose rather to defend than to assail;
Self-confidence will in the conflict fail.

When you are challenged, you may dangers meet:
True courage is a fixed, not sudden heat,
Is always humble, lives in self-distrust,
And will itself into no danger thrust.

Devote yourself to God, and you will find
God fights the battles of a will resigned.
Love Jesus; love will no base fear endure:
Love Jesus, and of conquest rest secure."

About Christ's First and Second Advent

At Christ's first advent He lived here a fleshly human being for thirty years, before He was recognized as the Son of God.

All Bible students know that our Saviour comes the second time, with His glorious spiritual body. With our human physical eyes we cannot see spirits. We cannot see God nor satan because they are spiritual beings, then why should it seem incredible that Christ, at His second advent, should appear in His glorious spiritual body, and yet be invisible to our physical eyes. Though we were educated to believe that we would see our Saviour at His second coming with our physical eyes, that education was erroneous. Bible students all over the world now agree that the only way we can see Christ before our resurrection change is with our mental eyes-the eyes of our understanding. See Eph. 1 :18.

Correspondence.

Victoria.

Frank and Ernest—I have been listening on Sunday mornings to your Talks, and have, been very much interested, and now I have received a small “Dodger”—Special Radio Announcement—inviting listeners to send for Free Literature. I would be glad of some of it sent to the above address. Yours etc.

Dear Frank and Ernest—Thank you for sending’ me the Dialogues and “Peoples Paper” and booklet, also a later “Paper.” I shall study them very carefully ; I think you are doing a wonderful work. Am enclosing a donation for expenses. Thanking you again ; Yours sincerely.

Dear Frank and Ernest—Would you please forward the leaflets on the subject “The Trinity” which began on Sunday, 7th October. If possible, I would like to have a leaflet sent each week. And oblige, Yours faithfully.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sir—I duly received Frank and Ernest Dialogues you sent me, also several other papers which I have much enjoyed and for which I thank you.

In the little book “Good News” I found at the bottom of page 12 a statement I never knew was taught, and which I certainly did not believe ; still if you can give proofs of teaching from the Scripture I give in ; and it is for matter on that subject I am now asking you to please send me. I believe that the wicked will be destroyed (Mal. 4:1, 3) , after the resurrection and judgment ; there seem to be many texts in the Bible that state this will be so. And besides, if all the people who have lived in this world were to come back from death there would not be standing room., I am greatly interested; I am teaching a Sunday School Class and I must teach them the truth, so please post me anything that will help me. Yours faithfully.

(The reference to “Good News” booklet is at the bottom of page 13 of the edition being sent out with, this month’s “Peoples Paper.” The Scriptures .very definitely state that “All in the graves (death condition) shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and come forth” (John 5:28, 29 (Revised Version) and liberal calculations show that there will not be the slightest crowding of human beings on the earth, when the general resurrection is complete. For example, the state of South Australia alone will provide about 30 square feet for every human being who has ever lived, on a very liberal estimate. When “the desert is blossoming as the rose” we may be sure that abundant provision will be available for all humanity who Will obey the laws of Christ’s Kingdom, during “the times of restitution of all things.” Those who will not obey the Lord at that time will be destroyed from among the people.

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I am a listener-in to ,your’ broadcasts over the air on Sunday afternoons, which I enjoy very much. I am very much interested in your discussions on the Scriptures, which can make us wise unto salvation. The world is wanting something very badly and apparently does not know how to get it. The trouble today is that very many of our leaders and teachers do not understand God’s great plan for the world; they are the blind leading the blind. May God open their eyes that they might See. A copy of your address yesterday would be much appreciated, also Sunday week, if you can manage it and oblige. Yours in the Master’s service.

Abiding in the Doctrine of Christ.

(Convention)

“Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.”—2 John 9.

AS the end of this Gospel Age draws on apace the saints of God are aware that it is a time beset with many and peculiar difficulties. When Jesus was questioned by His disciples on the Mount of Olives respecting events of this Age, He told them that many false teachers would arise and deceive many, and because iniquity would abound the love of many would wax cold. (Matt. 24:11, 12.)

Throughout the age these false teachers have been rising and performing their foretold work—deceiving many. The result has been to cause iniquity to abound, and to becloud the truth; and because of the strong trait of man to follow the popular majority, the love of many for the true, beautiful, holy and right had indeed waxed cold, so cold that we seem to be approaching the crest of the wave of time foretold in the prophecy of Amos 8:11—“A famine in the land, not of bread or water but of hearing the true words of the Lord.”

Probably wickedness in some forms has never been more strongly entrenched in the earth than it is today; but wickedness has always abounded in the earth, therefore, we conclude that the particular ones whom false teachers have deceived and caused to fall away, are not those of the world at all, but those who have claimed higher regimentation—even professing Christians.

Many things make for the distress of our day, but a large share is attributable to professing Christians deceived by the teachings of false teachers. Nor can we lay the entire blame upon the false teachers. Those accepting their teaching and conforming to it without proper investigation have also displeased the Lord. What happened in Jeremiah’s day has happened again—“the prophets prophesy falsely. .. and the people love to have it so.” (Jer. 5:31.)

Jesus said to His followers, “Ye are the salt of the earth.” Has this proved to be so? Yes, as far as true followers are concerned. Wherever the gospel of truth has been promulgated and practised it has had a purifying influence in the world. But once let the deceptions of false teachers creep in and the salt immediately begins to lose its savour—it has no more real influence for good but is fit only to be cast out. Christendom is at this point today.

We read in Jer. 51:7, “Babylon hath been a golden cup in the Lord’s hand, that made all the earth drunken: the nations have drunken of her wine; therefore the nations are mad.” The “Babylon” referred to, represents the false religious systems of the world which came into being gradually by deception, and which had its beginning as early as Paul’s day, for he said in 2 Thes. 2:7, “The mystery of iniquity doth already work.”

That Babylon’s roots reached back to the early Church is discerned in the first statement that she had been a golden cup in the Lord’s hands, but was later filled with the wine of false doctrines, of which all the nations of the earth have partaken—therefore, “the nations are mad.” Also we read in Rev. 18:2, 3—“Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird. For all nations have drunk of the wine of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies.” Tracing the events of our day as fulfilling these prophecies, what else do the Scriptures tell us of them? They tell all earnest followers of Christ to separate themselves from every organization that retains and teaches false doctrines. In 2 Cor. 6:16-18 we read, “What agreement hath the temple of God with idols? For ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thine: and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.” Also, following on in Rev. 18:4 from where we have already quoted, we read “And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities.” Manifestly it is the harvest time referred to, as in Matt. 13:30, and it is no longer the will of God that tares and wheat should grow together.

Then, of course, we have the words of 2 Tim. 3:1-5. We have read them many times; they portray vividly the conditions ruling in the last days of the age, and they dovetail so neatly with what we now behold that there is only one conclusion a Bible student can arrive at—that we are in those days. It is a day in which according to 2 Tim. 4:3, they (those comprising Babylon) will not endure sound doctrine (wholesome words of our Lord Jesus Christ —1 Tim. 6:3) but instead, choose teachers who will please their itching ears with unsound doctrines which do not interfere unduly with works of darkness.

Everywhere in the Scripture where the subject is mentioned, it is impressed upon us, that in the last days of the age error, false doctrine and its adherents will flourish (2 Tim. 3:13), while truth in its purity as taught by Jesus and His inspired apostles will decrease, practically to the point of extinction.

In the light of these facts we can see that the experiences of the last, true members of “The Christ” remaining on earth “in the last days” will be lonely. This constitutes a great temptation. A very pronounced trait of humanity, especially amongst the unregenerate, is a strong desire for company. I have noticed many a time how men need to have their minds occupied, and if there should come any period of quiet when they can sit and meditate, instead they turn the wireless on; the very fact of some noise seems to be comforting to them; it seems to be something happening in these last days.

Those of the spiritual mind do not crave fellowship in that way. More often than not we are very pleased to find some quiet spot to get away on our own. But still, at the same time we do crave fellowship, we long for fellowship with those whose hearts are set upon higher things than earth, someone to converse with on these things. If living in isolation from other brethren, we can at times become very lonely and long for someone with whom to fellowship. But we must be careful with whom we fellowship, for it is possible to dishonour our Lord’s cause in this way.

We hear the bold assertion of some that they are not one-eyed or bigoted, but can worship the true God in any company. Others again think the fittest place to worship God is where the senses are pleased—pleasant surroundings, sweet singing, lovely organ strains etc. These things are excellent; we are enabled to praise the Lord by these means, but these things do not constitute worship of God in themselves. “The Father seeketh those to worship Him who worship Him in spirit and in truth,” and these are they who know doctrine—the one true God and Jesus Christ whom He has sent, and His great plan of the ages for the redemption of men. Once we are versed in the pure doctrines of God’s Word and brought to an understanding of the wrong teachings respecting hell, purgatory, Trinity, immortality of the soul, and world conversion in this age etc., promulgated by false teachers, there can be no real fellowship again with unfruitful works of darkness which false doctrines inspire.

“Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God.” Some earnest students have said that without full knowledge of all the circumstances surrounding, they find difficulty in fully understanding some portions of these short epistles of John. However, by reading carefully the previous verses it seems that John had in mind one particular doctrine which he regarded as a great transgression and a danger to the church of which the elect lady and her children were members. The particular deception was a denial that Jesus Christ had come in the flesh, and is recorded in verse 7,—“For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an antichrist.”

There does not seem to be any reason to doubt that a denial of the truth that Jesus was made flesh for the suffering of death for the specific purpose of ransoming men once for all from the consequences of the Fall, was the thin edge of the wedge that ever widened into all the false doctrines which today plague Christendom. We can easily see how a denial of the ransom sacrifice of Jesus gave rise to such heresies as the institution of the Mass, and how one false doctrine quickly led to another.

So in John’s day we see the great need for his warning against those who were denying this most essential doctrine, that Jesus Christ came in the flesh, as a sin offering, to give His life a ransom for all to be testified in due time. (1 Tim. 2:6.) Right throughout the age and now in the end of the age it is still a most essential doctrine—the very touchstone of all truth.

Whilst the divinely inspired writings of the Apostles were all written at the inception of the Christian Church, we find that their exhortations were not confined to that era, but have shown themselves ever the guide of the Lord's people as the light has shone more and more toward the perfect day. Therefore to read John's words now about abiding in the doctrine of Christ, our thoughts are carried beyond what was in his mind then.

The spirit of antichrist, was in John's day only, beginning and it widened throughout the age until in our day it has almost swallowed up the truth altogether. If Pilate was so confused that he asked, "What is truth? how much more could the question be raised in the doctrinal strife of our so-called Christian world? The great falling away of the Christian faith and the revelation of "the man of sin" that Paul spoke of in 2 Thes. 2 was still future when John wrote the epistle we now have in mind. As we survey things today, the falling away is past history, the "man of sin" has long been revealed and is now in course of destruction. (2 Thes. 2:8.) The harvest of the age is here, the second presence of our Lord is discerned. John warned against deceivers who confessed not that Jesus Christ had come in the flesh to accomplish the work of His first advent. The Church now is faced with the defence of the truth that our Lord has come in His glorious spirit body to accomplish the work of His second advent — gathering the Church unto Himself, wrecking nations, humbling men and binding Satan, all in preparation for the glorious thousand year reign of His Kingdom. Thus, additional features called "present truth" are now embraced with other doctrines, and all combined are surely still the doctrine of Christ that it is necessary to know in this end of the age, in order to know both the Father and the Son.

Do we want to continue in the love of God? Then let us follow John's advice in verse 8—"Look to yourselves that ye lose not those things which ye have gained, but that ye receive a full reward." (Marginal rendering.) Those who have made a study know that the most fruitful source of true knowledge of God and the doctrine of Christ has come through the way the Bible has been opened up to clearer understanding by writings revealing God's plan of the ages and harvest truths in these last days. So then, let us continue to study with the Bible at our elbow to "prove all things" and we will continue to grow until at last we attain "fulness of stature" in spiritual things, by God's grace in Christ.

Hear John in the 4th verse of his second epistle, and also the 3rd and 4th verses of his third epistle, say "I rejoiced greatly that I found of thy children walking in truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father." "For I rejoiced greatly when the brethren came and testified of the truth that is in thee, even as thou walkest in the truth. I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth." We are at one with the apostle here. How our hearts rejoice to perceive spiritual children walking in the truth. Worldly people measure success by earthly prosperity. God's people measure progress by wideness of spiritual growth. No joy can surpass that of a disciple when he sees others attesting their love for the Lord Jesus Christ and enquiring for further truth, receiving it and continuing to walk in it. (See also 1 Thes. 2:13, 19, 20.)

An abler pen than mine has made this comment on spiritual growth and development:—"Development and maturity of Christian life and character are not of instantaneous acquirement. To the contrary, gradual progression through time and experience, and by the spirit of God is the lesson impressed upon consecrated believers throughout all the apostolic writings. 'Thus runs the apostle Peter's admonition, 'As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the Word that ye may grow thereby, if so be that ye have tasted that the Lord is gracious.' (1 Pet. 2:2, 3.) Those of whom the Apostle was speaking may have been men of mature years, yet they were but babes, beginning a new life; indeed, from one standpoint, a new existence—members of a New Creation. And the Apostle counsels them as newborn babes, to earnestly desire the sincere milk of the Word, evidently meaning the simpler truth, peculiarly adopted to those beginning the new experience as disciples of Christ. Those who in simple faith accept the truth in meekness and who as the Apostle says, laying aside all malice and all guile and hypocrisies and envies and all evil speakings, endeavour to walk worthy of this salvation, esteeming it only a reasonable service to surrender themselves to the will of God, are accepted upon the higher plane of spirit begetting and realise that theirs is a spiritual atmosphere, a spiritual realm, inasmuch as such come under the anointing of the holy spirit. Precious indeed are these little ones in the Lord's sight. It was with reference to such that the Lord said to Peter, 'Feed my lambs.' In another place His tender solicitude for these babes of the family is shown, 'It is not the will of my Father in heaven that one of these little ones should perish,' "

Now a few words by yet another writer:—"The infant derives its early nourishment from milk; does not the 'babe in Christ' feed upon the milk of the Word—the first principles. Later as he matures and comes of age, he requires strong meat as does a human individual. And when he has become an adult (in things spiritual) he no longer puts things indiscriminately into his mouth (as does an infant), he discriminates between sound and unsound doctrine. He is of those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil. Heb. 5:12-14."

I was interested, also, to note a marginal rendering of Heb. 6:1,— "Therefore leaving the word of the beginning of Christ let us go on unto completeness, not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works," etc. It is like building a house; the foundation is very important. It is necessary to exercise great care that everything is right or the building will not go up square, but once the foundation is properly laid and the building commenced, there is positively no need to go back over the excavating, measuring and lining up again. From thenceforth ones energies are directed wholly to the other work which beautifies and completes the building as a whole. It is in like manner with the Christian. Once realising our undone condition and repenting of dead works and accepting the provision for our justification and exercising faith toward God, we do not need to be continually going back over the same ground, but we consecrate our lives to God and learn from the master builders—the prophets, apostles, teachers etc.,—He has provided for the perfecting of the saints, for the building up of the body of Christ; till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man (not a babe or a child) but unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ. (Eph. 4:11-13; 1 Cor. 3:9-13.)

Let us seek, then, to abide in the doctrine of Christ, feeding the lambs with the sincere milk of the Word that they might grow thereby, and dispensing “strong meat” to those who are ready for it. And if any come bringing not the true doctrine of Christ according to the written word, as the spirit has given us understanding, then the Scripture says, “Receive him not into your house (do not recognise him in your assembly as a brother in the truth), nor bid him God speed (display friendly feelings towards promulgation of his doctrines). This does not mean that we refuse hospitality to any, for in another place the Word says, “Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for by so doing some have entertained angels unawares.”

There are many things a Christian is counselled to avoid that others do every day without restraint, and while we sojourn here below we must often enter the homes and mix with such people in the daily round. We would have to go out of the world altogether, otherwise. But when we have knowledge that one who is called a Brother is doing the things forbidden to the Christian we must break fellowship—“with such an one, no not to eat.” (1 Cor. 5:9-11.)

Though it may bring loneliness in these last days let us recognise as teachers only those whom we are satisfied “abide in the doctrine of Christ,” knowing the true God and Jesus Christ whom He has sent,—the Father and the Son—for only these can render any real spiritual assistance to either “babes” or more mature ones.

CONVENTION NEWS.

THE brethren in Melbourne held another four-day Annual Convention over the Christmas period. Looking back on the occasion it is with sincere thankfulness to the Lord whose rich blessing made it one of the most profitable seasons ever held by the friends in Melbourne. The predominant theme from the opening to the closing session of the gatherings was that of praise and deep gratitude to God for all His favours bestowed, especially over the year then drawing to a close.

It was a great pleasure to the friends in Melbourne to welcome a nice number of visiting brethren from four of the Australian States, and these dear friends contributed considerably in making the occasion so spiritually helpful. While the attendance was very good throughout, all present were sorry that some more friends intending to come from Adelaide and country parts of Victoria were unable to travel on account of train restrictions and sickness, etc.

Following the address of welcome on the opening day, and praise and prayer on each day of the gatherings, a Bible study proved a most helpful session, the passages of Scripture examined at these meetings being:—Deut. 32:1-4; Luke 12:4-12; Luke 12:32-40; and John 17:1-11.

A number of addresses by the brethren on a variety of subjects were much appreciated by all, the selected topics being:—“Abiding in the Doctrine of Christ” (2 John 9); “Heb. 12:11”; “The New Creature and its Obligations”; “If ye do These Things” (2 Pet. 1:10); “The Peace of Christ’s Kingdom”; “In the Steps of Christ”; “If Christ came to Melbourne” (Luke 18:8); “Separating Yourselves”; and “The Hopes and Difficulties of the New Creation.”

Praise and Testimony meetings and a session on “Hymns we love” provided opportunity for personal expression concerning the Lord’s care and favours bestowed and how precious the truths of God’s Word are esteemed in these last days of the age; these sessions were most refreshing. Numerous messages of greetings and encouragement from Classes and friends in various parts of Australia were gratefully appreciated, and the Convention message to all these brethren and the Lord’s people everywhere, together with the Christian love of the assembly, is found in Luke 12:32-37.

As the Convention was drawing to a close the sentiment of the brethren, in reviewing the blessings of the Lord over the four days, seemed to be beautifully expressed by the Psalmist—“Thou crownest the year with Thy goodness.” A fitting conclusion was the usual Love Feast, and hymns “Blest be the tie,” and “God be with you till we meet again,” with a parting prayer of thanksgiving for all God’s mercies, and desire for His guidance and protection in all the days ahead.

The following report has been received from Perth, W.A., respecting the gatherings held there by the brethren:

Over the Christmas season the Perth friends held their first Convention for very many years, and all privileged to be present felt that it was a period of very special blessing and spiritual uplift. While it is evident that the present order of things will not last much longer, it is the hope of the friends to make this an annual arrangement, God willing. It is hoped that longer notice will enable more of our country friends to be present.

The program consisted of Studies, Addresses, Praise and Testimony and general informal fellowship. Each session was most helpful. The Studies in Phil. 3:7-14, 1 Thess. 4:13-18, and Psalm 19:9-14 were particularly good. Helpful addresses were given by various brethren on the following subjects:—"The Present Truth and Bible Prophecy," "Idolatry," "What Constitutes a Christian," "Creation—God's Delight," "God's Wonderful Plan of Salvation," "Stocktaking," "The Unity of the Brethren," and "The Inheritance of the Saints." On the closing day, there was a good Praise and Testimony Meeting, the thoughts being along the lines of the opening words of Psalm 116—"I love the Lord because—."

It was good to know that the friends in other parts were thinking of us as was shown by the messages received.

President Truman says:

Gird Ourselves for Work Ahead.

Washington, December 25th (A.A.P.)

Broadcasting to the nation after turning on the lights of the White House Christmas tree, President Truman said:

"This is the Christmas a war-weary world prayed for through long and awful years. We meet in the spirit of the first Christmas when the midnight choir sang, 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good will towards men,'

"With our enemies vanquished, we must gird ourselves for the work that lies ahead. Peace has its victories no less hard won than success at arms. We must not fail or falter. We must strive without ceasing, and make real Isaiah's prophecy, 'They shall beat their swords into ploughshares, their spears into pruning hooks, and nation shall not lift up the sword against nation. Neither shall they learn war any more.' "

While appreciating the sentiments of President Truman, how clear it is that man's best efforts to bring in lasting peace cannot succeed, the reason being that selfishness within all nations must first be eradicated. The Lord has promised to do this by permitting mankind to wreck their own boasted civilization.

Dr. Harold Urey, one of the men responsible for the atom bomb, viewing the world with the secular eye of science, offers no plan for peace, but warns that war means the end of everything. "I am a frightened man, all the scientists I know are frightened—frightened for their lives, frightened for your life," says Dr. Urey. So we have fulfilled today, as never before, the words of our Lord—"Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." (Luke 21 :26.)

The Psalmist gives us a clear indication of the course of events in these last days of this age—"Come, behold the works of the Lord, what desolations He hath made in the earth (permitting nations to fully wreck each other). He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; He breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; He burneth the chariot in the fire. Be still, and know that I am God: I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth." (Psa. 46:8-10.)

(2 Pet. 1:1-12.) (Convention Address.)

THESE words of the Apostle imply a promise on conditions. The Apostle Peter has shown us a way to make our calling and election sure, which is most important to us. How has he gained this knowledge? What makes him so sure about the conditions of this promise? Did flesh and blood reveal this to him? No. He had been following Jesus and learned of Him; he was speaking from experience and experience is the best teacher.

How helpful it is to hear these words from St. Peter. He who once denied our Lord, with such confidence tells us—"if ye do these things." To our sorrow we have sometimes learnt the truth of this statement. Does it mean that if we fall or slip we have fallen away from the truth? By no means! (See Psa. 37:23, 24; Prov. 24:16.) But our slips can be the means of leading us away from the truth if we do not at once go to the throne of grace. (See "Daily Manna" January 13th.)

The Apostle Peter tells us on what conditions we may receive the kingdom joint-heirship with Christ. That little word "if" is all important. Are we putting forth the effort this "if" requires? Are we faithfully cultivating all the fruits of the spirit here enumerated. Giving all diligence add to your faith—which is the foundation, or the tree, which must produce the fruits—virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and love.

What follower of Christ would not like to have these fruits in their perfection. They are the standard for which we must strive, and we must develop them all to a degree acceptable to the Lord if we would gain the Kingdom.

To become successful in the development of these fruits we must watch and pray, assemble ourselves together for spiritual profit, and become self-sacrificing.

The Apostle says—"add to your faith." We must first of all do what Jesus says—"Have faith in God." We certainly cannot add all the fruits of the spirit if our faith is not sound. If our faith is real the fruits will become real and acceptable to the Master. We shall know the truth and it will make free indeed from error in doctrine and conduct "if we do these things." (See "Daily Manna" November 20th.)

Has it ever occurred to you how often "the kingdom" is mentioned in the Scriptures; how really full they are of this most important of all things to us, and not only for us but for the whole world. Do you not experience a thrill of joy when you consider our very great high calling? Why, we never could aspire to attain this, but it is nothing less than our Father's favour to us. How humble we should be, how faithful, how careful we should work out our salvation. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation." Which means we have a great responsibility as representatives of His truth.

Let us acknowledge the Lord in all our ways that He may direct our paths; let us pray that He will guide us with His eye; let us watch and pray that we may get the needed assistance to do these things that our Father wishes, that we may become characters worthy of His name. It is, indeed, no easy matter to walk the narrow way; what with our own imperfections and the arts of the devil we may well be dismayed, except that our Father who is mindful of such a small matter as the "hairs of our head" has provided an armour for us that we may "fight the good fight of faith," and we are promised certain victory over all the giants of evil, and thus gain an abundance entrance into the kingdom, in harmony with the further promise—"The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear Him and delivereth them."

Let us also consider the prophet Micah 6:8—"He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God." How reasonable these words are. All the requirements of the Lord are reasonable and for our very best welfare and happiness. If it were not for the necessity of suffering for righteousness sake our pathway would be a very pleasant way indeed, but as it was necessary for our Master to learn by experience with evil and opposition the way the Father wished Him to go, so it is with us, His body members. When we hear of the unspeakable sufferings of some people in the present time of trouble we are amazed at their fortitude and this without hope of a future reward. How careful we should be to neither murmur or repine at what the Lord's providence may permit.

When we first came into the truth how ready and willing we were to suffer for righteousness sake, but when age comes on, when health fails, it is not so easy to be kind and thoughtful, unless through habit of much prayer and waiting on the Lord we "have done these things."

Ye are more Value than Many Sparrows.

-Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God? But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not therefore : ye are of more value than many sparrows.” (Luke 12:6, 7.)

THESE words of the Master’s, which, as verse one of the chapter shows “He began to say unto His disciples first of all,” have no doubt been of very great comfort and encouragement to His true followers who, without such assurance of the care of their heavenly Father, may at times have thought they were wholly forgotten amidst severe trials and persecutions throughout the centuries of the Gospel Age.

Right through this 12th chapter of Luke’s Gospel the same lesson of the assurance of God’s utmost care over the followers of Christ is brought out for the benefit of all who have been, and are yet walking in the “narrow way” of sacrifice in the steps of their Master. Verses 24, 27 and 28 are especially noteworthy—”Consider the ravens: for they neither sow nor reap. . . and God feedeth them; how much more are ye better than the fowls?” “Consider the lilies, how they grow; . . . Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. If then God so clothe the grass. . . how much more will He clothe you, O ye of little faith.”

But is this the only meaning our Lord intended? The question may arise as to why the Lord mentioned the sale of the sparrows—”Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings?”—or as Matt. 10:29 reads—”Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing?” Then again, what is the connection between the sale of these birds and “one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father”? Why should God be so specially interested in remembering these birds as they “fall on the ground” after their sale at small cost?

From the Old Testament we find that God accepted typical sacrifices of animals and birds as sin-offerings, or even a portion of fine flour when a person was very poor, and these offerings to the Lord (through the priest appointed) made satisfaction for sins in a typical way, prior to Christ’s sacrifice on Calvary. This is explained in Lev. 5:7-10—”And if he be not able to bring a lamb, then he shall bring for his trespass, which he hath committed, two turtledoves, or two young pigeons, unto the Lord; one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering. And he shall bring them unto the priest, who shall offer that which is for the sin offering first,” etc. It is of interest to find that the Hebrew word for sparrow is used for all sorts of clean birds, or such whose use was not forbidden by the law; and in most of the passages where sparrow is read, we may understand a bird of any kind.

It would seem that our Lord in speaking to the disciples about “two sparrows sold for a farthing” or “five sparrows sold for two farthings” was reminding them of the typical sacrifices for sin, and in a way fitting to their own cases, which no doubt they would understand,—they being men of small means who could not likely offer a lamb for sacrifice. Then He would lead their thoughts from the typical sacrifices which God was still remembering (until Christ’s sacrifice was complete) to the much more important sacrifices, even the privilege of offering themselves as sacrifices through the merit of His precious blood shortly to be shed at Calvary.

It is truly a great privilege for all the consecrated followers of Christ to be counted in with His sacrifice in the offerings for sin, the “better sacrifices” which will indeed take away the sins of the world, all the value or merit being in Christ himself.—”Fear not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows.” (See Col. 1:24.)

One has stated respecting this subject:—”The more I consider Luke 12:6, 7, the more sure I feel that our Lord was indeed referring to the typical sacrifices. Naturally He would often behold these birds being bought and used for the purposes of sacrifice. We know the typical sacrifices were intended to impress that ‘without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins.’ Therefore, while our Lord would note sympathetically the fall of the birds, He would rejoice in the Father’s good pleasure being accomplished, in that, then the requirements for atonement were being complied with. How much more, indeed, would God take note of the ‘better sacrifices’ which in His providence are to mean so much in the way of blessing to all people.”

Dear Brother—I find myself with a few minutes tonight and think I can't do better than write you a few lines to say how very blessed I found those four Convention days.

It was easily the most happy and refreshing Convention I have ever attended and I trust the dear Brethren in Melbourne have realised the Lord's blessing upon their effort to make possible such a happy reunion of Christians from near and far.

I wrote at length this morning to Sisters and hope that some of the inspiration I received has been passed on to them.

Brother too I must not forget, but feel unable to write at length again today. I visited Brother this afternoon and enjoyed some time with him. Dear old brother was eager to know about the Convention, and many thoughts I could call to mind. We discussed "the sparrows sold for a farthing" in the light of Lev. 5:7-9, and we both were of opinion that it was extremely likely that that was what our Lord had in mind. Brother seemed pleased to have that thought and it opened up a profitable further discourse on the sin offerings and then to baptism. I found the time spent with him very profitable and saw some points even clearer than ever before. . .

I expect this week will about see the last of the Convention friends who were able to linger awhile longer making homewards. Warm Christian love. Your Brother in Christ.

England Blitz.

My Dear Brother—Greetings of love in the Lord. The arrival of the "Peoples Paper" for October reminded me that it is a long time since I heard from you, and about time that I wrote thanking you for so kindly sending me this excellent little "Paper" so regularly all through the long and terrible war which we have all passed through, you dear ones as well as us. Well, we have been mercifully preserved and our loved ones and we are grateful to our dear Father. The nearest one to us who was killed was my wife's cousin, and we miss her very much. . . We were mercifully blessed all through the blitzes and our home was only very slightly damaged ; for this we thank God.

Some of the brethren suffered the loss of homes and others severe damage but none as far as we know were killed ; the meetings suffered most owing to the blackout and danger of assembling ourselves together, but all are free now and rejoicing in the Lord and in this freedom, though we all rejoice in a greater freedom, that of the sons of God, for he whom the Son makes free is free indeed, so there is much to rejoice about and we do.

I am still confined to bed with unseen chains, but the spirit is free--Though sundered far, By faith we meet, Around our Father's mercy-seat." 'Tis there He loves to meet us and it's there we love to meet Him and the brethren in spirit everywhere ; some day the meetings will be real and we shall all rejoice together in the presence of the Lord whom we adore.

With grateful thanks and a hope for your continued kind favour ; every good wish in the Lord to you all, I am by His grace your Brother in Christ.

Berean Bible Institute, Dearly beloved brethren in Christ—Greetings and salutations. Grace be to you and peace from God our Father and from the Lord Jesus Christ (Eph. 1:2.)

I do want to write and thank you for the literature you have sent me, which I shall distribute at opportunities presented. There doesn't seem to be much interest shown, especially with the war over—the only thing is in their minds, "when do we go home." Have had occasion to speak to Indian natives and they are very interested in such talk : praise be unto the heavenly Father. I pray I may fulfil all that be a pleasure in the Lord's sight—"sweet savour unto Him"—that I may grow more humble, meek, kind and loving to shine forth a reflection unto our Master. (Rev. 4:11.)

I have been richly blessed in reading the various literature you sent me, including August and November "Peoples Paper." My heart doth rejoice from the news I received from America of the stand of Polish brethren during the war. Have read of one brother being shot account of not acknowledging Hitler's regime—he bath stood firm unto the end. I have read his farewell letter to his wife and also to brethren throughout the world. I know news of this would spur you on. He sent his love to all ; so I'm conveying it to you.

Truly the brethren are very dear to me and the Lord provides for all ; I have specially realised this being away from all them, but yet in oneness of spirit. Thanks be unto God for all. Asking the Lord's blessings upon thee and the good work being put forth in His service. Christian love unto all ; thy Bro. in His service.

P.S.—Am sending £ 1 via Money Order ; this for continued work.

Northern Territory.

Dear Brother—I was very pleased to receive your letter a few days ago. I am writing to tell you that I am to proceed to Darwin (D.V.) by air. . . I have been chosen for the good position of Estimating Foreman, and should be relieved of much responsibility and many worries. . . and my desire is to keep fit and well that I may “glorify God in my body”: and that my sacrifice may be a worthy one.

I have not heard from Brother since before Christmas.

He also was an applicant for a good position, and it seems probable that he has been chosen. . . He has a wonderful, Christlike disposition, always calm and pleasant under every kind of circumstance.

Yes, the case concerning Mr. is a very interesting one, and it will indeed be very nice if we are able to meet in Darwin, when, by God's grace, I will endeavour to assist him to a higher level than he can hope to attain in the nominal systems ; and also to relieve his mind concerning the welfare of the Chinese millions, including those that “sleep.”

Our little Class is still progressing happily; had I been remaining here I'm confident I could have secured the attendance of quite a few more young people. Only yesterday a lady told me that her daughters would be very happy to attend, as would also their girl friends. I do not, of course, like to miss an opportunity such as this to render spiritual help to these splendid young creatures, and I am prayerfully considering the possibility of endeavouring to assist them through the post, although I know this would be no easy task for me. However, I am not looking for, or desiring easy tasks, as one cannot become an overcomer that way. I will earnestly endeavour to fulfil the Lord's will in this, as in all matters.

The news that the Lectures in Melbourne created good interest was very pleasing and especially the success of the Convention, and it will be good to read the news of this and also the addresses from time to time in the “P. Paper.” I am pleased to learn that Brother--was able to attend, but regret that other friends were unable to procure seats in the train.

One of my little friends in Sydney closed a recent letter in these words : “Last night I had a lovely dream. I dreamt that the family and I arrived back in Darwin and you were there to meet us : we started our Sunday School and had a picnic. It was the loveliest dream I've had, and I hope it comes true, don't you ? It will be lovely.”

I have recently made another contact here in the person in charge of a Mission station nearly 30 miles out of town. It is apparently a government controlled station and Mr. and Mrs. are at present undenominational; in fact, I think that in spirit they are anti-denominational, although they have apparently been raised under these systems, and have not yet the light of Present Truth. They seem very sincere people and during my few minutes conversation with Mr. he was very interested and gladly accepted a copy each of “Hope Beyond the Grave,” “God and Reason,” and “Hell, Death, Spiritism.” I also loaned him a copy of “Foregleams.” We are hoping to meet again next Tuesday ; I hope you will be hearing from him later.

I may succeed in getting a few of the young folks to assist me in the writing up of postal lessons for the children. This would be grand exercise for the young people if they would do it, and in writing up these lessons they would be providing themselves with a grand opportunity to learn well, as well as helping to crowd worldly pleasures and attraction out of their lives.

Must close now, dear Brother, for this time. Yours in Christian fellowship.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Christian Friends—I am enclosing .L 1 for renewal of subscription of “Peoples Paper” which is I think due and would you send me some broadcasting cards and some Dialogues as I have given ‘all you sent away to friends who are interested. The balance you can use for the expense of broadcasting.

There is no mistake we are living in a wonderful time, when we will soon see God’s Kingdom set up in the earth and then there will be peace on earth and good will to men—there will be no more war. Frank and Ernest, we both find your Talks very interesting ; we listen every Sunday morning. I think it is a wonderful way of spreading the truth to the people and we both wish your Talks every success. Yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Friends—Enclosed please find 4/-; 3/- for another year’s subscription to “P. Paper” and 1/- towards funds. I enjoy your little paper; it is packed with good news and I look forward to its arrival as it greatly helps me in my Bible Study. I am at present unable to help financially as I would like. but through bad season and so much illness this year our income is very small, so hope you will understand. Wishing you God’s blessing on you good work. Your very sincere friend.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Many thanks for sending me on your monthly “Paper” and other interesting reading matter enclosed. I enjoyed reading “Good News” and will pass it on to others. Please find enclosed postal note for 3/-;

I think that will be to the end of July. I feel I would like to continue with it as it’s very helpful. Accept the best of greetings and for a bright and better new year. Yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Would you please send me about six of the leaflets of your Dialogue put over the air last Sunday, as I would like distant friends of mine to read them. I hope your good work will continue till the Kingdom is here. To me the Jewish question is a problem. Won’t the New Kingdom be all nations, a New Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven to all His faithful?

Trusting you are well and thanking you Sirs for the “Peoples Paper.” I am enclosing a few shillings for general expenses. Yours gratefully.

(The position of the Jews is explained by St. Paul in Rom. 1 I:25-29. Following the full number from the Gentiles making up the Bride of Christ (verse 25) , Israel shall be saved from ignorance and brought to the light of Christ’s Kingdom, after being delivered from a national calamity in “Jacob’s trouble.” Then, James tells us in Acts 15:16-18, that following the “building again of the tabernacle of David” the way will be open for “the residue of men to seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom His name is called.” This means that the blessings of Christ’s Kingdom will reach all nations through Israel established in the Holy Land. See also Isa. 2:2-4.—B.B. Institute.)

South Australia.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Being unable to hear your Talks over the air, the services being discontinued, I am at a loss on Sunday mornings, as I have received a lot of help from your Talks both from a spiritual and an educational standpoint, so I will be obliged to you if when you forward the “Peoples Paper” you will please enclose the weekly Talks with the same. I remain ; Yours in the good work.

(The weekly Dialogues are gladly supplied to all friends who make personal application for same and promise to use them to good advantage. These copies are supplied free from the General Funds.—B.B. Institute.)

N. S. Wales.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Brothers—It is a long time since I have written to you, but many thanks for the “P.P.” and literature that you send along every month ; it is all so helpful.

Above all I am so thankful that God our Father is making it possible for you to continue putting out the message of truth, so necessary for all people. You reach so many over the air that would not get it any other way.

I am enclosing the money for the renewal of my subscription to the “Peoples Paper.” It falls due about this time I think, and the few shillings over I would like to be put to the Radio Fund. Trusting that you have all had a very beneficial and pleasant time during your Xmas Convention. With kindest regards to yourselves.

Volume XXIX. No. 3 MELBOURNE, 1st MARCH, 1946 Price—Threepence

Refrain Thine Voice from Weeping and Thine Eyes From Tears.

THE Lord through the prophet Jeremiah sends a message of consolation for the heart of every bereaved parent trusting in Him. We read, "A voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation and bitter weeping; Rahel weeping for her children, refusing to be comforted for her children, because they were not. Thus saith the Lord: Refrain thy voice from weeping and thine eyes from tears, for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord; and they shall come again from the land of the enemy."—Jeremiah 31:15-17.

Five items in our text are worthy of 'attention:

First. Sorrow for the dead, which is universal, as the Apostle declares, "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together."

Second. The nature of the comfort described—the hope of a resurrection, the hope of the recovery of the dead— "They shall come again," they shall be restored to life.

Third. That in death our dear ones are in "the land of the enemy," in harmony with the Apostles declaration, "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death."—1 Cor. 15:26.

Fourth. That the labors of the parents in endeavoring to properly rear their children are not lost, "Thy work shall be rewarded."

Fifth. Last but not least in importance in this text is the declaration that this is the Word of the Lord, which cannot be broken—the Word which is sure of fulfilment, however different it may be from the word of man on this subject.

Tears Not Weakness—'Jesus Wept.'

Sorrow for the dead is not a sign of weakness, but rather the reverse—a sign of love and sympathy, of something more than selfishness. If any demonstration of this thought were necessary it is furnished us in the statement of the shortest verse in the Bible—"Jesus wept." Our Lord's tears were shed on a funeral occasion, too; Lazarus, his friend, the brother of Martha and Mary, was dead. Our Lord entered fully into the spirit of the occasion, with a deeper appreciation of the awful meaning of the word death than could possibly be entertained by those about Him. He appreciated more than any of the fallen, dying race the great blessing and privilege of living, and what a terrible affliction was death—destruction, annihilation.

On the other hand, however, He understood more clearly than any of His hearers the gracious plan of God for the rescue of the race from annihilation. He realized that for this purpose He had come into the world, that He might give His life as the ransom price for Father Adam, and thus incidentally for every member of the Adamic race involved in death through the first transgression in Eden. The Master realized from the standpoint of faith in the Father's plan, and His confident intention to carry out His own part in that plan and to lay down His life as our redemption price, that thus resurrection blessings would come to every member of the race.

Not Dead Eternally, But Sleeping.

Let us note carefully the nature of the consolation which our Lord tendered to the sorrowing ones about Him on this occasion. Let us be assured that “He who spake as never man spake” gave the soundest and best comfort. The consolation which He gave was that Lazarus is not dead for all time. He neither spake of him nor thought of him as being dead in the sense of annihilation, because He had full confidence in the divine plan of redemption and in the resurrection blessings resulting. Hence the interim of death He spoke of as sleep, quiet, restful, waiting sleep.

What wonderful figure is this, so frequently used throughout the Scriptures by all those who trusted in the divine plan of a resurrection morning. In the old Testament Scriptures we read frequently of sleep. Abraham slept with his fathers, so did Isaac, so did Jacob, so did all the Prophets, so did all Israel.

In the New Testament it is the same. Not only did our Lord speak of Lazarus sleeping, but the Apostles frequently used this same figure of sleep to represent their hope in a resurrection—that the dear ones who went down into death were not annihilated, but, as our text declares, “Will come again from the land of the enemy” — will awaken in the resurrection morning.

Thus too, of Stephen, the first Christian martyr, it is written that though stoned to death, he “fell asleep,” sweetly, restfully, trusting in Jesus and the great power which He ultimately would exercise to call forth from the power of death all redeemed by the precious blood. This, too, we remember, was the comfort the Apostle set before the early church, saying, “Comfort one another with these words”—“They that sleep in Jesus shall God bring from the dead by Him.”—(1 Thes. 4:14-18.) Referring to the matter on one occasion the Apostle remarked, “We shall not all sleep, but we must all be changed.” He referred to those who would be living at the second coming of Christ, whose resurrection “change” will not be preceded by a period of unconsciousness in death.

Let us go back to Jesus and the sorrowing sisters at Bethany, and hearken to the words of comfort extended to the bereaved on that occasion. We cannot improve upon the great Teacher and the lessons which He presented. Let us hearken to His conversation with Martha. He says: “Thy brother shall live again.” He does not say thy brother is living now. He did not say, as some erroneously teach today, thy brother is more alive in death than he was before he died. No, No! The Lord would not thus mock the common sense and reason of His hearer, nor could He thus violate the truth and declare the dead not dead.

Hearken! The Lord admits that a calamity has befallen the household. He says not a word about His friend Lazarus having gone to heaven—not an intimation of the sort. On the contrary, He has tears of, sympathy, and holds out as the strongest and only truthful solution of the sorrow, the hope of a resurrection—“Thy brother shall live again.” “I am the resurrection and the life!” The hope of all the dead centres in Me. My death will effect the cancellation of the original Adamic condemnation, and I shall have the right then in harmony with the Father’s plan to call forth all the dead from the great prison house of death, from the tomb. “Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming in the which all who are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and shall come forth.”—John 5:28.

The Resurrection Morning.

At the close of His conversation with Martha, explaining that her hope must centre in a resurrection of the dead and that He was the centre of that resurrection hope, our Lord asked for the tomb, intent upon giving an illustration of the power which by and by in the resurrection morning will be exercised toward the whole world of mankind. Standing at the door of the tomb our Lord cried in a loud voice, “Lazarus, come forth” and the dead came forth—he had been dead, he was quickened by our Lord’s power and authority.

This, like other miracles performed by our dear Redeemer at His first advent, we are particularly told, was a fore-manifestation of His coming glory and power, an advance exhibit of what He will do at His second advent, only that the work at the second advent will be universal, higher, deeper, broader every way, “All the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped;” all that are in their graves shall come forth, not merely to relapse again into blindness and death, but a permanent recovery—not only recovery from the loss of natural sight and hearing, but the eyes and ears of their understanding will be opened also; not merely aroused from a sleep of death to a few years more under present conditions, but aroused to the intent that by obedience of the divine arrangement of the Millennial Age all the awakened ones may attain to all the glorious perfections, mental, moral and physical, lost by Adam’s disobedience.

“Times Of Refreshing Shall Come.”

Glorious hope of a glorious time. What wonder that the Apostle speaks of it as “times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord when He shall send Jesus Christ.” What wonder that He speaks of those years of the Millennial Age as “times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy Prophets since the world began.”—Acts 3:19-21.

Lazarus died again, Jairus’ daughter died again, the son of the widow of Nain died again. Their awakening from the tomb was merely a temporary matter, merely an illustration of the Lord’s power, as it is written. “These things did Jesus and manifested forth His glory.” These were merely foregleams of the coming power and glory and blessed work of the gracious Prophet, Priest and King whom God has appointed not only to redeem the world, but in due time to grant to all the opportunities secured by that redemption sacrifice.

We cannot go into more details, but we here endeavour to show amongst other things that the great blessing which will ultimately be for the world of mankind, as well as for the church, centres in the coming of our Lord and Master, our Redeemer and King, and that the great blessings centering in Him are not merely temporary, but designed of God to be everlasting and eternal to those who accept divine favors in the right spirit, reverently, thankfully, obediently.

Death “The Land Of The Enemy.”

Why should death be called “The land of the enemy?” Why should it be written, “The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death?” All because, disguise the facts as we may, death is an enemy. The suggestion that it is a friend comes not from the Word of God, but from heathen philosophies. The suggestion that it is unreal comes not from the Scriptures, but from heathendom. The suggestion that the dead are more alive than they were before they died is totally out of harmony with the Scriptural declaration. “The dead know not anything—their sons come to honor and they know it not, and to dishonor and they perceive it not of them,” because “there is neither wisdom nor knowledge nor device in the grave whither thou goest.” (Job 14:21; Eccl. 9:10.) The suggestion that we deceive ourselves and imagine without reason that the moment of death is the moment of greater life is of the adversary, who contradicted the Lord’s statement in Eden to our first parents, and when the Lord had declared “Ye shall surely die” for your sin, declared in contradiction, “Ye shall not surely die.”—Gen. 3:2-4.

The adversary has kept up this false teaching for 6,000 years, and at last not only heathendom is deceived by his misrepresentation of facts, but very, very many of Christendom likewise trust to the word of Satan, “Ye shall not surely die,” and believe that the dead are not dead, and reject the testimony of God’s Word that “the wages of sin is death,” that “the soul that sinneth, it shall die,” that “death has passed upon all men because all are sinners,” and that the hope of the Church as well as the hope for the world lies in the fact that Christ died for our sins and redeemed us from the death sentence, and in the Father’s due time is to effect a resurrection of the dead.

The Key Of Death’s Prison.

Let us comfort our hearts with the true comfort, the substantial comfort of the Word of God—there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust. All that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and shall come forth. The thousands of millions who have gone down into the great prison-house of death shall be released, because the Great Redeemer has the “key,” the power, the authority, to bid the prisoners come forth, even as the Scriptures declare.

What a glorious resurrection morning that will be! What a glorious reunion! We understand the scriptural teaching to be that the awakening processes will continue throughout a considerable portion of the Millennial Age, the thousand-year day of resurrection and restitution. First will come the resurrection of the Church, the “Bride,” the “Lamb’s Wife,” the “Body of Christ.” These, as the Scriptures declare, will constitute the first resurrection—not only first in order of time, but first in the sense of chief. In that company will be none except the saints, as it is written, “Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years.” (Rev. 20:6.) Nevertheless that will be but a little flock, as the Scriptures declare, including “not many wise, not many great, not many learned, but chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith, heirs of the Kingdom.”—1 Cor. 1:26, 27; Jas. 2:5.

Not long after the First Resurrection, the glorification of the Church, will come the resurrection of the ancient worthies—the overcomers of olden times prior to the Gospel Age. The assurance is that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the holy prophets—yes, all who were approved to God by their faith and their efforts to obedience — will come forth from the tomb to human conditions, glorious, grand, earthly illustrations of the heavenly Creator, to constitute the earthly representatives of the Kingdom, the instructors of mankind.

The instruction of the world will forthwith proceed. We are assured that “the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep”—to such an extent that “They shall teach no more every man his neighbor and every man his brother, saying, know the Lord: for they shall all know Me, from the least of ‘them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord.” We cannot stop to describe that glorious time and the grand opportunities it will give to every creature to know the Lord, to obey Him, to attain to resurrection in its full significance—a raising up to mental, moral and physical perfection.

The Last First, The First Last.

After the Kingdom of God shall have been fully established in the earth, and Satan shall have been bound, after the darkness shall have rolled away and the true light shall have lightened every creature, the time will come for the awakening of all the families of the earth—not all at once, but gradually, “they shall come again from the land of the enemy.” The Scriptures do not go into details on this subject, they leave much to faith; but give us a firm foundation for that faith, nevertheless, in the positive promise of the Lord’s Word.

To our understanding those who have fallen asleep last, will be among the first to be called back from the land of the enemy, to be awakened, and thus the work of awakening the sleeping ones will progress backward, as we might express it; the living ones will prepare for their brothers and sisters and parents, and they in turn for their brothers and sisters and parents, and so on all the way back, until finally father Adam and Mother Eve shall come forth to see the world filled with their progeny, in accord with the Lord’s original commission that they multiply and fill the earth.

They will behold with astonishment the showers of blessing that have come upon the race from the Heavenly Father and through the Heavenly Saviour; they will see what havoc was wrought by their disobedience, but that God in His wisdom and power was both able and willing to overrule the matter and to bring order out of confusion and resurrection out of death. They and all will realize something of the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of the Love of God. The grand plan of salvation shall loom up before them; they will see how Abel, their son, who suffered for righteousness, was a type and picture of the great Son of God who suffered for righteousness and for our deliverance, and they will see how His blood speaks peace for all for whom it is shed, speaks forgiveness and renewed harmony with God.

The Tragedy Of Sin And Death.

They will learn, too, of the terrible degradation which came upon their race subsequently to their death; they will read with appalled hearts and bated breath of the terrible famines and pestilences which came upon the race as a part of the original sentence or death curse; they will learn about the mental aberrations which afflicted the world, so that men thought they were doing God service in persecuting one another because of religious differences of opinion, and how others, more or less consumed with selfishness, land hunger, etc., warred and fought and devised engines of destruction against each other, and killed one another by the thousands in battle. They will wonder at the patience of God in so long permitting the evil.

Then truly they will see what God has wrought: First, His justice, which provided the great redemption price and would not otherwise clear the guilty. Second, His love, manifested in the same connection in the giving of His Son. Third, they will come to understand how that during this Gospel Age God has been selecting His Church to be the Bride of Christ and joint-heir with Him in the Kingdom; Fourth, they will perceive that when this election was complete and the members of the glorified company had all been tried and polished and tested and glorified, then the blessing of the world through the glorified Christ, Head and Body, came upon all mankind in the restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began.—Acts 3:20, 21.

O, how they and all of their posterity would naturally be prompted to say, glory, honor, dominion, majesty, power and might be unto Him who sitteth on the throne, and to the Lamb, forever.

O, how glad they will be to see the glorious outcome which the power of God will thus have wrought! How glad they will be that the divine plan is that ultimately all imperfection shall be eradicated and that all of the race that will may live eternally under divine favor and blessing, while those otherwise minded will be destroyed from among the people in the Second Death. They will surely cry, Great and marvellous are Thy works, Lord God almighty! Who shall not come and worship before Thee; Thy righteous acts are made manifest?—Rev. 15:3.

“Thy Work Shall Be Rewarded.”

Finally, consider the Lord’s word to us all as a race, and particularly His word to parents, “Thy work shall be rewarded.” What a blessing and comfort, what a consolation and encouragement are in these words to those parents who, seeking to train up their children in the way they should go, are sadly wounded and discouraged when the arrow of death smites down upon the dear ones they had so loved and cherished. They are disposed at first to say, Ah, my love, my counsel, my motherly care, my fatherly provision, were wasted. But not so, saith the Lord; thy works shall be rewarded.

How Rewarded?

You shall see the fruit of your labor in the future; we shall know as we are known, by and by. Our dear ones will be with us, and to whatever extent time and effort will have been expended upon them to mould and fashion them along the lines of righteousness and truth, uprightness and godliness, these surely have not been spent in vain. The child shall come forth that much more advanced in its mental and moral development; to that much more easy attainment of the grand heights which the Lord will then open up before it.

On the other hand, the parent who has been careless of his children, neglectful of his privileges and obligations as a parent, will undoubtedly have his negligence rewarded in the future as he shall see what he might have done for his children but did not.

And more than this. By a divine law of reaction, every parent who is faithful in the discharge of his parental duties shall have his work rewarded in himself, and likewise every parent neglectful of his duties shall have his work rewarded in himself. For who does not realize that there is no greater privilege or opportunity for self-development than comes to the parent in his endeavor to train up his children in the way they should go, in the reverence and admonition of the Lord.

Character Building Is Included.

Undoubtedly it is true, too, that every effort to do good unto others, especially to your own children has its compensating blessings upon your own hearts. May this blessing deepen as the years go on.

In conclusion we say to you, not only for today, but for the future days, “Comfort one another with these words” of our Lord to the effect that your little ones shall come again from the land of the enemy, and that their return shall even be much more blessed, under much more favorable conditions than at present. Then, the great King reigning, all evil will be in subjection, all evil doers will be under restraint, all the influences of righteousness will be let loose, and the whole earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the great deep. Blessed prospects are these before us, and to Him who loved us and bought us, and to the Heavenly Father who designed the great plan, we give everlasting thanks and praises, and show this by our daily lives!

Atom Workers “League of Frightened Men.”

Melbourne “Herald” Special Service.

WASHINGTON, Friday, 15th February—The “League of Frightened Men”—all of whom worked on the atomic bomb—has joined with 60 other organisations to rouse the public to the dangers of atomic energy.

They will form a national committee of atomic information.

Members of the League say that security regulations prevent their disclosing all the horrors facing mankind, but they describe atomic bombs as “the cheapest and most destructive weapon -of warfare ever invented.

“Even a small nation may soon possess the means of obliterating a large one at will.”

They consider that there is no real defence against the bomb and never likely to be.

“Already it is impossible to smuggle an atomic bomb into a large city and detonate it at any time, even decades later by means of a radio signal from another country,” says a League statement.

It deplores the fact that atom bomb factories are still producing bombs, 24 hours a day.

A Nobel prizeman, Dr. Urey, one of America’s leading atomic scientists, is chairman of the new organisation, whose headquarters are established in Washington.

The above news report gives some idea of the feelings of those people who are engaged in the manufacture of the most destructive weapon ever produced on the earth. It will certainly come as a surprise to most people to know that while the global war has been brought to a close and peace has been proclaimed throughout the world the production of atomic bombs goes on 24 hours a day in U.S.A.

The members of the abovementioned League apparently have very good reason for their fears, from the human standpoint. It was our Lord who declared respecting the great tribulation which brings this “present evil world” to a close, that “except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved.” (Matt. 24:21, 22.) With the present terrible weapon, which it has been reported has been developed to one thousand times the power of the bombs dropped on Japan last year, we can now, as never before, understand these words of Christ’s. Whereas millions of mankind were killed over years in the war just concluded, in atomic bomb warfare millions of humanity could be killed every day. The dread prospect surely fills all thinking people with awe. As one has said:—”There is no human force able to control present-day influences. It seems almost as easy to resist the ebb and flow of the mighty ocean; mankind, like the mighty torrent of Niagara, sweeps on to the great fall, the precipice.”

How vivid are the descriptions given in the Scriptures concerning the passing of the present “heavens and earth”

—the ecclesiastical, social, financial and political elements that make up this “present evil world.” As the prophet Joel declares “all faces shall gather blackness.” And Isaiah states concerning the transition period—”The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly. The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage; and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall, and not rise again.” (Isa. 24:19, 20.)

Apart from the Lord’s plan of salvation how dark, indeed, would be the outlook for the future. Speaking for the David class, the sincere followers of the Lord, the Psalmist declares with assurance—”God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will not we fear, though the earth (social order) be removed, and though the mountains (kingdoms) be carried into the midst of the sea (lawless masses of mankind); Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains (kingdoms) shake with the swelling thereof.” (Psalm 46:1-3.)

The reason that God’s people can view the tumults of earth with restful confidence in the Lord is because they know of the glorious outcome for all humanity, as well as the fact that, “Here have they no continuing city, but seek one to come,” the heavenly inheritance with Christ. When our Lord predicted present day happenings, due for fulfilment just prior to the setting up of His Kingdom—”Upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves (lawless humanity) roaring; men’s hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth,”—He added some special words of comfort to His own true disciples—”And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh.” (Luke 21:25, 26, 28.)

The New Creature and its Obligations.

(Convention Address.) (Romans 12.)

IN this twelfth chapter of Romans the Apostle Paul deals largely with the requirements of the New Creation, impressing on believers the holy obligations which their new understanding and love in Christ Jesus impose upon them. To this extent, this chapter should be regarded as one of the choice chapters of the Bible, and should arouse the honest, sincere devotion of every true follower of Jesus Christ.

It begins, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." All the gracious actions and principles of believers reveal themselves in the outward life, so that every act promoted by the love of Christ, wholly yielded to God by those who are alive from the dead, is itself a sacrifice to God. The reasonable service would be, the presentation of our bodies a living holy sacrifice. The old Levitical sacrifices were dead sacrifices, while all the sacrifices of believers are now living sacrifices. They are all in self-consecration to the service of God, and are holy and acceptable to God.

"And be not conformed to this world," which means we are to avoid and dissociate ourselves from those who are out of sympathy with spiritual things, Present Truth, etc. The children of the world mind the things of the world that passeth away, and the lusts thereof. So believers are charged not to be conformed to these. If we do, we lose the keynote of our spiritual life and it lays us open to temptation, to slide into its ways. But "be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds." This inward transformation makes our outward actions entirely new, even though otherwise we differ nothing from those of the world. We are wholly new, and will prove what is that well-pleasing, perfect will of God by our experiences under a transformed mind.

Next come our gifts, and how they should be appreciated and exercised! "Not to think of self more highly than he ought to think, but to think soberly." He who is highminded displays undue self-elevation, the very opposite to a sober mind. "As we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office, so also are we, one body in Christ and members one of another."

Now we have gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us. "To some the gift of prophecy," but this gift belongs to past ages, not being necessary since Apostolic times. The gift of ministry is any kind of Christian service, from the dispensing of the Word of Life to any work in the temporal affairs of the Church and the Household of Faith. "He that teacheth," by teaching the pure gospel of the doctrine of Jesus Christ. "He that exhorteth, on exhortation." No true minister of the Truth can dispense with exhortation, such as "I beseech you therefore brethren" that ye remember your consecrated vow to God, and particularly so if we believe there is evidence of a conforming to the world by some. "He that giveth, with simplicity"; without duplicity or limelight-seeking, quietly, privately and cheerfully. Rule with diligence and earnest purpose, whether in the Church or in one's own household.

Show mercy with cheerfulness, not grudgingly or just because we think we ought to, or thinking "he hardly deserves it." No, but in that spirit where "it is more blessed to give than to receive" "Let love be without 'hypocrisy,' mere pretension. "Abhor that which is evil, cleave to that which is good." In this, there is no room for half measures. Just declaring dislike for evil is not enough. To abhor evil means a dread of it and sincere avoidance of it, and alternately pursuing, cleaving to that which is good.

“Be kindly affectioned one to another, in honour preferring one another.” It is only those who have the love of Christ, constrained to live not unto themselves, who are capable of always acting in the spirit mentioned here. There is a far different meaning in these verses than many can grasp and appreciate, hence at times there is a lack of honour and preference for one another. The difficulty seems to lie in failure to always realise complete humiliation. Having left behind the habits and conditions of the first creation, we have failed to realise that in the New Creation God has made everything new, and so different from that of the world that the world calls it madness, and laughs it to scorn.

“Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit.” The zeal of our business must not claim our main care and concern, for our heart, the seat of this new mind, should be burning with love and service in excess of all other things we are engaged in. Many wax cold, and abandon their first love, and eventually lose the great hope they once had. “Serving the Lord,” this should ever be present and uppermost as the ruling spirit in all we do as Christians.

“Rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulation, continuing instant in prayer.” If our hope of glory is an assured hope, it is a rejoicing hope, making the spirit of endurance in tribulation more natural and easy, and prayer strengthens the faith that begets love and begets hope. The Apostle here now presents further obligations of the New Creature. “Distributing to the necessity of the saints.” “Given to hospitality.” All the saints, the elect of God, have spiritual necessities; many have material necessities also. Those who are sincere as followers of Christ, the freely giving to those in need is the most natural thing they would do, realizing again, “it is more blessed to give than to receive,” and besides it is often a clear test of sincerity of heart and purpose. “Bless them that curse you, bless and curse not. Rejoice with them that rejoice, and weep with them that weep. Be of the same mind one toward another.” It is a beautiful spirit of love that enters into the joys and sorrows about us. It is found in some measure in the world, but only perfectly in the New Creation. “Mind not high things,” knowing these spring from selfish serving of our own interests and are the very opposite to those of our brethren. Moreover, it is the first step of conforming to the world. “Condescend to men of low estate” The world loves to move among the ruling classes of people, but the Master made His friends among the poor, and said, “Blessed are the poor, for they shall inherit the kingdom of heaven.” Though poor in this world’s goods, they are rich in heavenly treasures.

“Be not wise in your own conceits,” such as pride and personal exaltation. “Return to no man evil for evil.” “Provide necessities honestly before all men.” Do not take even small advantages. Make a loss rather than a gain.

“If it be possible, live peaceably with all men.” Always keep this in mind, it rests with us who are justified as to whether peace can be attained and kept. Bear and forbear in all things material, but compromise nothing in the doctrine of the Ransom. Present Truth, the Second Advent is an established fact. These things we strongly hold.

“Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves.” Though sorely hit, do not hit back. Bear it rather than grow angry. “If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head.” Not literal coals, but your good action shown to him may subdue him to repentance. “Be not yourselves overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.”

What a world this would be if filled with Christians holding to one body, who sincerely love the Lord, and putting into service all the things mentioned in this chapter. We feel and confess even the living Church falls far short in accepting that spirit so beautifully portrayed in the latter verses of this chapter. We cannot read this twelfth chapter too often in conjunction with our own vow of consecration, so that the whole Church may be built up in full harmony of the spirit.

Christian Way Ended.

On January 22nd Brother R. Owen of Murray Bridge, S.A., passed (suddenly) to his reward. Although we had the pleasure of our late brother’s acquaintance only during the last two years, yet he was one who had been rejoicing in the truths as contained in the 6 Volumes of Scripture Studies for some twenty years past. He was a sincere, wholehearted Christian, and found pleasure in sacrificing his worldly possession to assist in spreading the Good News of the Kingdom. Our late brother will be missed especially by the brethren at Murray Bridge; we treasure his memory, and trust he has now received the visitor’s crown. “Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; Yea, saith the spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them.” (Rev. 14:13.)

Out of the Miry Clay.

Down in the dust of the earth I lay, covered with mud and grime,
When the Lord, in His search for jewels came, urged on by His love sublime,
He lifted me from the miry clay,
He washed all the slime of sin away

And He said "I can use this gem some day, I will keep it and make it mine."
It has not the hardness of diamonds, It has not their glowing light.
It has not the warmth of rubies, nor even their colour bright.
Yet I see in its heart a gleam of blue,
In my crown I can use that colour too.

If only the grain is straight and true I can trim away the blight.
Encased in His love He held me fast while the wheels of life He turned And oh, the grinding oft left me sore and the constant friction burned
But He trimmed me here and He smoothed me there
As He ground each facet with tender care
But He used no force that I could not bear
Tho' fair respite oft I yearned.

He ground down my selfishness and my pride, impatience
He smoothed away
He cut away malice and greed and spite, and discarded it with the clay.
Then He polished my faith and made it bright,

Brought love and peace out into the light
Till each facet reflected His image bright
And sent back ray for ray.
Whatever I have that is good or true, whatever I am that is fair
Should you see in me anything fine or great it was His hand placed it there.
For "in my flesh there dwelt no good thing"

The mire of earth to my soul would cling
Until He took me under His wing
My life was stark and bare.
So to Him be the praise for Whatever I am, whatever I say or do
For any word that my pen indites that is worthy or good or true.
No strength of my own, no goodness I claim I want no honour, no wealth, no fame
But just to bring glory to His dear Name
Who maketh all things new.

Correspondence.

Northern Territory.

Dear Brother—No doubt you will be pleased to have some news from Darwin. First of all Brother is here and his address is the same as mine. He still stands firm in the faith and has kept himself separated from Babylon and its dark-age doctrine, and I feel sure that he will join in the Bible Class which I hope to start soon.

As regards the good prospects here, I have much to thank God for; more in fact than I had dared to hope. I have had more splendid letters from both Bro. and . Bro. speaks very enthusiastically of the time when he returns to Darwin and our work together will really start. . . . I had told that I had been invited to join the Sunday School in the Methodist Church (claimed to be undenominational) I quote his reply :—"I do hope that you do not do so, because you have convinced me that your—and now my—belief is right."

He refers of course to belief in the errors of the divided church.

I am planning to open a Class for boys and girls in a fortnight's time. A family by the name of is expected here soon, and the father and son have assured me of their support.

While at I met a large family of Chinese on their way to Darwin; I have renewed my acquaintance with them since I arrived here. The father, Mr. , is keen to have his children taught the Christian way of life, and has promised to send his family along to our little gatherings. Furthermore, he said, "If you wish to have a building erected for work among the Chinese, just let me know." This shows his splendid nature, but I am not contemplating taking advantage of the offer, at least at the present time, as I do not favour spending money on wood and iron, or other buildings, when buildings are already available.

Last Thursday week I attended a fellowship meeting at the Y.M.C.A., and was able to arouse a little interest among those present by certain remarks I made. I also distributed some literature ; last Thursday night I attended again and one man came to me and said, "My word, I found that booklet, 'Hope Beyond the Grave,' very helpful." . . . A noticeable feature was the hungering and thirsting for the truth by several of the number, and also a frank and full condemnation of sectarianism in all its branches by all present. The chairman, who is an army Chaplain, frankly confessed that the greatest hindrance to a united church is the "parson," the "so-called theologian," and all were in earnest to do the right thing, though they still could not see my point in stressing the Scriptural way out ; they cannot see that the systems are unchristian. However, I had a conversation with two of the young men, yesterday, one of whom is especially anxious to attend a Bible Class with me.

At last Thursday's meeting one young man raised the question as to whether Jesus at His resurrection was clothed in His original earthly body or not, and I would like to give him the best answer. . There is another matter of teaching I'd like to be enlightened on. The "P. Paper" of October 1944 contains an address on "Why God gave a Bible hard to understand," and in the Dialogue "Facts Versus Superstition" Frank answers the first question with the statement that the Bible is not difficult to understand. This little matter may cause some difficulty in the minds of many, even though the Dialogue does offer an explanation as to why the Bible is so misunderstood. I have always felt that the Bible is hard to understand and that it was the will of God that it should be so, at least up to the present time when more and more light is being thrown on the sacred writings.

The young people I have met here seem keen to learn something of the Divine Plan, and I had thought of ordering 3 copies of the "Plan of God in Brief" . . . I must close this letter now with a prayer in my heart that God will continue to use you and all the brethren in the glorious work of spreading truth and enlightenment. And to Him I give all praise and glory for my own great privilege of labouring in this corner of the vineyard. Yours in Christian love and service.

(A leaflet on the subject "The Resurrection Body of the Lord and His Saints" is available free to all. The apparent contradiction respecting the understanding of the Bible, as stated above, is explained by viewing this matter from different standpoints. The Bible is hard to understand, generally, yet to the sincere-hearted whom God "draws" (See John 6:44, 65) the precious truths are revealed clearly, as they give heart and mind to the study of God's Word. It is not necessary to attend a theological college to understand the Bible ; very often such colleges are a hindrance to Biblical knowledge. Our Lord's words are explanatory and very beautiful—"I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father : for so it seemed good in Thy sight."—Matt. 11:25, 26.—B.B. Institute.)

Victoria.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I must write to thank you very much for your kind thought in continuing to send me the “Peoples Paper” which I do enjoy reading and then passing on to friends. There is very much to learn from its pages and very valuable and encouraging and good to be able to understand so much of God’s Holy Word and above all to know we are His children and belong to His family, being bought by His precious blood. . . .

My prayer daily is that we shall all live as though each day was our last and then go to be with Him forever. May God abundantly bless and prosper you in your good work. Again thanking you. Yours faithfully in His service.

Dear Frank and Ernest—Please forward to me at above address your leaflet on the subject of your session this morning, “Where are the Dead?” Also tell me how I can procure book “Hope Beyond the Grave.” I enjoy your Talks very much, so please continue them to bring help and inspiration to many listening folk. Thanking you ; Yours truly.

(One copy of “Hope Beyond the Grave” is supplied free to all applicants; others at 8d. each, post paid.—B.B. Institute.)

Dear Sirs—Will you please send me a copy of your Talk “Where are the Dead ?” given over station 3GL last Sunday morning. I had a letter from a friend in England asking me if I thought we would ever converse with our parents and friends again after death. I think your Talk will answer him much better than I could. Yours truly.

Dear Frank and Ernest—In your Talks from 3GL Geelong on the last two Sundays in January you made reference to Christ’s Kingdom on earth, and I am not sure whether you said that Christ would be in person or in spirit. I thought that you said He would be in spirit, but am not sure, so could you clear me on this point please? And if He came in spirit, or His Kingdom came upon earth, then how do you account for the Bible saying that He would come as He went. If it were possible I would like these two Talks given by you on the Sundays mentioned. Thanking you in anticipation ; Yours sincerely. (Protestant ; no denomination; His alone.)

(Literature explaining the manner of Christ’s return, in harmony with all Scriptures on the subject, is available free to all desiring same.—B.B. Institute.)

Dear Brother—Would you kindly post me a copy of “Daily Heavenly Manna” also the booklet on “British Israelism.”

As there appears to be considerable divergence of opinion as regards the time of partaking of the Lord’s Supper, I would be pleased to know if you have any literature on the subject.

Would it be asking too much to have a copy of the Weekly Dialogue enclosed with the “Peoples Paper” each month? P.N. enclosed; any balance please put to your General Fund. Yours sincerely.

(Literature respecting the Lord’s Supper, the Memorial of Christ’s death, being held each year on the anniversary of His sacrifice, and taking the place of the annual Jewish Passover, as revealed by our Lord, is available for all. The weekly radio Dialogues are also supplied to all making personal application.—B.B. Institute.)

N. S. Wales.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I have enjoyed very much your addresses in the past, and find great enlightenment and comfort from them. I thought today’s was really beautiful for it warms my heart to know that Jesus’ coming is nigh when all sickness and death will be abolished forever.

I would like very much a copy of today’s address, “Good News.” Wishing you both every success in the near future, and may God richly bless you. Yours most sincerely.

Christ, Our Passover Lamb.

THE Supper which our Lord instituted as a remembrance of His great sacrifice for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world, is striking in its appropriateness and its simplicity. The world's great men have always sought very different means of perpetuating their memories. In whatever way they would remind their followers of their merits and their greatness, it surely has not been by a reminder and commemoration of their death—especially if, as in our Lord's case, it was a death of ignominy and shame, a death as a malefactor and criminal. Another, more probably, would have left instructions for medals to be struck commemorating some of his mighty works—such, for instance, as the awakening of Lazarus, or the stilling of the tempest on the sea, or the triumphal entry into Jerusalem, while the multitude strewed the way with palm branches, and cried, "Hosanna to the King!"

But our Lord chose as His remembrance that which represented what was, in His and in God's estimation, His mightiest work—His Sin-Offering on our behalf; and that which His real followers, and they alone, would appreciate more than any other feature of His mission. True, His followers would have appreciated something commemorative of His wonderful words or works, but the worldly also could have appreciated those things. But not so the value of His death as our Ransom-Sacrifice, the basis of our reconciliation and at-one-ment, which has never yet been fully apprehended by any but the consecrated Little Flock—the Elect. And it was for these that the remembrance was arranged and instituted. And though a Judas was present, he was given a sop, and went out from the others before the supper was ended; thus, no doubt, representing that in the close of this Age, before the Little Flock will have finished their part of having fellowship with their Lord in His sufferings, the sop of Truth will have become so strong as to drive forth from the company and communion of the faithful all who do not rightly appreciate and value the Ransom accomplished by the Lamb of God for the taking away of the sins of the world.—John 1:29.

Blessed are those whose eyes can see that Jesus was indeed "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world"; that the cancellation of the world's sin is to be effected by the payment of man's penalty, by the application of Jesus' sacrificial merit in due time for the sins of ail mankind.

Only the Church have as yet received of the merit of Jesus' death. Greatly favoured are those who can see that as the whole world lost Divine favour and came under Divine sentence of death with its sorrow and pain, so it was necessary that a satisfaction of Justice should be made before this sentence, or curse, could be removed; and that, therefore, as the Apostle declares, "Christ died for our sins,"—"the Just for the unjust," that He might bring us back to God. Thus He opened up a new way—a way to life everlasting.

Jesus, Our Passover Lamb.

The Apostle Paul clearly and positively identifies the Passover Lamb with our Lord Jesus, saying, "Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast." He informs us that we all need the blood of sprinkling, not upon our houses, but upon our hearts. We are to partake of the Lamb; we must appropriate to ourselves the merit of Christ, the value of His sacrifice; we must also eat of the unleavened bread of Truth, if we would be strong and prepared for the deliverance in the morning of the New Dispensation. Thus we put on Christ, not merely by faith; but more and more we put on His character and are transformed into His glorious image in our hearts and lives.

We are to feed on Christ as the Jews fed on the literal lamb. Instead of the bitter herbs, which aided and whetted their appetites, we have bitter experiences and trials which the Lord prepares for us and which help to wean our affections from earthly things and to give us increased appetite to feed upon the Lamb and the unleavened Bread of Truth. We, too, are to remember that we have no continuing city, but as pilgrims and strangers with staff in hand, we are to gird ourselves for our journey to the Heavenly Canaan, to all the glorious things which God has in reservation for the Church of the First-borns, in association with our Redeemer, as kings and priests unto God.

Our Lord Jesus also identified Himself with the Passover Lamb. On the same night of His betrayal, just preceding His crucifixion, He gathered His Apostles in the upper room, saying, "With desire have I desired to eat this Passover with you before I suffer." It was necessary that as Jews they should celebrate the Passover Supper on that night—the night of the anniversary of the slaying of the Passover lamb in Egypt, of the saving of the typical firstborns from the typical "prince of this world"—Pharaoh the same date on which the real Passover Lamb was to be slain. But as soon as the requirements of the type had been fulfilled, our Lord Jesus instituted a new Memorial upon the old foundation, saying, "Do this in remembrance of Me."

We recall the circumstances of the first Memorial—the blessing of the Bread and of the Cup, the fruit of the vine; and our Lord's declaration that these represented His broken body and shed blood, and that all His followers should participate, not only feeding upon Him, but being broken with Him; not only partaking of the merit of His blood, His sacrifice, but also laying down their lives in His service, in co-operating with Him in every and any manner, that they might later share all His honour and glory in the Kingdom. How precious are these thoughts to those who are rightly in tune with our Lord!

In presenting to the disciples the unleavened bread as a memorial, Jesus said, "Take, eat; this is My body." The evident meaning of His words is: This symbolises, or represents My body. The bread was not actually His body; for in no sense had His body yet been broken. But the picture is complete when we recognise that the unleavened (pure, unfermented) bread represented our Lord's sinless flesh—leaven being a symbol of sin under the Law, and especially commanded to be put away at the Passover season. On another occasion Jesus gave a lesson which interprets to us this symbol. He said, "The Bread of God is He which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world." "I am the Bread of Life." "I am the living Bread which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this Bread he shall live forever; and the Bread that I will give is My flesh, which I will give for the life of the world!"—John 6:33, 35, 51.

In order to appreciate how we are to eat, or appropriate this living Bread, it is necessary for us to understand just what the bread signifies. According to our Lord's explanation of the matter, it was His flesh which He sacrificed for us. It was not His prehuman existence as a spirit being that was sacrificed, although that was laid down and its glory laid aside, in order that He might take our human nature. It was the fact that our Lord Jesus was holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners — without any contamination from Father Adam, and hence free from sin—that enabled Him to become Redeemer of Adam and his race, that permitted Him to give His life "a ransom for all, to be testified in due time."—1 Tim. 2:3-6.

When we see that it was the pure, spotless nature of our Lord Jesus that was laid down on behalf of sinners, we see what it is that we are privileged to appropriate. The very thing that He laid down for us we are to "eat," appropriate to ourselves; that is to say, His perfect human life was given to redeem all the race from condemnation to death, to enable them to return to human perfection and everlasting life, if they would; and we are to realise this and accept Him as our Saviour from death.

In order that any of the race of Adam might profit by the sacrifice of Jesus, however, it was necessary that He should rise from the tomb, that He should ascend to the Father and deposit the sacrifice, merit of His death in the hands of Justice, and receive from the Father "all power in heaven and in earth." As relates to the world, it was necessary also that in the Father's due time He should come again to earth a glorious spirit Being, then to be to the whole world a Mediator, Prophet, Priest and King, to assist back to perfection and to harmony with God all who will avail themselves of the wonderful privileges then to be offered.

Now let us note that God's object in justifying the Church by faith during this Gospel Age, in advance of the justification of the world by works of obedience in the Millennial Age, is for the very purpose of permitting this class who now see and hear, who now appreciate the great sacrifice which Love has made on man's behalf, to present their bodies a living sacrifice, and thus to have part with the Lord Jesus in His sacrifice—as members of His Body. This deeper meaning of the Memorial He did not refer to directly. It was doubtless one of the things to which He referred when He said, "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot hear them now; howbeit, when it, the spirit of truth, shall come, it will guide you into all Truth, and show you things to come."—John 16:12, 13.

This Spirit of Truth, the power and influence of the Father bestowed through Christ, speaking through the Apostle Paul, clearly explains the very high import of the Memorial; for St. Paul says, writing to the consecrated Church, "The Cup of blessing for which we give thanks, is it not the participation of the blood of Christ? The Loaf which we break, is it not the participation of the Body of Christ?"—the sharing with Christ as joint-sacrificers with Him even unto death, that thereby we might be counted in with Him as sharers of the glory which He has received as the reward of His faithfulness?"—"For we, being many, are one Loaf and one Body."--1 Cor. 10:16, 17.—Emphatic Diaglott.

Both views of this impressive ordinance are very important. It is essential, first of all, that we should see our justification through our Lord's sacrifice. It is proper, then, that we should realise that the entire Christ, the entire anointed company, is, from the Divine standpoint, a composite Body of many members, of which Jesus is the Head (1 Cor. 12:12-14), and that this Body, this Church, as a whole must be broken—that each member of it must become a copy of the Lord Jesus and must walk in the footsteps of His sacrifice. We do this by laying down our lives for the brethren, as Jesus laid down His life—directly for His Jewish brethren, but really for the whole world, according to the Father's purpose.

It is not our spiritual life that we lay down, even as it was not Jesus' spiritual life that He laid down. As He sacrificed His actual, perfect being, His humanity, so we are to sacrifice our justified selves, reckoned perfect through Jesus' merit, but not actually so. Likewise, the Loaf and the Cup represent suffering. The "grains of wheat" must be crushed and ground before they can become bread for man; they cannot retain their life and individuality as grains. The "grapes" must submit to the pressure that will extract all their juices, must lose their identity as grapes, if they would become the life-giving members of the Body of Christ. But it is His blood, the virtue of His sacrifice, that counts. Our blood has virtue only because of His merit counted to us, only because we are members of His Body.

Our Lord distinctly declares that the Cup, the fruit of the vine, represents blood; that is, life--not life retained, but life shed, given, yielded up—sacrificed life. He tells us that this life poured out was for the remission of sins; and that all who would be His, must drink of it, must accept His sacrifice and appropriate it by faith. They must receive life from this source. It will not do for any to claim an immortality outside of Christ. It will not do to declare that life is the result of obedience to the Law. It will not do to claim that faith in some great teacher and obedience to his instructions will amount to the same thing and bring eternal life. There is no way to attain eternal life other than through the blood once shed as the ransom-price for the whole world. "There is none other name given under heaven or amongst men whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:12.) Likewise, there is no other way by which we can attain to the new nature than by accepting the Lord's invitation to drink of His Cup, and to be broken with Him as members of the one Loaf, to be buried with Him in baptism into His death, and thus to be with Him in His resurrection to glory, honour and immortality.—Rom. 6:3-5; 2:7.

In considering the events of those solemn hours which followed the first Memorial Supper, let us follow the Redeemer to Gethsemane, and behold Him "with strong cryings and tears," praying "unto Him who was able to save Him out of death"—expressive of our Master's fear of death lest in some particular He might have failed to follow out the Father's Plan, and therefore be thought unworthy of a resurrection. We note that our Lord was in some way comforted with the assurance that He had faithfully kept His consecration vow, and that He would surely have a resurrection as promised.

We behold how calm He was thereafter, when before the high priest and Pilate, and Herod, and Pilate again. "As a lamb before her shearers is dumb, so He opened not His mouth" in self-defence. We see Him faithful, courageous to the very last; and we have His assurance that He could have asked of the Father and could have had more than twelve legions of angels for His protection. But, instead of petitioning for aid to escape His sacrifice, He petitioned for help to endure it faithfully. What a lesson is here for all His footstep followers!

On the other hand, we recall that even amongst His loyal disciples the most courageous forsook the Master and fled; and that one of them, in his timidity, even denied his Lord! What an occasion is this for examining our own hearts as respects the degree of our own faith, our own courage, our own willingness to suffer with Him who redeemed us! What an opportunity is thus afforded for us to buttress the mind with the resolution that we will not deny our Master under any circumstances or conditions—that we will. confess Him not only with our lips, but also by our conduct.

The thoughts, then, before the mind of each of those who participate in the Memorial service should be that expressed in the words of St. Paul: "If we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him; if we be dead with Him, we shall also live with Him"; "for our light afflictions which are but for a moment," "are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us." (Rom. 8:18.) With these thoughts respecting the passing over of our sins as the First-borns through the merit of the precious blood, and our share with our blessed Lord in all His experience of suffering and of glory, we may indeed keep the Passover feast with joy, notwithstanding the trials and difficulties.

So doing, continuing faithful as His followers, very soon we shall have the great privilege of leading forth the Lord's hosts—all who ultimately shall hear and know and obey the great King—out of the dominion of sin and death into the liberty of children of God during the grand Millennial reign.

No time to linger by the way,
No time for ease, no time for play;
No time for earthly loves or joys,
No time for worldly cares or toys,

The time, my soul, is short!
No time to murmur or complain,
No time to heed the heart's dull pain ;
No time for tears or mournful song,

No time to ask, How far, How long ?—
The time, my soul, is short!
Ah, yes, 'tis short—just time enough
To run thy course, so steep and rough,

Just time to reap “the fields,” so white,
Before the coming of the “night,”
Just time, my soul, just time!
Just time to make thy heart more pure,

Just time to make thy “calling” sure,
Just time to enter through “the door,”
To reign with Christ for evermore
Just time, my soul, just time!

Present Truth and Time Prophecies.

Where are we on the stream of time? Prophecies fulfilled and fulfilling.

(Convention Address.)

WHILE we would probably all agree that the fulfilment of Time prophecies is not the most important feature of Bible knowledge, nor the understanding of the prophecies generally the most important attainment of Christian development, yet all that divine providence has caused to be written for our edification is very important. Paul says, 2 Tim. 3:16, 17, "All Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." The understanding of what has been written for our instruction and guidance with regard to Dispensational truth, Time prophecy, and the noting of the development of God's purposes in the fulfilment of prophecy past and in our own time is strengthening to faith and develops that trust in God so necessary in the hour of trial, when the hard and dark times come, when the unbelievers might say, as the Psalmist puts it, "Where is now thy God?", because things seem so against one.

The fact that so much of the Bible consists of prophecy indicates the importance of this subject. The Lord has promised through the Prophet (Amos 3:7), "Surely the Lord will do nothing but He revealeth His secrets unto His servants the prophets." Our Lord Jesus drew His disciples closer and said, "Henceforth I call you not servants but friends, for the servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth, but I have called you friends, for whatsoever the Father doeth that declare I unto you." Then, too, there was the promise that when the spirit of truth would come "It will guide you into all truth and show you things to come."

The Church members in Christ are begotten of God—they are sons of God—so while the prophets gave forth their prophecies in figures, shadows, symbols or parables, which they themselves did not understand, it is given to the House of Sons to appreciate the fulfilments—the realities of the things previously foretold, as truth becomes due to the household of faith.

We are undoubtedly living in what Daniel speaks of as "the time of the end." The book's truths and prophecies were to be sealed until the "time of the end." During this time, then, the seals would be taken off, and the truths made known as promised.

Daniel 12:1-4. "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." All the wonderful inventions we see today are the result of the increase of knowledge. Up to the beginning of the 19th century it was only the few who could be educated—who could read and write. There were no public schools; all the Missionary Societies and even Sunday Schools have been instituted since then, and now for many years education has been compulsory. It is only within about the last 100 years that steam boats, steam trains, electric motors and wonderful machines have been invented for all sorts of production, and now since the great Wars more astounding inventions have been produced. Knowledge has increased so wonderfully in every phase of life and the Bible has opened up its secrets to those who reverence the Lord, as promised. "The secrets of the Lord are with them that fear Him, and He will show them His covenants."

It is in this time of the end that Daniel's time prophecies terminate,—2300 days, 1260, 1290, and 1335 days, and the end of the "times of the Gentiles" is revealed. The matter of Chronology or length of time from the creation of man may not have been correctly established—there are different opinions regarding some items and periods, but all the matters that are questionable concern items prior to the beginnings of these time prophecies of Daniel. There can be no doubt about the beginning of the 2300 days. It was when the command of Artaxerxes, King of Persia, went forth to rebuild Jerusalem in 454 B.C. This is a well authenticated date, also it is confirmed by the fulfilment of Daniel's time prophecy of 70 weeks regarding the first advent of Christ in the end of the Jewish Age dating from the same event.

The "seven times" of the Gentiles to which Jesus referred, saying, "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled" very clearly had their beginning in 606 or 604 B.C., when Nebuchadnezzar, who Daniel said was the head of gold of the great image of Gentile powers, took Jerusalem and carried the king and his household captive to Babylon.

It is then very easy to see when these two periods of prophecy would end. The 2300 days (years) beginning 454 years B.C. require 1846 years after Christ to make 2300.

The "seven times" of 360 days (years) = 2520 days (years), during which Jerusalem would be trodden down of the Gentile nations, dating from 606 or 604 B.C., bring us to 1914 or 1916 A.D. Its fulfilment was marked by the city being delivered from Turkish oppression in 1917 by the British forces under General Allenby, and since then the "fig-tree” has been budding again, as Jesus said, “Now learn a parable of the fig tree, when his branch is yet tender and putteth forth leaves ye know that summer is nigh, so likewise ye, when ye see all these things know that it (the kingdom of God) is near.” (Matt. 24:32-33; Luke 21:24-32). The progress made by Israel in Palestine since that time is very wonderful—the land which under the Turks and Arabs was but a wilderness is once again a land of milk and honey. As in the days of Ezra and Nehemiah when Israel returned from Babylon the Arabians tried to hinder and prevent the restoration of Jerusalem, so now there is great opposition to the return of Israel, notwithstanding the fact that Israel has already improved the lot of the Arabs themselves. However, nothing can prevent the fulfilling of the divine purpose for the restoration of Israel so abundantly foretold by all the prophets of the Lord and the Apostle Paul.

So this long period of 2520 years of Gentile Times has ended as verified not only by the measure of time, but by facts and events of the present day.

Just when the 1260 and 1290 days and 1335 days date from might have seemed more uncertain if we had to depend upon definite development of the great “abomination of desolation” to decide the matter, as there seem to be many different incidents in the “taking away of the continual sacrifice” (which is understood to be the inauguration of the Mass as a sacrifice for sins) and “the setting up of the desolating abomination” (which we understand to be the attainment of civil and national power of the Papacy.) However, the fact that the persecuting power of Rome was broken when Napoleon, in 1799, took the Pope prisoner to France, indicates that date as the end of the 1260 days (years) during which this desolating abomination had trodden down the saints of the Most High. We have this same period of 31 times or 42 months of Papal persecution mentioned in Rev. 12th and 13th chapters. So dating back 1260 years from 1799 gives us the date of 539 A.D., and there we find the Pope of Rome recognized and by the overthrow of the Ostrogoths who had subjected Rome, the Pope obtained the power and control, and thus the Abomination of Desolation was set up, the Mass having already been inaugurated. Thus history reveals the date for the beginning of the 1260, 1290, and 1335 days. Most students of these matters agree that 539 A.D. is the date to count from. Some differ to the extent of about 70 years, but the fact that the persecuting power of Rome was broken about 1799 denotes 539 as the commencement of these time prophecies.

The 1290 days. The end of these 1290 days is of course just 30 years after the end of the 1260 days, and indicate about 1829 A.D. We are not informed as to what was to happen at this time, as the verses in Daniel 12 are arranged in our Bible, but it seems evident that the verses are not in their proper sequence. It has been stated and it would seem with good reason that verse 5 ought to be the first verse in the chapter, followed by 6 and 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, then 1, 12, 4, 3, 2, and then 13. When read in this order we find that it is after the 1290 days that Michael stands up. It was at this time that the Millerite Movement sent the message throughout Christendom respecting the second coming of Christ. The expectation was that Christ would return at the end of the 2300 days, about 1844-46, and would again appear as a human being, visible to all. This of course was an error, for our Lord was raised a spirit being, and is never again to appear in the flesh, but comes in power and great glory with all the holy angels to dethrone Satan and his wicked spirits. Satan and all evil influences will be bound while Christ and His Church rule the world in righteousness, granting life and joy and peace to all the willing and obedient.

The first operations of the returned Lord, however, are not in connection with mankind generally, but as indicated in Matthew 25, where the three parables illustrate the condition of the Church, the work to be done and what is to take place during the secret presence of the Lord at His return. He comes to claim His Bride as shown in the parable of the Virgins. This matter was recognized as having its fulfilment from that time-1829 onwards. (Vol. 3, page 91.) The world knew nothing of His secret presence but as promised in Rev. 3:20, there was the knock at the hearts of those who looked for His appearing and Kingdom, and He prepared for them a great feast of truth. The dead in Christ were to be raised at His presence and were granted rewards according to the use of their talents and allotted responsibilities in the Kingdom He was preparing to set up. Then during this period of His presence those who were still remaining in the flesh were to be instantly changed at the moment of death and be caught away to be with the Lord in the air (in the spiritual condition). They would not need to sleep as those who had died during the earlier part of the Gospel Age, for the Lord having come, they were to be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye to be forever with the Lord, rewarded according to what use they had made of their talents while in the narrow way on earth.

This work has undoubtedly been in progress ever since about 1829 and there has ever since been a cleansed sanctuary as promised at the end of the 2300 days (1846). That is, there has been a class of believers delivered from the papal errors and separated from the mass of Churchianity “looking for the blessed hope, the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour, Jesus Christ.” (Titus 2:13.)

1335 days. Then follows in due time the great feast of truth, the unfolding of the great Plan of the Ages, and the Bible opened up to the understanding of those who were “like men who wait for their lord when he will return from the wedding, that when he cometh and knocketh they will open to him immediately. Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when He cometh shall find watching. Verily I say unto you, that He will gird Himself and make them to sit down to meat and shall come forth and serve them.” Yes, this came at the end of the 1335 days-1874—when the present truth began to flow to the watchers. Well was it written, “Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the end of the 1335 days.” The divine purpose became clearer, the whole Bible was illuminated and truth kept coming to light, and with the publishing of the “Divine Plan” and other volumes, there was indeed a happy people who were well spoken of as “Blessed are the people that know the joyful sound; they shall walk O Lord, in the light of Thy countenance, for Thou art the glory of their strength and in Thy favour shall our horn be exalted.” (Psalm 89:15, 17.)

While the Scripture studies etc. are so beautiful and filled the readers—the watchers—with joy, some of the suggested time prophecies do not seem to have been divinely intended. It seemed natural to search for other treasures of truth and with the mind eager for any possible enlightenment it is not surprising if some mistakes were made, and no doubt permitted as a testing of true faith and loyalty to God and His service.

There was the thought of the Jewish “double” referring to a corresponding period of disfavour to that of divine favour of Israel. The word “double” would not appear to necessarily mean a double of time but rather a “double,” an equal punishment.

There was the suggested great cycle of Jubilees just carrying the cycle one further than in Israel’s arrangement, and this does not seem to have been divinely intended.

Then too, the statement in 2 Chron. 36:21 was taken that the land should lie desolate 70 years to fulfil 70 sabbaths, as being 70 jubilees, whereas the 70 sabbaths simply referred to the same time as Daniel’s 70 weeks. The land sabbath was every 7th year.

Regarding Chronology—the time from Adam till now—the author of the Studies appears to have been misled by the statement in Acts 13:20 respecting the Judges and so he cast doubt on 1 Kings 6:1. The Siniatic MS shows that the 450 years refers to the time from Isaac to the division of the land, and after that He gave them Judges until Samuel. 1 Kings 6:1 shows the period of the Judges to have been only about 350 years. This, too, is confirmed by the fact that there was but the three generations in that time from Salma who married Rachab, — Boaz, Obed, Jesse,—to David. This makes a difference of 100 years in Chronology. There are also some other inaccuracies. There would seem to be no certainty as to when 6000 years from the creation of man will be reached. We can, however, be quite sure that we are nearing that time now.

It will be noticed that none of the Bible Time prophecies we have mentioned are at all affected by this mistake in chronology, as they all have their beginning after the time of uncertainty, at dates well authenticated by secular as well as Bible History. It just means that we have not yet quite reached the beginning of the 7th 1000 year period.

Some have thought that the 7th 1000 year period began about 1872 or 1874 or 1878, and had concluded that Christ’s Kingdom was due to begin at that time, as the 6 days of 1000 years each had been referred to as being man’s work week” and the 7th 1000 year being the anti-typical Sabbath or Rest Day. That is quite possibly a correct thought, only we do not know just when the 6000 years of “man’s work week” will be complete.

One very evident fact is that God has not intended that any should be able to predict certain dates for certain events. The time prophecies, as also the types and symbols, are evidently given so that as the fulfilment occurs those watching may have their faith strengthened by observing how prophecy is fulfilling.

We can by study of God’s Word see things to come in a general way, but are not put in a position to know the day nor the hour. We know that Satan’s throne is to be overthrown—that Christ will take His great power and reign,—that the object of His 1000 year reign is to lift mankind out of sin and death and to bring all the willing and obedient to perfect manhood,—and that He will then hand the world of mankind over to God, and that then there will be a human race perfect in the image of God, and the whole earth as the Garden of Eden. We can see this and many things that will be, in a general way, but we are not put in a position to be able to give dates for events or to particularize precisely regarding events prior to their occurrence. We must still walk by faith and not by sight regarding the gradual development of the Divine purpose. There is, however, much prophecy which has become history in our day, and more is being fulfilled before our eyes. We are living in a very wonderful time in the “Day of Preparation” for Messiah’s reign,—in the period termed in Daniel “the time of the end,”—in the day of the secret parousia (presence) of Christ, which Jesus termed “the days of the Son of Man.” He instructed the disciples regarding how the watchers would know of His presence,—He would come as a thief, secretly, quietly, unknown to the world. But the Apostle intimated that the “Brethren were not in darkness” that that day should come upon them unawares—that is, the day of collapse of the present evil world as a result of Christ’s presence, and in preparation for the setting up of His Kingdom. (1 Thess. 5:1-6.)

Some people seem to get confused about this matter because they do not discern the fact that Christ returns some time previous to commencing His reign. They seem to think His reign must begin as soon as He arrives, and having come to the thought that Christ returned about 1874, or 1878, and seeing no signs of any righteousness and peace prevailing, but rather that the world grows worse and worse, and there has never been so much wickedness, war and commotion in the world before, they become discouraged.

A proper understanding of prophecy and of Matthew 24th and 25th chapters would make so much difference, that seeing these things come to pass, they would “lift up their heads,” be encouraged, and know that the consummation of the great hopes of the Church is very near. Then the times of restitution of all things for humanity will begin as prophesied by all the holy prophets since the world began. Then Peter’s exhortation is appropriate, “Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought we to be in holy conversation and godliness. . . Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such be diligent that ye may be found in Him in peace without spot and blameless.” (2 Pet. 3:11, 14.)

All our knowledge of the Scriptures and of the prophecies will not avail us anything if we are not properly exercised by it so as to increase in earnest desire and effort to attain the same character and disposition as Christ. (1 Cor. 13:2, 3.)

What a life’s work it is to transform our hearts and minds from human mindedness — from seeking the good and pleasurable things of earth — its aims, its hopes and ambitions — to become spiritually minded, to lay up our treasure in heaven, to seek to develop more and more the spiritual life and heavenly hopes, and conform in all things to the will of God.

When we realize how near we are to the consummation of our hopes—to the great marriage of the Lamb—the great question is, Are we being prepared, made ready, so as to be among those of whom it will be said, “The Bride hath made herself ready”? Knowledge of prophecy etc., is not “the mark for the prize,” though knowledge is a means of grace to help to attain the mark which is the likeness in character and disposition, heart and mind, to Christ. What a bending, moulding and chiselling and grinding some of us require. But if we try to co-operate with God who works in us to will and to do His good pleasure, we will be perfected, and the disciplines and trials necessary at present will seem but light afflictions when the glory plane is reached.

“Therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness. But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To Him be glory both now and for ever. Amen. (2 Peter 3:17, 18.)

English Brother finishes Pilgrim Way.

The following message from England advises the passing of an elderly Brother :—“We would inform you that our Brother H. J. Shearn, whom many of you will know, passed away suddenly on 28th February last, in full confidence of faith. He was a loyal Brother and did a great deal to keep the brethren together in his time. He was aged 81.”

While known personally to few in Australia, those only who have visited England, yet through correspondence over a number of years Brother Shearn had become known to us to some good extent. We rejoice in the words of a Brother who knew him personally since about 1907—“It is nice to think of his sudden change, ‘in a moment in the twinkling of an eye’ ; ‘caught away to be with the Lord in the air.’ “ Our sympathy is extended to the members of our late Brother Shearn’s family, who will feel the loss very much.

Frank and Ernest, Melbourne, Dear Sirs—Wish to express my appreciation and say how pleased I was to be present at the last Lecture, “Are There Few That Be Saved?” etc., Sunday afternoon last in Geelong. It was my first opportunity to be present and hope to do so again. . . .

If it is not asking too much of a favour, could I have a copy of the verses from the Bible which you gave out last Sunday afternoon ? Going over the verses privately, helps I think to retain. Would also like to have the copies of the last four lectures which were given at 10 a.m. Sunday session. Thanking you very much.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I am so glad you are continuing with the good work you commenced some time ago. I have written to you previously and enjoy reading each month the “Peoples Paper” you so kindly send to me ; the reading of it is very comforting. I have not been able to “listen in” to your talks on Sunday mornings for some time now ; 3GL is not very distinct, but I have your “Daily Heavenly Manna” which is lovely to read and when able to afford them I intend to purchase some for gifts.

I am now writing to ask will you please send to me a leaflet on the subject “The Resurrection Body of the Lord and His Saints,” also one copy of “Hope Beyond the Grave.” Enclosed you will find stamp for reply. I wish I could send you some money to help on your work which must be such a help and inspiration to so many people, particularly those in sorrow ; but as I mentioned before I am paralysed in the legs, and my husband (who is a fine Christian gentleman) is under heavy expenses, so we have to be careful. It is really wonderful the way God supplies our every need, so we just live simply and in perfect trust, and are happy. Phillipians 4:19 we prove to be so true in our daily lives.

Your article “Refrain Thy Voice from Weeping, and Thine Eyes from Tears,” in this month’s issue is very comforting indeed and so helpful along the rough journey we are called upon to travel. Thank God for our great hope, and the joy it brings us. Again thanking you Frank and Ernest, and wishing you God’s rich blessings all along the way. I remain, Yours in Christ’s service.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Brothers in Christ--For a long time now I have been enjoying your helpful broadcasts and have been way ting to write to you and ask for the printed Talks to be sent on so that I can pass them on to some I know who do not ,hear them. I would be glad of any of the preceding that you may have available, also the following ones. Thanking you, I am, Yours in Him.

Messrs. Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I have listened with great interest to your broadcast over 3GL this morning and would very much like to have a copy of your discussion. Also do you send these copies out regularly every week? If so, I would like to have a copy if you would let me know cost, or if one has to become a member or forward a subscription, to have regular copies sent. Trusting to hear from you ; Yours sincerely.

(Copies of the printed Dialogues are supplied free to all who make personal application, and promise to read them carefully. These copies are provided by the Radio and General Funds which are supported by voluntary contributions.- B.B. Institute.)

Dear Frank and Ernest—Would you please send me a copy of your discussion on Sunday last ; I missed some of the discussion and as I am very interested in that particular subject, I would very much like a copy. Yours faithfully.

South Australia.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I must thank you very much indeed for sending along the “Peoples Paper” each month and also your weekly Dialogues. I enjoy reading them. It was rather disappointing to learn that you were unable to get our South Australian broadcasting station to continue with the broadcasting of your message. There must have been many who missed them.

I will enclose 5/- and would like you to continue sending me the “Peoples Paper” and weekly Dialogues and any of the following that you have on hand. The booklets “God and Reason,” and “Some of the Parables,” also the leaflets “Corning Back from Hell Soon,” and “When Christ is King.” There was also mention of “A Dictator” etc. ; I am not too sure of that one but would be happy to receive any or all of these mentioned. Thanking you for help received and may God bless you. I am, Yours sincerely.

The Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sir—I wish to acknowledge receipt of your “Paper” monthly and thoroughly enjoy reading it. Please find enclosed postal note for 10/- for the work. Am very sorry the Dialogues were discontinued over 5AD and miss them very much. Would like to have some enclosed with “Paper” if you have any spare ones. With Christian greetings; Yours because His.

N. S. Wales.

Dear Sir—I listen to the Frank and Ernest Biblical Talks every Sunday and find them very helpful indeed. I would be very grateful if you would supply me with some of the past Dialogues. Then I could sit down quietly in my spare time and study them carefully.

My daughter in is turning to her Testament for consolation; I know that if you will supply her with your explanations of the Bible (Bible Talks) it will help her immensely. They are so simple ; just what we need to help us along. I'll enclose stamps which will help you a little in your wonderful work. May God bless you and help you to spread His good tidings. Yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I did enjoy your address very much on the 3rd, “Science and Creation.” I would like two if I may ; one for myself and one for a friend. Could you please send me each week's address in the future? Wishing you God's richest blessing. Yours most sincerely.

West Australia.

Frank and Ernest, 6KY, Dear Brothers—I listened to your Talk on the meaning of the soul last Sunday. The meaning you gave seemed to agree with Scripture. I was pleased to know that others shared my belief on this subject. I was however not clear as to your statement that the first occurrence is Gen. 2:7. That may be as regards the Authorized Version, but in the Scriptures I notice the Hebrew neh-phesh (soul) occurs in Gen. 1:2 (life) , Gen. 1:24 (creature) , Gen. 1:30 (life) .

I think the faulty translation of neh-phesh in the A.V. has tended to hide the meaning of “soul,..” I believe it occurs some 754 times but is translated “soul” only some 472 times, and the balance over 40 different English words are used.

I wonder if you will be good enough to send me your booklet “Hope Beyond the Grave,” and I think you also have a booklet “Plan of the Ages,” which I would like to read. Yours etc.

Frank and Ernest, 6KY, Perth, Sirs—Re the above session, I receive very much enjoyment from this and do hereby request you to forward me a copy of these weekly Dialogues. Thanking you.

New Zealand. Dear Brother—Greetings in Christ Jesus our Lord and Head.

Please find enclosed M.O. for £2/5/0, and will you please forward my sub. to “Watchers of the Morning” and I also wish to pay my sub. to the “Peoples Paper.” Will you please forward to the above address one “Daily Manna” and one of your booklets “Good News” and use the balance to what purpose you think best, to spread the glad tidings.

I sincerely desire to thank you for so kindly forwarding to me the “P.P.” which is full of spiritual truth, of comfort and cheer, which has the effect of lifting one up above this sad world. Yes, Dear Brother, your little “P.P.” brings a message of strength, grace and gladness to the reader, and it encourages the humble, loving and obedient heart.

We of New Zealand are much scattered and are very few, and mostly getting on in years, but we are able to correspond to each other which helps.

Your remarks on the atomic bomb I think are splendid. Luke 21:26, “Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth.” Surely man is afraid today more than ever before ; we read of it in the daily papers, saying that something must be done to reassure man, and take away this fear or dread of the atomic bomb. But let us look up Luke 21:28—”And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh.” I must close now. Your Brother in the Beloved.

When the Son of Man Cometh.

“When the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?”—Luke 18:8.

(Convention Address)

IN taking up this subject, it is not our intention to present anything of a sensational nature with respect to Christ's second advent, and yet this subject of the return of Christ is undoubtedly of sensational nature or interest to those Christians who not only love their Lord as their Saviour and Redeemer, but have been called into the fellowship of His sufferings, and can realise their Lord and Head as the Chief Reaper in this harvest time of the Gospel Age.

The generally accepted idea of the return of Christ is that of a most sensational and awe-inspiring event, the like of which has never before been seen in the world. We would say the reason that nothing like the supposed astounding event has ever been recorded in the past is that God's plan, in its every feature, is carried out in a quiet, majestic manner, without outward demonstration of any kind. The great Lord of heaven and earth, who is from everlasting to everlasting, accomplishes all His purposes with complete peace of mind and tranquillity of soul, without resort to spectacular show, for the important reason that God always appeals to the hearts of His people, and never to their natural emotions. Take an illustration in Luke 17:20—“When He was demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should come, He answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation.” We note the margin of that text, it says “or with outward show.”

Now think of how Christ came to Israel at His first advent. Today (Christmas Day) is the day which, to some extent anyway, is kept throughout the civilized world as being the anniversary of the birth of Christ. We can rejoice that there is some respect in this direction. In Luke 2:12, 16, we read “And this shall be a sign unto you: Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, and lying in a manger.” “And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.” Could there be anything more lowly and unspectacular in the coming of Jesus to the world of mankind? Then again, in noting the prophet Zachariah 9:9, we have a very beautiful example given of Christ presenting Himself to Jerusalem. This is what the prophet proclaimed of Him—“Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass.” The meek Jesus of Nazareth, presenting himself to Israel, lowly and riding on an ass! Nothing of an outward show and splendour, surely!

Then we come to John the Baptist's words in John 1:26, and read (John was proclaiming this One who was greater than he, the One of whom he was not worthy to unlatch his shoes)—“John answered them, saying, I baptize with water; but there standeth one among you, whom ye know not.” John was here announcing the Messiah as standing among them, of whom they knew not. To think of it! The Lord of Glory present, the Saviour, Christ the Lord, in Israel, and yet “there standeth one among you whom ye know not!”

What of our Lord's second advent? Does God's method of revelation differ from that of the first advent?

In Matt. 24:37-39 Jesus gave His great prophecy in respect of the days of His presence. “But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.” “The days of Noah” and “the days of the Son of man.” When we think of the “days of Noah,” we can see it is not the days of Noah's coming, can't we? “As it was in the days of Noah,” such and such a thing took place. Noah was not referred to as coming from anywhere.

It undoubtedly refers to the days of the building of the Ark, the period of time during which Noah was preaching righteousness, while the world went on its own way, ignorant and undesirous of knowing what this great man of God was doing. So should it be in the days of the Son of Man, the period of the days of the Son of man. The comparison is not with the exact moment of Christ’s coming; that word “coming” should rightly be translated “presence.” “So should be the presence of the Son of man.” What a comparison it is, that period of time in Noah’s day and the period of time in the days of the Son of man, the closing period of this Gospel Age! It means the days, then, of Christ’s presence.

So we would say that our Lord undoubtedly has now, in the end of this Gospel Age, come to conduct the closing scenes. Mankind has gone on its own way all down the six thousand years of its history. Christ was sent nearly two thousand years ago; He has been calling out a people for His name during the Gospel Age, and now He comes to close this feature of His plan and take His people to His heavenly kingdom.

So we see, dear friends, Christ has come not only to Melbourne, to Sydney, Canberra, Perth, Geelong, Digby and Healesville, etc., but has come to every place wherever His people are found. But how few there are! “When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?” —faith of that quality that will be looking for Him? Or shall they be going on as in the days of Noah, eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage—absorbed in the things that support the physical life, ignorant of the presence of this great One who has come now to take His people to Himself.

In the days of John the Baptist, “There standeth One among you whom ye know not.” Now again, the same is true “in the days of the presence of the Son of man.”

Matt. 24:40-42 reads, “Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.” How often have we read this in the past! We have often thought that one was taken to heaven and the other left behind. But is that the answer? Let us turn to Luke 17:34-37—“I tell you, in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left. Two women shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken, and the other left. And they answered and said unto Him, Where, Lord? And He said unto them, Wheresoever the body is, thither will the eagles be gathered together.” Here is an answer from the Lord which shows us distinctly that it is not a matter of one being taken up to heaven and the other left on the earth. He is explaining that there is a separating going on here on earth, because of a particular food that is observed and appreciated by a special class. He draws the illustration of the eagles. We know just what characteristics represent those birds, they have very sharp eyes and perception. So the Christians who are awake can perceive the precious things of God’s Word, and they are gathered together. Whithersoever the food is, there will the eagles be gathered together. So it is that in this time of the Lord’s presence there has been for some considerable time and still is, a gathering together of those who appreciate good things when they find them. They have “tasted that the Lord is gracious.” They must come together and feast on these things, and they have hope and confidence in respect of the glorious Kingdom of God and the work the Lord has promised they shall do in it, and to do now joyfully in His service.

All this is taking place during the “days of the Son of man,” not in a particular moment of a day or night, as we often hear it expressed, The Lord might come tonight and take this or that one away. No, these are the days of His presence, just as in the days of Noah he was present before the Flood. Reading again in Matt. 24:43, “But know this, that if the good man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up.” There again we have the unexpected, unobserved presence of Christ depicted, as a thief; So Christ comes in the end of this Gospel Age unknown to any except the sharp-eyed Christians.

Matt. 24:31 reads, “And He shall send His angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together His elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.” Here again we have the Lord using an illustration of the gathering of His people. This is a description of what is taking place in the days of the Son of man. It means, not the heavens above, but the heavens in which His people have been associated together for some considerable time, the ecclesiastical heavens. One is taken and the other left. Gathering together His elect from one end of heaven to the other. Yes, the systems have existed all down the Gospel Age, but in the end of the age association with worldliness has become so pronounced that the Lord has to reject these systems, and calls His people out by the message of truth. From one end of heaven to the other the trumpet sound goes forth, and finds one here, one there.

What is it, then, that attracts? Where the body is, the food is, thither will the eagles be gathered together. When once we have a taste of this food we would not be interested in any way in what is being distributed in other spheres; it does not satisfy in the least. When we have the Truth, the Word of God in its purity, harmonious right throughout, it surely satisfies our longings as nothing else can do.

Passing now to Luke 12:35-38, we read “Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when He will return from the wedding; that when He cometh and knocketh, they may open unto Him immediately. Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when He cometh shall find watching: verily I say unto you, that He shall gird Himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them. And if He shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants.” Yes, at whatever time the Lord’s parousia is discerned, is grasped and appreciated by any of His people, and He finds them so, blessed are those servants.

Let us note that those to whom the Lord refers are already His servants, and would know much of His plan, but now the time is shown as being ready for additional food, fitting for the end of the Age. The revealing of the Master’s presence, then, has been one of the most momentous events in all the history of the Church. We think, too, of the resurrection of the sleeping saints revealed at this time, and the clear understanding of the Covenants of God, in harmony with the various dispensations of the ages, also the revealing of the important doctrine of the Sin-offerings— that the consecrated saints are counted in with their Lord and Head to participate in the blood of the New Covenant. But why should this knowledge and heart appreciation of these truths be necessary? How often have we heard it said, It does not matter very much what we believe, the main thing is we love the Lord and gather together to praise and worship Him. Well, would we place ourselves in the hands of an ignorant man if we had a broken leg? Would an engineering firm engage a farmer to construct intricate machinery? Is the Lord less careful, then, in employing assistants for His Heavenly Kingdom?

Taking Rev. 7:2-4, we find an important message, “And I saw another angel ascending from the east, having the seal of the living God; and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea, saying, Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads. And I heard the number of them which were sealed: and there were sealed an hundred and forty and four thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel.”

Now it says, “Hold back the winds,” “till we have sealed the servants of God in their foreheads.” What can this mean? It certainly shows that there are some very important intellectual truths to be conveyed to God’s true people, and there will be great commotions on earth when these are sealed in their foreheads. This does not mean that God alters His plan because His people are not ready at a particular time, but it does mean that God has such an oversight in respect of His people that He arranges that the trouble shall not come too soon, until all have been intellectually made acquainted with all features of His plan necessary to fit them for the life beyond the veil. We might say then, Would the Lord select an assistant in His Kingdom not fully conversant with the operations of the New Covenant? Some of our friends who have been in the Truth believe the New Covenant is operating in this Gospel Age. Wouldn’t they be out of harmony with God’s plan on the other side to find that it was to operate with Israel in the next age?

What about the resurrection of the sleeping saints? If this is not known now, how could the saints co-operate on the other side with those already raised? So with all the truths, the Lord’s people must be intellectually acquainted, this side of the veil, if they are going to be proved worthy assistants on the other side. “Until the servants of God are sealed in their foreheads.” Can’t we see that it matters very much what we believe and why we believe it? We must receive the truth into our minds that it might sink into our hearts and we make it our own.

So we see that in addition to the fundamentals that have been held by God’s people all down through the Age, such as the ransom, justification, consecration, sanctification, resurrection and times of restitution, there are these additional features that will prove whether one is worthy to be of this Bride class. It is not a matter of loving the Lord and taking an easy cross, asleep in Zion. That is the Lord’s condemnation of the aodicean period of the Churches, neither hot nor cold. “I would thou wert cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth.” (Rev. 3:14-16.)

That is the reason the Lord is sending forth His angels to gather His elect from the four winds, from the one end of heaven to the other, that He might find the true ones, those prepared and who delight to have the principles implanted in their hearts and minds, and thus become fitted for service beyond.

We see in v. 4 of Revelation 7, that 144,000 are sealed. We might ask then, What about those who passed on all through the age? Would it not be essential that these also be made acquainted and prepared to assist Christ in His Kingdom? There is a very helpful parable in Luke 19:11-16—“And as they heard these things, He added and spake a parable, because He was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear. He said therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return. And he called his servants, and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come. But his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us. And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded these servants to be called unto him, to whom he had given the money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading. Then came the first, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds. And he said unto him, Well, thou good servant; because thou hast been faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities.” Another was given authority over five cities, and so on.

What inference can we take from this parable? We see that at the time of his return the nobleman—who represented our Lord—deals with those to whom, figuratively speaking, he gave a pound to deal with, and inquires of them what use they made of it. Here we have the Lord’s promise that they should be over five cities, or ten cities. Keeping in mind that at the resurrection the dead in Christ should be raised first, is it not reasonable to think that the risen saints are being installed in office, and made acquainted with those very truths of the Harvest which they had not had the privilege of knowing during their lifetime? There is a period, undoubtedly, in which the risen saints are being installed with authority over ten cities and over five cities, which is the Lord’s way of explaining how they are to be associated with Him in the conduct of His heavenly kingdom. But “We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment.” The saints living during the harvest time having been made acquainted, on this side of the veil, with all the features of the plan, are ready to be associated with the risen saints and their Lord, and the Marriage of the Lamb taking place, all are ready to conduct the Kingdom work and bring blessings upon mankind in general, following the great time of trouble.

So, dear friends, it is our privilege to appreciate these things to the fullest extent, not to be content with the appreciation of certain truths only, but that we might make fullest use of these truths specially given to fit us now for the glorious inheritance of the saints in light.

In conclusion, Rev. 3:20, the message to Laodicea, is undoubtedly applicable to this closing period in which we are living. There we have the Lord’s words to us, “Behold, I stand at the door and knock. “ Yes, the Lord is standing at the door and knocking on the hearts of His true people—”If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with Me.”

To think that the Lord would give us this promise of rich blessings for those who appreciate the days in which we are living! We might say, then, that we should be on guard against even activity in the Lord’s work, and allowing it to absorb all our time. We have a very precious privilege, yet we cannot witness to the world with the truths of the Harvest time. If it were that we should allow the Harvest truths to become dimmed or in any way not so much appreciated, we would be the loser. It would be possible for one to lose their crown on that account. So let us be on guard, every one of us, to appreciate first things first, and rejoice also in the privileges of communicating the Lord’s words to others, the milk of the Word to babes and also strong meat to those able to digest it.

As we go on our Christian way, may we strive to appreciate the deep and precious truths of God’s Word that pertain to the members of the Lord’s Body, becoming sealed in our foreheads, and ready to be taken and associated in the Little Flock to whom it is the Father’s good pleasure to give the Kingdom.

PEOPLES PAPER AND HERALD OF CHRIST’S KINGDOM.

Convention News.

THE Easter Convention at Adelaide has proved to be a very helpful season of spiritual blessing and refreshment.

Our hearts go out in thankfulness and praise to the “Giver of every good and perfect gift,” for His blessings bestowed upon our gatherings during the four-day Convention. Each Convention as it passes is said to be the “best yet,” and expressions to this effect were heard among the friends at the close of our gatherings.

The theme that seemed to dominate our studies and talks was that of the preparation of ourselves for the entering in to the “marriage of the Lamb.” The development in our own hearts of the fruits and graces of the Lord’s spirit, we realize to be the chief concern of the children of God. We trust that the many helpful thoughts and Scriptures upon which we were permitted to dwell, may have the effect of deepening the work of grace in our hearts in the days before us, as we seek with humbled and chastened spirits to yield ourselves to the great Divine Fashioner who is working in us more and more the good pleasure of His will. Events around all speak to us of the very near approach of the Kingdom, and the inspired Apostle asks “What manner of persons ought we to be in all holy living and godliness?” How carefully we must hearken to the Word of God, and with what diligence must we seek to apply it to our hearts and lives if we would be “more than conquerors” in the Christian fight. Every one who has the hope of being “like Christ” and of seeing Him “as He is,” will surely purify himself “even as He is pure.” Our earnest prayer on behalf of His consecrated people everywhere, is that God may “strengthen us with all strength according to His glorious power, unto all patience and longsuffering with joyfulness.”

We were glad to welcome to our gatherings some brethren from Melbourne, as well as some from country parts of S.A. The Bible studies chosen for our meditation were Col. 1:10-19; Psa. 37:7-16; 2 Peter 3:11-18, and 1 John 3:1-9. The topics of the addresses by various brethren were: “Keep yourselves in the love of God”; “Ready Made Things, or Things Made Ready”; “Possibilities”; “Rebuilding”; “The Inconsistencies of Life”; “The Hope of Immortality”; and “Love’s Victory over Fear.” The Praise and Testimony meeting, and Fellowship meeting “A Hymn I like and why?” added to the general helpfulness of the occasion. Also provision was made for a Question meeting and Discussion on “What Spiritual things do you consider should occupy most of our attention?”

We were glad to receive greetings and messages of Scripture from various brethren and Classes. To these our appreciation and warmest Christian love is extended with the Scriptural greeting found in the words of John 17:21-24.

The Convention closed with the usual Love Feast and singing of “Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love” and “God be with you till we meet again.”

Memorial Observances.

Melbourne

THE brethren in Melbourne gladly assembled on the evening of April 14th to observe the Memorial of Christ's death, esteeming it a great privilege to thus remember their Lord and Saviour in the particular manner He requested.

The studies held previous to the occasion assisted to centre the minds of all upon "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." Apart from two or three members observing the Memorial with other gatherings of the Lord's people, the full number of our dear friends was present.

The beautiful hymns appropriate to the occasion, the Scripture readings pertaining to Christ's last hours on earth, the helpful address revealing both type and antitype of the Passover and the prayers of thankfulness for God's great mercy and favour to us and His dear people everywhere, together with the realisation of God's blessing upon, the service, made it a most solemn yet uplifting celebration in memory of our dear Redeemer, and again showing confirmation of the vows of consecration to be dead with Christ on the part of all the dear members participating..

Partaking of the emblems of unleavened bread (picturing our Lord's perfect body, broken for us) and wine' (representing Christ's blood shed on our behalf), both the: primary and deeper meanings were thankfully realised, to the Lord's praise, and the sentiments of our hearts are: beautifully expressed in the words "I'm not my own, dear Lord—to Thee My every power, by right, belongs: My privilege to serve I see,

Thy praise to raise in tuneful songs.
And so, beside Thy sacrifice,
I would lay down my little all.
'Tis lean and poor, I must confess;
I would that it were not so small."

Geelong, Vic.

A little band of members of the newly formed Bible Class in Geelong met together in sincerity and truth to observe the Memorial of the death of Christ our Passover Lamb.

While only about half the number which attended the institution of this Memorial on the night prior to our Lord's crucifixion, it was realised that all told the Lord's faithful people will be but "a little flock" in comparison with the multitudes of mankind, and the Lord esteems as very precious every member, who, being justified by faith in His shed blood delights to take up his or her cross in the footsteps of Christ — "to follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth." (Rev. 14:4.)

With these sentiments in heart, expressed in the prayers, hymns and Scripture readings, and realising what a great privilege it is to be called into the fellowship of God's dear Son, both as respects the sacrifice of this present life and the glory to follow, the emblems were partaken of with deep gratitude of heart to the Giver of every good thing. The response of heart on the part of each member seems so fittingly expressed in the lines "Lord, I would follow Thee in all the way Thy weary feet have trod; yes, if I may.

All that I am and have—Thy gifts so free All of my ransomed life, Dear Lord, for Thee!"

Digby and Merino, Vic.

We carried out the Memorial Service in honour and reverence to our Master. Together with our elderly members we devotedly, thankfully and prayerfully honoured our Master's great sacrifice. The 14th chapter of Mark was the Scripture mainly used, also John 14:23-27. Hymns sung were 224, 225, 190 and 208 from the old book. Others who also would be honouring our Lord and Master were remembered in prayer. It was a very nice and edifying little service.

Adelaide

Once again we were privileged to meet on Sunday evening, 14th of April, to keep the Memorial of our Lord's death. Twenty-three members participated. We feel that we are richly blessed in being favoured with the light of truth concerning the significance of the ransom-sacrifice of our Lord Jesus Christ; and the further privilege of being associated with our Lord and Head in being “broken” with Him, and with each other, as fellow-members of His “body.”

We thank God for the privilege that is ours, “not only to believe in Jesus but also to suffer for His sake.” We pray that in the coming days we may be faithful to the Lord, continuing to “keep the feast,”—feeding upon the Lamb, and the unleavened bread—the pure teachings of the Word of God. “Thanks be unto God, for His unspeakable Gift.” We remembered in prayer His dear people everywhere.

Sydney

The Sydney friends assembled at 7 p.m. on April 14th. There were fourteen present, but we believe some were prevented from coming by the heavy rain, especially those that live at a greater distance.

The spirit of the Lord was manifested amongst us, and we all resolved to be more worthy of our high calling, to strive still more earnestly to make our calling and election sure.

The chairman opened the celebration with a short speech of introduction and then we had a hymn (No. 325) and prayer was offered by a Brother present. After that there was a short address by another Brother. Attention was drawn to the type of the Passover during the night of the Exodus; then the antitypical significances were explained, supporting all this by a reading of Exodus 12:1-14 and Matthew 26:17-30. Then the significance of this to us at this present time was pointed to, closing with praise to God for His stupendous love and mercy.

The closing part of the address consisted of an exhortation to the brethren to drive out all leaven of malice and worldliness, to remember that they must love the brethren if they would be worthy to partake of the Lord’s Supper, The address ended with an allusion to the great climax of the ages and the Hallelujah Chorus which would then be ringing throughout the universe.

After that the elements were prayed for by two other Brothers and dispensed to the friends. Then, after a hymn (No. 15) the brethren dispersed. It was cheering to see many old faces, who, though rarely attending studies, never miss appearing at this celebration.

Burnie, Tasmania

We gathered on Nisan 14th to gladly comply with our Redeemer’s request to “do this in remembrance of me.” The afternoon was taken up with thoughts given on the type found in Exod. 12:5-14.

In verse 5 we endeavoured to draw attention to the outstanding types only, as true antitypes, easily recognised. Our dear Redeemer’s sinless and absolute purity is shown, and its necessity for a corresponding price for Adam lightly touched on.

Verse 6 suggests our Saviour’s offering himself to the Laodicean church in the well known words, “Behold, I stand at the door and knock.” (Rev. 3:20.) The killing of the lamb was an absolute necessity, but in His case was done by those who rejected Him, and as Pharaoh relied on his wise men and idols, so the professing Laodicean Church prefer theirs, and thus “kill Him” so far as they are concerned, preferring their Barabas.

Verse 7 shows the importance and meaning to us of the blood of Jesus. Our necessity to see that we are depending on that alone also suggests that before we can “eat the flesh” understandingly we must have the blood on the door posts and lintels of our hearts.

Verse 8. The night time of sin and death has been and is the time when His followers must “eat His flesh and drink His blood” else there will be no life in them, in a sinless state and with bitter experiences.

The further verses revealed many beautiful thoughts. In verse 22 it is interesting and solemn to note that the Israelites were not to leave their houses until the morning.

In the account in John 20:7 we read, “And the napkin that was about His head was not lying with the linen clothes but wrapped together in a place by itself.” Would not this account have a meaning? Is it not a blessed thought that it pictures our dear Redeemer (Head), no longer requiring the grave clothes (napkin), and the remainder left for the privilege of His body members to use, until the last one has finished his course; we must all antitypically wear them.

At the little ceremony all partaking everywhere were remembered at the throne of grace. We had a very solemn but happy time.

(No further Reports on the Memorial are to hand as this Issue goes to press.)

The Bible Viewed in the Light of Reason.

THE Bible is the torch of civilization and liberty. Its influence for good in society has been recognized by the greatest statesmen, even though they for the most part have looked at it through the various glasses of conflicting creeds, which, while upholding the Bible, grievously misrepresent its teachings. The grand old book is unintentionally but woefully misrepresented by its friends, many of whom would lay down life on its behalf; and yet they do it more vital injury than its foes, by claiming its support to their long-revered misconceptions of its truth, received through the traditions of their fathers. Would that such would awake, re-examine their oracle, and put to confusion its enemies by disarming them of their weapons!

The Bible is the oldest book in existence; it has outlived the storms of thirty centuries. Men have endeavoured by every means possible to banish it from the face of the earth: they have hidden it, buried it, made it a crime punishable with death to have it in possession, and the most bitter and relentless persecutions have been waged against those who had faith in it; but still the book lives.

The fact that it has survived so many centuries, notwithstanding such unparalleled efforts to banish and destroy it, is at least strong circumstantial evidence that the great Being whom it claims as its Author has also been its Preserver.

This book throughout constantly points and refers to one prominent character, Jesus of Nazareth, who it claims, was the Son of God. From beginning to end His name, and office, and work, are made prominent. That a man called Jesus of Nazareth lived, and was somewhat noted, about the time indicated by the writers of the Bible, is a fact of history outside the Bible, and it is variously and fully corroborated. That this Jesus was crucified because He had rendered Himself offensive to the Jews and their priesthood is a further fact established by history outside the evidence furnished by the New Testament writers. The writers of the New Testament (except Paul and Luke) were the personal acquaintances and disciples of Jesus of Nazareth, whose doctrines their writings set forth.

One plan, spirit, aim and purpose pervades the entire book. Its opening pages record the creation and fall of man; its closing pages tell of man's recovery from that fall; and its intervening pages show the successive steps of the plan of God for the accomplishment of this purpose. The harmony, yet contrast, of the first three and the last three chapters of the Bible is striking. The one describes the first creation, the other the renewed or restored creation, with sin and its penal-curse removed; the one shows Satan and evil entering into the world to deceive and destroy, the other shows his work undone, the destroyed ones restored, evil extinguished and Satan destroyed; the one shows the dominion lost by Adam, the other shows it restored and forever established by Christ, and God's will done in earth as in heaven; the one shows sin the producing cause of degradation, shame and death, the other shows the reward of righteousness to be glory, honour and life.

Though written by many pens, at various times, under different circumstances, the Bible is not merely a collection of moral precepts, wise maxims and words of comfort. It is more: it is a reasonable, philosophical and harmonious statement of the causes of present evil in the world, its only remedy and the final results as seen by divine wisdom, which saw the end of the plan from before its beginning, marking as well the pathway of God's people, and upholding and strengthening them with exceeding great and precious promises to be realized in due time.

The teaching of Genesis, that man was tried in a state of original perfection in one representative, that he failed, and that the present imperfection, sickness and death are the results, but that God has not forsaken him, and will ultimately recover him through a redeemer, born of a woman (Gen. 3:15), is kept up and elaborated all the way through. The necessity of the death of a redeemer as a sacrifice for sins, and of his righteousness as a covering for our sin, is pointed out in the clothing of skins for Adam and Eve; in the acceptance of Abel's offerings; in Isaac on the altar; in the death of the various sacrifices by which the patriarchs had access to God, and of those instituted under the law and perpetuated throughout the Jewish age. The prophets, though credited with understanding but slightly the significance of some of their utterances (1 Pet. 1:12), mention the laying of the sins upon a person instead of a dumb animal, and in prophetic vision they see Him who is to redeem and to deliver the race led "as a lamb to the slaughter," that "the chastisement of our peace was upon Him," and that "by His stripes we are healed." They pictured Him as "despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief," and declared that "The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all." (Isa. 53:3-6.) They told where the deliverer would be born (Micah 5:2), and when He should die, assuring us that it would be “not for Himself.” (Dan. 9:26.) They mention various peculiarities concerning Him—that He would be “righteous,” and free from “deceit,” “violence,” or any just cause of death (Isa. 53:8, 9, 1) ; that He would be betrayed for thirty pieces of silver (Zech. 11 :

12) ; that He would be numbered among transgressors in His death (Isa. 53:12) ; that not a bone of Him should be broken (Psa. 34:20; John 19:36) ; and that though He should die and be buried, His flesh would not corrupt, neither would He remain in the grave.—Psa. 16:10; Acts 2:31.

The New Testament writers clearly and forcibly, yet simply, record the fulfilment of all these predictions in Jesus of Nazareth, and by logical reasonings show that such a ransom price as He gave was needful, as already predicted in the Law and the Prophets, before the sins of the world could be blotted out. (Isa. 1:18.) They trace the entire plan in a most logical and forcible manner, appealing neither to the prejudices nor to the passions of their hearers, but to their enlightened reason alone, furnishing some of the most remarkably close and cogent reasoning to be found anywhere on any subject. See Rom. 5:17-19, and onward to the 12th chapter.

Moses, in the Law, pointed not alone to a sacrifice, but also a blotting out of sin and a blessing of the people under this great deliverer, whose power and authority he declares shall vastly exceed his own, though it should be “like unto” it. (Deut. 18:15, 19.) The promised deliverer is to bless not only Israel, but through Israel “all the families of the earth.” (Gen. 12:3; 18:18; 22:18; 26:4.)

These writers point out the harmony of this view with what is written in the Law and the Prophets; and the grandeur and breadth of the plan they present more than meets the most exalted conception of what it purports to be—“Good tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people.”

The thought of Messiah as a ruler of not only Israel, but also of the world, suggested in the books of Moses, is the theme of all the prophets. The thought of the kingdom was uppermost also in the teaching of the apostles; and Jesus taught that we should pray, “Thy Kingdom come,” and promised those a share in it who would first suffer for the truth, and thus prove themselves worthy.

This hope of the coming glorious kingdom gave all the faithful ones courage to endure persecution and to suffer reproach, deprivation and loss, even unto death. And in the grand allegorical prophecy which closes the New Testament, the worthy “Lamb that was slain” (Rev. 5:12), the worthy “overcomers” whom He will make kings and priests in His Kingdom, and the trials and obstacles which they must overcome to be worthy to share that kingdom, are all faithfully portrayed. Then are introduced symbolic representations of the blessings to accrue to the world under that Millennial reign, when Satan shall be bound and Adamic death and sorrow wiped out, and when all the nations of earth shall walk in the light of the heavenly kingdom — the new Jerusalem.

The Bible, from first to last, holds out a doctrine found nowhere else, and in opposition to the theories of all the heathen religions—that a future life for the dead will come through a RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Friends.—Sister , of

has just written to remind me that the time has once again come along for forwarding the subscriptions for the - Peoples Paper.” 20/- will therefore be placed to your credit in the Melbourne Post Office, and as usual 10/- of this will be on behalf of Sister There has been no change in the affairs of the Class here since we wrote last, and at the time of writing the studies are in 1st Peter, and there is one study only on Sundays.

Might the suggestion be offered that at some convenient time the “Peoples Paper” draw attention to the benefits to be derived from the use of the Revised Version in preference to the so-called Authorised Version in Bible study. Some, of course, have surrounded the Authorised Version with a halo of pious veneration and sacred associations, assuming that the actual English words were “verbally inspired.”

Agrippa’s words

How many addresses have been based on Agrippa’s words in Acts 26:28, “almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian?” Sankey even based a hymn on the phrase. The Revised and other translations make it plain that Agrippa neither thought nor said these words, and there is no reason to suppose he was influenced by what Paul had said. As Moffat’s translation so tersely puts it, “At this rate it won’t be long before you believe you have made a Christian of me.”

How many have puzzled over the words in John 13:10, “He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet.” Two different words as well as different tenses are used in the original. “He that hath been bathed needeth not save to wash his feet.”

The Authorised Version has no right to state in 1 Tim. 6:10 that “the love of money is the root of all evil.” The R.V. gives the proper aspect: “it is a root of all kinds of evil.” How much clearer is the R.V. rendering of verse 5, “supposing that godliness is a way of gain,” instead of “supposing that gain is godliness.”

Strain at a gnat

Some people imagine, when they read Matt. 23:24, “Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat and swallow a camel,” someone choking from a fly in the throat. The reference is to filtering small foreign particles out of wine before it is drunk.

In Matt. 2:16, the A.V., states that Herod killed all the children in Bethlehem, where the R.V., correctly states that only the male children were killed. Even the careless use of the articles “a” and “the” in the A.V. alters the sense of many passages. We know how important the proper use of the article is in John 1:1, and this is equally true in many other instances. Matt. 4:5, “on a pinnacle of the temple,” as if there were many pinnacles; the pinnacle is correct.

Matt. 5:1, “He went up into a mountain,” instead of the mountain. John 3:10, “Art thou the teacher in Israel,” not a teacher. Acts 17:23, “the unknown God” is a logical contradiction; an unknown God is the correct translation. There are many other examples where the superior translation of the Revised Version is of great importance.

The friends here unite in sending their Christian love; sincerely.

(The above is gladly submitted for the benefit of our readers as a whole; while the Authorised Version is beautiful as respects the language, for general reading, yet it is well known by Bible students that other versions, such as the Revised Version, Emphatic Diaglott, etc., are absolutely essential as helps to the correct understanding of the Scriptures. It is the hope that it may be possible to publish in the “Peoples Paper” shortly the differences in translation of the three most reliable manuscripts of the New Testament, as compared with the Authorised Version.—B.B. Institute.)

Dear Sirs,—I have been listening to your broadcast dialogues, and I find them generally very interesting and instructive. I was particularly glad to hear your exposition of the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. If only people who believe that this portion of Christ's words supports their belief in "immortal souls" going to heaven and hell could be induced to face the passage honestly and analyse it as you have done, they would perhaps be able to appreciate the Truth about immortality and death.

If you can spare them I would like several copies of the Dialogue on "The Rich Man and Lazarus," and one of the other booklets you recommend, "Some of the Parables," I think. Thanking you, I am, Yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs,—I would be very glad if you would forward your broadcast Dialogues. I would be prepared to send you postage ; you could send them monthly or weekly as you would find it most convenient. I am not asking this favour for myself ; we are able to hear each broadcast, but my parents live at and so are unable to hear.

I will enclose 1/6 in stamps, and if any more is needed please send me word and I will forward it to you. Thanking you in anticipation ; Yours sincerely.

Dear Friends,—I just want to acknowledge receipt of the booklet "Hope Beyond the Grave," which I received about three weeks ago, and I thank you for it, also the papers and other booklets, etc., which you have forwarded as well.

I have read them and found them most interesting; I do hope that in time I shall be able to derive some comfort and assurance from them and their interpretation of the Bible, which I do think is very difficult for the average person to understand and reconcile the many seeming contradictions it contains.

I am enclosing a postal note for 3/- as a very small contribution towards the work you are doing. Once again thanking you for all the trouble and interest you have shown. I remain; Sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs.—I have been a listener for some time to your Talks and I like them very much and I am trying to get others to listen-in. Would you please send me a copy of your booklet "Hope Beyond the Grave." I may get others to read it, too. I remain, Yours sincerely.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sirs,—Having been introduced to the book "The Divine Plan of the Ages," by Mr.

I would like to have a copy of my own, also some to pass to others. As I do not know the price I am enclosing a 1 note for books and postage. I would like at least three copies. If amount enclosed is not sufficient I will forward the balance to you. Yours fraternally.

Tracts Available.

Two newly printed tracts are available for all our friends who can use them to advantage. The one "Refrain Thy Voice from Weeping, and Thine Eyes from Tears," contains a helpful message of comfort to all the bereaved, as well as being suitable for general use. The smaller tract, "The High Calling of God," is also a very good message for general use. It is not intended that these tracts be placed indiscriminately, but rather delivered where there is desire for help in understanding the Bible. These tracts are free, being supplied from the General Tract Fund.

Hopes and Difficulties of the New Creation

(Convention Address)

WHAT do we know about the new creature, or the New Creation? There are four passages of Scriptures which we wish to read. The first passage is found in 2 Cor. 5:14-17. "For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge that if one died for all, then were all dead; and that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto Him which died for them, and rose again." Now 2 Cor. 4:7—"But we have this treasure in earthen vessels; that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us."

Now let us turn to Col. 3:9-11. "Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds; and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him; where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free; but Christ is all, and in all." It does not matter what nationality a person may be. The trend of propaganda of late has been such as to cause some concern, doubtless, among some of the brethren. But the New Creature does not recognise anything like that. There is no discrimination about class distinctions or such like. There is neither male nor female, so far as the New Creature is concerned.

Now we come to the last passage, Rom. 8:10-14. It suggests fight. It will be a fight, and there will be no apologies. "If Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the spirit is life because of righteousness. But if the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you. Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh. For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if ye through the spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live. For as many as are led by the spirit of God, they are the sons of God."

Perhaps this topic of the New Creature may sound elementary. We that have been in the Truth for 20 years or longer, think we know all about it. Maybe we do, or did. Why say "we did?" We are at best leaky vessels. We forget. One long ago used an illustration that we are like a collander, we have to keep pouring something in to have anything there at all. So it is necessary for us to have our minds stirred up by way of remembrance. During this Convention we have been reminded of a number of truths that caused us joy in the past, and somehow or other their glamour or beauty became dimmed. But our minds were refreshed when they were drawn to our attention by various brethren; perhaps they dealt with their subjects from a different angle. So this New Creation is a subject of vital concern and we want to analyse it and look into it a little closer at this time.

This idea of a New Creature seems, to the outsider, like a fable, a fantasia, a fairy story. Is the New Creature actual, or is it reckoned? That is a question we might consider. In time of old God spoke to those who loved Him by signs and miracles and wonders, but now He does not speak to us that way. Everything is by faith. It requires the exercise of faith for us to determine whether we are New Creatures. Are we New Creatures? Let us ask ourselves, each one, Am I a New Creature? Are we different from anyone else? If you take any other small body of Christian people, they would be something similar I suppose, perhaps they are a little peculiar about their dress, certain clothing or something of the kind; but there is freedom here, the spirit of liberty. There is no formalism. There are many other things that are different. Well, how are we different from anyone else? There are the same physical expressions, with variations. The contours of our bodies may be different, but nevertheless we cannot determine about the New Creature that way. How are we going to determine it? Is it because we are Bible Students? Does that make us a New Creature?

"If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature. Old things have passed away, all things are become new." That is the answer to it. Are we in Christ?—You can supply the answer.

There is a Scripture which says, "Of His own Will begat He us with the word of Truth, that we might be a kind of first-fruits of His creatures." Now what precedes this begetting? We know full well that there comes a time when we realise our undone condition, we have struggled and tried to get out of the meshes of the Adversary ourselves, but the way has been opened up to us to proceed, through faith in our Lord we can get deliverance, by various processes we receive the full benefits of justification, and by faith in Him we consecrate our all. Then we are begotten of His spirit.

Now that is something. That is not reckoned. That is actual. There is a certain amount of reckoning to be done before we are finished. But that begetting is actual.

Now let us look at the matter in a nutshell. We have the new mind dwelling in us, and controlling our thoughts and words and our actions as far as possible in the present life. Then the deficiency is made up through the benefits of our Lord Jesus' righteousness allotted on our behalf. He makes up for our deficiency. "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature, old things are passed away, all things are become new." From God's standpoint it is a New Creature, but still from the other standpoint it is a reckoned matter. That begetting has to be supplemented with nourishment and development, so that it can come forth to the birth. So there will be a fair amount of reckoning going on in order to demonstrate whether we are worthy to be brought to the birth as individuals.

Now we would say that with these old bodies, these old frames with their disabilities and peculiarities, the experience we are gaining and will gain is to be of untold value to us when we reach the goal, when we are born of the spirit. And there is another reason, so that the excellency will be of God, and not of us. We will realise that we are what we are by the grade of God, and that it is through Him that we have been brought to the birth and given such a wonderful and glorious reward.

So much now for the New Creation. The new mind is really in control, or should be, has to be, but the old man tries to assert itself, and consequently we have this treasure in earthen vessels. We have obligations. We will consider some of these obligations which come first.

Of course, primarily the spiritual ones come first, but supplementary to these there are certain obligations that we cannot disregard. It is no use thinking, I am a New Creature. I am not going to worry about the home and so on; well, that is not done. Your obligations first go to your parents, those to whom you are indebted for life. Certain responsibilities have to be discharged, you have to think of them and look after them. Then there are brethren according to the flesh, and obligations have to be attended to. You cannot let them slide because you are a New Creature. There are obligations to all around, too. Those obligations would still be there, from the New Creature's standpoint. There is a beautiful story I heard recently concerning the north of Canada, where the place was covered with ice and snow. There was a party of hunters, it was getting near nightfall and they wanted to get across the lake. Their old Indian guide was busy chopping away with an axe, and they were getting quite anxious about it, and took him to task saying, "We want to get across before the darkness overtakes us." The Indian said, "I was busy cutting some kindling ready for the next lot of people who come along. It is a way we have here, to leave a little more than we found." Now that is only a simple illustration, but when we visualise the conditions that prevail, those people would have been in difficulties had it not been for the old Indian. So it is in our dealings with the world around, it is our duty to see that we help and assist, and do not disregard our obligations. •There are certain obligations to those in the world around.

Now we come to our spiritual obligations. Primarily, of course, they are to God, because He is our Father. "Of His own will begat He us with the Word of Truth," and "Worthy is He to be praised," because all that we are and have and hope for is as a result of His loving kindness. Hz it was who lifted us from that condemnation, and only too well we sense the relief to get away from the toils of Satan; what a hard taskmaster he was, and how exacting he was!

Surely if there is no reciprocity on our part or any sense of loving the Lord and doing all we can for Him, then there is something wrong.

Then, too, we have our Lord Jesus, and of course naturally we confess Him before men and seek to discharge our obligations there. But, you know, it is a good while since the Master was here. We think, if we had been there with Him what wouldn't we have done! Well, how are we behaving with the members of His body, the brethren? If we show our love for them, we are showing it for Him. Do we love the brethren? "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" (1 John 4:20). But I do not hate my brother, you will say. No. Did God hate Esau in the sense that we think of "hatred?" No, He loved Jacob, and Esau He hated, but that word "hated" means "loved less." It means, in John, if we love our brother less, we are in darkness. It implies that we must have love for all the brethren, 100 per cent. If not, we are in darkness.

Are we to know them after the flesh or after the spirit? —that is the determining factor, and that is where our obligations lie, after the spirit. Do we love the Truth, the Lord? Do we put ourselves out to attend the meetings? Strive to be in all activities? Do we give evidence of the spirit? We have to love our brethren according to the spirit 100 per cent. If we do so, we serve the Lord Christ.

Now maybe you have heard the difference between a specialist and a general practitioner. A specialist is supposed to know more and more about less and less. A general practitioner is supposed to know less and less about more and more. Well, we have to be specialists.

Now having begun in the spirit, are we to finish in the flesh? We made progress, maybe, in our spiritual warfare, and are we going to finish in the flesh, look at the brethren according to the flesh, and tittle-tattle about them? If we do, we are looking at them from the fleshly standpoint. If we are going to become specialists, we are going to know more and more about less and less. We will specialise on the spiritual things. It is a grand thing to have a knowledge of the Truth in its minutiae, all its details. But you know, though we have all knowledge and have not love, it profiteth us nothing. The thing that will count will be the New Creature. So do you wonder that there is so much specialisation upon the New Creature? It has been dealt with from different angles right throughout the Convention. It is essential that we should specialise, and we should see to it that we bend every endeavour that this New Creature is developed. We will not ignore our obligations to our natural relatives, but we will specialise in seeing that the New Creature is nourished and developed and brought to the birth.

Now we come to the hopes of the New Creation. What are the hopes? Well, what do we find? The hopes in the Scriptures are to this effect. “Know ye not that through much tribulation shall ye enter the kingdom?” “He that findeth his life shall lose it; but he that loseth his life for my sake and the Gospel’s, the same shall obtain a hundredfold in this life, and in that to come, eternal life.” “The servant is not above his master; if they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you.” Those are the hopes we have before us in this life.

Well, what about the next life? There is the hope of that body to be clothed upon, which the Apostle Paul was so concerned about. “Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is,” a glorious spirit being, the express image of the Father’s person, “whom no man hath seen or can see.” We can only conjecture what this new body will be like. It will far transcend principalities and powers, it will be something glorious. It is a difficult thing for us to appreciate these things, but there are the promises, showing you that it is no idle tale or fable. There are many exceeding great and precious promises.

The part that appeals most is that if we attain that glorious position of becoming New Creatures, actually born, then we will be joint-heirs with Christ to constitute that righteousness government, that administration for a New Order—not a New Order like that we hear of around the world, (we know how impotent their new orders are), but a form of government that will be equal to the occasion. It will have Divine wisdom directing it, and incidentally the part we play in it will depend upon how we use this old natural body which we have to practise on. The experience we have had will be of great value to us in helping the poor, groaning creation out of the condition into which Satan has precipitated them. Many of us, when we see the misery and suffering around us, and sense to a greater degree the suffering caused by war, feel we would like to be able to help them some way or other, and we strain at the leash, so to speak. The groaning creation are waiting—for what? “For the manifestation of the sons of God.” These, Christ and His Church will be instrumental in removing this pall over the whole world and ushering in the era of peace and joy and happiness.

“Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the glories which God hath in reservation for them that love him” supremely, when the work of cleaning up this earth eventuates. Who knows what work is in the future associated with the Master? This earth is going to be handed over to restored mankind, they will be kings in the earth themselves. Men will be lords of creation then, the creation of earth. We will be associated with the Master in ways we can only conjecture and surmise. But there is sufficient, I am sure, to warrant us in striving with more earnestness to seek to make our calling and election sure.

Friends, it is a privilege to be allowed by the Lord to be present with you. The changing conditions in the world, and the fact that brethren who were with us last Convention are no longer here, makes one strain every effort to contact the brethren and help them, because we know that “the time is at hand.”

Proposed New Edition of “Foregleams of the Golden Age.”

General Report B. B. Institute.

EACH year in the June issue of "Peoples Paper" a report is presented on the work of the Berean Bible Institute for the twelve months period ending at the close of April. As in the daily life and each opportunity of direct service for the Lord the thoughts of His people are lifted up in thankfulness to God for all blessings received, how much more is the desire to express gratitude and praise to our heavenly Father when reviewing, even briefly, twelve months of favours and privileges at His hands.

By the Lord's providence and grace, and the generous and loving help of a goodly number of the brethren the work of the Institute has continued and. some features have increased in the year past. This is encouraging, especially in view of the world-wide unrest following the conclusion of the World War.

The work generally is assisted by our monthly publication, "Peoples Paper and Herald of Christ's Kingdom." This is clearly indicated by the expressions of appreciation of the "Paper" from month to month, and we sincerely thank all friends who contribute to the pages of the journal, including those whose Convention addresses are published. While some increase in subscriptions to "Peoples Paper" is in evidence this periodical still needs support from the General Fund to cover its production. However, quantities of the "Paper" are supplied free in the witness work. Further, all names received for literature, from the radio witness and other sources, receive at least three months' free copies of the "Peoples Paper."

Since the end of the war more printing paper is obtainable and more tracts have been made available; two new tracts are procurable, namely, "Refrain Thy Voice From Weeping," and "The High Calling of God," as well as supplies of others. As these are much more expensive than in pre-war times, it is felt they should be placed with descretion. Kingdom Cards can be used liberally, and new printings of these will be made shortly.

The distribution of Consolation Cards by the Classes and various friends to bereaved persons, has been continued with some real good being done. This work can be taken up to advantage by others of our friends; all that is necessary is to mail the cards to those who have suffered bereavement and the invitation is thus given to apply for free literature. These cards, as well as the tracts and Kingdom Cards, are supplied free to all who can use them in the service of the Lord.

The holding of public meetings for preaching the Gospel message has been undertaken more over the past year, and the results have been most encouraging. Where good advertising is done over the air and in the press, drawing attention to timely subjects for the lectures, good attendances have been secured and good interest manifest. As a result of these public lectures, assisted by the broadcasts for some time previously, a Bible Class has been formed in the city of Geelong, Victoria. There is nothing more refreshing to the Lord's people than to find a sincere desire on the part of others to come to the Lord and learn of His precious truths, and also devote their lives to His service. It is the great privilege of all the brethren to be alert in their opportunities of proclaiming "in season and out of season" the glad message of salvation which so rejoices their own hearts.

As in former years, supplies of books and booklets have been despatched over a wide area, including overseas. At this time an edition of the book, "Plan of God—in Brief" is being published, and another edition of "Foregleams of the Golden Age" is contemplated. Further reference to these publications is made in this issue. A further supply of the children's book "The Ten Camels" has been printed in recent months. Books and booklets are supplied at reasonable prices, with reduction for quantities. Those friends who can arrange to devote some time to the distribution of books and booklets—in the colporteur work—should surely do so. Full information is available upon application.

The General Tract Fund below reveals the amount of voluntary financial assistance received from our friends towards the general work, as unto the Lord and by His providence. Many sacrifices no doubt are indicated in these contributions, especially in view of the fact that the Lord's people are of humble means. To be faithful in that which is least is the Lord's requirement of His people, wherever they see the opportunities of service for Him. So, in the expenses shown in the General Fund, these have been undertaken in service of our Lord to the best of our ability, and in ways which it is felt would be pleasing to Him. It will be seen that considerable assistance to the General Fund has been transferred from the Reserve Fund, thus enabling more to be done over the past year in the general work. The Reserve Fund was made possible by a generous contribution of earthly means to the service of the Lord.

While the opportunities for service of the truth are with us still, it is surely the greatest privilege possible for all the dear friends to give of their best to the Master's cause. With the conclusion of the global war, the spasms of unrest throughout the world seem to be on the increase, all of which are indications that this "present evil world" and the harvest time of this Gospel Age are drawing to a close. While all who love the Lord supremely continue to pray,

“Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth as in heaven,” they also are diligent in these last days of service on earth, by the Lord’s grace, seeking to make their own calling and election sure, and being real ambassadors for Christ on behalf of others who have hearing ears. The prayers of all friends are requested upon the work, that the Lord’s guidance and blessing may rest upon the efforts, to His praise and glory. “God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labour of love, which ye have showed toward His name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister. And we desire that every one of you do show the same diligence to the full assurance of hope unto the end: That ye be . . . followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises.” (Heb. 6:10-12.)

The Radio Witness.

IT is now nearly 32 years since the radio witness in this land commenced, and this opportunity of making known the message of the Kingdom is considered another privilege in the service of our Lord. Thankfulness to God for His Blessings in connection with this work is sincerely rendered, as well as gratitude for His overruling providence in making the means available, through His sacrificing people who delight to serve His cause, enabling this witness to continue in these days. In addition to the hearty co-operation of the friends in Australia, sincere appreciation is again expressed of the assistance also of our friends in U.S.A., in the radio work in this land.

While the responses to the witness over the air in the past year have not been as numerous as formerly, yet it can be truly said that they have been more satisfactory, in that the results of the message going over week after week are more in evidence in revealing those friends whose interest and appreciation of the message of the Kingdom is sustained and established.

The main object of the broadcasts is of course to encourage the interested to study their Bibles for themselves and the offering of the printed Dialogues after each session and supplying other literature has been the means of bringing quite a number to the knowledge and appreciation of the truth.

Changes in the radio stations are often necessary and desirable. The originating station for these sessions in Australia, 3GL Geelong, is the only one which has continued right through, and it has been by far the most productive of results of any station used in Australia. Commencing on Sunday, 2nd June, at 10.15 a.m., two Tasmanian stations, 7HT Hobart and 7EX Launceston, will broadcast the Frank and Ernest Dialogues every Sunday. Also on 2nd June,

3B0 Bendigo will again be used for our sessions at 10 a.m. A previous twelve months on 3B0 was quite satisfactory, so that the inclusion of this station again should revive the interest of a number in that area. It is hoped also that the first use of the Tasmanian stations may bring good results. The friends in Perth have continued steadily with the sessions over 6KY since the change to this station some time ago, and in addition to the Sunday morning Dialogues at 10.15, a Sunday evening service at 7.30 p.m., on the first Sunday in each month, through 6KY, is another good opportunity of making known the glad message of the Kingdom in Perth.

At the end of this month, stations 2HD Newcastle and 3SH Swan Hill will discontinue the broadcasting of the Dialogues. To replace the former station enquiries are continuing in the Sydney area, and it is hoped to engage a station there if possible. As on a former occasion, 3B0 Bendigo will cover much of the area reached by 3SH Swan Hill. Since the sessions discontinued over 5AD Adelaide and SPI Port Pixie last October no headway has been made in securing other stations in South Australia apart from the promise of another station manager of first preference when they have time available.

In all the above, activities it is fully realised that apart from the Lord's blessing upon the efforts no good would result; He alone can give the increase, but He does use His sincere and energetic people to promote the well-being of still others who have ears to hear and hearts to appreciate. the glad tidings of great joy. It is the privilege of all who have a talent of any kind to use it faithfully in the service of the Lord. Advertising of the broadcasts is essential for results and this can be done by the Radio Cards, newspapers and by word of mouth, in addition to the usual Pointers supplied to each of the radio stations.

In addition to making the copies of every broadcast available to listeners, considerable numbers of these printed Dialogues are sent out to readers of the "Peoples Paper" every month. Personal application is all that is necessary for other friends to receive these Dialogues, the copies being supplied by the Radio Fund, and additional printings by the General Fund when the Dialogues are used as tracts; and so the work goes on, by the Lord's grace.

The Radio Fund below reveals the voluntary support received for the radio work over the past year, and it is most encouraging that so many friends are desirous of assisting in the cause of making known the Gospel of Christ over the air. All expenses have been fully covered and with a transfer of L50 from the Reserve Fund a credit of L54/17/3 is carried forward for this work in the year ahead. Would all dear friends join in prayer for the Lord's guidance and blessing on this feature of the work in this section of the harvest field, that His will may be done and His name glorified in our midst.

Additional Memorial Reports.

Perth, W.A.

On Sunday, 14th April, the Perth friends gathered as usual to remember the sacrifice of our Lord and Saviour. In the afternoon an appropriate study (1 Cor. 11:23-30), reminded us of His great sacrifice on our behalf and also of the part we are so privileged to play in common-participation with Him. The evening service began at 6.15 when we were reminded again of these truths and partook of the emblems which so beautifully symbolise His broken body and shed blood and our union with Him.

Canberra, A.C.T.

Our Memorial season has again passed away. It was very nice to meet with the brethren here again and talk over our Saviour's death and note the meaning of it all to us. How grateful we are that the opportunity to gain life everlasting is now ours. What a wonderful blessing it will be to have it free from the ills and disabilities associated with this present existence, and further to have inherent life. The prospect before us is certainly one that stimulates our desire and endeavour to follow in His steps, to have His spirit to a marked degree. May the precious promises in God's Word be ever a comfort and consolation to all of His people in their entire walk of life.

There were nine who partook of the emblems here this year; the expressions of pleasure because of the opportunity to do so, by those young in the truth was an encouragement to the older ones to continue to search for all those who have the Lord's spirit even though they may be but one here, one there.

The Development of the Divine Plan.

SINCE God tells us that He has a definitely fixed purpose, and that all His purposes shall be accomplished, it behoves us, as His children, to inquire diligently what those plans are, that we may be found in harmony with them. Notice how emphatically Jehovah affirms the fixedness of His purpose: "Jehovah of hosts hath sworn, saying, Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it be." "The Lord of hosts hath purposed, and who shall disannul it?" "I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like Me . . . My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure. . . Yea, I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass;

I have purposed it, I will also do it." (Isa. 14:24-27; 46:9-11.) However haphazard or mysterious God's dealings with men may appear, those who believe this testimony of His Word must acknowledge that His original and unalterable plan has been, and still is, progressing systematically to completion.

Therefore, as interested sons of God, and heirs of a promised inheritance, we apply to our Father's Word, that we may understand His purposes from the plans and specifications therein given. There we learn that the plan of God, with reference to man, spans three great periods of time, beginning with man's creation and reaching into the illimitable future. Peter and Paul designate these periods "three worlds."

These three great epochs represent three distinct manifestations of Divine Providence. The first, from creation to the flood, was under the ministration of angels, and is called by Peter "THE WORLD THAT WAS."—2 Pet. 3:6.

The second great epoch, from the flood to the establishment of the kingdom of God, is under the limited control of Satan, "the prince of this world," and is therefore called "THIS PRESENT EVIL WORLD." Gal. 1:4; 2 Pet. 3:7.

The third is to be a "world without end" (Isa. 45:17) under divine administration, the kingdom of God, and is called "THE WORLD TO COME—wherein dwelleth righteousness."—Heb. 2:5; 2 Pet. 3:13.

The first of these periods, or "worlds" under the ministration of angels, was a failure; the second, under the rule of Satan, the usurper, has been indeed an "evil world"; but the third will be an era of righteousness and of blessing to all the families of the earth.

The last two of these "worlds" are most particularly mentioned, and the statements relative to them are in strong contrast. The present, or second period, is called "the present evil world," not because there is nothing good in it, but because in it evil is permitted to predominate. "Now we call the proud happy; yea, they that work wickedness are set up; yea, they that tempt God are even delivered." (Mal. 3:15.) The third world or epoch is mentioned as "THE WORLD TO COME—wherein dwelleth righteousness," not because there will be no evil in it, but because evil will not predominate. The blotting out of evil will be gradual, requiring all of the first thousand years. Evil will not rule then; it will not prosper; it will no longer be the wicked that will flourish; but "the righteous shall flourish" (Psa. 72:7), the "obedient shall eat the good of the land" (Isa.

1: 19), and "the evil doer shall be cut off." Psa. 37:9,

Thus seen, the next dispensation is to be so dissimilar as to be the very reverse of the present one in almost every particular. Our Lord's words show why there is to be a difference between the present and the future dispensations. It is because He will be the Prince or Ruler of the world to come, that in it righteousness and truth will prosper; while, because Satan is the prince (ruler) of the present evil world, evil prospers and the wicked flourish. It is because, as Jesus said, the prince of this world "hath nothing in Me"—and consequently no interest in His followers except to oppose, tempt, annoy and buffet them (John 14:30; 2 Cor. 12:7)—that in this present evil world or epoch, whosoever will live godly shall suffer persecution, while the wicked flourish like a green bay tree.—2 Tim. 3:12; Psa. 37:35.

Jesus said, "My kingdom is not of this world," and until the era or "world to come" does come, Christ's kingdom will not control the earth. And for this we are taught to hope and pray, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth." Satan is the "ruler of the darkness of this world," and therefore "darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the people." He now rules and works in the hearts of the children of disobedience.—Eph. 2:2; 6:12.

There must be some very important part of the great Architect's plan for man's salvation not yet fully developed— else the new Prince and the new dispensation would have been long ago introduced. Why it was postponed for an appointed time, and also the manner of the change from the present dominion of evil under Satan to that of righteousness under Christ, are points of interest which will be more fully shown hereafter. Suffice it now to say, that the kingdoms of this world, now subject to Satan, are at the proper time to become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ. (Rev. 11:15.) The context shows that the transfer will be accomplished by a general time of trouble. In reference to it Jesus said, "No man can enter into a strong man's house and spoil his goods, except he will first bind the strong man, and then he will spoil his house." (Mark 3:22-27.) Thus we are taught that Satan must first be bound, restrained and deposed, before Christ's reign of righteousness and peace can be established. This binding of Satan is accordingly shown to be the first work of the new dispensation. Rev. 20:2.

It should be remembered that this earth is the basis of all these "worlds" and dispensations, and that though ages pass and dispensations change, still the earth continues--The earth abideth forever." (Eccl. 1:4.) Carrying out the same figure, Peter calls each of these periods a separate heavens and earth. Here the word heavens symbolizes the higher or spiritual controlling powers, and earth symbolizes human government and social arrangements. Thus the first heavens and earth, or the order and arrangement of things then existing, having served their purpose, ended at the flood. But the physical heavens (sky and atmosphere) , and the physical earth, did not pass away: they remained. So likewise the present world (heavens and earth) will pass away with a great noise, fire and melting--confusion, trouble and dissolution. The strong man (Satan) , being bound, will struggle to regain his power. The present order or arrangement of government and society, not that of the physical Sky and earth, will pass away. The present heavens (powers of spiritual control) must give place to the "new heavens"--Christ's spiritual control. The present earth (human society as now organized under Satan's control) must (symbolically) melt and be dissolved, in the beginning of the "Day of the Lord," which "shall burn as an oven." (Mal. 4:1.) It will be succeeded by "a new earth," i.e., society reorganized in harmony with earth's new Prince--Christ. Righteousness, peace and love will rule among men when present arrangements have given place to the new and better kingdom, the basis of which will be the strictest justice.

Paul was given a glimpse of the next dispensation, or, as he calls it, "the world to come." He says he was "caught away" (physically or mentally, or both, he could not tell, things were so real to his view) down the stream of time to the new condition of things, the "new heaven," hence the "third heaven." He thus saw things as they will be under the spiritual control of Christ, things which he might not disclose. (2 Cor. 12:2-4.) Doubtless these were the same things which John afterward saw, and was permitted to express to the Church in symbols, which may only be understood as they become due. John, in the revelation given to him by our Lord on the Isle of Patmos, was in vision carried down through this Christian Age and its changing scenes of church and state, to the end of the present evil world, or epoch, and there in prophetic visions he saw Satan bound, Christ reigning, and the new heaven and the new earth established; for the former heaven and earth were passed away--Rev. 21:1.

A statement of the Word which belongs to one epoch, or dispensation, should not be applied to another, as things stated of one age are not always true of another. For instance, it would be an untruth to say of the present time that the knowledge of the Lord fills the whole earth, or that there is no need to say to your neighbour, Know the Lord. (Isa. 11:9; Jer. 31, 34.) This is not true in this age, and it cannot be true until the Lord, having come again, has established His Kingdom; for throughout this age there have been many seducing deceptions, and we are told that even in the very end of the age--"In the last days . . . evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." (2 Tim. 3:1, 13.) It will be as the result of Messiah's reign during the Millennial age that knowledge and righteousness shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

A similar mistake, and a very common one, is to suppose that God's kingdom is now established and ruling over the earth, and that His will is now done among the nations. This is manifestly far from the truth, for the kingdoms of this world are supported and enriched through oppression, injustice and deceit, to as great an extent as the increasing intelligence of the people will permit. Satan, the present "prince of this world," must yet be displaced, and these kingdoms, now under his control, must become the kingdoms, of our Lord and of His Anointed, when He shall take unto Himself His great power, and reign.

By the light now due to the household of faith we discern that system and order which mark the stately steppings of our God through the ages past.

The Hidden Mystery

Col, 1 :26

WHILE mankind was under the discipline of evil, and unable to understand its necessity, God repeatedly expressed His purpose to restore and bless them through a coming deliverer. But who that deliverer should be was a mystery for four thousand years, and it only began to be clearly revealed after the resurrection of Christ, in the beginning of the Christian or. Gospel Age.

Looking back to the time when life and Edenic happiness were forfeited by our first parents, we see them under the just penalty of sin filled with sorrow, and without a ray of hope, except that drawn from the obscure statement that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. Though in the light of subsequent developments this is full of significance to us, to them it was but a faint and glimmering light. Nearly two thousand years rolled by with no evidence of a fulfilment.

About two thousand years after, God called Abraham, and promised that his seed should bless all the families of the earth. This looked as though God still held to His previously expressed purpose, and was now about to fulfil it. Time sped on; the promised land of Canaan was not yet in his possession; they had yet no offspring, and Abraham and Sarah were growing old. Abraham reasoned that he must help God to fulfil His promise; so Ishmael was born. But his assistance was not needed, for in due time Isaac, the child of hope and promise, was born. Then it seemed that the promised ruler and blessing of nations had come. But no: years rolled by, and seemingly God's promise had failed; for Isaac died, and his heir, Jacob, also. But the faith of a few still held firmly to the promise, and was sustained by God; for "the covenant which He made with Abraham" was assured by God's "oath unto Isaac, and confirmed to Jacob . . . and to Israel for an everlasting covenant."-1 Chron. 16:16, 17.

When at the time of Jacob's death his descendants were first called the TWELVE TRIBES OF ISRAEL, and recognized of God as a "chosen nation" (Gen. 49:28; Deut. 26:5), the expectation that this nation as a whole, as the promised seed of Abraham, should possess Canaan, and rule and bless the world, seemed to be on the eve of realization; for already, under the favour of Egypt, they were becoming a strong nation. But hope was almost blasted and the promise almost forgotten when the Egyptians, having gained control of them, held them as slaves for a long period.

Truly God's promises were shrouded in mystery, and His ways seemed past finding out. However, in due time came Moses, a great deliverer, by whose hand God led them out of bondage, working mighty miracles on their behalf. Before entering Canaan this great deliverer died; but as the Lord's mouthpiece he declared, "A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me." (Deut. 18:15; Acts 3:22.) This gave a further insight into God's plan, showing that not only would their nation, as a whole, be associated in some way with the future work of ruling and blessing, but that one to be selected from among them would lead to victory and to the fulfilment of the promise. Then Joshua, whose name signifies deliverer, or saviour, became their leader, and under him they won great victories, and actually entered the land promised in the covenant. Surely then it seemed that the true leader had come, and that the promise was about to have complete fulfilment.

But Joshua died, and they made no headway as a nation until David, and then Solomon, were given them as kings. There they reached the very zenith of their glory; but soon, instead of seeing the promise accomplished, they were shorn of their power, and became tributary to other nations. Some held fast the promise of God, however, and still looked for the great deliverer of whom Moses, Joshua, David and Solomon were only types.

About the time when Jesus was born, all men were in expectation of the Messiah, the coming king of Israel and, through Israel, of the world. But Israel's hope of the glory and honour of their coming king, inspired as it was by the types and prophecies of His greatness and power, caused them to overlook another set of types and prophecies, which pointed to a work of suffering and death, as a ransom for sinners, necessary before the blessing could come. This was prefigured in the Passover before they were delivered from Egypt, in the slaying of the animals at the giving of the law covenant (Heb. 9:11-20; 10, 8-18), and in the Atonement sacrifices performed year by year continually by the priesthood. They overlooked, too, the statement of the prophets, "who testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow." (1 Peter 1:11.) Hence, when Jesus came as a sacrifice, they did not recognize they knew not the time of their visitation. (Luke 19:44.) Even His immediate followers were sore perplexed when Jesus died; and sadly they said, "We trusted it had been He which should have redeemed Israel." (Luke 24:21.) Apparently, their confidence in Him had been misplaced. They failed to see that the death of their leader was a ratification of the New Covenant under which the blessings were to come, a partial fulfilment of the covenant of promise. However, when they found that He had risen from the tomb, their withered hopes again began to revive (1 Peter 1:3), and when He was about to leave them, they asked concerning their long-cherished and oft-deferred hope, saying, "Lord, wilt Thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" That their hopes were in the main correct, though they might not know the time when they would be fulfilled, is evident from our Lord's reply: "It is not for you to know the times and seasons which the Father hath put in His own power."—Acts 1:6, 7.

What turn has God's plan now taken? must have been the query of His disciples when Jesus had ascended; for we must remember that our Lord's teachings concerning the Kingdom were principally in parables and dark sayings. He had said to them, "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now; howbeit, when the spirit of truth is come, it will guide you into all truth." "It shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." (John 16:12, 13; 14:26.) So they could not understand before the Pentecostal blessing came.

Even then, it was some time before they got a clear, full understanding of the work being done, and its relation to the original covenant. (Acts 11:9; Gal. 2:2, 12, 14.) However, it would seem that even before they fully and clearly understood, they were used as the mouthpieces of God, and their inspired words were probably clearer and deeper expressions of truth than they themselves fully comprehended. For instance, read James' discourse in which he says: "Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for His name [a bride]. And to this agree the words of the prophets, as it is written, 'After this [after this people from the Gentiles has been taken out] I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David [the earthly dominion] which is fallen down, and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up.'"—Acts 15 :14-16.

James began to read in God's providence, in the sending of the Gospel through Peter to the first Gentile convert and through Paul to Gentiles in general, that during this age believing Jews and Gentiles were to be alike favoured. He then looked up the prophecies and found it so written; and that after the work of this Gospel age is completed, then the promises to fleshly Israel will be fulfilled. Gradually the great mystery, so long hidden, began to be understood by a few—the saints, the special "friends" of God.

Paul declares (Col. 1:27) that this mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, now made manifest to His saints, is

"CHRIST IN YOU, THE. HOPE OF GLORY"

This is the great mystery of God which has been hidden from all previous ages, and is still hidden from all except a special class—the saints, or consecrated believers. But what is meant by "Christ in you"? We have learned that Jesus was anointed with the holy spirit (Acts 10:38), and thus we recognize Him to be the Christ—the anointed—for the word Christ signifies anointed. And the Apostle John says that the anointing which we (consecrated believers) have received abideth in us. (1 John 2:27.) Thus the saints of this Gospel age are an anointed company—anointed to be kings and priests unto God (2 Cor. 1:21; 1 Pet. 2:9) ; and together with Jesus, their Chief and Lord, they constitute Jehovah's Anointed—the Christ

In harmony with this teaching of John, that we also are anointed, Paul assures us that this mystery which has been kept secret in ages past, but which is now made known to the saints, is that the Christ (the Anointed) is "not one member, but many," just as the human body is one, and has many members; but as all the members of the body, being many, are one body, so also is the Anointed—the Christ. (1 Cor. 12:12-28.) Jesus is anointed to be the Head or Lord over the Church, which is His body (or His bride, as expressed in another figure—Eph. 5:25-30) , and unitedly they constitute the promised 'Seed'—the Great Deliverer: "If ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."—Gal. 3:29.

The Apostle carefully guards the Church against any presumptive claims, saying of Jesus that “God hath put all things under His feet, and gave Him to be the head over all things to the Church, which is His body,” “that in all things He might have the pre-eminence.” (Eph. 1:22; Col. 1:18.) Yet, under the figure of the human body, he beautifully and forcibly shows our intimate relationship. This same oneness Jesus also taught, saying, “I am the vine, ye are the branches.”—John 15:5.

This is indeed a wonderful message, and, as we come to the Word of God to inquire concerning our great high calling, we find the prophets all eloquent in proclaiming the grace [favour or blessing] that is come unto us (1 Peter 1:10); while types and parables, and hitherto dark sayings, now become luminous, shedding their light on the “narrow way” in which the anointed [Christ] company is called to run for the prize now disclosed to view. This was truly a mystery never before thought of—that God intends to raise up not only a deliverer, but a deliverer composed of many members. This is the “high calling” to which the consecrated believers of the Gospel age are privileged to attain. Jesus did not attempt to unfold it to the disciples while natural men, but waited until at Pentecost they were anointed—begotten to the new nature. From Paul’s explanation we know that none but “new creatures” can now appreciate or understand this high calling. He says: “We speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom [plan] which God ordained before the world unto our glory; which none of the princes [chief ones] of this world knew; . . . as it is written, ‘Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him;’ but God hath revealed them unto us by His spirit”—1 Cor. 2:6-14.

In his letter to the Galatians, Paul opens up the entire mystery, and shows how the Abrahamic covenant is to be fulfilled. He shows that the Law given to Israel did not interfere with the original covenant (Gal. 3:15-18), and that the seed of Abraham which is to bless all nations is Christ. (Verse 16.) Then, carrying out the idea already alluded to, that the Christ includes all anointed of the spirit, he says: “For as many of you as have been baptised into Christ have put on Christ; . . . and if ye be Christ’s then are YE [together with Jesus] Abraham’s seed, and heirs, according to the promise made to Abraham. (Verses 27, 29.) Following up the same line of reasoning, he shows (Gal. 4) that Abraham was a type of Jehovah, Sarah a type of the covenant or promise, and Isaac a type of Christ (head and body); and then adds, “We, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise. (Verse 28.) Thus the plan of God was hidden in types until the Gospel age began the development of the Christ.

There has existed a necessity for keeping this mystery hidden, else it would not have been so kept. It was necessary, because to have revealed the plan in full to mankind would have been to frustrate it. Had men known, they would not have crucified either the Lord of glory or the Church which is His body. (1 Cor. 2:8.) Not only would the death of Christ, as the price of man’s redemption, have been interfered with, had not the plan been kept a mystery from the world, but the trial of the faith of the Church, as sharers in the sufferings of Christ, would thereby have been prevented also; for “The world knoweth us not [as His joint-heirs] because [for the same reason that] it knew Him not.”—1 John 3:1.

The greatness of the mystery, so long kept secret, and hidden in promises, types and figures, and the wonderful grace bestowed on those called to fellowship in this mystery (Eph. 3:9), suggest to us that the work to follow its completion, for which for six thousand years Jehovah has kept mankind in expectation and hope, must be an immense work, a grand work, worthy of such great preparations. What may we not expect in blessings upon the world, when the veil of mystery is withdrawn and the showers of blessing descend! It is this for which the whole creation groans and travailes in pain together until now, waiting for the completion of this mystery—for the manifestation of the Sons of God, the promised “Seed,” in whom they shall all be blessed.—Rom. 8:19, 21, 22.

Proposed New Edition of “Foregleams of the Golden Age.”

As the second edition of “Foregleams of the Golden Age” is nearly exhausted, and as it is such a great help in spreading the light of truth, this enquiry is presented to all readers to determine how many copies they would be prepared to take if a new edition were published shortly. Some friends may be prepared to order a dozen copies or more, others may order up to half a dozen and still others may order one or two copies; whatever your desire may be, kindly let us know. It is not possible to quote the likely price as yet, but it will no doubt be somewhat dearer than the present edition, in view of ruling prices. If you wish to help in this matter, and continue to assist others with the truths contained in this book, let us hear from you shortly.

Italy Becomes a Republic.

Another Dynasty Extinguished. The House of Savoy's Exit.

UNDER the above headings an interesting review of the history of Italy appeared in the Literary Supplement of the Melbourne "Age" on June 22nd. Extracts from this article are as follows:

"After 85 years' reign by the House of Savoy, Italy's monarchy has ended following the plebiscite in which a republic vote was recorded. By a majority reported to total nearly 2,000,000, the people of Italy voted to end the monarchy, and King Umberto has followed other members of his family into exile. Umberto has been king for only a month, his father, Victor Emmanuel, having abdicated in his favour on May 9th.

"Confessed, war-torn, hungry Italy has now decided on republic status, and its reigning house has been added to the list of dynasties extinguished by the war. Italy emerged as a free nation only 85 years ago. The Lombard invasions and the rise of the Papal States broke the unity of Italy early in the Middle Ages, and from then on emperors and popes, kings of Naples and dukes of Milan, dreamed in turn of restoring the 'kingdom of Italy,' But its five chief powers—Venice and Florence, Milan and Naples, and the Pope—seldom united of their own accord. France and Spain made Italy a battle ground of rivalry; and the substitution of Austria, following the French Revolution, as the chief controlling power made the outlook even more gloomy.

"Brave blood was many times shed in the hope of remaking Italy. In 1820 and 1830 revolts were crushed by Austrian troops. Then the idealistic republican, Giuseppe Mazzini, organised his new revolutionary society called 'Young Italy.' While King Charles Albert battled unsuccessfully against the Austrians, Mazzini set up a brave but ill-starred republic in Rome. It fell to French soldiers of Napoleon III, and Italy was as before a dark realm of Austrian and Bourbon tyranny in the north and south with the temporal power of the Papacy between. Only Sardinia-Piedmont under its new hero, King Victor Emmanuel II, kept its constitution and the Italian tricoloured flag. This was the seed from which Italian unity and liberation grew. Sardinia-Piedmont grew strong in resource and in alliances.

"Victor Emmanuel's shrewd Minister, Count Camillo Benso di Cavour, realised that Italy could be unified only with help from abroad. He cleverly won the alliance of Napoleon III, and in 1859 Austria was foolish enough to declare war. The outcome was that France and Sardinia-Piedmont defeated the Austrians, and so won Lombardy for United Italy. Then the famous soldier of fortune, Giuseppe Garibaldi, gathered about him his thousand volunteers and stormed the island of Sicily and then the mainland part of the kingdom of Naples. Everywhere he was hailed as a liberator. The people drove out the hated Bourbon king. There remained only the Papal States and Venetia to be joined to the new-made Italian nation when in March, 1861, Victor Emmanuel of Sardinia was proclaimed king. Venetia was gained in 1866 after Austria was defeated by Prussia in alliance with Italy.

Voluntary Prisoners.

"Rome alone was now outside the Italian kingdom. Lack of that central and dividing strip of territory was a very real handicap. French troops still guarded the Pope's sovereignty and Victor Emmanuel declined to attack them lest all that had been accomplished be undone. He waited. In 1870 the Franco-Prussian war forced France to withdraw her troops. The Roman people welcomed the army which Victor Emmanuel marched into Italy's ancient capital. Pope Pius IX withdrew into the Vatican, where he and his successors remained 'voluntary prisoners' until the Concordat of 1929 between Italy and the Holy See recognised the temporal power of the Pope as sovereign ruler over the Vatican."

The news that Italy's monarchy has now ended is of particular significance to Bible Students, because it is another indication of the approaching end of this present world order. The following explanations of parts of Revelation 17, mainly from the work "The Revelation of Jesus Christ", should be of much interest to all.

The vision of this chapter 17 is one introductory to the judgments of Babylon, and explanatory to St. John of its causes and reasonableness. Such is God's usual method, when about to execute any very notable act of vengeance. He shows His Church its justice beforehand; thereby at once vindicating His own honour, and giving warning to such of His people as may thus far have been deceived by the offending party, to separate from it, and so escape its imminent doom.

Let us note the significance of the words of verse 3 of Rev. 17. "And he (the angel) conducted me, in spirit, into a desert." The spirit that St. John is represented as being in, and the desert or wilderness into which he was conducted, are doubtless symbolical and have special reference to the state and viewpoint necessary for one in order to understand the vision. And this fact is recognised by the Revelator, who shows that all who would get a true view of Babylon must, in spirit, take their position with the true people of God “in the wilderness”—in the condition of separation from the world and worldly ideas and mere forms of godliness, and in the condition of entire consecration and faithfulness to and dependence upon God alone. “So he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness; and I saw a woman, . . . Babylon.”—(Rev. 17:1-5.)

We may learn in a general way what the harlot woman represents by contrasting her with another symbolic woman that St. John saw (Rev. 12:1). A woman is a common symbol employed in the New Testament Scriptures to represent the Church of Christ. Especially is this true in the Revelation. The pure Church is represented by a pure, chaste woman, indeed, a virgin; the false Church by an impure, fallen woman.

The Woman Sitting On Seven Mountains.

To those familiar with Church history there would seem to be no need of a Divine interpretation concerning what particular church is described by the Babylonian harlot. In view of the fact, however, that it is prophesied that all nations would be deceived into thinking that the church system represented was the true Church, the revealing angel gives the information concerning what church is referred to in the words: “The woman which thou sawest is that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth.” The angel’s words clearly point to but one city, and that is Rome, for Rome was the only city that reigned over the kings of the earth in St. John’s day, or since. It is the only church that has taken the name of a city. It is the only city that has had a church hierarchy that has exercised such a far-reaching dominion over nations and peoples and tongues. Furthermore, the Roman city is identified in the further explanation of the angel: “The seven heads are seven mountains (hills) on which the woman sitteth.” Who is not aware that this is a well-known feature of the city of Rome?

The name Babylon, applied by the spirit to the Church of Rome, expresses her character, for Babylon means mixture—confusion. (See Lev. 18:23.) This union of the woman (Church) with the beast (empire) constitutes the spiritual harlotry of which she is guilty.

But the same (Babylon) applies to her entire family; her daughters inherit both her nature and name, for she is a “mother of harlots,” and her works they do. Some of her daughters have followed very closely in her footsteps, in mixing church and state. Such are The Church of England and other state churches. And such would other daughters be, also, if they could find empires willing to support them.

The same spirit of confusion—the church walking in unlawful union with the world—is seen on every hand. The Church (nominal) and the world walk hand in hand, unite their interests, and make merry together. It is the worldly element and its wealth that is sought by every sect to support and sustain the Church in the degree of luxury she wishes to enjoy. Alas, the name Babylon is emblazoned on the brow of every sectarian system the world over! (Let every true saint consider these words.)

Passing over other interesting points we read in verse 9, “Here is the mind which hath wisdom. The seven heads are seven mountains (hills) on which the woman sitteth.” The angel, as we have already noted, explained these words as referring to the seven-hilled city of Rome. He further states: “And the kings are seven; the five are fallen, the one is, the other is not yet come, and when he may come he must remain a little while.” This is quite generally understood to represent the seven successive forms of government that have ruled from the city of Rome. Our understanding of this matter is, that St. John was transported in spirit from the Isle of Patmos, and from the year 96 A.D. down the stream of time to 1799, when the harlot woman is represented as being “drunken with the blood of the saints”—the time when Papacy’s judgments had begun, by the humiliation and dethronement of the Pope by Napoleon. At this time five of the heads had fallen, and the sixth head, the Roman Republic was ruling. St. John is thus represented as seeing the judgment on the Babylonian harlot beginning. At this time (1799) the much larger part of the vision of the beast with its ten horns had met its fulfilment and was in the past. When the angel explains the vision as a whole, as given in this chapter, nearly all of it was future from 96 AD.

The historical enumeration of these heads beginning 31 B.C., when the last head of the Grecian beast, Egypt, was overthrown by the Romans, would be as follows:—(1) The Roman Republic ruling from 31 until 27 B.C.; (2) The Military Imperial government ruling until Diocletian 303 A.D.; (3) The Despotical Imperial ruling until 476 A.D.; (4) The Odoacean Dynasty until about 539 A.D.; (5) The Papacy, until it received a death wound in 1799 A.D.; (6) The Republic under Bertier for about two years, after which, Papacy was reinstated; (7) The Victor Emmanuel Dynasty since 1870. The eighth form (not head) of the beast would be the future anarchistic state of the peoples (who have always constituted the body of the beast)—the peoples in a condition of anarchy.

The seventh head (Victor Emmanuel Dynasty) has continued as head of Rome since September, 1870; and today

(referring to a few years ago) more than 220,000,000 Catholics are waiting and longing, vainly hoping for a restoration to Rome of Papal sovereignty; while the prophetic symbol demands, not the restoration of Papacy, or any other government, but the rising of the beast itself without a head; in other words the peoples and nations, or body of the beast without organised government, as verse 11 shows: "And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition."

This eighth is not a head, since the beast had but seven. This eighth is the beast as it is to be after the seventh or last head has fallen. This last or eighth state will be anarchy. The expression, "and is of the seven," signifies that "the nations ('waters' verse 15) on which the woman sat, have been of the seven; and are already taking on a separate existence as the inter-nations, or peoples of all nations."

With what solemnity do the Lord's true people view these world events taking place before their eyes? How true it is that the creating of 32 new cardinals by the Pope, in recent times, will not prolong the existence of the Papacy one day. It is rather a sign of weakness, a feeling of necessity for more strength, man's strength, which passes as the flower of the field. Not only Papacy, but all present day church systems shall pass away also as St. Peter declares—"The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night: in the which the heavens (ecclesiastical systems) shall pass away with a great noise." Before this takes place the Lord is calling out His true people unto Himself, not to another denomination or sect, but to fellowship in spirit with others of His dear people, as shown by Rev. 18:4—"Come out of her (Babylon), my people, that ye be not partaking of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." Happy are all they who can hear the Lord call through His Word and spirit, and then obey.

Separating Yourselves.

"Separate yourselves from the people of the land."—Ezra 10:11.

(Convention Address.)

PERHAPS it may seem strange that a text should be chosen from the midst of the Jewish Age for the basis of this talk, but there are quite a few reasons why we should take heed to God's Word, no matter where that Word is written, or to which particular age it applies.

In this passage there are lessons for us, although we do not think or speak of these things as being a type in particular, but rather that they are ensamples to us, that we may draw particular lessons from them. That is what our beloved Apostle Paul suggested when he was mentioning this subject in his epistles to the Corinthians. "Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea; and did all eat of the same spiritual meat; and did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them; and that Rock was Christ . . . Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples; and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the ages are come." (1 Cor. 10:1-11.) That indicates to us clearly that in God's Word there are very many lessons that are necessary for us, and they are very helpful also as we journey along in the Narrow Way.

Some people are inclined to think that all these things that happened to the Jews are types, and that they picture certain things that would happen to themselves, and that they have a particular bearing upon doctrines and other things in a mysterious way that embraces the Christian walk in life. But the Apostle Paul tells us particularly that they are examples, and that we can draw lessons from these examples that are to our benefit, and there is no doubt that that is just what God intended when He caused the Scriptures to be written in days of old. So we would like to draw a few lessons from the experiences of the Jews up to the time this text was written.

We remember the time of Ezra. It was the time when after the years of desolation some of the Jews had returned from the land of Babylon; amongst these were Children of Israel not only from Judah and Benjamin, but also from the other tribes as well. First of all the other tribes were mentioned specially except Levi, and Levites were then urgently sought and sent for, that they should minister to the people in the way spoken of in God's Law, that is to be teachers of the people. There was a time when there were none of these teachers among the people, until they were sought for in the land of Babylon.

We now draw your attention particularly to the covenant that the Children of Israel entered into at Mount Sinai, that is before they entered into the Promised Land at first. There is something particularly interesting to us in that Covenant, in that it illustrates to us the covenant into which we have entered, a covenant of sacrifice, as mentioned in the Psalms, whereby we walk in the footsteps of our Lord and Head and seek to do God's will, just as the Hebrews sought to do God's will when they entered into that covenant at Mount Sinai. There were certain penalties attached to the non-observance of that covenant, and likewise too, there are certain penalties in our case attached to our nonobservance, and we need to keep these things particularly in mind, because the Scriptures assure us that God would care for us, just as He cared for the Children of Israel, if we are faithful, and that the end of our journey in the Narrow Way would result in life more abundant just the same as the keeping of their covenant would result in abundant life if they were able to maintain that purity of heart and that perfect walk before God.

We remember that on many occasions the Israelites were chastised because they failed to keep that covenant.

They wandered away into the ways of the people round about them. They came into contact with those peoples to a very large extent, and in consequence got into their ways. They were not sufficiently devoted to keeping God's Law. They did not keep it in mind to the extent that they should, and it is very much the same with us to-day. If we fail in this particular aspect of keeping in mind our covenant, then we are sure to wander into the ways of those who are round about us and away from God, from His favour, and in that way we meet with the chastisement that comes as a result, because God's Word says: "What son is he whom the father chasteneth not?" It may not be very pleasant, but nevertheless it works out well if we are rightly exercised. It brings forth the peaceable fruits of righteousness, and so we realise that God's protecting care is over us, even if it is a chastening rod.

We know that the law given to Moses was written on tablets of stone, and that reminds us very forcibly of the writing of the Law of God upon the heart of each of the followers of Christ. They realise that it is necessary to be indeed a footstep follower of Christ and to do His will. We read in John's Gospel of very many occasions when Jesus said He came to do the Father's will, and that He delighted to do it, and that what the Father said was what He repeated, and so in all His thoughts He endeavoured to do what was acceptable in the Father's sight, and we should follow in His steps and make that our attitude, too. If we keep away from the perfect Law of Love, the Law of God, that is to be written in the hearts of each of the children of God, then we shall wander away just as the Hebrews did, and get into the ways of those who are not fully consecrated, those who are not in covenant relationship with God.

That would bring us into God's disfavour, and it would be necessary for us, as our text says, to "separate ourselves from the people of the land." It is just as the Apostle Paul mentioned, "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds," keeping the mind particularly upon those things of which the Lord approves. The things of the world do not have room to take root in a heart that is fully devoted to doing the will of God.

There are many difficulties and troubles, trials, with which we come in contact as we journey along in life, and so it was with the Hebrews of old. When they were entering into the Promised Land there were many foes with whom they had to contend and overcome. We recall particularly their first contact, when they came over the River Jordan and walked around the walls of Jericho. On that particular occasion, what a great sight it must have been when the people walked round on the seventh day seven times, and the walls fell flat, and they did nothing but blow the trumpet. Now that illustrates to us particularly that in the early experiences of our lives, when we fully trust God and trust in His ways, that we can experience the same thing in overcoming the obstacles that come into our path and that would prevent our developing in the Christian way. What a wonderful trust it exhibited on their behalf, as they walked round, as they were told to do by Joshua. And so it is with us. But we remember that as time went on, and a few years passed, the whole of Canaan was not subdued. And so it is with us; as we go on from time to time we find that we still have to contend with very many things that would keep us away from our full devotion to God, just as it kept those people away from full devotion to the covenant that they had made. It was not even until the reign of David that Jerusalem was captured and the Jebusites were subdued once and for all,

So we find that for very many years they encountered these obstacles, right until the time of the end of their national polity they had that defect, they had not fully subdued all the people of the land. There were still some there right to the time of our Lord. These things illustrate to us that we still have the weaknesses of the flesh to contend with, so we realise the necessity of being constantly vigilant and watchful lest these things arise and subdue us.

When Solomon reigned what a wonderful time that must have been to the people then. What prosperity and enjoyment they had! During the reign of David there were many strifes and wars with those people round about, and although David was a man after God's own heart, he was also a man of war, and that means to say he was a man who was against all those people who would draw God's people away from the pure worship that was required at the Tabernacle, and afterwards at the Temple in Jerusalem.

In our experiences, too, we have the heights as well as the depths of Christian experience, and so we come further along in the stream of time down to the time when these people were carried away captive into Babylon because of their neglect of the only True God. What a sad state of affairs that must have been! Then at the time of our text, after being in exile for so many years, some of these people who were the most devoted to God were brought back into the land, to Palestine, to their own national home, and there permitted to build up the walls of Jerusalem, and later to build up the Temple. So there is a lesson there for us, that notwithstanding the great worldly influences that may surround us and almost overwhelm us, if we keep our hearts fully devoted to God He will deliver us in His own due time and grant us a respite from the world, the flesh and the adversary.

Reading from the book of Ezra, the ninth chapter, we see the attitude of heart that these people had, and their desire to be acceptable in God's sight. It is the prayer that Ezra made, and that leads up to the text of our study. From the fifth verse we read, "And I fell upon my knees, and spread out my hands unto the Lord my God, and said, O my God,

I am ashamed and blush to lift up my face to thee my God: for our iniquities are increased over our head, and our trespass is grown up unto the heavens." What a realisation it was to Ezra of the depth to which his people had gone! "Since the days of our fathers have we been in a great trespass unto this day; and for our iniquities have we, our kings, and our priests, been delivered into the hands of the kings of the lands, to the sword, to captivity, and to a spoil, and to confusion of face, as it is this day. And now for a little space grace hath been shewed from the Lord our God, to leave us a remnant to escape, and to give us a nail in his holy place, that our God may lighten our eyes, and give us a little reviving in our bondage. For we were bondmen; yet our God hath not forsaken us in our bondage, but hath extended more unto us in the sight of the kings of Persia, to give us a reviving, to get up the house of our God, and to repair the desolations thereof, and to give us a wall in Judah and in Jerusalem. And now, O our God, what shall we say after this? for we have forsaken thy commandments, which thou hast commanded by thy servants the prophets, saying, the land, unto which ye go to possess it, is an unclean land with the filthiness of the people of the lands, with their abominations, which have filled it from one end to another with their uncleanness. Now therefore give not your daughters unto their sons, neither take their daughters unto your sons, nor seek their peace or their wealth for ever: that ye may be strong, and eat the good of the land, and leave it for an inheritance to your children for ever."

That shows quite clearly what our attitude should be before God, when we have transgressed against Him. We should always be ready to acknowledge our faults, because confession is good for us. God will hear us. "He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

There are many other things that happened to these people of which we would like to mention, but we wish to stress more particularly the attitude of those who are footstep followers of the Lord, its need of His grace and strength; that is, to be in an attitude of prayer and supplication. With that attitude of heart, with that desire for communion with God and willingness to confess our faults before Him, we would be in a position to receive His favour and blessing. It was because of this combination on the part of Ezra and the people who were with him that they received God's favour, and that He heard their cry. So we need to ever remember that our prayers should always be with supplication and thanksgiving to Him, who has given us such exceeding great and precious promises. We need more frequently to go to the Throne of Heavenly Grace.

Noting our text more fully we read: "Separate yourselves from the people of the land, and from the strange wives." Now what does that mean, so far as we are concerned? As Christians we have devoted our lives to God, to follow in the footsteps of our Lord and Head. Where could we draw a comparison here that would be of help to us? To "separate ourselves from the strange wives." We remember in reading this account in Ezra that the authorities, those highest in the government of these people who had come from Babylon, were foremost in transgressing against the Divine command, in that they had taken unto themselves wives of the people of the land, and God had expressly said that they were not to intermarry with these people. There is a very special injunction to us. We remember that our relationship is the spiritual relationship with God and Christ, and that we are begotten to a lively hope. We are "new creatures in Christ Jesus," and as the Apostle Paul tells us, we are "espoused as a chaste virgin unto Christ." If we go seeking other interests than those of Christ, it would indicate that we were breaking our covenant, just as these Israelites were breaking theirs by going after those strange wives. That brings to our minds the thought mentioned in another address respecting the call to come out of Babylon, "Come out of her, my people, that ye partake not of her sins, and receive not of her plagues." There we find the comparison with the unholy alliance of these particular people.

When we see the different denominations take the position that should be held by our Lord and Master, and people work for their aggrandisement, then we realise that those people who subscribe to them are in exactly the same position as those Hebrews of old who had taken these strange wives. They have taken another head besides our Lord and Saviour. We do not gain an entrance to the Kingdom by “calling upon the name of the Lord, and doing many wonderful works,” but by “doing the will of My Father,” and so it is very necessary for us all to be very careful that there is nothing whatever that comes between our Lord and ourselves to draw our hearts away from Him. He must be our all, He is the One to whom we look for the consummation of our hope, it is through Him and Him alone that God grants the great blessing of being with Him in the Kingdom.

And so, dear friends, we wish to leave this thought with you, that whatever you do, seek always to keep the mind pure, under the sole leadership of our great Leader, our Lord and Master Jesus Christ. He is the only One by whom we receive eternal life. It is only through Him that we will be granted that favour, and God grants that great blessing because of the sacrifice that He made on our behalf, and our faithfulness to Him in fulfilling the terms of our covenant.

We hope that in the years to come, when there are any trials or tribulations, we shall always seek to keep ourselves separate from the people of the land, and separate from all those influences that would draw us away from our Lord and Head, that we follow in His steps, and so may gain that great prize.

Pilgrim Way Ended.

The oldest of the Australia brethren, Brother A. Kidd, finished the pilgrim way on 17th June last in his 97th year, at Ringarooma, Tasmania. For many years our dear Brother Kidd has been an earnest follower of the Master, and in past years had visited these parts. It was always a pleasure to meet him and to note his sincerity and expectation of the Kingdom. A daughter of Brother Kidd’s, Sister Fry, had also accepted the truth but finished the earthly way some few years ago. We trust for our dear elderly Brother an abundant entrance into the heavenly Kingdom. Sincere sympathy is extended to the family members in their bereavement.

The following newspaper report is a witness to the life of our dear Brother Kidd:—”He was a keen student of the Bible and world history, and many were aware that he accurately foretold the happenings of the last 30 years. He took a keen interest in current events until the day of his death.”

Possibilities.

“All things are possible to him that believeth.” (Mark 9 :23.).

(Convention Address)

THE dictionary gives the meaning of the word “possibility” as : “The power of being or existing—the power of happening, the state of being possible ; it often implies great uncertainty and doubt.”

We, as individuals, have within us certain possibilities in growth and development. An infant has within itself the possibility, the power of developing into maturity of manhood. On the other hand, there are also other possibilities which may hinder the proper normal development; therefore, the word “possibility” sometimes implies great uncertainty and doubt.

The same applies to us as New Creatures in Christ. We are surrounded by possibilities ; that is, things which happen. Some possibilities are beyond our control; trials, troubles and offences we can expect, but others we can and should discern beforehand and forestall them. For instance, our Lord said: “Agree with thine adversary quickly, whilst thou art in the way with him (otherwise other possibilities will develop) ; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison” (Matt. 5:25).

Wrong thoughts will come into the mind; we cannot control that, but we can forestall their influence by not entertaining them in the mind so that they do not develop into wrong action. Thus we see there are possibilities of being led into error of conduct or doctrine.

Other possibilities we can use to our advantage, such as advancing in the light of present truth, in love, faith and hope, of even attaining the character likeness of the Lord Jesus. We should not attempt to do impossible things; our powers are limited, but with God nothing is impossible.

Perhaps with some of us there was a time when we thought the possibility of attaining the character likeness of Christ was beyond us, likewise also the understanding of the Scriptures. We thought, not possible to us, although other Christians understood, but we found that we could qualify and by God’s grace these things are possible of attainment.

One individual, with the Lord on His side, “can do all things”—of course, this means all things that are in harmony with His will and purpose. For instance, you could not jump off a pinnacle of a temple and expect to suffer no damage. Yes, things once considered impossible, now, with God’s help become possible. Jesus said, “All things are possible to him that believeth.”

Does this mean that we become supermen? No, but faith imparted to us through a knowledge of God enables us to do things which were impossible without this knowledge of God’s character and Word.

It has been said of Luther when he first began to preach that he suffered unheard agony and exclaimed, “O, Dr. Staupitz, I cannot do it, I shall die in three months ; indeed, I cannot do it.” Dr. Staupitz said, “Well, Sir Martin, if you must die, you must, but remember they need good heads up yonder too. So preach, man, preach, and then live or die as it happens.” So Martin Luther preached and lived, and became a whirlwind of energy.

We have instances also of this during the Pagan and Papal persecutions of the saints. Christians went to horrible deaths calmly, singing hymns and praising God, and encouraging their brethren to faithfulness, at which fortitude even their persecutors marvelled.

We especially think of Jesus on the night of His betrayal; His human nature shrank from the ordeal of such a cruel and shameful death. "If it be possible let this cup pass from me"—an agonizing supplication, into which enters the desire, if possible, or perhaps He may still carry out His Father's will without this special feature of suffering. But when the request was not granted, the mind and will became reconciled to the event that was at hand. Calmness and resignation became permanently established, and thus resigned to God, that which seemed almost impossible to face, now became possible to endure. With God, that is united with Him, all things are possible.

When we come to any crisis of special trial in the Christian way, many possibilities will present themselves to the mind, possibilities as to what may occur now or at some future time—possibilities as to how this or that will affect us, or someone near or dear to us, possibilities that may arise out of certain decisions made.

There are instances where so many possibilities are thought of that they almost create a panic within the individual. We need to sift these possibilities; things are not always as bad as they seem—some will be imaginary, others uncertain and doubtful, "Thou knowest not which shall prosper, this or that." Still others would take shape a long time ahead, which may be altered through development of other circumstances; others soon become realities. Some of these come into existence because of not being cautious enough or through lack of selfcontrol, being of wisdom and understanding, or through self-will. For instance, if you drive on the wrong side of the road the possibilities of a collision will soon become a reality. Many known possibilities become realities through carelessness or disobedience, or lack of watchfulness. Jesus said to His disciples, "What I say unto you, I say unto all, watch."

The possibility of losing the light of truth is a serious one; it is only too easy to wander into the many by-paths that lead away from the Narrow Way. We have the Lord's Word for it, "If the light that is in thee becomes darkness, how great is that darkness." "If the salt has lost its savour it is good for nothing, but cast out and trodden under foot." (Luke 14 :34, 35.) These possibilities can become realities. Furthermore, this possibility can result in an impossibility—those who fall away (fully) it is impossible to renew them again unto repentance. (Heb. 6:4-8.)

We are every day surrounded with possibilities, as well as face to face with impossibilities. "It is impossible but that offences will come," said Jesus. (Luke 17:1.) While the reign of evil continues, there is always the possibility of trial and trouble from one quarter or another. That is a fact, we are not uncertain about that. Peter says, "Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial that shall try you." Are we prepared to meet these trials and difficulties? Whether we are successful in meeting them depends considerably upon the intensity of our desire to honour God and carry out His will—His instructions. In our endeavour to do this, it is not always possible to live peaceably with all. (Roth. 12:18.)

Remember the promise, that in every trial it is possible for God to direct the issue, but if we do not recognise this possibility we shall not succeed in pleasing God or our neighbour. Without faith in God (in His ability to direct and that He is doing so) it is impossible to please Him. This reveals another impossibility—without faith in God, we are unable to do anything which He could recognise as meriting His favour. The Lord said that if we believe, it is possible to remove mountains of difficulties.

All the individuals of the Israelitish nation had the possibility of entering the promised land of Canaan. The account is set in Num. 13:23-32; 14:1-10. But the glad tidings or report about the land was not linked with faith in God in those who heard. Faithful. Caleb and Joshua had no doubt as to the possibilities of possessing the land right away, for God was able to give them an abundant entrance even though the inhabitants were strong. Caleb and his friends refused to entertain impossibilities when God was with them, and actually saw in the difficulties a possibility which could be turned to their advantage. In Num. 14:9 he says, "Fear not the people of the land, for they are bread for us." The presence of the Amalekites and Canaanites in the land could be turned to an advantage to the Israelites. It seems this is a splendid view to take of actual difficulties and dangers that confronted them, in contrast to the pessimistic view of the majority of the nation who saw only impossibilities, and therefore failed miserably.

Are we tempted like that in our journey to the celestial city? What view do we take, the optimistic or pessimistic? Which to our vision appears the largest—the possibilities or the impossibilities? On the one hand there is no denying that there are some difficulties, on the other hand there are, or can be, strong convictions that these difficulties can be overruled for our good and turned to our advantage, only one prerequisite being necessary—only believe—"all things are possible to him that believeth." Let that be an anecdote to those whose minds wander a long time in the wilderness concerning the application of certain promises of God to themselves.

Think of the possibilities and compare them with the difficulties or the supposed impossibilities. We will say : here you have a pair of balances ; on one side are all the possibilities, on the other side all the impossibilities and difficulties. You have thrown in all the possibilities you can think of and the balance is equal—you are not able to decide. But you always have one thing which will always tip the scales to your advantage; throw in on the other side this—"All things are possible to those that believeth."

As New Creatures what are the possibilities that lie before us? Or go back further still, while we were in trespasses and sins, in darkness, how were we placed? Through God's grace we saw the possibilities of rising out of this condition. Through a knowledge of God, and on our part of repentance and acceptance of Christ as our Saviour, we actually escaped the pollutions of the world. Through a further increase of knowledge we accepted the invitation to run for the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus. This presented to us great possibilities. Nevertheless, Jesus reminds us that those who would come after Him should count the cost. (Luke 14 :26-28.) —"What king going to war against another king, sitteth not down first and consulteth whether he is able (or whether it is possible) with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand." (Luke 14:31-33.)

Jesus makes it plain to those who would be disciples that there would be difficulties, trials and persecutions, but those who do forsake all for His sake would in due time receive an hundredfold of good things in the life to come. "Count the cost," He says —take into consideration the possibilities. "Are ye able to drink of the cup I shall drink of ?" Jesus asked on another occasion. All this, of course, suggests that we have within ourselves the right of free choice—free will—as to the decisions we make on the basis of knowledge received.

The possibilities of being begotten as New Creators have become an actual fact, we have passed from death unto life. "Old things have passed away, all things have become new to us." The growth and development of the New Creation has begun, the possibility of maturity lies before us. "I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness."

Each individual Christian is a power for good in the world, a living force and an opponent to works of darkness which surround him. And. "the hosts of sin are pressing hard to draw thee from the prize." Pleasing allurements, subtle temptations and active delusions, confusion of thought and plan, errors of doctrine, etc., are all brought to bear upon him, if possible to draw him from a definitely defined course to pursue another gospel. If it were possible, these things would deceive the very elect. The adversary would like to develop in us a state of uncertainty, for he knows the mind would then be open to receive his confusing delusions on one subject or another; this would soon lead to more uncertainty and errors until the one imagines he is being led into advanced light. This state of things we have witnessed in these latter days.

What have we on the other hand to counteract these multiplying delusions? The consecrated Christian has definite possibilities of overcoming these dangers. Call to mind frequently the purpose of our calling, and the things in reservation promised to those who will be overcomers ; the induction into the society of the pure and holy—members of The Christ—"as pillars in the temple of God, they shall go no more out"; the constant association with the Lord Himself—joint-heirs, fellow heirs in all His glory and work ; the great work of regenerating the world of mankind; the dispensing of the water of life to all, and the joy of knowing and seeing mankind, all resurrected, responding to the offer of salvation; the conquering power of love and the purity and wisdom of this mighty universal exhibition of Divine power, absolutely untainted by self-interest, existing and exercised only with the purpose of blessing the righteous and the destruction of all evil and evil doers, for the eternal benefit of a pure and holy society of heavenly and earthly beings. "O ! the prospect ! it is so transporting; we will rejoice in the glory that's promised."

Bible Class Studies.

FOR successful Bible Class study the important thing to keep in mind is that we meet to praise and worship God and to have our hearts in such condition that we are able to receive His blessing from the Scriptures examined. In other words, Bible study is for the purpose of our growing in character likeness to Christ and to attain an intellectual understanding of God's great plan of the ages and the harvest truths now due, the "present truth" especially revealed in the closing period of the Gospel Age in which we are now living. The Apostles so often exhort the followers of the Master "to grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." (2 Pet. 3:18, etc.)

It is well to realise that Bible study is not to be considered in the nature of a debate, to determine who may get the better of an argument. Rather, really profitable study is gained where thoughts are presented to the assembly, through the chairman, for the consideration of all, so that the correct thought may be gained from the Scriptures.

An essential requirement in Class study is that all members adhere to the particular subject being discussed in the passage of Scripture selected. Other subjects and questions apart from the lesson can be considered on other occasions. Each member in speaking should always address the chairman and never the fellow members while the study is in progress. Speakers should also endeavour to be brief and to the point, and present Scriptural support for thoughts expressed. While there is something commendable in "preferring one another" in speaking in Class, there is the other side of the matter to keep in mind, namely, of not leaving everything to be done by others.

Most benefit is received by members of a Bible Class when the lesson has been well prepared at home and entered in a notebook, the thoughts thus gained to be exchanged with other members of the Class. For general reading of the Scriptures at a study it is most helpful if all use the Authorized Version, and then compare the differences of translation in other versions such as the Revised Version, Emphatic Diaglott, etc. In this way, all members, including those new to Bible study, are able to follow the lesson clearly. How encouraging are the words of our Lord: "Where two or three are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them."

Food Parcels Appreciated in Britain.

The following letter received by two Sisters as a result of their enquiry to the secretary and treasurer of the Benevolent Service for the brethren in Britain is gladly presented so that our friends in Australia and other parts may know the true conditions in Britain at the present time.

England,

June 12th, 1946.

Dear Sisters, Loving greetings in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Your letter has just arrived. The loving sympathy and warm expressions of a desire to assist in a practical way is very much appreciated, is inspiring and breathes beautifully the spirit of our Master. We thank you dear Sisters in Christ Jesus our Lord. Things are rather difficult in this country; the rations are small, and where there is only one or two to a household it is a strain to procure sufficient, and it so happens that many of the Lord's dear saints are elderly, often living alone or in ones and twos. Where there is a family of 4 or 5 and over it is a lighter task to prepare a meal.

We have a small Benevolent Fund in this land, of which it has been my privilege to serve as distributor for many years. The Lord has graciously touched the hearts of our brethren to give, and we have been delighted to disburse in needy cases. We have quite a number of aged and infirm, as well as others in sickness to whom we are able to send relief in cash; in some cases we send every month, to others just during their indisposition and according as funds will permit.

The letters received in response to the gifts are full of gratitude and very touching in their expressions of comfort and encouragement to faith. Through all my twenty years of service I have never been asked directly for help;

we only know of the saints' needs through repeated enquiries through friends and brethren who may know of the circumstances. This is an assurance of the beautiful, patient and submissive spirit of our dear needy ones to whatever experience awaits them. As one Sister said to me after a deal of investigation as to how she was living, "Brother Ford, the Lord knew all about it and He has told you in good time. I am not yet starved." How gracious is our heavenly Father and what a power is His holy spirit to all those possessing it and it possessing them; praise Him.

Well now, dear Sisters, I can supply you with a list of names to whom you can send if it would be most convenient to you, or as suggested you might send the package to me and I will divide up the contents amongst our dear ones. It is indeed thoughtful of you and very loving. The comfort, joy and encouragement to those who will be the recipients cannot be told in words, but the Lord reads the heart both of giver and receiver.

We are able to send a little money, but that is not of the same service as food. The money sent enables one to purchase a little extra of the things not on ration, but even these are so difficult to procure and expensive and often entails waiting in a queue for two or more hours to get. A rabbit costs 6/- to 8/-, a chick 25/-, and other nourishing foods equally expensive. So if it is possible for you to send how great a comfort and help it will be. It is advisable to register, since we learn that parcels are sometimes missed in the post from overseas.

Through all the war years our Father's loving watch-care has been very manifest amongst His dear saints. Through all the bombing of cities few have received personal injuries, though many have had their homes destroyed and all their personal belongings lost. All have borne it all very, very bravely, really astonishingly. The Lord's promise has never failed one; all are very grateful for the many mercies bestowed

The Lord bless you abundantly; may you enjoy more and more of His peace and that rest of faith, the choice heritage of His saints this side the veil.

Yours very sincerely in Christ Jesus. G. A. Ford, 13 Cranleigh Gardens, Luton, Beds., England.

Since the above letter has been received a number of friends are arranging to forward parcels of food for distribution amongst the needy brethren in Britain, and this is surely a good service, as unto the Lord. Should other friends undertake to forward parcels to Brother Ford (Mr. G. A. Ford at above address) all particulars as to weight and contents allowed are obtainable at all post offices. It should be realised that tropical heat demands that parcels be correctly packed, otherwise the contents would be destroyed. It would be well for each one forwarding to advise Brother Ford by letter the date of despatch and contents of parcel sent.

Our Lord's Return

“AND He shall send Jesus Christ, which [who] before was preached unto you; whom the heaven must retain until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began.” —Acts 3:20, 21.

That our Lord intended His disciples to understand that for some purpose, in some manner, and at some time, He would come again, is, we presume, admitted and believed by all familiar with the Scriptures. True, Jesus said, “Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the age” (Matt. 28:20), and by His spirit and by His Word He has been with the Church continually, guiding, directing, comforting and sustaining His saints, and cheering them in the midst of all their afflictions. But though the Church has been blessedly conscious of the Lord's knowledge of all her ways and of His constant care and love, yet she longs for His promised personal return; for, when He said, “If I go, I will come again” (John 14:3), He certainly referred to a second personal coming.

The specific work of the first advent was to redeem men; and that of the second is to restore, and bless, and liberate the redeemed, Having given His life a ransom for all, our Saviour ascended to present that sacrifice to the Father, thus making reconciliation for man's iniquity. He tarries and permits “the prince of this world” to continue the rule of evil, until after the selection of “the Bride, the Lamb's wife,” who, to be accounted worthy of such honour, must overcome the influences of the present evil world. Then the work of giving to the world of mankind the great blessings secured to them by His sacrifice will be due to commence, and He will come forth to bless all the families of the earth.

True, the restoring and blessing could have commenced at once, when the ransom price was paid by the Redeemer, and then the coming of Messiah would have been but one event, the reign and blessing beginning at once, as the apostles at first expected. (Acts 1:6.) But God had provided “some better thing for us”—the Christian Church (Heb.

11:40); hence it is in our interest that the reign of Christ is separated from the sufferings of the Head by these nineteen centuries.

This period between the first and second advents, between the ransom of all and the blessing of all, is for the trial and selection of the Church, which is the body of Christ, otherwise there would have been only the one advent, and the work which will be done during the period of His second presence, in the Millennium, would have followed the resurrection of Jesus. Or, instead of saying that the work of the second advent would have followed at once the work of the first, let us say rather that had Jehovah not purposed the selection of the “little flock,” “the body of Christ,” the first advent would not have taken place when it did, but would have occurred at the time of the second advent, and there would have been but the one. For God has evidently designed the permission of evil for six thousand years, as well as that the cleansing and restitution of all shall be accomplished during the seventh thousand.

Thus seen, the coming of Jesus, as the sacrifice and ransom for sinners, was just long enough in advance of the blessing and restoring time to allow for the selection of His “little flock” of “joint-heirs.” This will account for some of the apparent delay on God's part in giving the blessings promised, and provided for, in the ransom. The blessings will come in due time, as at first planned, though, for a glorious purpose, the price was paid longer beforehand than men would have expected.

The Apostle informs us that Jesus has been absent from earth—in the heaven—during all the intervening time from His ascension to the beginning of the times of restitution, or restoration —“whom the heaven must retain until the times of restitution of all things,” etc. (Acts 3:21.) Since the Scriptures thus teach that the object of our Lord's second advent is the restitution of all things, and that at the time of His appearing the nations are so far from being converted as to be angry (Rev. 11:18) and in opposition, it must be admitted either that the Church will fail to accomplish her mission, and that the plan of God will be thus far frustrated, or else, as we claim and have shown, that the conversion of the world in the present age was not expected of the Church, but that her mission has been to preach the Gospel in all the world for a witness, and to prepare her self under divine direction for her great future work. God has not yet by any means exhausted His power for the world's conversion. Nay, more: He has not yet even attempted the world's conversion.

Some who can see something of the blessings due at the second advent, and who appreciate in some measure the fact that the Lord comes to bestow the grand blessing purchased by His death, fail to see this last proposition, viz.: that those in their graves have as much interest in that glorious reign of Messiah as those who at that time will be less completely under the bondage of corruption—death. But as surely as Jesus died for all, they must all have the blessings and opportunities: which He purchased with His own precious blood.. Hence we should expect blessings in the Millennial age upon all those in their graves as well as upon those not in them; and of this we will find abundant proof, as we look further into the Lord's testimony on the subject. It is because of God's plan for their release that those in the tomb are called "prisoners of hope."

"God is love," and "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish." (1 John 4:8; John 3:16.) Would it not seem that if God loved the world so much He might have made provision, not only that believers might be saved, but also that all might hear in order to believe?

Again, when we read, "That was the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world" (John 1:9), our observation says, Not so; every man has not been enlightened; we cannot see that our Lord has lighted more than a few of earth's billions. Even in this comparatively enlightened day, millions of heathen give no evidence of such enlightenment; neither did the Sodomites, nor multitudes of others in past ages.

We read that Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, tasted death "for every man." (Heb. 2:9.) But if He tasted death for the one hundred and forty-three billions, and from any cause that sacrifice becomes efficacious to only one billion, was not the redemption comparatively a failure? And in that case, is not the Apostle's statement too broad? When again we read, "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to ALL PEOPLE" (Luke 2:10), and, looking about us, see that it is only to a "little flock" that it has been good tidings, and not to all people, we would be compelled to wonder whether the angels had not overstated the goodness and breadth of their message, and overrated the importance of the work to be accomplished by the Messiah whom they announced.

Another statement is, "There is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a ransom for all." (1 Tim. 2:5, 6.) A ransom for all? Then why should not all the ransomed have some benefit from Christ's death? Why should not all come to a knowledge of the truth, that they may believe?

Without the key, how dark, how inconsistent, these statements appear; but when we find the key to God's plan, these texts all declare with one voice, "God is love." This key is found in the latter part of the text last quoted—"Who gave Himself a ransom for all, TO BE TESTIFIED IN DUE TIME." God has a due time for everything. He could have testified it to these in their past lifetime; but since He did not, it proves that their due time must be future. For those who will be of the Church, the bride of Christ, and share the kingdom honours, the present is the "due time" to hear; and whosoever now has an ear to hear, let him hear and heed, and he will be blessed accordingly. Though Jesus paid our ransom before we were born, it was not our "due time" to hear of it for long years afterward, and only the appreciation of it brought responsibility; and this, only to the extent of our ability and appreciation. The same principle applies to all: in God's due time it will be testified to all, and all will then have opportunity to believe and to be blessed by it.

The prevailing opinion is that death ends all probation; but there is no Scripture which so teaches; and all the above, and many more Scriptures, would be meaningless, or worse, if death ends all hope for the ignorant masses of the world.

Since God does not propose to save men on account of ignorance, but "will have all men to come unto the knowledge of the truth" (1 Tim. 2:4); and since the masses of mankind have died in ignorance; and since "there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave" (Eccl. 9:10); therefore God has prepared for the awakening of the dead, in order to knowledge, faith and salvation.

Hence His plan is, that "as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive, but each one in his own order"—The Gospel Church, the Bride, the body of Christ, first; afterward, during the Millennial age, all who shall become His during that thousand years of His presence (mistranslated coming), the Lord's due time for all to know Him, from the least to the greatest.—1 Cor. 15:22, 23.

As death came by the first Adam, so life comes by Christ, the second Adam. Everything that mankind lost through being in the first Adam is to be restored to those who believe in the second Adam. When awakened, with the advantage of experience with evil, which Adam lacked, those who thankfully accept the redemption as God's gift may continue to live everlastingly on the original condition of obedience. Perfect obedience will be required, and perfect ability to obey will be given, under the righteous reign of the Prince of Peace. Here is the salvation offered to the world.

Though many of the prophecies and promises of future blessing seem to apply to Israel only, it must be remembered that they were a typical people, and hence the promises made to them, while sometimes having a special application to themselves, generally have also a wider application to the whole world of mankind which that nation typified.

While Israel as a nation was typical of the whole world, its priesthood was typical of the elect "little flock," the head and body of Christ, the "Royal Priesthood"; and the sacrifices, cleansings and atonements made for Israel typified the "better sacrifices," fuller cleansings and real atonement "for the sins of the whole world," of which they are a part.

And not only so, but God mentions by name other nations and promises their restoration. As a forcible illustration we mention the Sodomites. Surely, if we shall find the restitution of the Sodomites clearly taught, we may feel satisfied of the truth of this glorious doctrine of Restitution for all mankind, spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets.

And why should not the Sodomites have an opportunity to reach perfection and everlasting life as well as Israel, or as any of us? True, they were not righteous, but neither was Israel, nor were we who now hear the gospel. "There is none righteous; no, not one," aside from the imputed righteousness of Christ, who died for all. Our Lord's own words tell us that although God rained down fire from heaven and destroyed them all because of their wickedness, yet the Sodomites were not so great sinners in His sight as were the Jews, who had more knowledge. (Gen. 19:24; Luke 17:29). Unto the Jews of Capernaum He said, "If the mighty works which have been done in thee had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day."—Matt. 11:23.

Thus our Lord teaches that the Sodomites did not have a full opportunity; and He guarantees them such opportunity when he adds (verse 24), "But I say unto you, that it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom, in the day of judgment, than for thee." The character of the Day of Judgment and its work will be shown in succeeding pages. Here we merely call attention to the fact that it will be a tolerable time for Capernaum, and yet more tolerable for Sodom, because, though neither had yet had full knowledge, nor all the blessings designed to come through the "Seed," yet Capernaum had sinned against more light.

We need not wonder that Jews, Sodomites, Samaritans, and all mankind will be ashamed and confounded when in His own "due time" God shows forth the riches of His favour. Yea, many of those who are now God's children will be confounded and amazed when they see how God so loved THE WORLD and how much His thoughts and plans were above their own.

Christian people generally believe that God's blessings are all and only for the selected Church, but now we begin to see that God's plan is wider than we had supposed, and that though He has given the Church "exceeding great and precious promises," He has also made bountiful provision for the world which He so loved as to redeem. The Jews made a very similar mistake in supposing that all the promises of God were to and for them alone; but when the "due time" came and the Gentiles were favoured, the remnant of Israel whose hearts were large enough to rejoice in this wider evidence of God's grace, shared that increased favour, while the rest were blinded by prejudice and human tradition. Let those of the Church who now see the light of the "time" of the end" (Dan. 12:4), with its gracious advantages for all the world, take heed lest they be found in opposition to the advancing light, and so for a time be blinded to its glory and blessings.

Seeing, then, that so many of the great and glorious features of God's plan for human salvation from sin and death lie in the future, and that the second advent of our Lord Jesus is the designed first step in the accomplishment of those long promised and long expected blessings, shall we not even more earnestly long for the time of His second advent than the less informed Jew looked and longed for His first advent? Seeing that the time of evil, injustice, and death is to be brought to an end by the dominion of power which He will then exercise, and that righteousness, truth and peace are to be universal, who should not rejoice to see His day? And who that is now suffering with Christ, inspired by the precious promise that "if we suffer with Him we shall also reign with Him," will not lift up his head and rejoice at any evidence of the approach of the Master, knowing thereby that our deliverance and our glorification with Him draw nigh? Surely all in sympathy with His mission of blessing and His spirit of love will hail every evidence of His coming as the approach of the "great joy which shall be to all people."

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Having enjoyed your addresses over the air and feeling that I would like others to enjoy same, I am writing to ask for yesterday's address, also your booklet. And keep on with the good work which I believe is truly the work of God. Thanking you, I remains, Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Friends.—Many thanks for sending further copies of the "Peoples Paper"; it is very interesting and helpful. I think you are very sincere in your work as you do not ask for payment, but I know printing, etc., cannot be done without cost, so enclosing postal note 3/-.

I trust that the voices of Frank and Ernest will reach the ears and hearts of millions more on the listening end. Most sincerely yours.

To Frank and Ernest.—I am one of the shut-ins, nearly 75 years old, and I will be glad if you will send me some of your books. I listen in pretty often and I am interested, so will be glad if you will oblige.

To Frank and Ernest.—I am a listener to your Talks on Sunday mornings from 3B0 so I would like you to send me a copy of the Dialogue and "Plan of God." Hoping to hear more of your Talks which I enjoy. You would kindly oblige.

Berean Bible Institute.—Would you please send me "Foregleams of the Golden Age," as advertised in one of your papers; it said if mentioning the coupon it would cost 2/-.

I enjoy listening to you of a Sunday, and get much blessing, and I really enjoyed reading the book and papers you sent me, and I obtained much spiritual blessing and was wondering if you could send more and thanking you. Yours in Christ's service.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sir.—A few months ago I received one of your valuable tracts; the title of it was "Many Mansions," discussed by Frank and Ernest. This has proved a great help to me as I am often called upon to take our midweek prayer meetings. I am not a learned speaker, so I find these tracts very helpful. If you have any further Bible talks or tracts which I could use I would be most grateful to receive them. Thanking you once again; believe me to be, Yours sincerely.

New South Wales.

Dear Brother.—In reply to your welcome letter, I take this occasion to write you immediately again as we have run out of radio cards. I made a check up with the friends last Sunday and we shared out the remainder still in hand. Could you make it convenient to send me another 4,000 ? . . .

I received your parcel of "Plan in Brief," also -two parcels -of cards for which best thanks. The radio sessions are real good and the friends are delighted We have all been working well at distribution of cards. Brother-- has done Auburn; have done Lidcombe and Flemington. Brother has done from Summer Hill to Strathfield, Brother Ryde and Epping, and Brother the Hurstville district. But there is a lot more territory to cover yet.

Hoping for fresh supplies soon; I am with Christian love, ever your Brother by His grace.

Dear Frank and Ernest.--I heard your session on 2KY this morning and enjoyed it very much. It was most interesting and quite a new meaning put on the text. I would be very pleased to receive several copies of broadcast message and all broadcast messages, and will always be eager to listen to you every Sunday morning. Thank you for the message; I am, Yours sincerely.

P.S.—Would you also please send some literature.

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs.—I have been a listener to your session from 2HD and to-day is your last. Could you send me some of your notes which you have put over the air. There was one Sunday I could not follow you, concerning hell. What becomes of us when we die ? I would like that little bit explained. I am a sick old woman with very poor education and I do not go out, I live by myself, so if you have a few small tracts I would be grateful. Yours, a constant listener.

[A new edition of the booklet "Where Are the Dead ?" is now available; a free copy will be forwarded to all who make application for same. It is expected that most listeners who heard Frank and Ernest over 2HD will now be able to hear them through 2KY Sydney, the latter station being much more powerful.—B.B. Institute.]

Tasmania.

Dear Sir.—You will no doubt be very pleased to hear that a Tasmanian listener was very much taken up with your last Sunday's Talk, and I would esteem it a great favour if a copy could be made available to me.

Congratulating you on your programme and trusting you will be able to comply with my request. Thanking you in anticipation, Yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs.—I am interested in your Talks over the radio and would like to have copies of "God's Plan," "Good News" and "The Earth Removed." You seem to be giving teachings that my father believed in; that is, that Christ is the Saviour of all men. "As in Adam all died, so in Christ shall all be made alive."

I remember a Salvation Army captain preaching of Hell Fire 40 years ago in Melbourne; after the meeting my father told him that if he believed what he was preaching he would go raving mad at the thought of all the unsaved people suffering in hell forever. I was only a little boy then. My father used to quote, "But we trust in the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, especially of those that believe." Your teachings seem to be the same, that is why I am interested. I am looking forward to hearing you both next Sunday morning and to receiving your copies of "Good News," etc. I remain, Yours faithfully.

Dear Sir.—I have been listening to Frank and Ernest broadcast on a Sunday morning and would very much like a booklet of "God's Plan." Now, I don't know how big the book is and hardly know how much postage to send; anyway, don't send any back. The Sunday morning Talks are very interesting and helpful. Trusting God will bless you in your work for Him.

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs.—I listened in to your broadcast yesterday (the 21st); it was very interesting and your Scriptural references were right to the point.

It will be a iolt to the clergy of our day to realise they will be supplanted with God's representations—the Ancient Worthies who will be the Princes of the new earth. I would like the pamphlet you advertised and also the one last week, "Good News." Thanking you; Sincerely yours.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Friends.—I have been listening to your Radio Talks recently and find them very interesting and would appreciate a copy of the Talk of some weeks ago of the Battle of Armageddon; also a copy of July 14th. Yours sincerely.

South Australia.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sir.—Your card with its Blessed Promise duly received and which was greatly appreciated. I certainly would be glad to have the free literature mentioned, and having read and assimilated pass on to any similarly circumstanced. May God's blessing be with you in your kind efforts to bring hope and encouragement to those who mourn. Yours sincerely.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sir—Would you please forward me half-dozen copies of your booklet "The Plan of God—in Brief." I would like to receive the Talks by Frank and Ernest again as I find them both interesting and helpful. Also one copy of "Hymns of Dawn" (with music). Please find 10/- for payment of same. Thanking you for all you are doing. You may use money over for your works. Yours sincerely.

West Australia.

Dear Sirs.—I happened to be listening to your session to-day. I must admit I am not a regular listener to it, but the Dialogue and the subject discussed interests me, and I would be grateful for a copy of it and of the booklet "God's Plan," of which you spoke. Thanking you.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs.—Many thanks for recent Dialogues received which I found very helpful and interesting, also does my sister and father, who in turn wish you every success with your session in the future. Please find enclosed further stamps for forthcoming Dialogues with apologies if the stamps are overdue. I remain, Yours sincerely

The Hope of Immortality.

(Ezek. 18:19-32. Convention Address).

THERE is a longing hope within men that death does not end all existence. There is an undefined hope that, somehow and somewhere, the life now begun will have a continuation. In some this hope turns to fear. Realising their unworthiness of a future of pleasure, many fear a future of woe; and the more they dread it for themselves and others the more they believe in it.

This undefined hope of a future life and its counterpart, fear, doubtless had their origin in the Lord's condemnation of the serpent after Adam's fall into sin and death, that eventually the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. This was no doubt understood to mean that at least a portion of the Adamic family would finally triumph over Satan, and over sin and death, into which he had inveigled them. No doubt God encouraged such a hope, even though but vaguely, speaking to and through Noah, and through Enoch who prophesied, "Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousand of His saints." But the gospel, "the good tidings" of a salvation from death to be offered to all mankind in God's due time, seems to have been first clearly stated to Abraham. The apostle declares, "The gospel was preached before to Abraham,—saying, In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." This at least was the basis of the Jewish hope of a resurrection; for since many of the families of the earth were dead and dying, the promised blessing of all implied a future life. And when, centuries after, Israel was scattered among the nations at the time of the Babylonian captivity, they undoubtedly carried fragments of God's promises and their hopes everywhere they went.

Sure it is, that whether it came as a result of an admixture of Jewish thought, or because hope is an element of man's nature, or both, the whole world believes in a future life, and almost all believe that it will be everlasting. But such hopes are not proofs of the doctrine; and the Old Testament promises, made to the Jews, are too vague to constitute a groundwork for a clear faith, much less for a "dogmatic theology," on this subject.

It is not until we find, in the New Testament, the clear, positive statements of our Lord, and afterwards the equally clear statements of the apostles on this momentous subject of everlasting life that we begin to exchange our vague hopes for positive convictions. In other words, we not only have positive statements to the effect that the possibilities of a future life have been provided for all, but the philosophy of the fact and how it is to be attained and maintained are set forth there as nowhere else.

Many have not noticed these points, and hence are "weak in the faith." Let us see what this philosophy is, and be more assured than ever that future life, everlasting life, is by our great and wise Creator's provision made a possibility for every member of the human family.

Beginning at the foundation of this New Testament assurance of life everlasting, we find to our astonishment that it first of all admonishes us that in and of ourselves we have nothing which would give us any hope of everlasting life; that the life of our race was forfeited by the disobedience of our father Adam, that although he was created perfect and was adapted to live forever, his sin not only brought to him the wages of sin — death but that his children were born in a dying condition, inheritors of the dying influences. God's law, like Himself, is perfect, and so was His creature (Adam) before he sinned; for of God it is written, "His work is perfect." And God through His law approves only that which is perfect, and condemns to destruction everything imperfect.

Hence the race of Adam, "born in sin and shapen in iniquity," has no hope of everlasting life except upon the conditions held out in the New Testament and called the Gospel—the good tidings, that a way back from the fall, to perfection, to divine favour and everlasting life, has been opened up through Christ, and for all Adam's family who will avail themselves of it.

The keynote of this hope of reconciliation to God, and thus to a fresh hope of life everlasting, is laid in the statements (1) that "Christ died for our sins," and (2) that "he rose again for our justification;" for "the man Christ Jesus gave Himself a ransom (a corresponding price) for all." Adam and his race, which when he sinned was yet in him and shared his sentence naturally, "have been redeemed (bought) by the precious blood (death) of Christ." I Pet. 1:19.

But, although the Lord's provision is abundant for all, it is not applicable to any except on certain conditions; namely (1) that they accept Christ as their Redeemer: and (2) that they strive to avoid sin and to thenceforth live in harmony with God and righteousness. Hence we are told that "Eternal life is the gift of God through Jesus Christ our Lord." (Rom. 6:23.) The following Scripture statements are very clear on this subject:—"He that hath the Son bath life (a right or privilege or grant of life as God's gift); but he that hath not the Son shall not see (perfect) life." John 3:36; 1 John 5:12.

None can obtain everlasting life except from Christ the Redeemer and appointed Lifegiver; and the truth which brings to us the privilege of manifesting faith and obedience, and thus "laying hold on eternal life," is called the "water of life" and "the bread of life." John 4:14; 6:40, 54.

This everlasting life will be granted only to those who, when they learn of it and the terms upon which it will be granted as a gift, seek for it, by living according to the spirit of holiness. They shall reap it as a gift-reward. Rom. 6:23; Gal. 6:8.

To gain this everlasting life we must become the Lord's "sheep" and follow the voice, the instructions of the Shepherd. John 10:26-28; 17:2, 3.

The gift of everlasting life will not be forced upon any. On the contrary, it must be desired and sought and laid hold upon by all who would gain it. 1 Tim. 6:12, 19.

It is thus a hope, rather than the real life, that God gives us now: the hope that we may ultimately attain it, because God has provided a way by which He can be just and yet be the justifier of all truly believing and accepting Christ.

By God's grace our Lord Jesus not only bought us by the sacrifice of His life for ours, but He became our great High Priest, and as such He is now the "author (source) of eternal salvation to all that obey Him." (Heb. 5:9.) "And this_ is the promise that He hath promised us, even eternal life." 1 John 2:25.

“And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life (now by faith and hope, and by and by actually, when He who is our life shall appear), and this life is in His Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life.” 1 John 5:11, 12.

This everlasting life, made possible to Adam and all his race, by our Creator through our Redeemer, but intended for, and promised to, only the faithful and obedient, and which at present is given to these only as a hope, will be actually given to the faithful in the “resurrection.”

It will be noticed that the explicit promises of God’s Word differ widely from the worldly philosophies on this subject. They claim that man must have a future everlasting life because he hopes for it, or in some cases fears it. But hopes and fears are not reasonable grounds for belief on any subject. Neither is there basis for the claim that there is something in man which must live on forever; no such part of the human organism is known, or can be proved or located..

But the Scriptural view of the subject is open to no such objections; it is thoroughly reasonable to consider our existence or life, as therein presented, as a “gift of God,” and not an inalienable possession of our own. Furthermore, it avoids a great and serious difficulty to which the idea of the heathen philosophies is open; for when the heathen philosopher states that man cannot perish, that he must live forever, that eternal life is not a gift of God, as the Bible declares, but a natural quality possessed by every man, he claims too much. Such a philosophy not only gives everlasting existence to those who would use it well, and to whom it would be a blessing, but to others also, who would not use it well, and to whom it would be a curse. The Scripture teaching, on the contrary, as we have already shown, declares that this great and inestimably precious gift (life-everlasting) will be given to those who believe and obey the Redeemer, and Life-giver. Others, to whom it would be an injury, not only do not possess it now, but can never get it. “The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.” The wicked (all who, after coming to a clear knowledge of the truth, still wilfully disobey it) shall be cut off from among God’s people in the second death. They shall “be as though they had not been.” “They shall utterly perish.” “Everlasting destruction” shall be their doom—a destruction which will last forever, from which there will be no recovery, no resurrection. They will suffer the loss of everlasting life, and all of its privileges, joys and blessings—the loss of all that the faithful will gain. Psalms 37:9, 20; Job 10:19; 2 Thessalonians 1:9.

God’s gift of life eternal is precious to all His people, and a firm grasp of it by the hand of faith is quite essential to a well-balanced and consistent life. Only those who have “laid hold on eternal life,” by an acceptance of Christ and consecration to His service, are able to properly and profitably combat the tempests of life now raging.

But now, having examined the hope of immortality from the ordinary understanding of that word (everlasting life), and having found that everlasting life is God’s provision for all those of Adam’s race who will accept it in “due time” under the terms of the New Covenant, we are prepared to go a step further and to point out that everlasting life and immortality are not synonymous terms, as people in general suppose. The word “immortal” means more than power to live everlastingly; and according to the Scriptures, millions may ultimately enjoy everlasting life, but only a very limited “little flock” will be made immortal.

Immortality is an element of quality of the divine nature, but not of human or angelic or any other nature than the divine. And it is because Christ and His “little flock,” His “bride,” are to be “partakers of the divine nature” that they will be exceptions to all other creatures either in heaven or on earth. (2 Peter 1:4.)

The word immortal signifies not mortal—death-proof, indestructible, imperishable. Any being whose existence is dependent in any manner upon another, or upon conditions such as food, light, air, etc., is not immortal. This quality inheres in Jehovah God alone as it is written—"The Father hath life in Himself" (John 5:26); i.e., His existence is not a derived one, nor a sustained one. He "only hath immortality" (1 Tim. 6:16) as an innate or original quality of being. [This Scripture may be held to apply to our Lord Jesus Christ in His present and future condition, "highly exalted," "the express image of the Father's person." But even so understood, this passage would be subject to the rule of interpretation laid down by the same writer in 1 Cor. 15:27; "It is manifest that He (the Father) is excepted (in all comparisons—for He is the fountain from which all blessings proceed.)"]

These Scriptures, being decisive authority on the subject, we may know beyond peradventure that men, angels, archangels, or even the Son of God before and during the time He "was made flesh and dwelt among us" were not immortal—all were mortal.

But the word "mortal" does not signify dying, but merely die-able—possessing life dependent upon God for its continuance. For instance, angels, not being immortal, are mortal, and could die, could be destroyed by God if they became rebels against His wise, just, and loving government. In Him (in His providence) they live and move and have their being. Indeed, of Satan, who was such an angel of light, and who did become a rebel, it is distinctly declared that in due time he will be destroyed. (Heb. 2:14.) This not only proves that Satan is mortal, but it proves that angelic nature is a mortal nature—one which could be destroyed by its Creator. As for man, he is a "little lower than the angels" (Psa. 8:5), and consequently mortal also, as is abundantly attested by the fact that our race has been dying for six thousand years.

So, then, Adam did not become mortal by reason of sin, but was created mortal—by nature he was subject or liable to the death penalty. Had he been created immortal nothing could have destroyed him; for, as we have seen, immortality is a state or condition not subject to death, but death-proof.

What, then, was Adam's condition before he sinned, and in what way did the curse affect him? What life had he to lose if he was created mortal?

We answer, that his condition in life was similar to that of the angels; he had life in full measure—lasting life—which he might have retained forever by remaining obedient to God. But, because he was not death-proof, because he did not have "life in himself," but was dependent upon conditions of divine pleasure and favour for its continuance, therefore God's threat, that if he disobeyed he should die, meant something. Had he not been mortal, God's sentence would have been an empty threat. But Adam's perfect life, which would have been continued forever had he continued obedient, was forfeited by disobedience, and he died.

Jehovah God, "who only hath immortality" or "life in himself" originally, innately, and of whom are all things, having created various orders of beings, angelic and human, in His own moral and rational likeness, but mortal and not of His divine nature, has declared that He designs a new creation—an order of beings not only morally and rationally in His resemblance, but in "the express image" of His person, and partakers of His own "divine nature" a prominent constituent or element of which is immortality. (2 Pet. 1:4.)

With amazement, we inquire upon whom shall this high honour and distinction be conferred? Upon angels, or cherubim, or seraphim? No; but upon His Son — His specially "first-born" and "only begotten" Son, that He, who was always His obedient Son, "should in all things have the pre-eminence" over others. But before He could be so highly honoured He must be tested, proved "worthy" of so great a distinction and so high an exaltation "above His fellows." This test was in view when the sentence of death was pronounced upon Adam and all his children in his loins; the test was that He, Christ, should lay down His life as a ransom-price for the life of Adam, and all who lost life in his transgression. And He was equal to the test, and gained the prize of “the divine nature,” “life in Himself,” “immortality.”

Consider Him, who, for the joy set before Him, endured the Cross; despising the shame, and is now in consequence set down at the right hand (place of favour) of the throne of God. He was rich, but for our sakes, He became poor. Inasmuch as the man and race to be redeemed were human, it was needful that He become human so as to give the ransom or corresponding price. He therefore humbled Himself and took the bondman’s form; and after He found Himself in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself even unto death — even unto the most ignominious form of death—the death of the Cross. “Wherefore God hath highly exalted Him (to the promised divine nature, at His resurrection), and given Him a name that is above every name (Jehovah’s name excepted). (1 Cor. 15:27; Heb. 12:3; 2 Cor. 8:9; Phil. 2:8-9.)

“Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing.” (Rev. 5:9-12.)

But more, the opulence of divine favour does not stop with the exaltation of one, but has arranged that Christ Jesus, as the Captain, shall lead a company of sons of God to “glory, honour, and immortality” (Heb. 2:10; Rom. 2:7), each of whom, however, must be a spiritual “copy” or likeness of the “first begotten.” And as a grand lesson of the divine sovereignty, and as a sublime contradiction to all evolution theories, God elected to call to this place of honour as “the Bride, the Lamb’s wife and joint-heir” (Rev. 21:2, 9; Rom. 8:17), not the angels and the cherubs, but some from among the sinners redeemed by the precious blood of the Lamb. God elected the number to be thus exalted (Rev. 7:4), and predestinated what must be their characteristics if they would make their calling and election sure to a place in that company to be so highly honoured; and all the rest is left to Christ who worketh now as the Father worked hitherto. (John 5:17.)

The present age, the Gospel age, from Pentecost to the present time, is the time for the selection of this elect class, variously termed “the Church,” “the Body of Christ,” the “royal Priesthood,” “the seed of Abraham” (Gal. 3:29), etc.; and the permission still of evil is for the purpose of developing these “members of the body of Christ” and to furnish them the opportunity of sacrificing their little and redeemed all, in the service of Him who bought them with His precious blood; and thus of developing in their hearts His spiritual likeness, that when, at the end of the age, they are presented by their Lord and Redeemer before the Father, God may see in them “the image of His Son.” (Col. 1:22; Rom. 8:29.)

As the reward of “glory, honour and immortality,” and all the features of the divine nature, were not conferred upon the “First-begotten” until He had finished His course by completing His sacrifice, and obedience in death, so with the Church, His “bride”—counted as one, and treated collectively. As our Lord, the First-born and Captain, “entered into His glory” at His resurrection; as He there became partaker of the divine nature fully, by being “born from the dead,” “born of the spirit,” as He there was highly exalted to the throne and highest favour (“right hand”) of God, so He was promised that His Church, His “bride,” shall in her resurrection be changed, by resurrection power, from human nature to the glory, honour, and immortality of the divine nature.

And so it is written respecting “the resurrection” of the Church: “It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption (immortality). It is sown in dishonour, it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness, it is raised in power. It is sown a natural (animal) body, it is raised a spiritual body.” (1 Cor. 15:42-44, 49.)

God’s plan of salvation for the race of Adam is to extend to each member of it, during the Millennium, the offer of eternal life upon the terms of the New Covenant sealed for all with the precious blood of the Lamb. But there is no suggestion anywhere that Immortality, the Divine nature, will ever be offered or granted to any except the “elect” Church of the Gospel age—the “little flock,” “the Bride, the Lamb’s wife.” For the others of Adam’s race the offer will be “restitution” (Acts 3:20, 21) to life and health and perfection of human nature — the same that Adam possessed as the earthly image of God before his fall from grace into sin and death. And when, at the close of the Millennial age, all the obedient of mankind shall have attained all that was lost in Adam and redeemed by Christ—then all, armed with complete knowledge and experience, and hence fully able to stand the test, will be tested severely (as was Adam), but individually; and only those found in fullest heart-sympathy, as well as in outward harmony with God and His righteous arrangements, will be permitted to go beyond the Millennium into the everlasting future or “world (age) without end.” All others will be destroyed in the Second Death—’destroyed from among the people.” (Acts 3:23.)

But, although there shall be no more death, neither sighing nor crying, it will not be because the victors of the Millennial Age will be crowned with immortality, but because, having learned to judge between right and wrong, and their effects, they shall have formed characters in full accord with God and righteousness; and because they will have stood tests which will demonstrate that they would not wish to sin if the way were opened and no penalties attached. They will not have life in themselves, but will still be dependent upon God’s provision of food, water, air, etc., for the sustenance of life. This is particularly stated in Amos 9:14, and Isa. 65:21.

Seen in this, the Scriptural light, the subject of immortality shines resplendently. It leaves the way clear for the general “gift of God, eternal life,” to be extended to all whom the Redeemer shall find willing to accept it upon the only terms upon which it could be a blessing; and it leaves the unworthy subject to the just penalty always enunciated by the great Judge of all, viz.,—”The soul that sinneth, it shall die.” Ezek. 18.

Decorum in the House of God.

THE following has been received from one of our brethren: "I thank you for the helpful article on Bible Class Studies' in the August 'Peoples Paper.' That was a very helpful and timely article indeed; it might be repeated with profit and an addition might be made to it, pointing to the necessity for using the time just before the studies begin to prepare the mind and heart for them, during the season of fellowshiping, by conversing as much as possible on those matters that bring us nearer to God. It is the practice with some, to waste this time on many worldly subjects, which, when the study begins, rob them of the fullness of the blessing they might then receive had they properly attuned their hearts and minds beforehand. . . Some article and advice on this matter would be very helpful, especially to class leaders."

The above reference to preparing the mind and heart for the services to be held, whether it be for Bible study or other form of meeting, is certainly very important. The arrangement that some Classes make that a period of quiet meditation be observed by all members immediately prior to all meetings is most beneficial. Members should seek to arrive at the meeting place in good time so that a period of quietness for all can be observed of at least ten minutes.

It is thought well to present again the following article which appeared in "Peoples Paper" some years ago. From the pen of a noble Christian, all sincere followers of the Lord could well seek, as far as possible, to follow the advice given. Under the heading "Decorum in the House of God," and based on the text, Eccles. 5:1—"Keep thy foot when thou goest to the House of God, and be more ready to hear, than to give the sacrifice of fools; for they consider not that they do evil,"—the writer states:

The Wise Man was undoubtedly not talking about literal feet or literal steps, but giving some wise counsel, which his hearers might appropriate, just as we do. They understood him to mean that they must be circumspect in their daily lives.

"Keep thy foot." Notice where you are going. Do not go to the House of God as you would go to the marketplace or to some place of amusement. Go as to the place where God will meet with His people. The Wise Man goes on to assume what would be heard in the House of God. Be not ready "to give the sacrifice of fools." This would seem to refer to laughter, levity, foolish talk, and jesting.

This Scripture is one which may very properly be taken to heart by all of God's people at the present time. Reverence is very becoming. We have lost the fear that God will cast us into eternal torment. We know our Heavenly Father better than to suppose that He would have any such evil intention towards any of His creatures. But we should not go to the House of God as we would go to the market-place. Many of the Lord's people do not appreciate the fact that decorum is necessary in every place where God is worshipped.

Reverential Conduct to be Cultivated

It is for us to realise that we have God in the Church today in a sense that He never was in the typical temple. Wherever there is a meeting of the members of the Church, the Lord has declared that He will be there. The living stones constituting the Temple of God should be as fully revered as temples made of literal stones.

Whether we meet in a parlour or in a church or in an opera house, the fact that God's people are there makes that building, whatever it may be, a holy place. Therefore, whoever approaches it should do so with a watchfulness of his feet. When he arrives, he should be appreciative of the place where he is, and should be ready to “hear”listen—not full of mirth. All conversation should be of a kind that would edify—build up— along spiritual lines. If we cannot talk along such lines, it would be better for us to hear the discourse, join in the singing, and then withdraw.

Whatever conversation be carried on, it should be with reverence, not merely for the place, but for the occasion. There should be no turning about and saying, “Here comes Brother So-and-so, Sister So-and-so; we shall hear them sing.” Such conduct is very improper.

We do not know any lesson the Lord’s people need to learn more than that of reverence. The Lord will not call anyone who is devoid of reverence, and He wants that quality to grow strong. But when fear is banished, the tendency is to less reverence. Special care in this respect is to be observed when we go to the House of God, or to any place where Divine service is to be held.

Consideration Of The Rights Of Others.

Not only should we watch our feet in going to the House of God, but we should watch what we take with, us. We should see that we go there clean. We should also see that we do not take children who are not properly trained. Thus we shall not be in danger of annoying others.

There may be occasions when children ought to be left at home. If it seems impossible to control them at the meetings, it would be better for the parents to take turns in coming to the meetings. No one has a right to take children to the meeting, when their presence would be detrimental to the spiritual interests of others. Probably some way could be devised whereby the child could be left at home until of such an age as not to disturb the class. The majority of parents become so accustomed to the ways of their children that they do not realise that others are being annoyed— when probably every motion of the child is disturbing others. The others have their own trials to tax their patience.

Punctuality is the mark of character development

It would seem that some need to watch, not only their feet, but also their watches. To come into the meeting late is out of harmony with the principles of both justice and love. All who attend ought, in justice to others, to see that they arrive in time. They ought so to arrange their affairs that they can be at the meeting promptly at the hour.

There is, however, even a higher principle involved in this matter of coming late to the gatherings of God’s people. Where God’s people meet is the House of God, and there should be such a reverence for the Lord that we should all make every effort to be on time so that the prayers, praise and studies may not be disturbed. The reverence of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. There are occasions when it may not be possible for one to be in time, then entrance should be made as quietly as possible. It is the habitual late coming which seems to indicate the lack of reverence and appreciation of the fact that we go specially. to the Lord’s House to meet the Lord and His people, and in expecting His people to either wait for us to be disturbed by our entering late is presuming upon the Lord’s graciousness for, “Inasmuch as ye do it unto one of the least of My brethren ye do it unto Me.”

Doubtless the Lord would view our efforts to be punctual and not to annoy others as marks of Christian character development, which would have His approval, and which would help to prepare us for the Kingdom. He who is indifferent to the rights of others manifests that he is lacking in the spirit of love, the spirit of Christ. And whoever has not the spirit of Christ, well developed, will not have a place in the Kingdom.

Hence these matters-unruly children, tardiness at meeting, etc., will have to do with our fitness for a place in the Kingdom. By this we do not mean that we are being judged according to our works, or that we have any right to judge others according to their work. The Lord said, "Judge not." We should show that our endeavours to do the Lord's will are equal to the desires of our hearts. If we exercise determination in trying to live up to these, we shall be glad when we experience our change in the Resurrection.

The Day of Judgment.

“GOD hath appointed a day in which He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom He hath ordained—”Jesus Christ, the righteous.” “For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son.”—Acts 17:31; 1 John 2:1; John 5:22.

A very vague and indefinite idea prevails in regard to the day of judgment.

The term judgment signifies more than simply the rendering of a verdict. It includes the idea of a trial, as well as a decision based upon that trial. And this is true not only of the English word judgment, but also of the Greek word which it translates.

The term day, both in the Scriptures and in common usage, though most frequently used to represent a period of twelve or twenty-four hours, really signifies any definite or special period of time. Thus, for instance, we speak of Noah’s day, or Luther’s day, etc.

Then again we read of the “day of Christ,” the “day of judgment,” and “His day”—terms applicable to the Millennial age, in which Messiah will reign over, rule and judge the world in righteousness, granting trial as well as rendering sentence. And of that period it is written: He shall judge the world in righteousness, and in His day shall show who is that blessed and only potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords. (Acts 17:31; 1 Tim. 6:15.) Why any should suppose this day of judgment to be of but twelve or twenty-four hours, while recognizing the wider meaning of the word day in other similar cases, is beyond comprehension, except upon the supposition that they have been influenced by tradition, without proper evidence or investigation.

Those who will carefully consult a complete concordance of the Bible with reference to the Day of Judgment, and note the kind and amount of work to be accomplished within that period, will soon see the absurdity of the common view, and the necessity for giving to the term day its wider significance.

The first great judgment [trial and sentence] was at the beginning, in Eden, when the whole human race, as represented in its head, Adam, stood on trial before God. The result of that trial was the verdict—Guilty, disobedient, unworthy of life; and the penalty inflicted was death —“Dying thou shalt die.” (Gen. 2:17, margin.) And so “In Adam all die.” That trial time in Eden was the world’s first judgment day, and the decision of the Judge (Jehovah) has ever since been enforced.

But God has appointed a day, in which He will judge the world individually. We are informed that when God gives the world this individual trial it will be under Christ as Judge, whom Jehovah will thus honour because of His obedience even unto death for our redemption. God has highly exalted Him, even to the divine nature, that He may be a Prince and a Saviour (Acts 5:31) that He may be able to recover from death and grant judgment to all whom He purchased with His own precious blood. God has committed all judgment unto the Son, and has given Him all power in heaven and in earth.—John 5:22.

It is, then, the highly exalted, glorified Christ, who so loved the world as to give His life as its ransom-price, who is to be the Judge of the world in its promised future trial. And it is Jehovah Himself who has appointed Him to that office, for that very purpose. Since such are the plain declarations of the Scriptures, there is nothing to dread, but on the contrary there is great cause for rejoicing on the part of all, in looking forward to the Judgment Day. The character of the Judge is a sufficient guarantee that the judgment will be just and merciful, and with due consideration for the infirmities of all, until the willing and obedient are brought back to the original perfection lost in Eden.

This coming judgment will be on exactly the same principles as the first. The same law of obedience will be presented, with the same reward of life, and the same penalty of death. And as the first trial had a beginning, progressed, and culminated with a sentence, so also will the second; and the sentence will be life to the righteous, and death to the unrighteous. The second trial will be more favourable than the first, because of the experience gained under the results of the first trial. Unlike the first trial, the second trial will be one in which every man will stand the test for himself alone, and not for another. None then will die because of Adam's sin, or because of inherited imperfections. It shall no more be said, "The fathers have eaten a sour grape and the children's teeth are set on edge; but he that eateth the sour grape, his teeth shall be set on edge." "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." (Ezek. 18:4; Jer. 31:29, 30.) And it will be true of the world then, as it is of the Church now, that a man will not be judged according to that which he hath not, but according to that which he hath. (2 Cor. 8:12.) Under the reign of Christ, mankind will be gradually educated, trained and disciplined until they reach perfection. And when they have reached perfection, perfect harmony with God will be required, and any who then fall short of perfect obedience will be cut off, being judged unworthy of life. The sin which brought death to the race through Adam was simply one disobedient act; but by that act he fell from his perfection. God had a right to demand perfect obedience of him, since he was created perfect; and He will demand the same of all men when the great work of restoring them is complete. None will be permitted to have everlasting life who then in the slightest degree fall short of perfection. To fall short of perfection, then, will be to sin wilfully against full light and perfect ability.

Any who sin wilfully, against full light and ability, will perish in the second death. And should any one, during that age of trial, under its full blaze of light, spurn the offered favours, and make no progress toward perfection for a hundred years, he will be reckoned unworthy of life and will be "cut off," though at a hundred years he would be in the period of comparative childhood. Thus it is written of that day: "As a lad shall one die a hundred years old; and as a sinner shall be accursed he who dieth at a hundred years old." Isa. 65:20—Leeser.) Thus all must have at least one hundred years of trial; and, if not so obstinate as to refuse to make progress, their trial will continue throughout the entire day of Christ, reaching a culmination only at its close.

The conclusion of the world's coming judgment is clearly shown in the parable of the sheep and the goats (Matt. 25:31-46) in Rev. 20:15; 21:8 and in 1 Cor. 15:25. These and other Scriptures show that at its close the two classes will have been completely separated—the obedient and the disobedient; those in harmony with the letter and the spirit of God's law, and those out of harmony with it.

We do not wish to be understood as ignoring the present responsibility of the world, which every man has, according to the measure of light enjoyed, whether it be much or little, whether it be the light of nature or of revelation. "The eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the evil and the good," and "God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil." (Prov. 15:3; Eccl. 12:14.) The good and the evil deeds of the present time will receive a just recompense of reward either now or hereafter. "Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment, and some they follow after." (1 Tim. 5:24.) No others than the Lord's favoured "little flock" have as yet sufficient light to incur the final penalty, the second death.

Under the sophistries of the great deceiver, Satan, both the world and the Church nominal have been robbed of the blessed assurances of the coming time of righteous judgment. They know that the Bible tells of a coming judgment day, but they regard it with only fear and dread; and because of this fear, there is to them no more unwelcome tidings than that the day of the Lord is at hand. They put it far away from them, and do not wish to hear it even mentioned. They have no idea of the blessings in store for the world under that glorious reign of Him whom God hath appointed to judge the world in righteousness. Among the greatest of the blinding influences which Satan has devised to keep men in ignorance of the truth regarding the judgment day have been the errors which have crept into the creeds and hymn books of the various religious sects. Many have come to esteem those errors as of paramount importance to the Word of God.

How differently did the prophets and apostles regard that promised day of judgment! Note the exultant prophetic utterance of David (1 Chro. 16:31-34) . He says:—

“Let the heavens be glad,
And let the earth rejoice;
And let men say among the nations,
Jehovah reigneth.

Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof ;
Let the fields rejoice, and all that are therein.
Then shall the trees of the wood sing aloud
At the presence of Jehovah,

BECAUSE HE COMETH TO JUDGE THE EARTH.

Oh give thanks unto Jehovah, for He is good;
For His mercy endureth forever.”

To the same day the Apostle also points, assuring us that it will be a glorious and desirable day, and that for it the whole creation is groaning and travailing in pain together—waiting for the great Judge to deliver and to bless the world, as well as to exalt and glorify the Church.—Rom. 8:21, 22.

In John 5:28, 29 a precious promise for the world of a coming judgment-trial for life everlasting is, by a mistranslation, turned into a fearful imprecation. According to the Greek, they that have done evil—that have failed of divine approval —will come forth unto resurrection [raising up to perfection] by judgments, “stripes,” disciplines. --See the Revised Version.

In Time of Trouble.

I placed my life in Thy dear hands—My Father,
For better or for worse, for good or ill,

And so no matter what may come upon me
I'll smile up in_ Thy face and trust Thee still.

I know that Thou can'st see the hidden future
No cloud can hide the things that are to be

From Thy clear vision—so—when trials cluster
Like brambles round my path I look to Thee.

Thy love shines like a beacon through the shadows.
I see Thy dear hand reaching for my own.

I clasp those strong, unfailing fingers tightly,
Nothing but kindness have those dear hands shown.

Ah yes, 'tis true there have been many trials
To test my faith and draw me to Thy side.

Weaning me from the world with its false pleasures
That I might in Thy love and care abide.

My Father—oh how sweet to thus address Thee—
To hear Thy gentle whisper “Child of Mine”

No matter then what griefs or ills befall me
I lie unfearing in the arms Divine.

Then when my work is done—my testing over—
I'll lay me down in Thy dear arms to rest

Forgotten all life's worries, joys and sorrows,
Borne in Thine arms to Mansions of the blest. —L.K.P.

Let Us Draw Near.

“Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from a consciousness of evil, and our bodies washed with pure water.” Heb. 10:22.

NOT to sinners is this invitation addressed. The invitation to them is a very different one, viz., Repent and believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thus obtain the remission of your sins, and then you will be in the attitude to receive the invitation, Draw near to God. The Apostle is addressing the brethren, and not sinners, and urges them, saying, “Having therefore, brethren, boldness (courage, confidence, privilege) to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus by a new and living way . . . let us draw near.”

The Apostle’s words carry our attention to Israel’s Tabernacle in the wilderness, and the spiritual things which it illustrated. The Court, entered through the gate, signified the state or condition of the justified, who must pass the altar, representing Christ’s sacrifice for sins; secondly, approach the Laver of water for cleansing from defilements; and then be ready to pass under the first vail into the apartment of the tabernacle called “The Holy.” This “Holy” apartment represented the state or condition of God’s consecrated people (typified by Israel’s priests), while yet in the flesh, and had its golden candlestick for their enlightenment, its table of shewbread, representing their privilege of fellowship with God—drawing near to Him in prayer, praise and communion. The next step beyond the “Holy” was the “Most Holy,” representing heaven itself; but this could be entered only from the “Holy,” and by passing under the Second Vail, which represented the actual death of the priest, even as the First Vail represented the reckoned death or consecration. The Apostle has this same thought in mind when elsewhere he mentions the consecrated Royal Priesthood as “seated together with Christ in heavenly places”—in the heavenly condition, the condition represented by the first apartment or “Holy” of the tabernacle and of the temple.

Privileges Of The Royal Priesthood.

It is in reference to this proposition to advance from the “Court” condition of justification into the “Holy” or heavenly or spirit-begotten condition, reached through consecration (and the closest possible approach to God) that the Apostle urges, “Let us draw near.” His language implies that there may properly be a diffidence on our part in respect of this privilege. We might properly hesitate to expect to have communion, fellowship, close approach to the great Creator, realising that by nature we are imperfect, “children of wrath, even as others,” and that in whatever degree we differ from others and are accounted worthy of such a privilege of drawing near to God it is not on account of personal worth on our part, but on account of God’s grace bestowed upon us through Jesus our Lord. The Apostle therefore speaks to believers in an encouraging voice: “Let us draw near;” let us have courage to draw near; let us have faith in God, who has made us such gracious arrangements and promises.

The Apostle intimates that a close approach to God cannot be effected, except we have first a “full assurance of faith.” Only those who trust the Lord implicitly, “as a little child” (Luke 18:17) would trust its earthly parent, can expect to progress and have the courage, the confidence, necessary to approach God in this very intimate manner; and the desire to draw nearer and nearer to God must be in the justified believer’s heart, else he will never go on and attain to this his privilege. And this desire to draw near to God is a manifestation of our hunger and thirst after righteousness, which the Lord expects to see before he fulfils to such His engagement that they shall be filled, satisfied—Matt. 5:6.

Satisfaction will not be attained fully in the present life, though the believer who progresses and draws nearer and nearer to God will have more and more of this satisfaction to the end of his journey in the present life, receiving the full measure of satisfaction in righteousness, and perfection on the other side of the veil. Similarly, in our drawing near to God we may continue to draw nearer and nearer to Him, as we obtain deeper experience in His grace, growing also in knowledge and love in the present life; but the full attainment of our privilege of drawing near to God will not be reached until we shall have passed the Second Veil—passed through death, and been changed from human to spirit beings, and have entered into heaven itself, the perfect heavenly condition. There and then we shall be fully at one with the heavenly Father, and with our Lord Jesus, having drawn near to the full extent of the invitation and to the full of the opportunities granted us in the new and living way, the narrow way of life, consecrated for us, through the veil, by our Lord’s death as our ransom price.

There are, however, certain conditions specified as necessary to progress along these lines. As no one can draw near to God except by attaining a “full assurance of faith,” neither can he have a full assurance of faith unless he have his “heart sprinkled from a consciousness of evil,” for, as the Apostle elsewhere declares, “If our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart”—1 John 3:20. We may be sure that if our course as new creatures is condemned by our own consciences it would also be condemned by God. Whoever, therefore, would make progress in drawing near to God must seek continually to have a “conscience void of offence towards God and man,” (Acts 24:16)—a conscience that is clear, that can say, I am striving to do that which would be pleasing to God, in harmony with my covenant of self-sacrifice, and I am striving to do that which would be approved also by righteous men. Nothing short of this is at all permissible in those who have consecrated themselves to be royal priests, to offer themselves as living sacrifices in the Lord’s service, and to draw near to Him in the name and under the merit of the great High Priest of our Profession, Christ Jesus.

Having Our Hearts Sprinkled.

How very much is implied in this expression, “Having our hearts sprinkled from a consciousness of evil.” It not only means that we are to avoid sin, and to take heed that the words of our mouths and the meditations of our hearts are acceptable to the Lord, but it means additionally that our hearts, having covenanted self-sacrifice, shall be able to look up to the Lord confidently and realise His blessing and approval, because of the honest, earnest efforts on our part to comply with the terms of our consecration. But since we cannot fully comply with the terms ourselves, it is requisite that we shall apply to ourselves by faith the merit of the precious blood of Christ, the blood of sprinkling, the blood of consecration, and that we shall realise that our acceptance is only in the Beloved One.

Washed With Pure Water.

The expression, “Having our bodies washed with pure water,” figuratively represents the continued process of “cleansing ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and of the spirit, perfecting holiness in the reverence of the Lord,” elsewhere enjoined by the Apostle—2 Cor. 7:1. By nature we are all imperfect, sullied, more or less depraved; and our devotion to the Lord is manifested, first, by our full acceptance and full assurance of faith in the merits of Christ’s sacrifice; and secondly, by our earnest efforts to put away from our flesh, as we have already put away from our hearts, all things defiling and displeasing in the Lord’s sight: that thus we may more and more become copies of His dear Son. This “washing of water through the Word” is elsewhere represented (Eph. 5:26) in a similar manner as being a part of the duty and privilege of all of the Lord’s people throughout the remainder of their earthly lives. We can see how beautiful is the illustration here used, that the Word of God, like water, is purifying, cleansing; as the Apostle declares, speaking of the Christian’s good hopes in the precious promises once delivered to the saints, “He that hath this hope in Him purifieth himself, even as He (who called him) is pure.”—1 John 3:3.

As it is necessary to a thorough cleansing of our natural bodies that we should wash with “pure water,” so much the more is it necessary to this cleansing of which the Apostle speaks, the cleansing of our moral characters, that we should have the pure water of divine truth, and not the muddy and polluted teachings of the adversary, or of those whom he has blinded. As we look about us upon the many streams of Babylon—the various sectarian theologies which profess to be the truth—we find that although there is something of truth in them all, yet it is sadly mixed with error, and inadequate to the thorough cleansing from filthiness of the flesh and of the spirit, or of the perfecting in holiness which the Lord requires. For instance, false ideas of God and of His character and His plan are incentives to those who so believe to copy these misrepresentations and perversions of justice and love, and are well calculated to develop a low standard of character, because the low standard which they set for themselves and other fellow-mortals is really higher than that which they ascribe to the Creator.

How important, then, is the truth, and how much meaning we find in our dear Redeemer’s prayer to the Father on our behalf, “Sanctify them through Thy truth; Thy word is truth.” Let us not attempt to sanctify ourselves through any other washing than this; let us not be satisfied with anything short of the “pure water,” the Word of God, the pure truth.

“Ye Are Complete In Him.”—Col. 2:10.

Now view the class described by the Apostle: they are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thus accepted with the Father through the Beloved One. More than this, to them has been opened up the narrow way to life, consecrated, made possible, through the sacrifice offered by our great High Priest. They are invited to become under priests, sharers both of the sufferings and also later on, if faithful, sharers of the glories of Jesus, the Chief Priest of this order. As a means of attaining the glorious end of their calling they are to cleanse themselves from defilement, and for their use in this respect the Word of God has been provided: it is at once a mirror to show them their blemishes, and water wherewith to cleanse themselves—the stimulus for the correction of life being the exceeding great and precious promises set before them in the Scriptures. Their hearts, justified by faith, and honest before God, are fully consecrated to Him and to His service, and are to be so kept continually by obedience to the best of their knowledge and opportunities, and by the blood of sprinkling which covers unintentional errors and failures. This is the class that is called to be associated with the Lord in His kingdom. They are styled His brethren, the royal priesthood, the bride, the Lamb’s wife, and various other names representing their near and dear relationship to the heavenly Father. All of these who are faithful to the end of the racecourse are to be made partakers of the divine nature, with its glory, honour and immortality.

But let us not deceive ourselves in this matter of having hearts that do not condemn us; let us remember that our covenant was unto sacrifice, and not unto self-preservation; that it was a covenant to lay our all upon the altar—time, influence, means of every kind, and that we agreed with our Lord that we would reckon this our reasonable service.

Do our hearts condemn us in this matter, or do they justify us? Do we feel that we are doing all in our power to serve the Lord and His truth and our brethren? If so, let us rejoice, and let us continue in the same way, patiently hoping for the glorious results promised to the faithful. But if our hearts condemn us, let us not be discouraged, but, on the contrary, remember that this is a part of the cleansing of the flesh and of the spirit necessary to our preparation for the kingdom, and let us afresh bind our sacrifices to the altar (Psa. 118:27), and be more and more zealous in expending our little all in the service of Him who loved us and who bought us with His own precious blood. Thus doing, it will be our privilege day by day to draw nearer and nearer to the “Most Holy,” and thus finishing our course with joy we shall have share in the first resurrection, awakening in our Lord’s likeness. —2 Cor. 5:14-15; Rom. 6:5; 1 John 3:2; Psa. 17:15.

The Propriety of Fasting.

IN this text our Lord is not expressing any disapprobation of fasting; quite to the contrary; He is endorsing it as a propriety. Undoubtedly it is better for the health to fast somewhat at times rather than to eat to satisfaction. The Master’s comment, according to the context, seems to be based upon the improper conduct of the Pharisees. The fasting was supposed to be good not only for physical health, but also for mental and spiritual health. The Pharisees, professing to be very holy, made manifest their holiness by fasting, subordinating the flesh that they might be spiritually strengthened.

Our Lord does not dispute the propriety of such a course, but it was the wrong spirit that He condemned. For when the Pharisees fasted, many of them did it to be seen of men, in order to seem holy and given over to spiritual things. Hence our Lord’s suggestion that when His disciples fast they should not be as the hypocrites, whose fasting and long faces were to show men their piety. In the same connection our Lord proceeds to say that when His disciples fast they should do the very reverse; that they should anoint their heads and be as cheerful as possible.

We can see the philosophy of this course. If their fasting had brought them nearer to the Heavenly Father it should have made them more gracious and luminous. It should have had a happifying effect which would have shown itself in the countenance. The thing reprimanded, then, was the hypocrisy of the Pharisees, who assumed a sadness of countenance to be seen of men. They delighted to have people say, “What a holy man! He has fasted so much! He is always thinking about holy things and, in order to do this, he is even denying himself the necessities of life. He is a very holy man!”

The followers of the Lord are to practice such fasting as will be seen of the Lord and not of men. The Father, who knows the heart, will appreciate our efforts to draw near to Him and will grant our desire. But these things should be hidden to the outside world and known only to God; and the joy of the Lord should be manifest in the countenance.

Holiness Of The Heart Not A Mere Outward Form.

Our Lord’s frequent reference to the Pharisees, no doubt, was in part owing to the fact that the Pharisees were a very large and influential class; and in part because their name signified that they were the holy people. Hence, when our Lord was teaching special obedience to God, the question in the minds of the people would be, “Is He not a Pharisee, and do not the Pharisees teach all these things?”

So it became necessary for our Lord Jesus to show wherein some of these things that the Pharisees practiced were not proofs of their special nearness to God, and that they were not leaders to holiness, but that it was very evident that many of the Pharisees were hypocritical. Their holiness had become a mere form; it had degenerated into a custom— as the Scriptures say, a “Drawing near to the Lord with their lips, while their hearts were far from Him,” and thinking merely of the general attitude they had toward the world, the people in general.

We remember that there were some very noble Pharisees —Nicodemus, and Joseph of Arimathea, who buried our Lord, and St. Paul, who tells us that he was a Pharisee. But evidently the greater part of them had made broad their phylacteries and were more anxious in respect of what men would think of them than what the Lord would think of -them. Perhaps some of the hypocrisies of the Pharisees have been practiced since by some in the Monastic Order, where they wished to show their special separation from the world by the wearing of a peculiar garb, by a special cut of the hair, by seclusion, etc. There is danger along this line in the observance of the Lenten season by some of the Catholics, Episcopalians, Lutherans. But it may not be hypocritical with all.

In many respects it would be a very good thing for all the Lord’s people to follow the Lenten custom of fasting, doing so with as little outward demonstration as possible, practicing it as unto the Lord, without considering it a thing to be mentioned, without attracting attention, but merely as a privilege. The Lenten season represents the forty-day period of our Lord’s experiences just preceding the crucifixion. We might enter sympathetically into this matter and think of the trying experiences that were upon the Master when He knew that He was drawing near to the time of His death. As we try to think of Him it will enable us better to realize what a privilege it is to endure hardship as good soldiers for the sake of His Message.

Fasting is specially commendable to the Lord’s people at times when they find themselves lacking in spirituality and exposed to severe temptations from the world, the flesh and the Devil; for, by impoverishing the physical force and vitality, it may assist the full-blooded and impulsive to self-control in every direction. We may believe that a majority of Christians would be helped by occasional fasting— by a very plain diet, if not total abstinence, for a season. But fastings to be seen and known of men, or to be esteemed in our own minds as marks of piety on our part, would be injurious indeed and would lead to spiritual pride and hypocrisy, which would far outweigh any advantage to us in the way of self-restraint.

Formal Prayer.

“I often say my prayers:
But do I always pray?
And do the wishes of my heart
Go with the Words I say?

I may as well kneel down
And worship gods of stone,
As offer to the living God
A prayer of words alone;

For words without the heart
The Lord will never hear,
Nor will He to those lips attend
Whose prayers are not sincere.”

Love Not the World.

IN the text, "Love not the world," (1 John 2:15) we do not understand the term "world" to mean either the human race or the planet on which we live. The thought of the text seems to be more particularly the present order of things, for the Greek word here translated world is "kosmos," signifying arrangement. We are to appreciate the beauties of nature. We are to love the human family, whom God also loves, though not in the sense in which He loves the Church of Christ. We read, "God so loved the world that He gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

St. John cannot therefore be understood to refer to the world of mankind, when he says, "Love not the world."

For them we should have sympathy similar to that which the Heavenly Father has for the fallen race. The Scriptures inform us that the present order, or arrangement, of things on earth is entirely out of harmony with God's will, or purpose; for the world is ruled by selfishness. The Divine arrangement is that love shall be the rule among God's creatures. "God is love. . . He that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God."—1 John 4:8, 16.

The world operates along lines different from those of love. Each one strives selfishly to heap together treasure for himself, even if meantime his neighbour goes destitute. Many live in luxury, while realizing that there are others who lack the necessities of life. Many seek for power to control men, not with the thought of their uplift, but with a view to using them for selfish ends and motives. This spirit of selfishness belongs to the present order of things. We see it in operation everywhere.

The spirit of the world lays hold of all the forces of nature and seeks to control these, to adapt them to its own selfish interests. It is true that much good has resulted indirectly from this spirit of selfishness. For instance, a man with a great amount of the vain-glorious spirit may for his own selfish purposes benefit others. A general might have so much pride in his service that in order to win praise for himself he would care for his soldiers and have them well dressed. Some of our great captains of industry have done the world good service, and incidentally have blessed many, while carrying out their own designs.

Selfishness The Spirit Of The World.

If all of the great worldly enterprises were undertaken with a view to the betterment of mankind, the spirit of these would not be selfish. We know, indeed, that much is done to help those who are needy, and that where there is a motive of this kind, it is often misinterpreted and misjudged to be selfish. But “the Lord looketh on the heart.” (1 Sam. 16:7.) Those who have the selfish heart, the selfish intentions, will continue to love the things of the world. In proportion as such may be shown that there is a new order of affairs coming, in that proportion the selfish-minded will not be in sympathy with the change of dispensation.

If a man conducts a large enterprise for the benefit of those who would have opportunity to share such blessings, that man would rejoice that there is a better time coming. A man who would truly rejoice to have a better arrangement of affairs, would not have the spirit that dominates in the present order of things. He would have the spirit of God, the spirit of Love, the spirit that will dominate the New Order of things, that will control during the thousand years of Christ’s reign.

Many are in the attitude of mind which would say, “My employer is rich. Whenever I get the opportunity to help myself to some of his money, I will do so and get as much as possible.” Such people love the present order of things, whether they be rich or poor. A great many poor love the things of this world, and hope some day to get their share.

There are people who say, “Oh, I do not love the world and its selfish spirit! From the crown of my head to the soles of my feet I am opposed to it. Sometimes I say to my husband, ‘This is a very selfish world, John.’ Then he replies, ‘Yes, Mary, it is. Everywhere people are seeking for everything that will gratify self and selfish desires. But while you condemn the ways of the world, yet you delight in the good things of life provided by my industry —the automobile, the pleasant home, etc.’ And I must acknowledge that he is right. I fear that I could not be happy without them.” Such a person certainly loves the things of the world, even while making good use of them.

It seems to be a serious charge to say that any one who is in that attitude of mind which loves the world and the things belonging to it, has not the love of the Father in him. We do not understand, however, that such a one has no love for the Father or that the Father has no love for him. The Apostle seems to be addressing this message to the Church. Those who have been adopted into God’s family must continue to love Him or they would not be counted as members of that class.

What, then, is the full import of this expression—“The Love of the Father is not in him”? To us it would mean that the Love of the Father had not gotten full control of his heart, and this would mean that ultimately—unless he should gain a victory over his selfish disposition—he would not be accepted as a son.

Everywhere about us is this spirit of selfishness. Every child of God should be on guard against it and against willingness to participate in the things of this world. We should strive to be in that condition which is pleasing to the Father. We are to try to rid ourselves of the spirit of the world and to be filled with the spirit of the Father. This would not mean that we are not to appreciate beautiful things, or that we are not to like to see others striving to benefit the world; but that we should not be satisfied with any of these things, so far as we are concerned.

Two Kinds Of Motives.

Whatever talents we possess we should use for the good of humanity in any kind of work that would be for the glory of God. Even a good work could be engaged in from the spirit of the world rather than from the spirit of God; that is, it might be done for what we could get from others in the way of money, honour or influence; or, on the other hand, it might be for the good we desired to do for others.

The highest of all services is that of the ministry of the Word of God. Even this noble service might be pursued from either of two motives—the Love of the Father or the love of self. Apparently there are some engaged in the ministry purely for the sake of the loaves and fishes, for the honourable position it gives them in the world, or because they do not know of anything that would serve them better.

Again, there are those, no doubt, who have entered the ministry, not for selfish reasons, but because they desire to serve God, to serve the Truth, to serve His people. The Lord alone knows what has induced any one to enter the ministry. But since we are living in the day that will try every man's work, God will prove what sort it is—will show what motive is behind the deed.

Those who are serving merely from the Worldly spirit will be vexed with everything that is making for Truth; and in proportion as their earthly interests suffer, they will be angry. Those who are of the right spirit, however, will rejoice in everything that will be helpful to humanity, in everything that is to the glory of God, in everything that will make the Bible more easily understood.

In fact, we may suppose that the real testing, so far as the Church is concerned, is the making manifest whether we love the world — the things of the present time — or whether we love God supremely. As time goes on, it will be even more impossible to harmonize the spirit of love and the spirit of selfishness. Those who love God will be fully out of harmony with the spirit of the present evil world.

He in whose heart the love
Of vanity has found a place, shuts out
The enduring world above.

“Love not the world!
However fair it seem;
Who loveth this vain world—
the love of God Abideth not in him.”

The Permission of Evil.

EVIL is that which produces unhappiness; anything which either directly or remotely causes suffering of any kind.—Webster. This subject, therefore, not only inquires regarding human ailments, sorrows, pains, weaknesses and death, but goes beyond all these to consider their primary cause—sin—and its remedy. Since sin is the cause of evil, its removal is the only method of permanently curing the malady.

No difficulty, perhaps, more frequently presents itself to the inquiring mind than the questions: Why did God permit the present reign of evil? Why did He permit Satan to present the temptation to our first parents, after having created them perfect and upright? Or why did He allow the forbidden tree to have a place among the good? Despite all attempts to turn it aside, the question will obtrude itself—Could not God have prevented all possibility of man's fall?

The difficulty undoubtedly arises from a; failure to comprehend the plan of God. God could have prevented the entrance of sin, but the fact that He did not should be sufficient proof to us that its present permission is designed ultimately to work out some greater good. God's plans, seen in their completeness, will prove the wisdom of the course pursued. Some inquire, Could not God, with whom all things are possible, have interfered in season to prevent the full accomplishment of Satan's design? Doubtless He could; but such interference would have prevented the accomplishment of His own purposes. His purpose was to make manifest the perfection, majesty and righteous authority of His law, and to prove both to men and to angels the evil consequences resulting from its violation. Besides, in their very nature, some things are impossible even with God, as the Scriptures state. It is "impossible for God to lie" (Heb. 6:18). "He cannot deny Himself" (2 Tim. 2:13). He cannot do wrong, and therefore He could not choose any but the wisest and best plan for introducing His creatures into life, even though our short-sighted vision might for a time fail to discern the hidden springs of infinite wisdom.

The Scriptures declare that all things were created for the Lord's pleasure (Rev. 4:11) — without doubt, for the pleasure of dispensing His blessings, and of exercising the attributes of His glorious being. And though, in the working out of His benevolent designs, He permits evil and evil doers for a time to play an active part, yet it is not for evil's sake, not because He is in league with sin; for he declares that He is "not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness." (Psa. 5:4.) Though opposed to evil in every sense, God permits (i.e., does not hinder) it for a time, because His wisdom sees a way in which it may be made a lasting and valuable lesson to His creatures.

It is a self-evident truth that for every right principle there is a corresponding wrong principle; as, for instance, truth and falsity, love- and hatred, justice and injustice. We distinguish these opposite principles as right and wrong, by their effects when put in action. That principle the result of which, when active, is beneficial and productive of ultimate order, harmony and happiness, we call a right principle; and the opposite, which is productive of discord, unhappiness and destruction, we call a wrong principle. The results of these principles in action we call good and evil; and the intelligent being, capable of discerning the right principle from the wrong, and voluntarily governed by one or the other, we call virtuous or sinful.

This faculty of discerning between right and wrong principles is called the moral sense, or conscience. It is by this moral sense which God has given to man that we are able to judge of God and to recognize that He is good. It is to this moral sense that God always appeals to prove His righteousness or justice; and by the same moral sense Adam could discern sin, or unrighteousness, to be evil, even before he knew all its consequences. The lower orders of God's creatures are not endowed with this moral sense. A dog has some intelligence, but not to this degree, though he may learn that certain actions bring the approval and reward of his master, and certain others his disapproval. He might steal or take life, but would not be termed a sinner; or he might protect property and life, but would not be called virtuous —because he is ignorant of the moral quality of his actions.

God could have made mankind devoid of ability to discern between right and wrong, or able only to discern and to do right; but to have made him so would have been to make merely a living machine, and certainly not a mental image of his Creator. Or He might have made man perfect and a free agent, as He did, and have guarded him from Satan's temptation. In that case, man's experience being limited to good, he would have been continually liable to suggestions of evil from without, or to ambitions from within, which, would have made the everlasting future uncertain, and an outbreak of disobedience and disorder might always have been a possibility besides which, good would never have been so highly appreciated except by its contrast with evil.

God first made His creatures acquainted with good, surrounding them with it in Eden; and afterward, as a penalty for disobedience, He gave them a severe knowledge of evil. Expelled from Eden and deprived of fellowship with Himself, God let them experience sickness, pain and death, that they might thus forever know evil and the inexpediency and exceeding sinfulness of sin.

By a comparison of results they came to an appreciation and proper estimate of both; "And the Lord said, Behold, man is become as one of us, to know good and evil." (Gen. 3:22.) In this their posterity share, except that they first obtain their knowledge of evil, and cannot fully realize what good is until they experience it in the Millennium, as a result of their redemption by Him who will then be their Judge and King.

The moral sense, or judgment of right and wrong, and the liberty to use it, which Adam possessed, were important features of his likeness to God. The law of right and wrong was written in his natural constitution. It was part of his nature, just as it is a part of the divine nature. But let us not forget that this image or likeness of God, this originally law-inscribed nature of man, has lost much of its clear outline through the erasing, degrading influence of sin; hence it is not now what it was in the first man. Ability to love implies ability to hate; hence we may reason that the Creator could not make man in His own likeness, with power to love and to do right, without the corresponding ability to hate and to do wrong. This liberty of choice, termed free moral agency, or free will, is a part of man's original endowment; and this, together with the full measure of his mental and moral faculties, constituted him an image of his Creator. To-day, after nearly 6,000 years of degradation, so much of the original likeness has been erased by sin that we are not free, being bound, to a greater or less extent, by sin and its entailments, so that sin is now more easy and therefore more agreeable to the fallen race than is righteousness.

That God could have given Adam such a vivid impression of the many evil results of sin as would have deterred him from it, we need not question, but we believe that God foresaw that an actual experience of the evil would be the surest and most lasting lesson to serve man eternally; and for that reason God did not prevent but permitted man to take his choice, and to feel the consequences of evil. Had opportunity to sin never been permitted, man could not have resisted it, consequently there would have been neither virtue nor merit in his right-doing. God seeketh such to worship Him as worship in spirit and in truth. He desires intelligent and willing obedience rather than ignorant mechanical service. He already had in operation inanimate mechanical agencies accomplishing His will, but His design was to make a nobler thing, an intelligent creature in His own likeness, a lord for earth, whose loyalty and righteousness would be based upon an appreciation of right and wrong, of good and evil.

The principles of right and wrong, as principles, have always existed, and must always exist; and all perfect, intelligent creatures in God's likeness must be free to choose either, though the right principle only will forever continue to be active. The Scriptures inform us that when the activity of the evil principle has been permitted long enough to accomplish God's purpose, it will forever cease to be active, and that all who continue to submit to its control shall forever cease to exist. (1 Cor. 15:25, 26; Heb. 2:14.) Right-doing and right-doers, only, shall continue forever.

God not only foresaw that, having given man freedom of choice, he would, through lack of full appreciation of sin and its results, accept it, but He also saw that, becoming acquainted with it, he would still choose it, because that acquaintance would so impair his moral nature that evil would gradually become more agreeable and more desirable to him than good. Still, God designed to permit evil, because, having the remedy provided for man's release from its consequences, He saw that the result would be to lead him, through experience, to a full appreciation of "the exceeding sinfulness of sin" and of the matchless brilliancy of virtue in contrast with it—thus teaching him the more to love and honour his Creator, who is the source and fountain of all goodness, and forever to shun that which brought so much woe and misery. So the final result will be greater love for God, and greater hatred of all that is opposed to His will, and consequently the firm establishment in everlasting righteousness of all such as shall profit by the lessons God is now teaching through the permission of sin and correlative evils. However, a wide distinction should be observed between the indisputable fact that God has permitted sin, and the serious error of some which charges God with being the author and instigator of sin. The latter view is both blasphemous and contradictory to the facts presented in the Scriptures. Those who fall into this error generally do so in an attempt to find another plan of salvation than that which God has provided through the sacrifice of Christ as our ransom-price. If they succeed in convincing themselves and others that God is responsible for all sin and wickedness and crime, and that man as an innocent tool in His hands was forced into sin, then they have cleared the way for the theory that not a sacrifice for our sins, nor mercy in any form, was needed, but simply and only JUSTICE. Thus, too, they lay a foundation for another part of their false theory, viz., universalism, claiming that as God caused all the sin and wickedness and crime in all, He will also cause the deliverance of all mankind from sin and death. And reasoning that God willed and caused the sin, and that none could resist Him, so they claim that when He shall will righteousness all will likewise be powerless to resist Him. But in all such reasonings, man's noblest quality, liberty of will or choice, the most striking feature of his likeness to his Creator, is entirely set aside; and man is theoretically degraded to a mere machine which acts only as it is acted upon. If this were the case, man, instead of being the lord of earth, would be inferior even to insects; for they undoubtedly have a will or power of choice. Even the little ant has been given a power of will which man, though by his greater power he may oppose and thwart, cannot destroy.

Many have imbibed the erroneous idea that God placed our race on trial for life with the alternative of eternal torture, whereas nothing of the kind is even hinted at in the penalty. The favour or blessing of God to His obedient children is life—continuous life, free from pain, sickness and every other element of decay and death. Adam was given this blessing in the full measure, but was warned that he would be deprived of this “gift” if he failed to render obedience to God—“In the day that thou eatest thereof, dying, thou shalt die.” He knew nothing of a life in torment, as the penalty of sin. Life everlasting is nowhere promised to any but the obedient. Life is God’s gift, and death, the opposite of life, is the penalty He prescribes.

God assures us that as condemnation passed upon all in Adam, so He has arranged for a new head, father or life-giver for the race, into whom all may be transferred by faith; and that as all in Adam shared the curse of death, so all in Christ will share the blessing of life, being justified by faith in His blood. (Rom. 5:12,18,19.) Thus seen, the death of Jesus, the undefiled, the sinless one, was a complete settlement toward God of the sin of Adam. As one man had sinned, and all in him had shared his curse, his penalty, so Jesus, having paid the penalty of that one sinner, bought not only Adam, but all of his posterity—all men—who by heredity shared his weaknesses and sins and the penalty of these—death. Our Lord, “the man Christ Jesus,” Himself unblemished, approved, and with a perfect seed or race in Him, unborn, likewise untainted with sin, gave His all of human life and title as the full ransom-price for Adam and the race or seed in him when sentenced.

And thus it is written: “As all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive.” Corrected translation, 1 Cor. 15:22.

Those who can appreciate this feature of God’s plan, which, by condemning all in one representative, opened the way for the ransom and restitution of all by one Redeemer, will find in it the solution of many perplexities. They will see that the condemnation of all in one was the reverse of an injury: it was a great favour to all when taken in connection with God’s plan for providing justification for all through another one’s sacrifice. Evil will be forever extinguished when God’s purpose in permitting it shall have been accomplished, and when the benefits of the ransom are made coextensive with the penalty of sin. It is impossible, however, to appreciate rightly this feature of the plan of God without a full recognition of the sinfulness of sin, the nature of its penalty—death, the importance and value of the ransom which our Lord Jesus gave, and the positive and complete restoration of the individual to favourable conditions, conditions under which he will have full and ample trial, before being adjudged worthy of the reward (lasting life), or of the penalty (lasting death).

In view of the great plan of redemption, and the consequent “restitution of all things,” through Christ, we can see that blessings result through the permission of evil which, probably, could not otherwise have been so fully realized.

It seems clear that substantially the same law of God which is now over mankind, obedience to which has the reward of life, and disobedience the reward of death, must ultimately govern all of God’s intelligent creatures; and that law, as our Lord defined it, is briefly comprehended in the one word, Love. “Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself.” (Luke 10:27.) Ultimately, when the purposes of God shall have been accomplished, the glory of the divine character will be manifest to all intelligent creatures.

Volume XXIX. No. 11 MELBOURNE, 1st NOVEMBER, 1946 Price—Threepence

When will the World be Converted?

Should We Look For Revived Now?

(Public Address.)

MANY good people it would seem almost agonize in prayer today, that God will send a revival of religion and thus stem the onward rush into irreligion, atheism or paganism that so threatens to plunge this present world, or order of things, into the abyss of complete destruction.

While we are in sympathy with the good desires and intentions of any people we most certainly do not desire to be numbered amongst those who would instruct the Lord as to what He should do. (Isa. 45:11.) Rather, do we seek to know His plan or method of dealing with any contingency and humbly seek to co-operate with His will or way. Failure to do this is causing some to err in judgment as to what God is doing, or wants done in these momentous days in which we live—the last days of the Gospel Age, or the time of the end spoken of by Daniel.

Some well-meaning people still hold tenaciously to teachings and doctrines that are nowhere upheld in Biblical record. But as Christians how are we to arrive at truth in any matter? Are the secular colleges and universities the seats of learning from which our deductions of the obscurity of life are to be drawn? We do not think so! Verily, they have their place and in some ways have been a present help to the groaning creation of mankind, but they have little to offer in explanation of whence came man and whither he goes.

In this day when multitudes are rejecting it, we reiterate that the Bible alone gives a satisfactory answer. The reason it is being discarded as an authentic guide regarding the life that now is and that which shall be hereafter, is because its teachings have been largely misrepresented and misunderstood.

Then again, the false doctrines or conclusions arrived at have so often a semblance of truth interwoven that only he who searches for truth as for hidden treasure can unravel the mystery and get a proper focus concerning the purpose or plan of God for mankind.

Religious systems which adhere to false teachings are termed counterfeit religions. Counterfeit coins have every appearance of the true and the difference would never be detected if no tests or inquiry of proof were applied. Therefore, it is necessary to test or prove all doctrines from the Bible. If the Bible is the touchstone or torch of truth (and we say it is) then we would expect it to be harmonious in its teachings. It could not affirm one thing in one place and deny it in another. We know it has been accused of contradicting itself but we are sure it does not.

The trouble arises through not rightly dividing it. No amount of preaching will ever convince a person of Bible truth if the one enquiring or listening does not use his reasoning powers, and study to see if the things spoken are true or otherwise. The Bereans of old were commendable for that reason. (Acts 17:11.)

These thoughts are presented with a desire to build up the faith of those who believe in God's Word, but have become mystified by current affairs and blown about by many winds of doctrine through not understanding God's plan as a whole.

As we see things from God's Word the time is not yet when unbelievers will be convinced and converted en masse. But we rejoice to know of a time coming when all shall turn to the Lord and serve Him with one consent as recorded in Zeph. 3:9. Before that time comes, however, verse 8 of Zeph. 3 must be fulfilled. That being so, it can readily be discerned how those who pray so earnestly for revival now, such as swept England in the days of Wesley, etc., might be asking amiss, and we believe their prayers will not be answered in the way they have in mind. According to God's Word we are facing the great time of trouble such as never was and never will be again, and when it has swept the earth and Armageddon's throes are over, the presence of earth's new King (Christ) will be discerned and earth's inhabitants, from shore to shore, will begin to learn of and obey the new Ruler who will enforce righteousness. That will be a revival worth waiting for, a complete answer to the prayer—"Thy Kingdom come." Meantime, God's work of the present continues — calling out and preparing the "little flock," the true church that is to share with Jesus the Kingdom reign of blessing all the families of the earth. Not only English-speaking races are to be blessed, but men of all races, colour and clime; and not only those living are to enjoy it, but those in their graves are to be called forth in the resurrection to participate also.

We are content, then, to bide God's own time for the convincing and converting of unbelievers and turn our present endeavours to that which we believe is most pleasing in His sight—the assisting and building up of His saints with the meat in due season He has provided for them. Not that we are forgetful of the world, nor ignoring the needs of men around us in this evil time, but our attitude should be like that of the Apostle's—doing good to all men as we have opportunity, but especially to the household of faith. (Gal. 6:10.)

Addressing believers it is not necessary to go over the ground of creation again. We accept the Genesis account of man's origin, also of his fall from grace or favour in God's sight, by disobedience. The wages of man's wrongdoing are clearly expressed throughout the Scriptures, and are fully testified to us by our own observation and experience. "The wages of sin is death." (Rom. 6:23.)

Many believers in God's Word begin their ship-wreck of clear reasoning right here, by believing the false theory or doctrine that death is not really death after all—that what seems to be death is only a passing to another realm where the departed one is as much or more alive than before, enjoying greater happiness or participating in more abject wretchedness, according to the particular abode to which he was destined to go. We do not believe that the Bible teaches any such thing, but that at death all consciousness ceases—the body returns to the dust of the earth from whence it came, and the spirit or spark of life returns to God who gave it.

At creation there was no life or living soul (sentient being) until the body and the spark of life (breath of life) were united. So, after death there is no more consciousness of life until God reunites the spark of life to the new resurrection body. Meantime, death is death —oblivion. All connected Scriptures declare that the dead know not anything.

A common inference of present-day theology is that there is a change- of nature for all at death, the words of 1 Cor. 15:49 being applied to all; but a careful reading of this passage reveals that these words apply only to faithful followers of Jesus—His true church. However, the Scriptures do clearly testify that a time is coming when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and shall come forth in resurrection. Is there a change of nature then? Yes, there is for some—a minority—but not for others—the majority. Only the followers of Jesus, the Bride of Christ, are promised the reward of a change of nature—an earthly to a heavenly, a fleshly to a spiritual. All others will be restored in the resurrection to the same earthly sphere in which they lived before and with the same kind of fleshly bodies, but the environment will be changed, for the curse will be no more upon the earth to blight the fruit it will produce, nor will the weaknesses resultant from the fall cause sickness, pain or death again if the restored one lives in accord with the righteous laws of that day. (Gen. 3:17; Rev. 22:3; Isa. 35:1, 2, 7, 10.) We rejoice in the glory that's promised when these prophecies are fulfilled, for the knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth as the waters cover the sea, and all shall know Him from the least unto the greatest.

Now, what of the minority who do experience a change of nature in the resurrection? In order to see who they are it may be necessary to rehearse a few facts which we probably know already. Jesus (termed the Word, or Logos, in John 1:1) who was with the Father before the world was, voluntarily left that glory He enjoyed, to become a man (the man Christ Jesus), to give His life a ransom, that what man had lost through sin, He (Jesus) might restore later by a resurrection. It was for this reason we read, "His soul was made an offering for sin" and "upon Him was laid the iniquity of us all." For His faithfulness unto death, in accomplishing the mission for which He came, the Father rewarded Him with surpassing glory than He had before, far above angels and powers and every name that is named. (Eph. 1:20, 21.) Jesus, therefore, has had two changes of nature—firstly, changed from spirit nature to become a man (flesh); then, being put to death in the flesh as an offering for sin on mankind's behalf, He was raised by God's power and exalted to that aforementioned. "He was put to death flesh but quickened (made alive) spirit." (1 Pet. 3:18.)

Had this been all there was to man's redemption there would have been no other changes of nature for any, but by carefully tracing the Scriptures we see that God chose to call out, or find some companions for Jesus in His new sphere and office. The Scriptures explain these to be followers of Jesus on earth and are known as His brethren, His body, His bride and joint heirs. This "little flock" is to be dealt with, prepared and made ready for its change, before the work of restoring the dead world to earthly life begins. The first work of preparation was in convincing them of their own sin and their need of a Saviour. Then is revealed to them that the Saviour has been provided in Jesus and by believing into Him they are justified from all things. Now, in this condition, they are perfect in God's sight—they are not actually so, but are reckoned so because the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin. To these believers God reveals still more. He invites them to lay down their now justified life as Jesus did His, in full consecration to the service of God. If the invitation is accepted and we remain faithful unto death we will receive the crown of life with Jesus in the Kingdom, being elevated to the same high position on the spirit plane. This of course necessitates a change of nature, and it is of these that the Scriptures testify—having borne the image of the earthly they shall bear the image of the heavenly, or spiritual. It is a new creation, born or created throughout the Gospel Age.

In the beginning God created the earth and heavens, angels and men, beasts and birds, etc., but this, the companions of Jesus in the spiritual realm is an entirely new creation. When Jesus said, "I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you I will come again and receive you unto Myself that where I am there ye shall be also," He was not going to prepare a place in heaven for the whole world. No, God made the earth for man and that will be his home forever when the Kingdom is established. The place He went to prepare is for the members of His body, the true church of the Gospel Age, who are to experience a change of nature in the resurrection from earthly to heavenly bodies.

What is required of this number? What experiences will they meet as they fulfil their consecration vows here upon earth? The popular, wishful thinking belief appears to be that when a man is converted and becomes a Christian all his troubles are over. Many measure a Christian to be a boisterously happy-go-lucky, carefree type of person upon whom the sun shines all day. It is not disputed that the Apostle exhorted Christians to rejoice, but it is to be a far quieter, more soul-satisfying rejoicing than that just mentioned.

Christians are footstep followers of Jesus, and of all that we learn of Him in the Scriptures there is not one instance recorded that He ever laughed or smiled, but we do read of Him being a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, that He groaned in spirit and was exceedingly sorrowful on more than one occasion and that He wept. While this is not insinuating that it is wrong for a Christian to smile, it does serve to show what it may mean to us who become followers of Jesus, for as He was, so are we in this world.

Neither Jesus nor the Apostles who were His mouthpieces afterward led any to believe that to become a Christian and follow Jesus was an easy or light matter. On the contrary we are plainly told that all who will live godly in Christ Jesus will suffer persecution (2 Tim. 3:12), that in this world we will have tribulation (John 16:33) and that if we walk in the way seeking a place in the heavenly kingdom, we must first suffer with Jesus here below. Instead of promising us prosperity in business, happy homes and carefree days, we are told that “many are the afflictions of the righteous” (Psa. 34:19) and that a man’s foes may be those of his own household. (Matt. 10:36.) True, the Psalmist tells us that the Lord will deliver us out of the affliction eventually, but He does nothing to prevent them coming upon us.

Why does a Christian suffer? Many are mystified why people whom they recognise as earnest Christians meet with such afflictive trials during their life-time, while others of more or less indifferent religious beliefs and practices escape. However, as true Christians, this should not amaze us, for we are abundantly forewarned and counselled in God’s Word concerning this Age—that in this present evil world unrighteousness and evil-doers would predominate. As the Psalmist says (Psa. 37:12), “The wicked plotteth against the just, and gnasheth upon him with his teeth,” but in the same Psalm (verses 13, 10 and 9) we read, “The Lord shall laugh at him for he seeth that his day is coming; for yet a little while the wicked shall not be, for evil doers shall be cut off.” Apparently, then, the Lord allows present wrong standards to continue for a purpose.

We submit, that while there is more than one reason why the Lord has allowed the reign of sin and death for so long, the chief reason is that the New Creation, previously mentioned, should be selected and prepared for the important office to which they are called as joint-heirs with Christ in His Kingdom. It is one thing to be called to His number, but it is another to make our calling and election sure, for many are called but few chosen. The invitation is to all who have an ear to hear to enter this way—the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Those who respond are placed on probation, not in a preaching station for 3 years or 5 or 10 years, but for life. Faithfulness unto death is required before the prize can be won and before that is accomplished many trials and tests are permitted by the Lord—there is much rigorous training to be undergone—and the objective is not to improve our vocabulary and social standing, but to transform our character till it is like that of Jesus’, perfect in faith and love. He that doeth righteousness is righteous — not mere professors.

What is the greatest factor in our attaining this likeness of Jesus. Does it seem ridiculous to say that it is suffering? It is written of our Lord that He learned obedience by the things that He suffered (Heb. 5:8), and the servant is not above his Lord (Matt. 10:24.)

In a little book called “Tabernacle Shadows” and which all sincere Christians are recommended to read, it is beautifully shown in a most clear and satisfying way how the followers of Jesus are allowed a fellowship in His sufferings in order to reign with Him later in the Kingdom. This book can be procured from the Berean Bible Institute, Melbourne, E.4, on request.

Apart from such, let us note some of the things that constitute suffering for righteousness' sake. Such suffering is something of which we should not be ashamed, but rather as Peter said, "Rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings." (1 Pet. 4:12.) Christ's sufferings were not for wrong-doing. He did not suffer because of disloyalty to God or failure to do His will in fulfilling His covenant of sacrifice. No, His suffering was for well-doing and for the sake of the truth. Jesus' loyalty to the truth cost Him His life by crucifixion and Christians are said to be "crucified with Christ."

What does that mean, seeing that we know that all Christians have not been literally crucified by nailing to a cross as was Jesus? Just as literal crucifixion was a torturing, slow, but sure death, so figurative crucifixion closely resembles it. When we say that one is taking up his cross to follow Christ it means that he is taking the first step in espousing the cause of Christ. Even though it may be with fear and trembling, he is submitting willingly to painful humbling and contempt in the sight of the world, ready to share with Jesus its coldness and scorn,

Our suffering for righteousness' sake includes, as it did with Jesus, every item of mental and physical pain and self-denial as a result of our consecration. It includes the reproach that comes from fellow-men for the sake of truth, especially that coming from teachers of the nominal church who repudiate the right of laymen to interpret the Scriptures, except as they shall dictate. Weariness and exhaustion caused by preaching and by giving out of vital energy to do good to others, is all a part of our sacrifice as to the Lord. It is made up of little things and does not necessarily mean the same things with each individual Christian.

Before consecration we might have been ambitious in the exercise of legitimate business talent. Now, our Father's business comes first — the other things become secondary—and the new attitude we adopt is not understood even by our closest friends who may consider, as it was thought of Paul, that much learning in spiritual things hath made us mad. Or, if our rational conduct disproves this, they are at least as mystified as were the parents of Jesus at His evident deep interest in seeking knowledge of the Scriptures and who in answer to their questioning replied, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

Prior to consecrating our life to the Lord we might have taken great pleasure in making home elegant, in having the very nicest fittings throughout and surrounding, and in dressing family and self elegantly. Now, we deny ourselves all luxury, restricting outlay, time and energy simply to providing necessary things. While providing things decent in the sight of all and seeking to fulfil our proper obligations, we redeem as much time as we can for direct service to the Lord, and of course in all that we do and say are seeking His praise, honour and glory, even to the daily round and common task in home, field or workshop.

Hours that we may have at one time spent in social chat, harmless games, etc., are now consecrated to God's service and we do not spend our time chiding those of the world who indulge in these things still, for it is only those called to the high calling of God in Christ Jesus who see better things to seek after. If we were interested before consecration in politics, temperance reform, international peace plans, labour unions and such like, they hold but trifling interest for us now, for we are pursuing a different course. God's plan of the ages has now opened to our view revealing how puny and ineffective man's best efforts are in uplifting the world, in comparison with the "times of restitution spoken of by all God's holy prophets," and now soon to be inaugurated. Whilst sympathetic to every genuine reform work for the uplift of men, we realize that they are as morphia injections which alleviate the pains of a sin-sick and dying world only momentarily. God has a work for us (His consecrated people of this age) to do, in releasing forever the groaning creation from the thralldom of sin to which it is chained by the fall. Our chief work now is to press on in the way wherein God's work is being completed in us and we are made ready for that work. (2 Pet. 1:5-11.)

Formerly, we may have delighted to do generously, giving to everything and speaking favourably of all. Somewhat carelessly and ignorantly—though benevolently—we supposed that all denominations of people who believe much alike were only different routes to heaven and that each person was quite free to choose his own form of worship.

We were considered broad-minded Christians then, and had the admiration of all, which was sweet. But when our minds were cleared from error we saw that many doctrines of the denominations such as hell-fire, purgatory, trinity, immortality of the soul, world conversion before the second advent of Christ, etc., are all contrary to God's Word and we were obliged to oppose them and adhere to the truth.

Following Jesus in consecration we found, like Him, that we had to deny ourselves the admiration of all. Jesus rebuked sin, error and hypocrisy; instead of quietly letting the scribes and Pharisees alone, He sacrificed His inclinations for peace in order to advance the truth, and honour God and bless the people. Thus consecration has meant for many a sacrifice of social standing, our good name, and broadminded reputations. We may be called narrow-minded, bigoted Christians now. And what shall we say; have we any regrets at the loss of these things? No, like Christians of old we ought to take the spoiling of our goods joyfully. Like Paul, we should be able to count the loss of these things as refuse in order to win Christ. (Phil. 3:8-10.) We must not love the praise of men more than the praise of God, nor must fear of man hinder us from fulfilling our consecration vows. "Be not afraid of their faces, for I am with thee to deliver thee," saith the Lord to His people through the prophet Jeremiah 1:8. Again, the Lord says to us through the same prophet, "Let the prophets that have dreams tell their dreams, but he that hath My Word, let him speak it faithfully." (Jer. 23:28.)

Let us labour, then, to please the Lord, to hear His "Well done" at our journey's end; 'twill be sweeter far than the empty commendation of men we might enjoy now. If weariness should at times overtake us, let us "Consider Him who endured such contradiction of sinners against Himself." (Heb. 12:3.) Remember, we are following Him who for the joy that was set before Him (in the time to come) endured the cross and disregarded the shame of the present time, and as a result is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.

This, dear friends, is what hinders large-scale revival to effect world conversion now. God waits until His work of this Age is complete—the finding and preparation of the full number of the "little flock" which composes Christ's body. All the signs today corroborate with prophecy to show that this work is almost complete. We are in the last days of the Gospel Age—the harvest time of a closing dispensation. When ye see these things come to pass, know that the Kingdom of God is nigh at hand, foreshadowing the redemption of the little flock, their change from earthly to heavenly, spiritual conditions, and the establishing of the Kingdom upon earth—world conversion and blessing to all the obedient.

Peace Conference Ends in Unhappy Atmosphere.

UNDER the above heading a newspaper report on the Paris Peace Conference states that the National Delegations show signs of long strain which the last 79 days of argument have imposed.

After detailing some of the closing scenes the report states:—

“Thus ended the first consultation between the great and the small on the making of peace after the Second World War, and the apologetic or defensive tone of the closing speeches reflects grave doubts among the delegations regarding the benefits accruing from all the conference’s hard work. It was not for lack of toil that the conference finished not with a bang, but with a whimper.”

The above report is but another fulfilment of the Bible prophecy which predicted the saying—“Peace, peace, when there is no peace.” And if the leaders of the peace delegations show so little of the spirit of peace-making, what can be expected of the masses of mankind? The answer is given in the world-wide unrest today in almost every land. Industrial upheavals of great dimensions and racial riots, etc., are of daily occurrence.

A newspaper leader sums up the industrial position as follows:

“Our own experience after the 1914 -18 war showed the serious ills of an uncontrolled economy, with an early boom of inflated prices, only to be followed by collapse, depression and unemployment. There is common ‘ agreement that under present conditions the basic wage itself is too low in relation to living costs, and ought to be adjusted as speedily as possible. Wages pegging and price control are counterparts, inextricably bound up with each other. Both are integral to stability, and neither can be suddenly lifted without destroying the value of the other. Even Labor leaders in the United States have been driven to admit that the idea of increasing wages without price increases is a pipe-dream. The fallacy of thinking otherwise has been likened to a ball game, in which first the people in the front row stand up to get a better view, then the second row stands up, then the next, and so on, till soon everyone is standing up and nobody can see better.”

Even the proclaiming of the truths of God’s Word, that the Lord alone can, and will, deliver the human race from all its chaos, after sufficient lessons in present-day sin have been permitted, appeals to so few. As one has declared—“Our Socialist friends urge us to join with them, saying, We are tired of the preaching about what God will do by and by; come and join us; be Socialists and do something now.’ We reply that we appreciate the fact that many Socialists are intelligent and that many of them are sincere; but in our opinion their wisdom is the wisdom of this world, which, from God’s viewpoint, is foolishness. They are not able to bring about the great changes which they desire, and if they could bring them about, they would be unable to maintain those changes so long as sin and death reign in this world. What the world needs is what God has provided, a Saviour and a Great One, able to save to the uttermost— completely.

“We tell our Socialist friends that we know they will succeed beyond their expectations. Like Samson of old they will pull down the house not only upon others, but also upon themselves—There shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation,’ as our Lord Jesus foretold--=Matt. 24:21.”

We should follow the course directed by God’s Word, and urge God’s people everywhere to do the same — to wait upon the Lord to bring about the great change of dispensations which He has purposed and promised. Ultimately the light of the knowledge of the glory of God will fill the whole earth; the desire of all nations shall come. (Habakkuk 2:14; Haggai 2:6, 7.)

The End of the Way.

In recent weeks three of our elderly brethren have finished the pilgrim way at Gosford, N. S. Wales, Adelaide, S. Aust., and Auckland, N.Z.

Brother Berry, of Gosford, N. S. Wales, was well known by most of the friends in N. S. Wales, and had rejoiced in the truth for over 30 years. Until about 10 years ago he paid regular visits to the brethren in Sydney, but advancing age restricted his contact with other friends. However, our dear Brother maintained a regular correspondence with a number of brethren and in this way sought to encourage others along the Christian way. His cheery letters came regularly to Melbourne and over the past eighteen months he had rejoiced in the broadcast sessions on Sundays. Portion of his last letter reads :—" the broadcast this morning on the 'Sons of God' came over very nicely—I enjoyed it very much myself ; I thank our Heavenly Father for keeping me in the precious truth and rejoice in the precious knowledge that in the coming Kingdom all tears will be wiped from all faces."

The end came following a stroke, and we rejoice that our dear Brother Berry has entered into his reward. "Blessed in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints."

The following is to hand from Adelaide :—

On 27th September our late elderly Brother, Joseph Thoday of Adelaide (late of Gawler, S. Aust.) passed peacefully to his reward. He had been in ill-health for some two or three years, having also lost his eyesight

He showed much of the Lord's grace and spirit in the way he bore the infirmities of failing health and eyesight. He was 79 years of age. He was one of those who had learned to trust the Lord fully, and to cast all care upon Him. Those who knew him best found him to be always the same ; simplicity, sincerity, humility and gentleness characterised his life and conduct; always eager to discuss the truth. He possessed a good memory of the Scriptures which was a valuable asset to him during the period of his blindness. We feel he was truly one of the Lord's "little flock." "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power; but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years."

From Auckland, New Zealand, word is received of the passing of Brother Hille, following a stroke, at the age of 80 years.

Brother Hille was known personally by the few friends in Auckland and other parts of New Zealand, and while differing with some of the brethren on some features of the truth, always seemed most earnest and zealous in his service for the Lord. His appreciation of the literature, including a number of truth periodicals, was well in evidence. We trust for our elderly Brother the Lord's reward in His Kingdom.

Christmas Convention.

As announced last month the Melbourne brethren are arranging for their Annual Convention to be held (D.V.) over the Christmas period, the days for the gatherings being 25th, 26th, 28th and 29th December, to be held at Masonic Hall, 254 Swan Street, Richmond, Melbourne. An invitation is extended to friends able to be present. Further information is obtainable from Mr. J. Hiam, 44 Heath Avenue, Oakleigh, S.E.12, Melbourne.

Ransom and Restitution.

“For to this end Christ died and lived again, that He might be Lord [Ruler, Controller] of both the dead and the living.”

THAT is to say, the object of our Lord’s death and resurrection was not merely to bless and rule over and restore the living of mankind, but to give Him authority over, or full control of, the dead as well as the living, insuring the benefits of His ransom as much to the one as to the other. He “gave Himself a ransom [corresponding price] for all,” in order that He might bless all, and give to every man an individual trial for life. To claim that He gave “a ransom for all,” and yet to claim that only a mere handful of the ransomed ones will ever receive any benefit from it, is absurd; for it would imply either that God accepted the ransom-price and then unjustly refused to grant the release of the redeemed, or else that the Lord, after redeeming all, was either unable or unwilling to carry out the original benevolent design. The unchangeableness of the divine plans, no less than the perfection of the divine justice and love, repels and contradicts such a thought, and gives us assurance that the original and benevolent plan, of which the “ransom for all” was the basis, will be fully carried out in God’s “due time,” and will bring to faithful believers the blessing of release from the Adamic condemnation and an opportunity to return to the rights and liberties of sons of God, as enjoyed before sin and the curse.

Let the actual benefits and results of the ransom be clearly seen, and all objections to its being of universal application must vanish. The “ransom for all” given by “the man Christ Jesus” does not give or guarantee everlasting life or blessing to any man; but it does guarantee to every man another opportunity or trial for life everlasting. The first trial of man, which resulted in the loss of the blessing at first conferred, is really turned into a blessing of experience to the loyal-hearted, by reason of the ransom which God has provided. But the fact that men are ransomed from the first penalty does not guarantee that they may not, when individually tried for everlasting life, fail to render the obedience without which none will be permitted to live everlastingly. Man, by reason of present experience with sin and its bitter penalty, will be fully forewarned; and when, as a result of the ransom, he is granted’ another, an individual trial, under the eye and control of Him who so loved him as to give His life for him, and who would not that any should perish, but that all should turn to God and live, we may be sure that only the wilfully disobedient will receive the penalty of the second trial. That penalty will be the second death, from which there will be no ransom, no release, because there would be no object for another ransom or a further trial. All will have fully seen and tasted both good and evil; all will have witnessed and experienced the goodness and love of God; all will have had a full, fair, individual trial for life, under most favourable conditions. More could not be asked, and more will not be given. That trial will decide forever who would be righteous and holy under a thousand trials; and it will determine also who would be unjust, and unholy and filthy still, under a thousand trials.

The ransom given does not excuse sin in any; it does not propose to count sinners as saints, and usher them into everlasting bliss. It merely releases the accepting sinner from the first condemnation and its results, both direct and indirect, and places him again on trial for life, in which trial his own wilful obedience or wilful disobedience will decide whether he may or may not have life everlasting.

One difference between the experiences of the Church under trial now and the experiences of the world during its trial will be that the obedient of the world will begin at once to receive the blessings of restitution by a gradual removal of their weaknesses—mental and physical; whereas the Gospel Church, consecrated to the Lord’s service even unto death, goes down into death and gets her perfection instantaneously in the first resurrection. Another difference between the two trials is in the more favourable surroundings of the next age as compared with this, in that then society, government, etc., will be favourable to righteousness, rewarding faith and obedience, and punishing sin; whereas now, under the prince of this world, the Church's trial is under circumstances unfavourable to righteousness, faith, etc. But this is to be compensated for in the prize of the glory and honour of the divine nature offered to the Church, in addition to the gift of everlasting life.

Adam's death was sure, though it was reached by nine hundred and thirty years of dying. Since he was himself dying, all his children were born in the same dying condition and without right to life; and, like their parents, they all die after a more or less lingering process. It should be remembered, however, that it is not the pain and suffering in dying, but death—the extinction of life—in which the dying culminates, that is the penalty of sin. The suffering is only incidental to it, and the penalty falls on many with but little or no suffering. It should further be remembered that when Adam forfeited life, he forfeited it forever; and not one of his posterity has ever been able to expiate his guilt or to regain the lost inheritance. All the race are either dead or dying. And if they could not expiate their guilt before death, they certainly could not do it when dead—when not in existence. The penalty of sin was not simply to die, with the privilege and right thereafter of returning to life. In the penalty pronounced there was no intimation of release. (Gen.

2:17.) The restitution, therefore, is an act of free grace or favour on God's part. And as soon as the penalty had been incurred, even while it was being pronounced, the free favour of God was intimated, which, when realized, will so fully declare His love.

Had it not been for the gleam of hope, afforded by the statement that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head, the race would have been in utter despair; but this promise indicated that God had some plan for their benefit. When to Abraham God swore that in his seed all the families of the earth should be blessed, it implied a resurrection or restitution of all; for many were then dead and others have since died, unblessed. Nevertheless, the promise is still sure: all shall be blessed when the times of restitution or refreshing shall come. (Acts 3:21.) Moreover, since blessing indicates favour, and since God's favour was withdrawn and His curse came instead because of sin, this promise of a future blessing implied the removal of the curse, and consequently a return of His favour. It also implied either that God would relent, change His decree and clear the guilty race, or else that He had some plan by which it could be redeemed, by having man's penalty paid by another.

God did not leave Abraham in doubt as to which was His plan, but showed, by various typical sacrifices which all who approached Him had to bring, that He could not and did not relent, nor excuse the sin; and that the only way to blot it out and abolish its penalty would be by a sufficiency of sacrifice to meet that penalty. This was shown to Abraham in a very significant type: Abraham's son, in whom the promised blessing centred, had first to be a sacrifice before he could bless, and Abraham received him from the dead in a figure. (Heb. 11:19.) In that figure Isaac typified the true seed, Christ Jesus, who died to redeem men, in order that the redeemed might all receive the promised blessing. Had Abraham thought that the Lord would excuse and clear the guilty, he would have felt that God was changeable, and therefore could not have had full confidence in the promise made to him. He might have reasoned, If God has changed His mind once, why may He not change it again? If he relents concerning the curse of death, may He not again relent concerning the promised favour and blessing? But God leaves us in no such uncertainty. He gives us ample assurance of both His justice and His unchangeableness. He could not clear the guilty, even though he loved them so much that "He spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up [to death] for us all."

As the entire race was in Adam when he was condemned, and lost life through him, so when Adam's life was redeemed by the man Christ Jesus, a possible race in his loins died also, and a full satisfaction, or corresponding price, was rendered to justice for all men; and He who thus bought all has full authority to restore all who come unto God by Him.

“As by the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation, even so by righteousness of one, the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life. For as by one man’s disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous.” (Rom. 5:18, 19.) The proposition is a plain one: As many as have shared death on account of Adam’s sin will have life-privileges offered to them by our Lord Jesus, who paid their penalty to Justice, who became Adam’s substitute before the broken law, and thus “gave Himself a ransom for all.” He died, “the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God.” (1 Peter 3:18.) It should never be overlooked, however, that all of God’s provisions for our race recognize the human will as a factor in the securing of the divine favours so abundantly provided. Some have overlooked this feature in examining the text just quoted—Rom. 5:18,

19. The Apostle’s statement, however, is that, as the sentence of condemnation extended to all the seed of Adam, even so, through the obedience of our Lord Jesus Christ to the Father’s plan, by the sacrifice of Himself on our behalf, a free gift is extended to all—a gift of forgiveness, which, if accepted, will constitute a justification or basis for life everlasting. And “as by one man’s disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one many shall be [not were] made righteous.” If the ransom alone, without our acceptance of it, made us righteous, then it would have read, by the obedience of one many were made righteous. But though the ransom has been given by the Redeemer and has been accepted by Jehovah, only a few during the Gospel age have been, though many during the Millennial age will be, made righteous—justified—“through faith in His blood.” Since Christ is the propitiation (satisfaction) for the sins of the whole world, all men may on this account be absolved and released from the penalty of Adam’s sin by Him—under the New Covenant.

There is no unrighteousness with God; hence “If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.” (1 John 1:9.) As He would have been unjust to have allowed us to escape the pronounced penalty before satisfaction was rendered, so also He here gives us to understand that it would be unjust were He to forbid our restitution, since by His own arrangement our penalty has been paid for us. The same unswerving justice that once condemned man to death now stands pledged for the release of all who, confessing their sins, apply for life through Christ. “It is God that justifieth—who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died; yea, rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us.”—Rom. 8:33, 34.

The completeness of the ransom is the very strongest possible argument for the restitution of all mankind who will accept it on the proffered terms. (Rev. 22:17.) The very character of God for justice and honour stands pledged to it; every promise which He has made implies it; and every typical sacrifice pointed to the great and sufficient sacrifice—“The Lamb of God, which taketh away the SIN OF THE WORLD”—who is “the propitiation [satisfaction] for our sins [the Church’s], and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.” (John 1:29; 1 John 2:2.) Since death is the penalty or wages of sin, when the sin is cancelled the wages must in due time cease. Any other view would be both unreasonable and unjust. The fact that no recovery from the Adamic loss is yet accomplished, though nearly two thousand years have elapsed since our Lord died, is no more an argument against restitution than is the fact that four thousand years elapsed before His death, a proof that God had not planned the redemption before the foundation of the world. Both the two thousand years since and the four thousand years before the death of Christ were appointed times for other parts of the work, preparatory to “the times of restitution of all things.”

Frank and Ernest, Berean Bible Institute, Dear Friends —Received your letter, also literature on two other occasions. I would like to thank you very much for sending me all this good reading. It isn't always possible for me to listen to "Frank and Ernest" every Sunday morning, so having their Talks printed is very helpful. Not only can I refer back to them and re-read them but I can pass them on to my friends.

I am enclosing a postal note for 5/- which is only a little, but hope it will help you to carry on the good work and go towards the expenses of the papers. Thanking you again; yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Will you please forward me a copy of this morning's broadcast, and also if you have copies of some previous ones I wonder if you would send them to me. I belong to a C.E. I remain, Yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Please forward me a copy of your broadcast of last Sunday and also the other pamphlet available. I have been listening to your broadcasts for a considerable period now and I think they are excellent. Any other literature would be appreciated. Wishing you every success in your method of spreading the Gospel. I am, Yours faithfully.

N. S. Wales.

Dear Frank and Ernest—Many thanks for your broadcasts which my wife and I thoroughly enjoy each Sunday morning. We would be pleased to receive your booklet “Christ’s Return.”

It is certainly good to hear God’s Word read out to the people in such a manner without the usual “gloss” that is given it by those who should know better. May God bless you in your good work, and bring about soon our expectation, even the return of Christ. Yours faithfully.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I have been listening to your Bible lectures on Sunday mornings at 2KY. We are very interested in your lectures; we believe you are teaching the real Bible truths. If you would kindly send us some of your lectures we would be very pleased.

You might let us know if there is any place in Sydney that teaches the Bible as you do. Yours in the Master’s service.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—For the past month or so I have been hearing your wonderful message on Bible prophecy over the air and am very interested. I would like you to send me a free copy of “Hope Beyond the Grave,” also a copy of “Christ’s Return” as soon as you can and oblige.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I would appreciate a copy of your excellent radio programme which impressed me greatly.

May your work be truly blessed. Your faithfully.

Tasmania.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I have just heard your explanation on the parable of the Lost Sheep. May I express, Sirs, my appreciation of your very clear explanation and I might say also that it is the first time I have heard that view expressed. I would be very glad to have a copy, and as I have not previously listened to any of your Dialogues would you kindly send me any back copies which you may have on hand. I can assure you that they will be very deeply appreciated. Your sincerely.

Frank and Ernest—First of all, gentlemen, let me thank you for your wonderful response to my letter for copies of your Dialogues. I have begun to study them and I can assure you that they are proving most helpful; once again thank you very much. I would like copies of your last two Dialogues also the booklet “Parables of the Kingdom.” Yours sincerely.

Dear Sirs—After listening to your very interesting session on 7EX this morning I would be very pleased if you would forward me a copy of “Hope Beyond the Grave.” Yours faithfully.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I was much impressed with your Talk over 7EX this morning ; I would indeed like to have a copy of your Talk and pamphlet. These Talks are very helpful but one cannot fully appreciate them unless he ponders over them and learns for himself where these prophecies are located in our grand old Bible. Thanking you; yours in the faith.

The Coming Kingdom.

THE WORLD NEEDS THE RULE OF RIGHTEOUSNESS.

“And I will shake all nations, and the desire of all people shall come.”—Haggai 2:7.

THE only proper contentment is that which is combined with godliness and which sees from the standpoint of Scripture the Divine Power able to correct the difficulties which assail mankind. Thus instructed, the godly believer is able to appropriate the Divine promises of providential care, and so can be content with conditions which are not satisfactory.

On the other hand, those who either do not know of the Power Divine, or have lost their faith in Divine Wisdom, chafe more and more under present conditions. The more discontented they become the greater is their tendency toward ungodliness, doubt of the Divine Love, Wisdom and Power. Self-dependence is a poor substitute; and as disappointments come, those inclined to combativeness find anger, malice, hatred, envy and strife surging through their minds. Then they become rabid Socialists, and are in a fair way to become eventually rabid anarchists.

Again, we have those who term themselves Christian Socialists. These well-meaning souls perceive the situation of their brethren, and say, “Yes, the world should be transformed socially. Its riches should not flow, as at present, into certain favoured channels, but should be scattered everywhere for the general refreshment and comfort of mankind as a whole.” This class philosophise on what God surely would, and surely would not, approve amongst men, and then declare that all Christians should at once set about to secure to the world of mankind a just division of God’s bounties.

The love and zeal of this class for right principles we should admire and commend. But we cannot commend their course, their hopes, their preaching, by which they seek to obtain the ends desired. Recognising the principles of Divine Justice, they seek to apply these forgetful that they have not the Divine wisdom necessary to a proper application.

The Scriptural View Of The Matter.

This class seem to forget also that human justice has been the same for several thousand years past, and that Divine Wisdom has not yet seen fit to establish Divine justice amongst men. If they think that this is neglect on the part of the Almighty, which they are wise enough to rectify, their thought is evidently an erroneous one. If, on the contrary, they believe that the time for the establishment of justice has now come, they should be able to find a Divine revelation to this effect and point it out to us—one practically authorising them to take their stand for Socialism, and explaining that the due time for the prosperity of justice has now come, and telling how they shall proceed and what will be the outcome.

According to the Word of God, the world is not properly ready for its own control under any form of government. It is a rebellious province in the Divine Empire—one in which sin, selfishness and death constitute the ruling elements. The Bible declares that what the world needs is a monarchy—a strong, centralised government, in which the masses must not be allowed to have a voice at all, because in their fallen condition they do not know what is for their own highest good.

Furthermore, the Bible tells us that present institutions, under the power of selfishness, driving the wealthy in one direction and the masses in the opposite direction, are about to bring a universal crash—anarchy. This and atheistic Socialism and Christian Socialism, and in a larger sense general selfishness and discontent, are urging on the two great combatants, both of whom will fall in the struggle never to rise again. However, according to Scripture, they will be succeeded by the Kingdom of God's dear Son.

That strong government, that Theocracy to which every knee must bow and every tongue confess, to the glory of God, is the Kingdom that the world needs. Its rule of righteousness alone will bring to mankind the joy and peace and blessing which all crave, but which none of us are wise enough to know how to bring about—not even our Socialist friends! The part of faith and of wisdom is to look unto the Lord, from whom cometh our help. Nor should we look to Him to approve our methods, but rather to be informed respecting His methods, and to co-operate to the extent of our abilities.

The Gospel Of Discontent.

Some time ago the "Christian Socialist" reported a minister of the gospel as saying:

"Let us answer, Hasten the day when Labour, united, shall shake off its chains! Our part as Christians is to help men out of every bondage! We are not perturbed that Socialism in its eagerness to rid Labour of material bonds, has not yet realised the weight of bonds spiritual. That realisation will come in good time, and Christianity must be ready to show the workers of the world how to be rid of all these fetters of the soul which material emancipation will but render more apparent. But for Christianity, as too often now, to profess desire to free men from spiritual bondage, while repudiating any call or need to strike fearless blows at their material prison bars, is to lay itself open to justifiable charges of hypocrisy. This must yield to braver counsels, though the striving be unto blood against the sin of slavery which still defiles modern industrialism.

"With widest meaning then—inclusive of all that the most ardent and uncompromising Socialist lover of liberty has demanded and embracing besides, all that the Christian means when he proclaims the story of spiritual freedom—Christianity must now take up the challenge, and cry with world-wide voice and a mighty thunder—'Amen! even so, unite, ye workers; you have but your chains to lose, and you have a world to gain!' "

The writer of this extract and all 'who sympathise with his views should be willing to concede that if now is the proper time to get Labour out of "the slavery of modern industrialism," then surely God is as much interested in that release as they or any others could possibly be—yea, and more so. If, then, this Christian minister and others have received some special commission authorising them to preach a new Gospel or a new addition to the old Gospel, they should produce the proofs of this authorisation. Until we see the proofs we must doubt their existence.

On the contrary, the Scriptures declare that there is but one Hope set before us in the Gospel, even as there “is but one Lord, one Faith, and one Baptism.” No one will ever succeed in making the world happy by preaching the Gospel of Discontent. Labour today is a hundredfold better fed, better clothed, and better housed than in the days of our forefathers and, it is safe to say, a hundredfold more discontented. And the author of the above extract, with doubtless the very best intentions, is really doing harm by his gospel of Socialism; for he has neglected to consult the Word of God on this important subject.

Our Lord, it was pointed out, was surrounded by conditions of sickness, sorrow, poverty, etc., so that He could properly declare, “The poor ye have with you always.” The Apostles were similarly situated. Yet have we any evidence whatever that any of these attempted to “break the chains of the slavery of Labour?” Assuredly not!

The Master’s Example.

Many instances can be cited from the life of Jesus, as recorded in the Gospels, to demonstrate that He did not set an example for these well-meaning but mistaken Christians. While the Master went about doing good and healing many sick folk, He by no means healed all the sick or comforted all that mourned. His favours were specialised; for instance, take the case of the impotent man at the Pool of Bethesda. The record is that “there were multitudes of impotent folk there.” But only one was miraculously healed by our Lord.

Again, many widows were bereft of their sons; but only the widow of Nain had her son restored to her by the allpowerful word of our Redeemer. Our Lord came into the world, not to heal the sick, but to die for the race of Adam. The great work, the important work, of healing all the sick—the mentally, morally and physically sick—and of awakening all the dead He left until the establishment of His Kingdom.

Christians may do good to all men as they have opportunity, but they must wait for God’s time and manner for the general healing of the world’s sorrows and woes. When the prayer which our Master taught His disciples to pray, “Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, as it is done in Heaven,” shall have had fulfilment, then all the blessing, all the helpfulness, necessary to the full recovery of our race will be brought into operation. Meantime, it is not possible for any man or for any set of men, Christians or otherwise, either to improve upon God’s great plan of the ages or to hasten that plan.

Frequently reference is made to the fact that at its beginning the early Church established a communistic society.

This was not a worldly organisation nor was it made by those who recognised worldly principles, but that it was merely a social arrangement whereby the Church at Jerusalem sought to deal with its members as one family.

The project was not successful; it did not persist; it did not have Apostolic commendation to other ecclesias. The conclusion, therefore, is that the arrangement was Divinely permitted in order to show the Lord’s people throughout this Gospel Age the impracticability of such an arrangement at the present time.

The Gospel Of Error.

Christian Socialists would probably tell us that Socialists are crying out that they do not find Heavenly hopes satisfactory; that they desire earthly hopes, riches and comforts, and intend to have these. They add the intimation that unless the people get what they wish, the influence of religion will wane, and ministers will become back numbers, whom no one will care to hear, much less to heed. The difficulty is that the Gospel Message is not properly presented to the people. The Message which our Lord and His Apostles taught is a consistent one; whereas the message from the majority of pulpits today is inconsistent.

The people are told, by both Catholics and Protestants, that there is a Heaven for the saintly, who, before dying, shall become firmly established in the graces of the holy spirit; but that with the masses it is different. These are told by Catholics that after death centuries of torment await them in purgatory, and by Protestants that they will have an eternity of torment without hope of release. Then both Catholics and Protestants unite in telling the poor world that such an arrangement is the provision of a just and loving God, for which they should be deeply thankful; and, additionally, that the troubles of this present life are partial penances for sin.

The Gospel Of Christ.

The Truth is so much more reasonable, so much more just, loving, and wise, that whoever hears it experiences a satisfaction which error can never produce. The Scriptures clearly teach that ours is a convict race, condemned to death because of Father Adam's disobedience; for as his children we have inherited a share in his death sentence--not in an eternal torment sentence. The Bible tells that Satan, who misled our first parents by misrepresenting God and His Word, has continued to misrepresent the Creator to mankind; and that it is the Adversary who is responsible for the "doctrines of, devils" (1 Timothy 4:1) respecting the torture of the dead who, the Scriptures declare, "know not anything."—Ecclesiastes 9:5.

The Scriptures tell us that God, seeing that many of our race, dying because of Adam's disobedience, would gladly return to fellowship with their Creator and be recovered from sin and death conditions, has made a provision for them. Our Lord Jesus by His death has purchased the lives and liberties of Adam and his entire race.

The Scriptures show that before the Kingdom is established amongst men the Kingdom class must first be found—the Little Flock, to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the kingdom, as Jesus declared. This class is to be composed of the saintly few who form positive characters for righteousness by faithfully following in the footsteps of their Redeemer. The Kingdom will not be established until this class is completed.

"The Desire Of All Nations."

Prophecy declares that the desire of all peoples shall come, and all the world would desire the coming of the glorious Messianic Kingdom if they only knew about it. All ministers of God should hold up before the people the glorious Gospel of Christ. This will bring joy and peace to all hearts, notwithstanding the incidental trials, difficulties, and weakness of this present time of distress. Socialism stirs up the minds of men to dissatisfaction, worry, fear, strife, and is leading them on into the great time of anarchistic trouble. The Gospel Message, on the contrary, is helpful, comforting, sustaining.

So then, the work of Christian ministers, as Divinely appointed, is to let the world alone to be dealt with in God's due time, and to comfort, sustain, and instruct those whom they find to have the hearing ear of faith. These are to know the Truth, and the Truth will make them free from error and superstition, and also bring them to the place of full consecration to God—sanctification. Such are to be informed respecting the Kingdom of which they are invited to become members, by becoming members of the Body of Christ through faith, consecration, and obedience unto death.

Socialism will be the Divine arrangement amongst men the ages following the Messianic Age, during which the race will be lifted to perfection by the great King of Glory. Then Socialism will be a grand success; for all unworthy of life will have been cut off in the Second Death.

Meetings at Geelong, Vic.

THE week-end gatherings held by the friends in Geelong, Victoria, on November 9th and 10th proved most refreshing and encouraging to all able to attend. Since early this year the Bible Class in Geelong has been meeting regularly and enjoying the studies on various portions of Scriptures; lectures have also been delivered from time to time and in this way additional members have been added to the class, and the Lord's blessing is being fully realised.

On Saturday, November 9th, visiting members from Melbourne joined the friends in Geelong and a very helpful time was realised by all. Commencing shortly after 2 p.m., the afternoon and evening was well taken up with a series of addresses and a very helpful Bible study on Psalm 46.

Subjects for the addresses given by the brethren were as follows:—"God is Able"; "Revelation 17"; "Be Not Conformed to this World"; and "Memories." These all proved most interesting and encouraging, and the time seemed all too short when it was necessary for the Melbourne friends to leave on the return journey shortly after 8 p.m., after all had joined in the Love Feast while singing "Blest be the tie that binds."

The following day, Sunday November 10th, a public lecture was given in the afternoon on the subject, "Has Christianity Failed after 1900 Years?—Why such Worldwide Unrest today?" This message was also well received by additional numbers from the public as well as the Geelong friends.

We are very grateful to the Lord for His blessing upon these special gatherings, and appreciate also the prayers of our brethren in more distant parts, as well as the message by telegram from friends in another state. The weekly broadcasts on Sunday mornings by Frank and Ernest over 3GL Geelong are also proving helpful in conjunction with the regular class meetings, by the Lord's providence.

The Radio Work.

SINCE the last report on the witness of the truth by radio in June "Peoples Paper" this work has continued steadily in four of the Australian states and has been the means of enlightening and encouraging many in these times of distress and perplexity.

Our thankfulness to the Lord is again expressed at this time for His blessing upon the efforts to send forth the joyful sound of the truth to those who have ears to hear and hearts to appreciate, and the sacrifices of the brethren as a whole to enable this work to go on are appreciated sincerely as unto the Lord and by His providence.

In Victoria the two stations, 3GL Geelong and 3B0 Bendigo, continue to give a fairly good coverage of the state and many are the appreciative listeners who look forward to the Sunday morning sessions. 3GL Geelong is received very well throughout Melbourne and by advertising, the message is continually reaching fresh homes, as well as serving a wide area in this state and much of the north of Tasmania.

The securing of the Sydney station 2KY, commencing last July, enables a witness to be given in that largely populated area and which has brought some good response from new cases, as well as being appreciated by the friends generally. For instance, two dear old people declared with great pleasure that the Sunday morning broadcast is their church service, and many others state that they always look forward to the Dialogues on the various Biblical subjects.

For the past six months two stations have been used in Tasmania and the response has also been encouraging. However, both 7HT Hobart and 7EX Launceston have discontinued at the end of last month, for the present, and all interested listeners to these stations may receive the printed copies of the Dialogues through the post, as well as other literature. In this way the witness given shall not be lost with the termination of the sessions on these two stations, and some Tasmanian listeners will still be able to hear, 3GL Geelong.

The friends in Perth have also continued the sessions with 6KY, and in addition to the regular Sunday morning dialogues they have conducted two evening church services over the same station; the next of these Sunday evening services will take place in March next year, D.V., and no doubt this further witness to the truth is doing additional good in that area.

Whatever may be the opportunities for this work in the months ahead we may not know, but we are happy to leave the matter in the Lord's hands and if the way does open for further extension of this witness it will be a pleasure to engage in it, by the Lord's grace. In the meantime there is much to be done in supplying the needs of all who are appreciating the message, and all efforts in this service of our Lord are considered so much of privilege. All friends are invited to co-operate in the distribution of the advertising cards to make the sessions known.

The financial statement covering the radio work over the six months from May 1st, 1946, to November 1st, 1946, is given below. The voluntary donations represent much of sacrifice on the part of our friends generally, and with the assistance from the Reserve Fund the balance of 23/7/1 is carried forward towards a further term for this work. Again it is requested that the dear friends remember this work in prayer, as well as the efforts generally in the service of our Lord that His blessing and guidance may be manifest, to His praise.

Christmas Convention.

Arrangements are now well in hand for the Annual Convention to be held (D.V.) on December 25th, 26th, 28th and 29th, afternoon and evening, in Masonic Hall, 254 Swan Street, Richmond, Melbourne, and the Melbourne friends extend a cordial invitation to all Christians able to join them at these gatherings. Programmes will be ready shortly and these and other information about accommodation etc. are available from the secretary, Mr. J. Hiam, 44 Heath Avenue, Oakleigh, S.E.12, Melbourne.

The opportunity for baptism will also be available during this Convention should any of our friends desire to symbolise their consecration to God—to be dead with Christ. All so desiring are asked to communicate as early as possible.

God's Promises Come True.

The above is the title of a very good book of Bible Stories for children published by the brethren in U.S.A. Containing 376 pages, comprising 49 stories, it covers the whole of the Bible in a most interesting and instructive manner. There are six full-page pictures and numerous smaller illustrations; also two very good maps and a list of questions for teachers. Well bound in cloth and with gold title this book is supplied at 15/6 post paid.

Natures Separate and Distinct.

FAILING to see that the plan of God for mankind in general contemplates a restitution to their former estate—the human perfection lost in Eden—and that the Christian Church, as an exception to this general plan, is to have a change of nature from human to spiritual, Christian people generally have supposed that none will be saved except those who reach the spiritual nature. The Scriptures, however, while holding out promises of life and blessing and restitution to all the families of the earth, offer and promise the change to spiritual nature only to the Church selected during the Gospel age; and not a single passage can be found which sustains such hopes for any others.

If the masses of mankind are saved from all the degradation, weakness, pain, misery and death which result from sin, and are restored to the condition of human perfection enjoyed before the fall, they are as really, and completely saved from that fall as those who, under the special “high-calling” of the Gospel age, become “partakers of the divine nature.”

The failure to understand rightly what constitutes a perfect man, the misapprehension of the terms mortal and immortal, and wrong ideas of justice, have together tended to this error, and mystified many Scriptures otherwise easily understood. It is a common view, though unsupported by a single text of Scripture, that a perfect man has never been on earth; that all that is seen of man on earth is only the partially developed man, and that to reach perfection he must become spiritual. This view makes confusion of the Scriptures instead of developing that harmony and beauty which result from “rightly dividing the word of truth.”

The Scriptures teach that there have been two, and only two, perfect men—Adam and Jesus. Adam was created in the image of God: that is, with the similar mental powers of reason, memory, judgment and will, and the moral qualities of justice, benevolence, love, ‘ etc. “Of the earth, earthy,” he was an earthly image of a spiritual being, possessing qualities of the same kind, though differing widely in degree, range and scope. To such an extent is man an image of God that God can say even to the fallen man, “Come, let us reason together.”

As Jehovah is ruler over all things, so man was made a ruler over all earthly things—After our likeness, let him have dominion over the beasts, fowl, fish, etc. (Gen. 1:26.) Moses tells us (Gen. 1:31) that God recognized the man whom He had made—not merely commenced to make, but completed—and God considered His creature “very good,” that is, perfect; for in God’s sight nothing short of perfection is very good, in His intelligent creatures.

There is a wonderful contrast between man as we now see him, degraded by sin, and the perfect man that God made in His image. Sin has gradually changed his features, as well as his character. Multiplied generations, by ignorance, licentiousness and general depravity, have so blurred and marred humanity that in the large majority of the race the likeness of God is almost obliterated. The moral and intellectual qualities are dwarfed; and the animal instincts, unduly developed, are no longer balanced by the higher.

But though thus defiled and degraded by sin and its penalty, death, working in him, man is to be restored to his original perfection of mind and body, and to glory, honour and dominion, during and by the Millennial reign of Christ. The things to be restored by and through Christ are those things which were lost through Adam’s transgression. (Rom. 5:18, 19.) Man did not lose a heavenly but an earthly paradise. Under the death penalty, he did not lose a spiritual but a human existence; and all that was lost was purchased back by his Redeemer, who declared that He came to seek and to save that which was lost. — Luke 19:10.

In addition to the above, we have proof that the perfect man is not a spiritual being. We are told that our Lord, before He left His glory to become a man, was “in a form of God”—a spiritual form, a spirit being; but since to be a ransom for mankind He had to be a man, of the same nature as the sinner whose substitute in death he was to become, it was necessary that His nature be changed. And Paul tells us that He took not the nature of angels, one step lower than His own, but that He came down two steps and took the nature of men—He became a man; He was “made flesh.”—Heb. 2:14; Phil. 2:7, 8; John 1:14.

Notice that this teaches not only that angelic nature is not the only order of spirit being, but that it is a lower nature than that of our Lord before He became a man; and He was not then so high as He is now, for “God hath highly exalted Him,” because of His obedience in becoming man’s willing ransom. (Phil. 2:8, 9.) He is now of the highest order of spirit being, a partaker of the divine (Jehovah’s) nature.

But not only do we thus find proof that the divine, angelic and human natures are separate and distinct, but this proves that to be a perfect man is not to be an angel, any more than the perfection of angelic nature implies that angels are divine and equal with Jehovah; for Jesus took not the nature of angels, but a different nature—the nature of men; not the imperfect human nature as we now possess it, but the perfect human nature. He became a man; not a depraved and nearly dead being such as men are now, but a man in the full vigour of perfection.

Again, Jesus must have been a perfect man else He could not have kept a perfect law, which is the full measure of a perfect man’s ability. And He must have been a perfect man else He could not have given a ransom (a corresponding price—1 Tim. 2:6) for the forfeited life of the perfect man Adam; “For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead.— (1 Cor. 15:21.) Had He been in the least degree imperfect, it would have proved that He was under condemnation, and therefore He could not have been an acceptable sacrifice; neither could He have kept perfectly the law of God. A perfect man was tried, and failed, and was condemned; and only a perfect man could pay the corresponding price as the Redeemer.

Now we have the question fairly before us in another form, viz.: If Jesus in the flesh was a perfect man, as the Scriptures thus show, does it not prove that a perfect man is a human, fleshly being—not an angel, but a little lower than the angels? The logical conclusion is unmistakable; and in addition we have the inspired statement of the Psalmist (Psa. 8:5-8) and Paul's reference to it in Heb. 2:7, 9.

Neither was Jesus a combination of the two natures, human and spiritual. The blending of two natures produces neither the one nor the other, but an imperfect, hybrid thing, which is obnoxious to the divine arrangement. When Jesus was in the flesh He was a perfect human being; previous to that time He was a perfect spiritual being; and since His resurrection He is a perfect spiritual being of the highest or divine order. It was not until the time of His consecration even unto death, as typified in His baptism—at thirty years of age (manhood, according to the Law, and therefore the right time to consecrate Himself as a man)—that He received the earnest of His inheritance of the divine nature. (Matt. 3:16, 17.) The human nature had to be consecrated to death before He could receive even the pledge of the divine nature. And not until that consecration was actually carried out and He had actually sacrificed the human nature, even unto death, did our Lord Jesus become a full partaker of the divine nature. After becoming a man He became obedient unto death, wherefore, God hath highly exalted Him to the divine nature. (Phil. 8, 9.) If this Scripture is true, it follows that He was not exalted to the divine nature until the human nature was actually sacrificed—dead.

Thus we see that in Jesus there was no mixture of natures, but that twice He experienced a change of nature; first, from spiritual to human; afterward, from human to the highest order of spiritual nature, the divine; and in each case the one was given up for the other.

In this grand example of perfect humanity, which stood unblemished before the world until sacrificed for the world's redemption, we see the perfection from which our race fell in Adam, and to which it is to be restored. In becoming man's ransom, our Lord Jesus gave the equivalent for that which man lost; and therefore all mankind may receive again, through faith in Christ, and obedience to His requirements, not a spiritual, but a glorious, perfect human nature—"that which was lost."

While Jesus as a man was an illustration of perfect human nature, to which the mass of man kind will be restored, yet since His resurrection He is the illustration of the glorious divine nature which the overcoming Church will, at resurrection, share with Him.

Because the present age is devoted mainly to the development of this class which is offered a change of nature, and because the apostolic epistles are devoted to the instruction of this "little flock," it should not be inferred that God's plans end with the completion of this chosen company. Nor, on the other hand, should we go to the opposite extreme, and suppose that the special promises of the divine nature, spiritual bodies, etc., made to these, are God's design for all mankind. To these are the "exceeding great and precious promises," over and above the other precious promises made to all mankind. To rightly divide the word of truth, we should observe that the Scriptures recognize the perfection of the divine nature in the "little flock," and the perfection of the human nature in the restored world, as two separate things.

We have no record of any being, either spiritual or human, ever having been changed from one nature to another, except the Son of God; and this was an exceptional case, for an exceptional purpose. When God made angels He doubtless intended them to remain angels forever, and so with men, each being perfect on his own plane. At least the Scriptures give no intimation of any different purpose. As in the inanimate creation there is a pleasing and almost endless variety, so in the living and intelligent creation the same variety in perfection is possible. Every creature in its perfection is glorious; but, as Paul says, the glory of the celestial (heavenly) is one kind of glory, and the glory of the terrestrial (earthly) is another and a different glory.

Charity.

“Oh, be not the first to discover
A blot on the fame of a friend;
Oh, be not of discord the mover,
For hearts may prove true in the end.

We none of us know one another,
And oft into error we fall;
Then let us speak well of each other,
Or speak not of others at all.

A sigh or a smile may awaken, ,
Suspicion most false or untrue,
And thus our belief may be shaken,
In hearts that are honest and true.

How often the friends we hold dearest,
Their noblest emotions conceal?
And bosoms the purest, sincerest,
Have secrets they cannot reveal.

Leave base minds to harbour suspicion,
And small ones to trace out defects;
Let ours be a noble ambition,
To love as our Saviour directs.”

Pilgrim Way Ended.

Since last month's issue of "Peoples Paper" reports to hand disclose the passing of three more of our elderly friends, in Perth, W. Aus.; Canberra, A.C.T. ; and Burnie, Tasmania.

The following is received from Perth:

We now write to let you know that our dear old Sister Scorer, aged 91 years, reached the end of her long and faithful journey. She was a very sincere follower of Christ and held firmly to the faith once delivered to the saints and appreciated very clearly the present truths concerning our Lord's second presence and the near approach of the Kingdom of Christ. She knew that the end was near as she lay in hospital for some days just patiently waiting for deliverance.

As the funeral was to be private we concluded to hold a short service on Sunday out of regard for our Sister whom we all held in high esteem. We contrasted her hope in Christ with that of the more general resurrection of the world, as shown in 1 Thes. 4:13-18, and then sang hymn 86-- "Forever with the Lord !

Amen, so let it be !
Life from the dead is in that word,
'Tis immortality." Etc.

We closed with prayer particularly for the comfort of those who will so greatly miss her.

From Canberra friends the following is to hand :—

It is with sorrow that we write of the death of our dear Sister Harris on October 24th last.

She had not long known the truth concerning God's glorious character and plan of salvation, but did embrace it with zeal and with great joy ; nothing in all her life giving greater pleasure than to talk of these soul-satisfying themes. She influenced those about her to a large extent and those with whom she lived also rejoice in the truth.

Sister Harris particularly wanted us to remember as a parting text, "I know in whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him, against that day." This speaks volumes for her faith and trust in God, and growth in grace to the end of the way. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

Word has come indirectly advising that our elderly Brother Grubb of Burnie, Tasmania, has finished the pilgrim way, at the advanced age of over 90 years.

Brother Grubb had rejoiced in the truth for many years, and the meetings of the friends in Burnie were held at his place of business for a number of years. For some time past he had been an invalid, being cared for by his daughters, but ever kept bright the heavenly hope to which he had been called so long before. Friends visiting him over the years have always commented upon our Brother's quiet submission to the Lord's will, and rejoicing in hope of the promised inheritance with Christ. Sincere sympathy is extended to the bereaved relatives.

Correspondence.

Berean Bible Institute, Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Once again I am writing to let you know how helpful I found the talk over 3GL this morning, also how it has enlightened me on many things. I hope you keep up the good work in Christian faith. . . I must thank you for the pamphlets and books as I found them very interesting and helpful. Would you kindly send me "Times of Refreshing," "What is the Soul?", "The High Calling of God," "A Blessed Hope for Suffering Humanity," and "The Truth About Hell." I am yours in Christian faith.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Will you please send me that book you spoke of this morning. I heard your broadcast from 3B0 station this morning and would like a copy of that book very much. Thanking you very much for your inspiring message. I am, Dear Sirs, Yours faithfully.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I heard your broadcast on Sunday and was very interested as I have been interested in the subject of the second coming of Christ for 30 years and have studied same for 14 years. I would be pleased if you would send me the book "Christ's Return" and will be interested to read it and compare it with Scripture. Yours because His.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Will you kindly forward me a couple of copies of your Sunday 3rd November broadcast. I'm very interested indeed and enjoyed your broadcast. With best wishes for every success. Yours faithfully.

Dear Sirs—I am a regular listener to your programme on 2KY Sydney every Sunday morning. Being a Sunday School teacher I wonder would it be at all possible to obtain each week a copy of your script on Bible topics. These scripts which you give over the air should prove very beneficial to me as a teacher.

I would be very pleased if you could arrange this for me. Yours faithfully.

(Printed copies of broadcasts are gladly supplied free, upon request, to all who promise to read them carefully.— B.B. Institute.)

Frank and Ernest, 2KY, Gentlemen — Someone told me about your session on 2KY, 8.15 a.m., Sundays. I am glad I listened in ; however, I missed that important broadcast “The Binding of Satan.” Please send it to the above address.

Your broadcasts should appeal to all lovers of the truth ; not to the worldly wise perhaps. Serve God as you are doing, not men of the world. I have heard it said, it’s not very convincing—don’t worry about such remarks. Yours sincerely.

Dear Sir—Once again I am writing for more reading matter; this time not only for myself but for a friend also. Two weeks ago I attended a service in a country church and the preacher rather strongly condemned those who hold the view that the dead know not anything, and expressed his own opinion that the dead are now with Christ and know all that is taking place. The outcome was that after the meeting I expressed disapproval of his condemnation. One family was interested when I told them of your booklets, etc., which I have received from time to time and so for their benefit would you kindly send me copies of the booklets “Where are the Dead?” and “Parables of the Kingdom” and two of “God and Reason.” Hoping that you will oblige ; Yours sincerely.

To Berean Bible Institute, Dear Brethren—I would like you to know that I believe every word written in your books and booklets, etc., about the second coming of Christ. I have studied the Bible for years without understanding it; my faith was always strong and I knew that God in His own good time would make all things plain. I thank God that I was enabled to get in touch with you. I am unable to go out anywhere these days and I hope that you can read this as I have almost lost the use of my arms and legs, but thank God I can still move slowly about my own home.

I do not know what I would do without the “Peoples Paper” now, so I am sending 5/- for the subscription for myself and if there is any left over perhaps you could help someone as you have helped me. I am, Yours sincerely.

Christian Influence.

(2 Cor. 2:14-16. Convention Address.)

THE word "influence" means literally a flowing in or on, energy or potency tending to procure effects insensible and invisible, power arising from character or station; as for instance, the mighty influence of God upon and in things created. "In Him we live and move and have our being." (Acts 17:28.) "In whose hand is the life of every living thing and the breath of all mankind." (Job 12:10.) In a general sense the word means power, the operation of which is invisible and known only by its effects.

The English word "influence" occurs once only in the Bible—"Canst thou bind the sweet influence of Pleiades," (Job 38:31). However, the word "spirit" having the same meaning, occurs hundreds of times. This thought is conveyed to us by the words of Gen. 1:2: "The spirit (power, influence, energy) of God moved upon the face of the waters."

The power or influence of God is vast and unlimited; whether it be in heaven or on earth none can escape or get beyond its reach. "Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in sheol, behold thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; Even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from thee." (Psa. 139:7-12.)

The operations of God's influence or spirit are various. (1) In the creation of the first and only begotten Son. (2)

In the creation of all things in heaven—spirit beings, principalities and powers. (3) In the creation of earthly things, animate and inanimate. We know too, from the Scriptures that God's influence operated differently in the various dispensations. Upon the prophets of old it caused them to speak and write the Word of inspiration which they themselves did not fully understand. (Dan. 12:8, 9.) It caused others to do wonderful workman-ship upon the furnishings of the tabernacle. (Exod. 35:30-35.) During this Gospel Age the spirit of God is operating upon those who exercise faith in and obedience to the Divine will and is bringing into existence a New Creation. (2 Cor. 5:17). This began at our Lord's first advent and to as many as believed into Him, God gave the privileges to become His sons.

The spirit or influence of Christ was and is perfect and powerful, and the disciples were greatly blessed as they came in contact with it. It drew out their love and devotion, and those who resisted His influence were self condemned, for their hatred and opposition were manifest. This is similar to the experiences of His followers. "To the one (those that are perishing) we are a savour of death unto death; to the other (those who are being saved) we are a savour (or influence) of life unto life." (2 Cor. 2:15, 16.) Here we see again that influence is invisible; whether it be good or evil can be judged only by its visible effects.

The electric current has been compared to influence, in fact it is some kind of influence which is invisible and powerful and can be understood only as its effects are seen. Under one arrangement it will start a motor, by another it will light the car, by another arrangement it will convey sound and words from one end of the earth to the other, and by still another arrangement it will become a death dealing influence.

In like manner every human life is a force in this world either for good or evil. That invisible, mysterious and far-reaching something we call influence pours out of every life perpetually like the stars pouring out their light and power. "Canst thou bind the sweet influences of the Pleiades." (Job 38:31.)

If our lives are what the Lord wants them to be—true and spiritual—this influence will be a blessing and honour to ourselves as well as upon others who come in contact with us, and this influence will be enduring; like the sweet influences of the Pleiades it cannot and will not be restrained. "And they that be wise shall shine as the firmament and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever." (Dan. 12:2.) Although, perhaps, some of us are aware, to our sorrow, that we have at times set influences going which have not been spiritual, have not been Christ-like, yet let us endeavour to be more watchful, prayerful and self-controlled that we may never let any influence escape from us that would be regretted. When we think of our personal influence, unconscious, perpetual and pervading which can become enduring, do we feel like the Apostle Paul when he said, "Who is sufficient for these things?"

How can we command this outflow from our lives that it shall always be helpful and uplifting? We might answer this with another question. How would we pour clean water out of a bottle? First we would need to pour clean water into it. So the outflow of our lives will be blessed just in proportion as we allow the inflow of God's spirit or influence into our hearts and minds. "Be not filled with wine, but be ye filled with the spirit." (Eph. 5:18.)

In Romans 6:13 the Apostle Paul tells us how our influence can be of the right kind. He says it is by yielding ourselves unto God as those that are alive from the dead, and yield your members as instruments of righteousness and thus bring forth fruit unto holiness and the end everlasting life. It is, then, by yielding to God, yielding to His holy influence which comes to us through His truth. It was this complete submission to God's will in all Jesus' experiences that has made His life such a powerful influence in the world, and that has made Him to the saints as one altogether lovely.

The world does not read the Bible, nor come where it is expounded; all it learns about Christ and the Christian life now, it learns from those who bear Christ's name and represent Him. It is because of this that the Apostle Peter urges us to have our conduct honest among the Gentiles . . . "that they may by your good works glorify God in the day of visitation." (1 Pet. 2:12.) Let us not forget that God has given us the truth for a purpose and we are spoken of as "living epistles written not with ink but with the spirit of the living God." (2 Cor. 3:2-, 3.) Our friends, relatives and neighbours are judging our religion by its effect upon our own lives, and they will in a measure be unconsciously affected by it.

You remember that beautiful story of Ruth and Naomi. It is evident that Naomi's life, example and faithfulness to the Lord had made an impression amongst those with whom she came in contact in the land of Moab, especially upon her two daughters-in-law. It was because of this good influence proceeding from Naomi that Ruth gave utterance to those beautiful words of sympathy, love and devotion: "In-treat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God: Where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me." (Ruth 1:16, 17.)

There is a saying, "Be what you would make others." What we are ourselves--in our characters, our actions, looks, words and tone of voice—makes some impression upon others, even if we contact them only for a moment. There is something invisible, silent and mysterious conveyed to the mind of those we meet and they unconsciously also return an influence to us whether it be much or little.

In the 7th and 8th chapters of Acts there is an account of Steven's godly influence which made such a great impression upon Saul of Tarsus, the persecutor. There is no doubt that Steven's faithful witness to the truth had much to do with the conversion of Paul. The Apostle Paul knew the power of example and the influence of faith, courage, hope and love upon others, for only one living very near to the Lord and controlled by heavenly influence, together with a firm conviction of the truth, could say, "Those things which ye have both learned and received and heard and seen in me, do; and the God of peace shall be with you." (Phil. 4:9.)

We are all susceptible to spiritual impressions. How solemn a matter it is then to so live that we do not allow any influence to go forth that will cause any dishonour to God, the truth, or the brethren. Our influence, like our words, can never be recalled once it goes forth. Our Lord gave us a parable to show the far-reaching influence of error in Matt. 13:33. It is likened unto leaven. The Apostle Paul also said, "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." This illustrates how small beginnings of error or practice may work silently through the sound doctrines of truth, having a corrupting influence. Beautiful and harmonious truths are contaminated. Their original simplicity, purity and harmony have become distorted and as a result, Christendom is very spiritually sick today and ready to die. The Apostle Paul reminds us who know the truth to beware of the old spirit—the leaven of malice and wickedness—that it does not corrupt us as New Creatures, but we are to feast upon the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth. (1 Cor. 5:8.)

There are many ways in which we are continually sending out influences and others are coming to us. In some circumstances silence has a powerful influence upon another. When Jesus was accused and examined before His enemies, Pilate marvelled greatly that He answered not a word. A soft answer sometimes has the effect of breaking down the spirit of anger.

Words carry a tremendous influence; they are so easily spoken that we forget what power they leave, to give pleasure or pain; they seem to vanish so utterly the moment they drop from our lips that we forget they do not go away at all, but linger either like arrows in the heart where they struck, or like fragrant flowers, distilling perfumes. It is a lesson well worth learning to try to speak some helpful words in conversation with others—words that will give strength, hope, courage and joy.

Sorrow also has its influence. When Jesus beheld His friends sorrowful and weeping on one occasion He was affected. The record is that "Jesus groaned in spirit and wept." (John 11:33-35.)

The faithful martyrs of the past, in bearing patiently cruel tortures and by prayers for their persecutors, often influenced their enemies and by it converted some to the Christian faith. A joyful person also has a wonderful influence upon those who are gloomy and depressed.

There is influence in the mere look of an eye; it is said that a look of the eye has changed a destiny. We have an instance in Luke 22:61 where by a tender and compassionate look, a single glance of the eye, the injured Saviour brought to remembrance all Peter's promises, His own prediction and the great guilt of Peter which overwhelmed him, "and he went out and wept bitterly."

The power of life over life is startling. There have been meetings of only a moment which have left impressions for life. We cannot understand that silent, mysterious thing we call influence. It is written of our Lord that virtue went out of Him as He healed the timid woman who touched the hem of His garment. We are ourselves, ever adding to those around us health, happiness, good or evil, joy or sorrow.

Every victory over self and the world gives courage and makes it easier for another to be faithful and true. Companionship leaves an impression; even brief moments of worthy companionship leave a blessed influence.

One feels that when we come into the presence of a real, true, noble, Christ-like brother or sister it is like in Jesus' presence. The influence of such a consecrated one has a wonderful restraining and constraining power over us; there comes a consciousness of our own unworthiness, our own imperfections and we feel something like Isaiah on one occasion,—"Woe is me, for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts." (Isa. 6:5.)

Where there is holiness there is also an atmosphere which gives a kindly inspiration and stimulates one to an endeavour for purity of life; but where there is wickedness, holiness has the opposite effect—it stimulates hatred and arouses opposition.

Even an interested look in your face during a Bible study conveys an influence, an encouragement to others, especially to the chairman. This is a happy influence which builds up.

Let us all, then, be faithful to God; only then can it be true, as the Psalmist says: “The Lord will perfect that which concerneth me.” (Psa. 135:8.) If we depend upon His mercy He will not forsake the work of His hands.

Our influence is compared to the salt of the earth. “Ye are the salt of the earth, but if the salt has lost its savour wherewith shall it (the mass) be salted?” (Matt. 15:13, Luke 14:34.) Here the Lord refers to the individual Christian influence upon society and especially upon the brethren.

There is no preaching of the truth more forcible than the silent influence of a consistent, Christian character bearing the rich fruits of the holy spirit, which are love, joy, peace, forbearance, kindness, goodness, fidelity, meekness and self-control. And no preaching of the truth, however eloquent, reasonable and logical is likely to be productive of results to the glory of God if not backed by the silent, yet potent influence of a consistent Christian life,

Let us endeavour to discharge all obligations and responsibilities in all obedience, in action, words and disposition, all our days and in whatever makes influence.

“Like to sunlight—gladden, brighten all,
Quiet as the dew, which no man heareth fall;
So let thy influence be.”

Radio Witness Discontinued at 3B0.

At the close of December the Frank and Ernest broadcasts ceased over 3B0 Bendigo. While there were no doubt a good number of listeners to this station, our friends will realise that the message over the air is more in the nature of a witness than for continued service. When a witness has been given those interested can be helped with the literature. When a station covers the capital cities, however, there is much more scope of reaching new listeners from week to week. Our friends in northern Victoria who cannot hear 3GL Geelong may still receive the copies of Dialogues through the post, upon request.

One Bomb, One City.

Must Refrain From Warfare.

UNDER the above headings the following press report has appeared recently in the Melbourne “Age”:-

CANBERRA.—The only possible defence against the atomic bomb was the complete avoidance of war or, alternatively, for all populations to go underground. Professor M. L. Oliphant, the world authority on atomic energy, explained this in a public address.

The address, which was arranged by the Canberra University College, drew one of the largest attendances experienced at a public lecture in Canberra. Among the audience were diplomats, scientists and other senior public servants.

“Militarily, the atomic energy situation is now one bomb, one city,” said Professor Oliphant. “The first atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima was puny compared with what could be made to-day. Present-day bombs would be 600 times more powerful than that dropped on Hiroshima. Even the second bomb dropped on Nagasaki made the first obsolescent.”

Professor Oliphant said that if war was not avoidable there were two alternatives only. The first was the raising of a new race of underground people, or, secondly, so to disperse populations and industry so that the amount of damage done by one bomb would be made relatively small.

Stating that war itself must be made impossible, Professor Oliphant said that the atomic bomb was only one of many new weapons, although it could be called the queen of all weapons. In any future war there would be bacteriological and chemical warfare, and the whole picture of future wars would be absurd.

Headed for Suicide.

Professor Oliphant said that if man contemplated war he was heading for suicide. Warfare must be eliminated. Any power plant using atomic energy was a potential atomic-bomb factory.

The problem of using atomic energy for industrial purposes was bound up with the political question of preventing nations from misapplying the benefits of atomic energy.

Unfortunately men do not advance morally at a perceptive rate. Morally the world is little different from the days of Pharaoh or Caesar. As a result of this man must now either refrain from warfare or commit suicide.

The world will now be forced once and for all to eliminate warfare as a method of negotiation between countries, and it must learn the ways in which it is possible to use atomic energy for the good of nations.

Professor Oliphant referred briefly to industrial uses for atomic energy and said it was most unlikely that there would be any atomic motor cars.

At present in all atomic factories it was necessary to have an 11-foot thickness of concrete between the workers and the uranium, and it would be hard to imagine a car with 11 feet of concrete between the atomic engine and the driver, he said.

The above vivid account by a leading scientist of existing conditions and prospects in this "present evil world" is surely enough to make all thinking people view with great apprehension the inability of the world powers to come to any apparent agreement on great problems, after over twelve months since the close of World War Two.

The statement by Professor Oliphant "that war itself must be made impossible" is a noble gesture which, no doubt, would be supported by the great majority of mankind; but how can this be done? The following press report on December 16th last is significant in this respect:

"The U.S. Army is enclosing its 3000 Super Fortresses in individual cocoons to, prevent them rotting where they lie on scores of airfields. Each plane will be sprayed with a rubber solution containing flaked aluminium. The spraying will cost £700 a plane, but the planes are worth in all more than £800,000,000 and at present it takes more than 160 man-hours a month to check over each plane. The Superforts are regarded as one of the nation's chief lines of defence because the atomic bomb is useless without long-distance aircraft to carry it."

Thus we have, in this report, an indication of the distrust and suspicion that exists in international affairs. In other words, with selfishness uppermost in the minds of almost all mankind, including the national leaders, suspicion and distrust are at a high level, and great nations are loath to forgo any advantages they may now possess, such as the secrets of the atomic bomb. Under existing circumstances this is but natural, for even the destruction of all atomic bombs and manufacturing plant to-day would not hinder other nations producing the same dread weapon within a few years at least.

How true it is that mankind "is little different from the days of Pharaoh and Caesar," as Professor Oliphant states, and with the greatly increased knowledge in the same selfish hands, man is certainly "heading for suicide." Well did our Lord describe conditions to-day, in Luke 21:25, 26—"Upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth."

The Lord apparently sees it will be to the ultimate advantage of mankind to allow their hearts to fail still further in the greatest time of trouble ever experienced on the earth. While this will be "heading for suicide" so far as the present world order is concerned, yet it will be preparing the way for the Lord's new order which alone can and will establish peace and happiness for all mankind. It will be only when men's hearts are thoroughly humbled, through their own destructive ways, that they will be ready to hear and obey the laws of Christ's Kingdom.

Well did St. Paul describe the passing of the present earthly order of things in quoting from the Prophet Haggai, and speaking for the Lord, when he said, "Yet once more (additional to what happened in Moses' day) I shake not the earth only (social, political and financial elements) but also heaven (present church systems). And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken (margin—may be shaken) as of things that are made (manmade), that those things which cannot be shaken may remain," (Heb. 12:26, 27.) Continuing, St. Paul adds words of encouragement to the Lord's people in the next verse—"Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear."

Convention News..

THE Annual Convention held in Melbourne over the Christmas season proved most refreshing and profitable to all assembled in the name and spirit of the Lord. In reviewing this occasion it can be truly said, no doubt, that the gratitude of all in attendance ascends to the Giver of every good thing for His rich blessings throughout the gatherings.

The attendances were good throughout the four days of Convention and outdoor gathering on New Year's Day, and it was a great pleasure to the Melbourne friends to welcome so many visiting brethren, especially from Adelaide, also from Canberra and Victorian country centres. All in attendance were sorry that additional members from Canberra were unable to attend on account of illness.

The gatherings were conducted in the usual way with Bible Studies, Addresses and Fellowship Meetings and this variety in the sessions proves very successful. The passages of Scripture considered during the gatherings were as follows:—Psalms 133, 134; Luke 21:17-28; 1 Tim. 6:6-16, and 1 Pet. 1:3-12. While the time available did not allow a detailed examination of these Scriptures the main thoughts were brought out, and much instruction and encouragement was received as a result of these studies.

The addresses delivered by the brethren were especially helpful. The wide range of subjects and varied presentation of thoughts contributed greatly to the helpfulness of the gatherings. The subjects were as follows:—"Others"; "Ambition"; The holy spirit, the seal of the Christian life"; "Faith and Patience"; "2 Pet 3:11"; "Abiding Joy"; "The Second Advent and Parousia of Christ"; "Why is Peace on Earth Delayed? What Say the Scriptures?"; "Christian Influence" and "Praying, Watching, Trusting." Some of these addresses will appear in these columns in the various issues of "Peoples Paper" and in this way additional benefits from the Convention will reach our readers generally.

It was encouraging to note the very good interest shown by a nice number of new friends attending the Public Lecture arranged for the Sunday afternoon, as also during other sessions. Some of these friends freely expressed their appreciation of the message of truth heard in the Frank and Ernest broadcasts and also in the literature received. It is hoped that these new friends will continue their good interest and attend the regular gatherings in Melbourne for upbuilding in spiritual things, to the Lord's praise.

The Question Meeting provided discussion on a limited number of questions of deep interest to all, and the Praise and Testimony meetings and fellowships on "Hymns we love" gave scope for personal testimonies and praise to the Lord who had thus "crowned the year with His goodness" throughout the Convention days.

Messages of greetings from our dear brethren in other parts were delivered personally by visiting members, and also read to the assembly from more distant parts as far away as Darwin, MT., and New Zealand. All these messages were much appreciated, and the Convention greeting with warm Christian love to all the Lord's dear people is found in 1 Tim. 6:11-14. It is desired that all friends who forwarded messages to the Convention accept this Convention greeting in the name of the Lord.

Throughout the gatherings the brethren were not unmindful of fellow Christians and prayers ascended on behalf of all in every place who love the Lord and His truth in sincerity. The Convention concluded with the appropriate Love Feast and suitable hymns with prayer of gratitude to God and desiring His guidance and oversight on behalf of all who love Him, and especially those of His consecrated saints.

MORTALITY AND IMMORTALITY.

We shall find their true significance in exact harmony with what we have learned from our comparison of Bible statements concerning human and spiritual beings, and earthly and heavenly promises. These words are usually given very uncertain meanings, and wrong ideas of their meanings produce erroneous views of subjects with which they stand connected, in general and in Scripture usage.

“Mortality” signifies a state or condition of liability to death; not a condition of death, but a condition in which death is a possibility.

“Immortality” signifies a state or condition not liable to death; not merely a condition of freedom from death, but a condition in which death is an impossibility.

The common but erroneous idea of mortality is, a state or condition in which death is unavoidable, while the common idea of the significance of immortality is more nearly correct.

The word immortal signifies not mortal; hence the very construction of the words indicates their true definitions. It is because of the prevalence of a wrong idea of the word mortal that so many are confused when trying to determine whether Adam was mortal or immortal before his transgression. They reason that if he had been immortal God would not have said, “In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die”; because it is impossible for an immortal being to die. This is a logical conclusion. On the other hand, say they, Had he been mortal, wherein could have consisted the threat or penalty of the statement, “Thou shalt surely die”; since if mortal (according to their erroneous definition) he could not have avoided death anyhow?

The difficulty, it will be perceived, is in the false meaning given to the word mortality. Apply the correct definition, and all is clear. Adam was mortal—that is, in a condition in which death was a possibility. He had life in full and perfect measure, yet not inherent life. His was a life sustained by “every tree of the garden” save the one tree forbidden; and so long as he continued in obedience to and in harmony with his Maker, his life was secure—the sustaining elements would not be denied. Thus seen, Adam had life; and death was entirely avoidable, yet he was in such a condition that death was possible—he was mortal.

The question arises, then, If Adam was mortal and on trial, was he on trial for immortality? The general answer would be, Yes. We answer, No. His trial was to see whether he was worthy or unworthy of a continuance of the life and blessings already possessed. Since it was nowhere promised that if obedient he would become immortal, we are bound to leave all such speculations out of the question. He was promised a continuance of the blessings then enjoyed so long as obedient, and threatened with the loss of all—death, if disobedient. It is the false idea of the meaning of the word mortal that leads people in general to conclude that all beings who do not die are immortal. In this class they therefore include our Heavenly Father, our Lord Jesus, the angels and all mankind. This, however, is an error: the great mass of mankind saved from the fall, as well as the angels of heaven, will always be mortal, though in a condition of perfection and bliss, they will always be of that mortal nature which could suffer death, the wages of sin, if they would commit sin. The security of their existence will be conditioned, as it was with Adam, upon obedience to the all-wise God, whose justice, love and wisdom, and whose power to cause all things to work together for good to those who love and serve Him, will have been fully demonstrated by His dealings with sin in the present time.

Nowhere in the Scriptures is it stated that angels are immortal, nor that mankind restored will be immortal. On the contrary, immortality is ascribed only to the divine nature—originally to Jehovah only; subsequently to our Lord Jesus in His present highly exalted condition; and finally by promise to the Church, the body of Christ, when glorified with Him.—1 Tim. 6:16; John 5:26; 2 Peter 1:4; 1 Cor. 15:53, 54.

The proper recognition of the meaning of the terms mortal and immortal, and of their use in the Scriptures, destroys the very foundation of the doctrine of eternal torment. It is based upon the unscriptural theory that God created man immortal, that he cannot cease to exist, and that God cannot destroy him; hence the argument is that the incorrigible must live on somewhere and somehow and the conclusion is that since they are out of harmony with God their eternity must be one of misery. But God’s Word assures us that He has provided against such a perpetuation of sin and sinners: that man is mortal, and that the full penalty of wilful sin against full light and knowledge will not be a life in torment, but a second death. “The soul that sinneth, it shall die.”

The human race are God’s children by creation—the work of His hands—and His plan with reference to them is clearly revealed in His Word. Paul says that the first man (who was a sample of what the race will be when perfect) was of the earth, earthy; and his posterity, with the exception of the Gospel Church, will in the resurrection still be earthy, human, adapted to the earth. (1 Cor. 15:47, 48.) David declares that man was made only a little lower than the angels, and crowned with glory, honour, dominion, etc. (Psa. 8:4-8.) And Peter, our Lord, and all the prophets since the world began, declare that the human race is to be restored to that glorious perfection, and is again to have dominion over earth, as its representative, Adam, had.—Acts 3:21.

It is this portion that God has elected to give to the human race. And what a glorious portion! Close your eyes for a moment to the scenes of misery and woe, degradation and sorrow that yet prevail on account of sin, and picture before your mental vision the glory of the perfect earth. Not a stain of sin mars the harmony and peace of a perfect society; not a bitter thought, not an unkind look or word; love, welling up from every heart, meets a kindred response in every other heart, and benevolence marks every act. There sickness shall be no more; not an ache nor a pain, nor any evidence of decay—not even the fear of such things. Think of all the pictures of comparative health and beauty of human form and feature that you have ever seen, and know that perfect humanity will be of still surpassing loveliness. The inward purity and mental and moral perfection will stamp and glorify every radiant countenance. Such will earth’s society be; and weeping bereaved ones will have their tears all wiped away, when thus they realize the resurrection work complete.—Rev. 21:4.

And this is the change in human society only. We call to mind also that the earth, which was “made to be inhabited” by such a race of beings, is to be a fit and pleasing abode for them, as represented in the Edenic paradise, in which the representative man was first placed. Paradise shall be restored. The earth shall no more bring forth thorns and briars, and require the sweat of man’s face to yield his bread, but “the earth shall [easily and naturally] yield her increase.” “The desert shall blossom as the rose”; the lower animal creation will be perfect, willing and obedient servants; nature with all its pleasing variety will call to man from every direction to seek and know the glory and power and love of God; and mind and heart will rejoice in Him. The restless desire for something new, that now prevails, is not a natural, but an abnormal condition, due to our imperfections, and to our present unsatisfactory surroundings. It is not Godlike restlessly to crave something new. Most things are old to God; and He rejoices most in those things which are old and perfect. So will it be with man when restored to the image of God. The perfect man will not know or appreciate fully, and hence will not prefer, the glory of spiritual being, because of a different nature, just as fishes and birds, for the same reason, prefer and enjoy each their own nature and element most. Man will be so absorbed and enraptured with the glory that surrounds him on the human plane that he will have no aspiration to, nor preference for, another nature or other conditions than those possessed. A glance at the present experience of the Church will illustrate this. “How hardly,” with what difficulty, shall those who are rich in this world’s goods enter into the kingdom of God. The few good things possessed, even under the present reign of evil and death, so captivate the human nature that we need special help from God to keep our eye and purpose fixed on the spiritual promises.

Madame Guyon’s Full Surrender to the Lord.

MADAME JEANNE DE LA MOTHE GUYON was educated in convents, saved at the foot of the cross in 1668, sanctified in Notre Dame, witnessed for Jesus in the Court of Louis XIV, in France, Switzerland, and Italy, to bishops, priests, nuns and common people; was imprisoned for seven years, and died.

Of her conversion day she said: “I bade farewell forever to assemblies which I had visited, to plays and diversions, dancing, unprofitable walks and parties of pleasure. The pleasures and amusements so much prized and esteemed by the world now appeared to me dull and insipid—so much so that I wondered how I ever could have enjoyed them.” After making a full consecration she wrote: “I henceforth take Jesus Christ to be mine. I promise to receive Him as a husband to me. And I give myself to Him, unworthy as I am, to be His spouse. I ask of Him, in this marriage of spirit, that I may be of the same mind with Him—meek, pure, nothing in myself, and united in God’s will. And, pledged as I am to be His, I accept, as a part of my marriage portion, the temptations and sorrows, the crosses and contempt which fell to Him.”

Concerning her imprisonment, she wrote as follows: “I passed my time in great peace, content to spend the remainder of my life there, if such should be the will of God. I employed part of my time in writing religious songs. I and my maid, La Gautiere, who was with me in prison, committed them to heart as fast as I made them. Together we sang praises to Thee, O, our God! It sometimes seemed to me as if I were a little bird whom the Lord had placed in a cage, and that I had nothing to do now but to sing. The joy of my heart gave a brightness to the objects around me.

The stones of my prison looked in my eyes like rubies. I esteemed them more than all the gaudy brilliancies of a vain world. My heart was full of that joy which thou givest to them who love Thee in the midst of their greatest crosses.”

Prisons do not Exclude God.

Strong are the walls around me,
That hold me all the day;

But they who thus have bound me
Cannot keep God away:

My very dungeon walls are dear,
Because the God I love is here.

They know, who thus oppress me,
‘Tis hard to be alone;

But know not, One can bless me,
Who comes through bars and stone;

Praying, Watching, Trusting

(Convention Address.)

THESE three things are very necessary requisites to a Christian life. While each may have a separate or distinct bearing, all three make up a complete whole, and the longer we run in the Christian way the more we realise that the richest experience we can know is to aim at the perfect blending of all three.

To make prayer to our Heavenly Father and then not watch thereunto is like a child making a request to an earthly parent for something to satisfy a passing whim, and then almost immediately forgetting all about it; while prayers that are uttered without any faith or trust in the One appealed to are useless. On the face of it one might say that it is insensible to think that anyone would pray at all while believing that their requests could not be granted, and yet when we analyse the position we find that we have all been guilty along this line to some extent—we were inclined to limit the holy one of Israel.

First, what is prayer? We would define it as holding conversation with our Heavenly Father. Another very good definition is the oft-quoted one —"Prayer is the soul's sincere desire, uttered or unexpressed." There are times in a Christian's life when words will not come to form a prayer, a maelstrom of difficulties and perplexities assail and, in knowledge of all the way we are called to follow Jesus, we know not what to pray for as we ought, or as it behoveth us (Rom. 8:26, Young's Con) , for we do not desire to ask amiss.

On one occasion we know of (possibly there were more) our Lord would have prayed for deliverance but for the knowledge that He had been called of God to face the situation He was enduring. (John 12:27.)

Then there is another kind of prayer with which we have difficulty and against which we must guard —habitual prayer that becomes a matter of form. Whilst it is good to form the habit of prayer at regular times, such as morning, noon and night (Psalm 55:17; Daniel 6:10), let us beware that we do not become careless and indifferent in uttering such prayers. Sometimes the mind is crowded so full of little cares (earthly matters calling for decision) with body and mind weary and exhausted that when we fall upon our knees at the usual set time our mind wanders round in circles, first to this and then to that event of the day, instead of concentrating on what we are doing — holding conversation with our Heavenly Father in prayer. On such occasions a short prayer of thankfulness for mercies realised and a plea for succor and guidance might serve better than attempting a prayer of many words when body and mind hinder and forbid concentration. However, there are other times when simply to fall down and tell the Lord all about our troubles, even to details of our trials and perplexities, is a real means of unburdening our hearts and restoring reassuring calm.

Another kind of prayer, while not concerning God's true people so much but in which some of God's professing people do err, is that which is offered only when in trouble of some kind. A careful reading of Psalm 107 may be helpful to some here. In it we find reminders of the typical people's (Israel's) wanderings, as recorded in the Old Testament. The essence of the Psalm is that after mentioning the various backslidings of the people with disastrous results, then the people cried unto the Lord in their distresses and He delivered them out of their trouble. Several occasions are mentioned where this happened and afterwards each time the Psalmist says, "Oh that men would praise the Lord for His goodness and His wonderful works to the children of men," (that is, give thanks) . But no, each experience was soon forgotten and another severe reprimand in the form of some disaster became necessary to cause them to cry unto the Lord again.

One is reminded here of the passage in Luke 17:11-17 where the ten lepers were cleansed and made whole and only one returned to give thanks for deliverance. Jesus said, "Were there not ten cleansed? Where are the nine?"

Evidently they went their way enjoying the blessings bestowed without any thought of offering thanks to their benefactor. Probably He would be quite forgotten unless leprosy overtook them again.

How important are prayers of thanksgiving. All our prayers are not, or should not be, in the form of petition. When we are able to render a kindness to someone, how pleasing it is to have it recognised with a few words of thanks from the one we befriended, especially when we know that they are spoken in genuine sincerity. Not that we did it to seek gratitude from men, but it is cheering to know when one appreciates our desire to do them good. And real appreciation is easily discernible in contradistinction to that almost nauseating "Thank you," or "Thank you so much" which is uttered as so much etiquette in the business world by so many and with little or no meaning to it. We are not counselling discourtesy, but sincerity, in our giving of thanks.

Perhaps we are too dilatory ourselves sometimes in showing appreciation of kindnesses rendered. In our own homes we are inclined to accept too much for granted from our husbands, wives and families, etc. For instance, how often plans for the day are changed in the early morning — the husband may rush in to say he won't be home for lunch, "I must take it with me." And the wife has to drop all she is doing in the midst of a busy round to get that lunch cut, and probably the husband grabs it forgetting any words of thanks and merely says as he goes off, "I'll be home at such and such a time for tea, Hooray!" And how often we receive the good gifts we ask of our Heavenly Father and forget to offer prayers of thankfulness.

Then there is the prayer mentioned in Matt. 5:44 — praying for those that despitefully use us and persecute us.

Have you tried to do it? I'm afraid we hardly ever think about it. And yet there is nothing that will remove the sting of a hurt done to us more quickly than to pray to our Heavenly Father for that one. Instead of allowing thoughts of resentment, if we could only lift our eyes to God and say, "O Father, help this one who has been my enemy; perhaps he has not understood aright," a calm will come to our soul immediately and we will not say those things for which we would afterward be sorry — railing for railing. Closely related to praying for enemies is that which our Lord taught us to pray—'Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us.' Sometimes wrongs, gross wrongs are committed against us, and if later repentance is shown how freely do we forgive? Do we have a battle not to harbour resentful thoughts? It is a help at such times to remember the things we have done that must have displeased the Lord and say to ourselves, How did I ask and desire Him to forgive—grudgingly? No, we wanted Him to forget it completely—forgive us freely and fully. Then let our forgiveness of others be as full and generous. "If ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses." (Mark 11:26.) Such prayer and forgiveness is not for once only, but on every occasion when circumstances demand it — "How oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times? Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times; but, Until seventy times seven." (Matt. 18:21, 22.)

The Apostle says in Rom. 12:12 "continuing instant in prayer," and Jesus said, "Men ought always to pray and not to faint," (Luke 18:1) , and again in 1 Thes. 5:17 we read "Pray without ceasing." It would be foolish to take these texts to mean that we should spend all our time upon our knees praying to God, but it seems right to assume that it means we should be continually in a prayerful attitude of mind. Without doubt, that prayer which comes from a saint upon his knees in secluded place, away from the gaze and company of all—the closed closet (Matt. 6:6)—is a means of tremendous strength to him or her, and is also as a sweet incense rising up to the Father above. But it is not always necessary to wait till such time is convenient, nor is it the only time that we can commune with the Father. In difficulties throughout the day, the moment we recognise them it is our privilege to lift our hearts to God in prayer, even though we may be in the midst of secular labours. Simply to say from our heart "Oh my Father here-is another difficulty to face, guide me through it" will be as surely heard as the closet prayer, and when on occasions throughout the day we perceive the blessings and deliverances in difficult places we say, "Thank thee, Father, I recognise Thy hand in this," it is as surely heard as prayers of many words. To be in such continual prayerful. attitude of mind would constitute a putting on of a portion of that armour which _ the Apostle Paul counselled the Ephesian Christians to put on that they might be able to stand against all the wiles of the devil. In that list of armour which all can read for themselves in Ephesians 6, from verse 11, the Apostle finishes with the words "praying always with all prayer (of petition, thanksgiving, etc.) and supplication in the spirit."

Those who believe in Jesus as their personal Saviour, His shed blood covering all their sins, are justified freely from all things—reckoned perfect in God's sight. By then consecrating their life to the service of God, through Christ, they are brought into God's family by begetting of His holy spirit as was Jesus at Jordan. These, then, are those who pray "in the spirit" and they are really the only ones who can pray to God intelligently.

Watching.

We notice how often in Scripture watching and praying are linked together. "Watch and pray." "Watching unto prayer." "Continue in prayer and watch in the same,- we read in Col. 4:2. It seems to be another way of saying, "Don't forget to do your part." If we have prayed to our Heavenly Father aright we have thanked Him for His mercies and goodness, we have told Him of our difficulties and perplexities, and we have petitioned Him for grace, strength and wisdom to face them aright and for deliverance from all that can serve no good purpose in our spiritual interests. And if we have had to mention some great trial from which we are not sure if it would be the Lord's will to deliver us, we will have ended our prayer as did Jesus—"nevertheless, not my will but thine be done."

Now we must watch to do our part, as well as to see what the Lord will answer, and sometimes answers may be delayed. Perhaps the Lord sees it is not just the right time to grant our requests, and if there has been no indication that our prayer is contrary to His will it is surely in order to repeat our request, "for men ought always to pray and not to faint," or become discouraged.

How many parents' prayers for children have ascended above without visible answer, and yet there are cases known where after the decease of the saintly parent the child so often prayed for was converted to the Lord. And who knows how efficacious were the prayers of the departed one in finally bringing about that result.

If we ask the Lord to make us spiritually strong would we expect Him to answer our prayer if we spend much of our time and energy in worldly things? No, of course not—we would be making it impossible for Him to grant our request. We remember a lady one time who had shown good interest and desire to know more of God's truth. Knowing that it would not be easy for her to get time for reading, we said as much when giving her a book to read. Her reply showed a wonderful spirit. She said, "I make time; if I did not I would seldom get the opportunity to read books like this." She went on to explain that sometimes when it seemed just impossible to get to some reading she wished to continue, she would lay the book open on the kitchen table and read as she washed up the dishes. She said, "Maybe I don't get much read at a time, but I am able to think over well what I read in snatches that way." Don't you think that one who watched unto prayer that way would be rewarded?

An incident recorded in Acts 27 comes to mind. Paul, as a prisoner, was aboard a ship that was caught in a tempest. They lightened the ship of all they dared and' still despaired that they could be saved alive. In verse 21 we read of Paul, after long abstinence during which no doubt he prayed much, telling the people that an angel of the Lord had appeared and told him they would all reach, land safely. But that was not the signal to sit down and do nothing. No, they continued to do the best they could (largely at Paul's instruction) even at last to tipping the cargo overboard.

The Lord had not promised to save the ship or the cargo, but only those aboard, and what He promised was fulfilled — with their co-operation; they all reached land, some on boards and broken pieces of the ship, etc. They had to do what they could to the last. And what urgent need there is today particularly for watching unto prayer if we are to be counted worthy to escape all the things that are coming to pass and recorded in Luke 21.

As Paul says in 1 Thes. 5:6 we must not sleep as do others, but watch and be sober. The end of all things (concerning this age) is at hand. Are we fully awake and watchful as to the appropriateness of these words now and is it prompting us to a more holy walk — holy conversation and godliness (2 Pet. 3:11) —or are we drowsy, tending to spiritual sleepiness? Have the global wars of the last generation lost their prophetic significance to us? Is there a tendency to accept the industrial upheavals, civil wars and revolutions resulting therefrom as just news of the day—history repeating itself—instead of the very signs and signals that herald the presence of our Lord and the near establishment of His Kingdom? Will we slip back to be numbered with those to whom the Lord came as a thief in the night because we did not watch and pray, or do we diligently, by the Lord's grace, keep ourselves in the class—"Ye brethren are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief." ? (1 Thes. 5:4.)

At the first advent when John was in prison (Luke 7:19-22) he evidently began to doubt if Jesus was really the Deliverer, even though he previously had felt so sure He was the one they looked for so much. Perceive the reply of Jesus to the messengers whom John sent to inquire "Art thou He that should come or look we for another?" They were told simply to return and tell John the sick were being healed, the dead were raised, etc.,—the signs that were to herald the presence of the Lord. So, now, in the days of our Lord's second presence things have not happened as quickly as expected and the faith of some is evidently being tried. Has He , really come; are we living in the days of the Son of Man, or are we to look forward still to some momentous event that heralds His coming? It would seem that our Lord would dispel our doubts with the same message—review the signs foretold, the crumbled thrones of earth in the last few decades, the deterioration of Babylon's condition and the imminence of her fall becoming apparent not only to the saints but to all, and the fainting of men's_ hearts with fear for the inevitable result—and ,be,, not faithless but believing. -If ye do not watch I may have come upon you as a thief." (Rev. 3:3, Diaglott.), Tr'

Recall to mind Peter's bold declaration in Matt. 26 that he would never deny or desert the Lord Even. after Jesus warned him that he would=deny Him three times Peter re-affirmed it would not be so. A short time later (before the actual denials) Jesus left three (Peter included) to keep watch while He went to pray and when He came back He found them asleep. And Jesus said "What! could ye not watch with me one hour? the spirit indeed is willing but the flesh is weak—watch and pray."

What a lesson that should be for us all. The spirit or mind is willing when we consecrate all to the Lord, but the flesh is weak, and if we do not keep close to the Lord, watching unto prayer—renewing our mind toward spiritual things— we will succumb to that spiritual drowsiness that results in the light that is in us being turned to darkness again, for no man can serve two masters. (Matt. 6:23, 24.)

In Rom. 13:14 the Apostle says, "Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ and make no provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof." There is to be one Master, and as we beseech in prayer for the succor and guidance we need, let us rise from our knees ready to do our part—watching that we walk circumspectly, putting the flesh to death, making no provision for it to get the upper hand. "And what I say unto you, I say unto you all, Watch." (Mark 13:37.)

Trusting.

Having poured out our soul to the Lord in prayer and risen from our knees to diligently watch our conduct, that to the extent of our ability we enter not forbidden paths, and watching and waiting for the Lord's leading at the forked roads—the various ways where we know not clearly which path to take—it is our privilege now to be at rest through perfect trust or faith that all things will work together for our good. It should be a part of our daily lesson to cultivate trust in the Lord, and what a comforting text it is in Prov. 3:5, 6, "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart . . . In all thy ways acknowledge Him and He shall direct thy paths." Also throughout the Psalms are numerous exhortations to put trust in the Lord.

Most wonderful trust of all revealed in the Old Testament was that displayed by Job who in his deepest affliction could say, "Though He slay me yet will I trust in Him." (Job 13:15.) The Prophet Nahum 1:7 says, "The Lord is a stronghold in the day of trouble and He knoweth them that put their trust in Him." Yea, verily, though afflictions come similar to those endured by Job, the Lord knows those whose faith dies not, and like Job they shall be rewarded at the latter end.

Paul's words to Timothy in the New Testament would seem like a counterpart of Job's experience. In 2 Tim. 1:12 we read, "For the which cause I suffer these things: nevertheless I am not ashamed; for I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day." At the time Paul wrote these words "all those in Asia were turned away from him," because of his faithful witness to the truth, but his faith and trust had not failed. He was making good use of another piece of the armour before-mentioned (Eph. 6) and was quenching the fiery darts of the wicked with the shield of faith. "And this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." (1 John 5:4.)

At the time of the storm when Jesus went to His disciples' aid by walking on the water and Peter asked if he might go to Him, the Lord said, "Come." Peter went, but when he took his eyes off Jesus to look at the turbulent waters he grew afraid and began to sink. "Oh, ye of little faith," said Jesus, "wherefore didst thou doubt." And how like it is today with all the turbulent waters caused by the storm throughout the earth. If we take our eyes off Jesus in beholding the storm, we will as surely begin to waver and fear.

And so, dear fellow brethren, let us keep our eyes fixed on Jesus. Let us pray—not anxiously—but humbly, letting our requests be made known unto God, with thanksgiving for all past and present mercies; and let us watch unto prayer that we fail not to show our ready desire to co-operate to our fullest extent with the Lord's will and way. Having done this, let us rest in the Lord and wait patiently for Him to fulfil His good designs in us and in all around.

How encouraging are the words of the Psalmist recorded in Psalm 37:5, 6. "Commit thy way unto the Lord (in prayer); trust also in Him and He shall bring it to pass. And He shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light and thy judgment as the noonday,"—in due time. Yea, we shall shine forth as the sun in the Kingdom of our Father.

Prayer is appointed to convey,

The blessings God designs to give,

In every case should Christians pray, If near the fount of grace they'd live.

If pain afflict, or wrongs oppress,

If cares distract, or fears dismay ;

If want deject, if sin distress,

In every case, still watch and pray.

Depend on Him; thou canst not fail;
But ask according to His will ;

Then always shall thy prayer prevail,
And nothing shall to thee work ill.

The Lord is my Shepherd.

The story is told of a noted actor and an aged Christian who were at a social gathering. Someone suggested that the actor be asked to repeat the 23rd Psalm, the request being supported by the venerable man of God. Obliging the actor consented, and with a voice thoroughly disciplined by the most perfect elocution, all the shades of tone, all the delicate accents and meaningful inflections were goldenly evident as he repeated, "The Lord is my Shepherd."

Then, after the actor had finished, someone asked the old Christian if he would not also repeat the Psalm. Naturally timid under the spell of the actor's elocution, the Christian hesitated for a time, but finally consented. And as he finished, the faces of the company were not aglow with admiration, but hushed and rapt and washed with something akin to tears. Taking the Christian's hand in his, the magnanimous actor said to him: "I know the Psalm; you know the Shepherd."

Many of our readers have appreciated the booklet "The Lord is My Shepherd" which took the place of January "Peoples Paper" and, like the story above, it is hoped this booklet may be used to reveal the Shepherd, as well as the Psalm, to others mindful of spiritual things. Further supplies are available in single copies at 4d. each, or 3/6 per dozen, post paid.

The Three Ways.

"WIDE is the gate of destruction, and broad that way leading thither; and many are they who enter through it. How narrow is the gate of life! How difficult that way leading thither. and how few are they who find it."—Matt. 7; 13, 14,

Diaglott translation.

"And a highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called the way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein. No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon, nor be found there; but they that walk there shall be delivered." Isa. 35:8, 9.

Three ways, the "broad road," the "narrow way" and the "highway," are thus brought to our attention in the Scriptures.

THE BROAD ROAD TO DESTRUCTION.

This road is thus named because it is most easy to the degenerate human race. Six thousand years ago, as a sinner condemned to destruction, Adam (and the race represented in him) started upon this road, and after nine hundred and thirty years he reached its end—destruction.

For six thousand years the race has steadily pursued the broad, downward way. Only a few, comparatively, have tried to change their course and retrace their steps. In fact, to retrace all the steps, and reach the original perfection, has been impossible, though the effort of some to do so has been commendable, and not without beneficial results.

For six thousand years sin and death have reigned relentlessly over mankind, and driven them upon this broad road to destruction. And not until the Gospel age was a way of escape brought to light.

The teachings of Jesus and the apostles bring to light life—a restitution or restoration to life, for all mankind, as based upon the merit and sacrifice of the Redeemer; and they show this to be the significance of many Old Testament types. They also bring to light immortality, the prize of the high calling of the Gospel Church.

THE NARROW WAY TO LIFE.

Our Master tells us that it is because of the narrowness of this way that the many prefer to remain on the broad road to destruction. "Strait [difficult] is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."

Recognizing the fact that only in the divine nature is life independent, unlimited, exhaustless, ever continuous and neither produced nor controlled by circumstances, we see that of necessity Jehovah is superior to those physical laws and supplies which He ordained for the sustenance of His creatures. It is this quality, which pertains only to the divine nature, that is described by the term immortality. As shown in the preceding chapter, immortal signifies death-proof, consequently disease and pain-proof. In fact, immortality may be used as a synonym for divinity. From the divine, immortal fountain proceed all life and blessing, every good and perfect gift, as from the sun the earth receives her light and vigour.

Man has not inherent life: he is no more a fountain of life than a diamond is a fountain of light. And one of the very strongest evidences that we have not an exhaustless supply of life, in ourselves, or, in other words, that we are not immortal, is that since sin entered, death has passed upon all our race.

God had arranged that man in Eden should have access to life sustaining trees, and the paradise in which he was placed was abundantly supplied with numbers of 'every [kind of] tree' good for food or for adornment. (Gen. 2:

9, 16, 17.) Among the trees of life good for food was one forbidden. While for a time forbidden to eat of the tree of knowledge, he was permitted to eat freely of trees which sustained life perfectly; and he was separated from them only after transgression, that thereby the death-penalty might go into effect.—Gen. 3:22.

Thus the glory and beauty of humanity are seen to be dependent on the continued supply of life, just as the beauty of the diamond is dependent on the continued supply of sunlight. When sin deprived humanity of the right to life, and the supply was withheld, immediately the jewel began to lose its brilliancy and beauty, and finally it is deprived of its last vestige in the tomb. His beauty consumes away like a moth. (Psa. 39:11.) As the diamond loses its beauty and brilliancy when the light is withdrawn, so man loses life when God withholds the supplies from him. "Yea, man giveth up the ghost [life] and where is he?" (Job 14:10.) "His sons, come to honour, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them." (Verse 21.) "For there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest." (Eccl. 9:10.) But since a ransom has been found, since the death penalty has been paid by the Redeemer, the jewel is to have its beauty restored, and is again to reflect perfectly the Creator's image when the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His wings. (Mal. 4:2.) It is because of the sin-offering, the sacrifice of Christ, that "All that are in their graves shall come forth." There shall be a restitution of all things; first an opportunity or offer of restitution to all, and ultimately the attainment of human perfection by all who will obey the Redeemer.

This, however, is not the reward to which Jesus refers as the end of the narrow way. From other Scriptures we learn that the reward promised to those who walk the narrow way is the "divine nature"—life inherent, life in that superlative degree which only the divine nature can possess—immortality. What a hope! Dare we aspire to such a height of glory? Surely not without positive and explicit invitation could any rightfully thus aspire.

We learn that Jehovah, who alone possessed immortality originally, has highly exalted His Son, our Lord Jesus, to the same divine, immortal nature; hence He is now the express image of the Father's person. (Heb. 1:3.) So we read, "As the Father hath LIFE IN HIMSELF [God's definition of "immortality"—life in Himself—not drawn from other sources, nor dependent on circumstances, but independent, inherent life], so hath He given to the Son to have LIFE IN HIMSELF." (John 5:26.) Since the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, then, two beings are immortal; and, amazing grace! the same offer is made to the Bride of the Lamb, being selected during the Gospel age. Yet not all of the great company who are nominally of the Church will receive this great prize, but only that "little flock" of overcomers who so run as to obtain it; who follow closely in the Masters footsteps: who, like Him, walk the narrow way of sacrifice, even unto death. These, when born from the dead in the resurrection, will have the divine nature and form. This immortality, the independent, self-existent, divine nature, is the life to which the narrow way leads.

This class is not to be raised from the tomb human beings; for we are assured by the Apostle that, though sown in the tomb natural bodies, they will be raised spiritual bodies. These all shall be "changed," and even as they once bore the image of the earthly, human nature, they shall bear the image of the heavenly. But "it doth not yet appear what we shall be"—what a spiritual body is; but "we know that when He shall appear, we shall be like Him," and share in "the glory to be revealed."—1 John 3:2; Col. 1:27; 2 Cor. 4:17; John 17:22; 1 Peter 5:10; 2 Thes. 2:14.

Not only is this high calling to a change of nature confined exclusively to the Gospel age, but it is the only offer of this age. Hence our Lord's words, quoted at the beginning of this chapter include on the broad road to destruction all who are not on the way to the only prize now offered. All others are still on the broad road—these only have as yet escaped the condemnation that is on the world. This, the only way of life now open, because of its difficulty, finds few who care to walk in it. The masses of mankind in their weakness prefer the broad, easy way of self-gratification.

The narrow way, while it ends in life, in immortality, might be called a way of death, since its prize is gained through the sacrifice of the human nature even unto death. It is the narrow way of death to life. Being reckoned free from the Adamic guilt and the death penalty, the consecrated voluntarily surrender or sacrifice those human rights, reckoned theirs, which in due time they, with the world in general, would have actually received. As "the man Christ Jesus" laid down or sacrificed His life for the world, so these become joint-sacrificers with Him. Not that His sacrifice was insufficient and that others were needed; but while His is all-sufficient, these are permitted to serve and to suffer with Him in order to become His bride and joint-heir. So, then, while the world is under condemnation to death, and is dying with Adam, this "little flock," through the process of faith reckonings and sacrifice, already described, are said to die with Christ. They sacrifice and die with Him as human beings, in order to become partakers of the divine nature and glories with Him; for we believe that if we be dead with Him, we shall also live with Him. If we suffer with Him, we shall also be glorified together.—Rom. 8:17, and 2 Tim. 2:11, 12.

In the beginning of the Millennial age, those who now walk the narrow way will have gained the great prize for which they ran, immortality; and being thus clothed with the divine nature and power, they will be prepared for the great work of restoring and blessing the world during that age. With the end of the Gospel age, the narrow way to immortality will close, because the select "little flock" that it was designed to test and prove will have been completed. "Now is the accepted [Greek, dektos, acceptable or receivable] time — the time in which sacrificers, coming in the merit of Jesus and becoming dead with Him, are acceptable to God—a sacrifice of sweet odour. Death, as the Adamic penalty, will not be permitted forever; it will be abolished during the Millennial age; as a sacrifice it will be acceptable and rewarded only during the Gospel age.

THE HIGHWAY OF HOLINESS.

While the special hope of the Gospel age is so surpassingly glorious, and the way to it is correspondingly difficult— narrow, hedged in by hardships and dangers at every step—so that few find it, and obtain the great prize at its end, the new order of things in the age to come is to be entirely different. As a different hope is held out, so also a different way leads to it. The way to immortality has been a way which required the sacrifice of the, otherwise lawful and proper hopes, ambitions and desires—the sacrifice forever of the human nature. But the way to human perfection, to restitution, the hope of the world, requires only the putting away of sin: not the sacrifice of human rights and privileges, but their proper enjoyment. It will lead to personal purification and restoration to the image of God as enjoyed by Adam before sin entered the world.

The way back to actual human perfection is to be made very plain and easy; so plain that none may mistake the way; so plain that “the wayfaring man, and those unacquainted therewith, shall not go astray.” (Isa. 35:8.—Leeser)

; so plain that none will need to teach his neighbour, saying, Know the Lord, for all shall know the Lord from the least unto the greatest. (Jer. 31:34.) Instead of being a narrow way that few can find, it is termed “a highway,” a public roadway—not a narrow, steep, rugged, difficult, hedged byway, but a way specially prepared for easy travel— specially arranged for the convenience and comfort of the travellers. Verses 8 and 9 show that it is a public road, open to all the redeemed—every man. Every man for whom Christ died, who will recognize and avail himself of the opportunities and blessings purchased by the precious blood, may go up on this Highway of Holiness to the grand goal of perfect restitution to human perfection and everlasting life.

Thus we have found a “Broad Road,” on which at present the masses of mankind travel, deluded by the “prince of this world,” and led by perverted tastes. We have found that it was opened up and that our race was started in its headlong course upon it by “one man’s disobedience.” We have found that the “Highway of Holiness” is to be opened up by our Lord, who gave Himself a ransom for all and redeemed all from the destruction to which the “Broad Road” leads, and that it will, in due time, be accessible and easy for all the redeemed ones whom He bought with His own precious blood. We have found, furthermore, that the present “Narrow Way,” opened up by the merit of the same precious blood, is a special way leading to a special prize, and is made specially narrow and difficult as a test and discipline for those now being selected to be made partakers of the divine nature and joint-heirs with our Lord Jesus in the Kingdom of glory soon to be revealed for the blessing of all. Such as have this hope—who see this prize—may count all other hopes as but loss and dross in comparison.—Phil. 3:8-15.

The Incomparable Christ.

He came from the bosom of the Father and was born of a woman. He put on humanity that we might put on Divinity. He became a man that we might become sons of God. He lived in obscurity, only once crossed the boundary of His land, in childhood. He had no wealth or influence. His relations were inconspicuous and unimportant. In infancy He startled a King; in boyhood He puzzled the doctors; in manhood ruled the course of nature. He walked upon billows and hushed the sea to sleep. He healed the multitudes without medicine and made no charge for His services. He never wrote a book, yet not all the libraries of the country could hold the books that could be written about Him.

He never founded a college, yet all the schools together cannot boast of as many students as are His. He never practised medicine and yet He healed more broken hearts than the doctors have broken bodies. He never marshalled an army, drafted a soldier, nor fired a gun, yet no leader had more volunteers, who have under His orders made rebels stack arms and surrender without a shot being fired. Great men have come and gone, yet He lives on. Herod could not kill Him, Satan could not seduce Him, Death could not destroy Him, the grave could not hold Him.. He laid aside His purple robe for a peasant’s gown. He was rich yet for our sakes He became poor. How poor? Ask Mary; ask the wise men. He slept in another’s manger. He cruised the lake in another’s boat. He rode on another’s ass. He was buried in another’s tomb. All failed, but He never. The ever perfect One, He is the chief among ten thousand. He is altogether lovely. He is the Christ, the Son of the living God.

In Remembrance of Christ.

NOW the feast of unleavened bread drew nigh which is called the Passover." Such is the sacred narrative announcing the last Passover Supper of which our Lord partook. Once more we have the Passover with us. It is in some respects the most hallowed occasion of the year, observed by disciples of Christ as a Memorial and celebration of their Master's sacrificial death, and of their participation with Him in that death in hope of the glory to follow.

Amongst the Jews the term "passover" was frequently applied as the name of a festival week, otherwise called the Feast of Passover, beginning on the 15th day of Nisan. But we should not confound this with the frequent references to the Passover found in the Scriptures when the word "feast" is not used, which generally refers to the lamb that was killed, the Passover. For example we read, "Then came the day of unleavened bread when the Passover must be killed." Again Jesus sent disciples to inquire of a friend, "Where is the guest chamber where I may eat the Passover with My disciples?" We read again, "And they made ready the Passover."

From experience we gather that it is much more impressive and inspiring to celebrate an important matter on its anniversary—to recall the deeds and words and looks, and place ourselves with the chief actors of that greatest of all dramas which nineteen centuries ago ended at Calvary. It is always an inspiration to the devout follower of the Lord to bring before his vision the general picture of that first solemn Supper instituted by the Saviour.

Apparently it was just when the regular Jewish Passover Supper was ended that our Lord instituted the Memorial as it is recorded—"When the hour was come they sat down to eat the Passover." And Jesus said unto the disciples, "With desire I have desired to eat this Passover with you before I suffer; .For I say unto you, I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the Kingdom of God." Doubtless He longed to have them understand how it would begin to be fulfilled a little later on in that very day by the slaying of the real lamb.

Probably one reason why He specially desired to eat this Passover with them was that He there designed breaking the truth of its significance to them, to the extent that they could receive it; for, "As they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave to them, and said, Take eat: this is My body." "This is My body which is given for you: this do in remembrance of Me." "And He took the cup, and gave thanks, and said, Drink ye all of it; This cup is the new testament in My blood, which is shed for you." We cannot doubt that the design of the Master was to call their minds from the typical lamb to Himself, the Antitype, and to show them that it would be no longer proper to observe a feature of the Law which He was about to fulfil. And the bread and wine were to be to them, thereafter, elements which, as a remembrancer of Him, would take the place of the typical lamb. Thus considered there is force in the words,

"This do in remembrance of Me"—no longer kill a literal lamb in remembrance of a typical deliverance, but instead, use the bread and wine, representative of My flesh and life, the basis of the real deliverance, the real passing over. Hence, let as many as receive Me and My words henceforth—"Do this in remembrance of Me."

Taking our Lord's words in their simple obvious sense, how beautiful is their lesson. Unleavened (pure) bread henceforth would at this Memorial represent our Lord, the Bread from heaven, of which we may eat and have everlasting life. But this "bread" must be "broken" in order to be appropriated. And so we see that it was necessary not only for our Lord to come from heaven as the "Bread," but necessary also that He be broken in death—sacrificed for our sins—ere we could appropriate His merit and enjoy everlasting life.

The "fruit of the vine" was also introduced as an important part of this Memorial of our Lord's loving sacrifice. He explained that it represented His blood—"The blood of the New Covenant, shed for many for the remission of sins." What a reminder this is of the ransom-price necessary and secured on behalf of the sins of the world. The broken bread taught a part of the lesson, the "cup" taught the remainder of it.

The Lord's disciples must, by faith, partake of, appropriate, - both the "bread" and the "cup," or they cannot be one with Him. More than this: the Apostle shows that there is another subsequent view of this Memorial. We who thus eat and drink—who thus partake of our Saviour's merits—are reckoned in with Him as His "members," as His "Body," being broken and our lives sacrificed in His service, under His direction are counted as a part of His sacrifice. The Apostle's words are: "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion common union) of the blood of Christ? The loaf which we break, is it not the common union of the Body of Christ? For we, being many, are one loaf, and one Body, because we are all partakers of that one loaf (Christ) .”

The drinking of the Lord’s Cup by the Church represents our participation in the sufferings of Christ in the present time. None shall be a member of the Body of the great Mediator of the New Covenant unless he comes in now under the proper terms. The drinking of the blood, then, is the sharing of the Cup. For if we drink not of His Cup, neither shall we share with Him in His glory. He said, “Drink ye all of it.” All must drink, and the entire Cup must be drained during this Age.

It is a very great privilege that we are permitted to have a share in the sufferings of Christ. We see that our beloved Lord drank of the bitter Cup to its dregs, and did so thankfully. And we are to remember that He gave the Cup to us, that we shall all drink of it. “If we suffer (with Him) , we shall also reign with Him.” We shall participate in the inauguration of the New Dispensation, and in dispensing its blessings.

On the occasion of the institution of the Memorial of His death, the Master said, “But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of the fruit of the vine until that Day when I drink it new with you in My Father’s Kingdom.” Our Lord was here contrasting the two great Days already referred to the Day of Suffering and the Day of glory. This Gospel Age has been the Day of suffering; the Millennial Age will be the day of glory, and is especially spoken of as “the Day of Christ.”

The fruit of the vine, the literal cup, represents two thoughts. The cup of wine is produced at the cost of the life of the grape. The grape loses its own individuality. The juice is pressed out, and thus the fruit of the vine is made ready for use. “Whosoever will save his life shall lose it.” We are to lay down our lives in the Divine service. We are to submit ourselves to the crushing experiences, to be obliterated as humans and to become new creatures. So we joyfully accept the invitation to drink of His Cup. The cup of wine—the juice of the grape—represents, however, not only the crushing of the grape, but also the exhilaration that comes as the result. So in our drinking of this literal cup. To us it symbolises our Saviour’s sufferings and death, and our own participation with Him in these sufferings. But wine also represents joy, gladness, and is thus used in the Scriptures. So, in the sense in which the Lord used the words, “fruit of the vine,” in the text just quoted, it represents the joys of the Kingdom. -

After the institution of the Memorial Jesus went out into the Mount of Olives in company with the eleven. It is believed that the passage was made at midnight across the Kedron and up the slopes of Olivet into the garden of Gethsemane. It seems that the Saviour realised that He was entering this place for the purpose of fighting a great battle that was to win for Him the victory of Calvary; for out of this agony Jesus stepped calm and strong for the final hour, and herein is a great lesson for His followers: We must win our battles before we come to them, in secret prayer and gathered strength.

We observe that the Master realised that His hour of betrayal and fierce temptation was close at hand; He first comforted, counselled, and prayed for and with His disciples, and then His next strong impulse was to seek a solitary place for prayer and communion with God that He might find grace to help in this time of sore need. He wanted to see full and clear the light of His Father’s face before He stepped into the final darkness. He sought to fall into perfect submission to the will of God and feel the assuring, sustaining power of His omnipotence; He knew full well that He could then bear the cross. And, dear friends, have not all true followers of Christ realised that prayer is the highest preparation for every duty and burden? It quiets the soul and clears the vision so that the path of truth and duty can be seen. In entering any Gethsemane let us enter through the gate of prayer, and then we can endure the agony and may be able to come out calm and strong.

Leaving all but Peter, James and John at the entrance of the Garden, as a sort of outer guard against the sudden intrusion of His betrayer upon His last hour of prayer, He advanced with the three—the three in whose ardent natures He seemed to find the most active and consoling sympathy—and with an earnest appeal to them to watch and pray, He left them and went about a stone’s throw beyond.

All realise that sympathy has a wonderful power to lighten burdens. Solitary suffering is doubly hard to bear. It gives us a sense of unsupported and forsaken loneliness that kills all courage and fills us with despair. The presence of a friend rallies our energies and inspires us with new life. We may reasonably suppose that it was the simple presence of these chosen disciples that Jesus wanted, not their talk. There was nothing they could say to Him that would help Him; but their watchful waiting hear by would help Him. The best sympathy is not that which is most talkative and fussy. The silent presence, the sympathetic tear, the thoughtful, helpful act, these go deeper. There are chambers of sorrow in which voluble speech is an impertinence and silence is soothing to the soul.

Under the tress of Olivet, the Master had a good chance to think over the sequence of events that were to culminate on Calvary. The grass was cool and sweet to Him; the air was balmy and mild. The heavens of that night with all their gleaming brilliance betokened the love-light of His Heavenly Father which seemed as though it were bestowing a silent blessing upon His head. It was a time when lovers walk about in the joy of youth; but He, the greatest lover of all time—the lover of God and righteousness and truth walked alone, for the disciples had been left behind. And there, in that mighty temple of nature, Jesus had the final conflict of His earthly career. Knowing what was coming, He prayed, “O My Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from Me: nevertheless, not as I will, but as Thou wilt.” (Matt. 26:39, 42.)

How much depended upon the Lord’s fortitude in that awful hour, awaiting the certain arrival of His betrayer and

His persecutors maddened with hate and full of the energy of Satan. Oh, how the destinies of the world and of Himself seemed to tremble in the balances! Even the perfect human nature was not equal to such an emergency without Divine aid, therefore it was that He offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto Him who was able to save Him from death,—by a resurrection. The necessary comfort was provided, as foretold by the prophet Isaiah, “Behold My servant whom I uphold, Mine elect, in whom My soul delighteth . . . I, the Lord, have called Thee in righteousness, and will hold Thine band, and will keep Thee (from falling or failure) and give Thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles . . . He shall not fail nor be discouraged.”

Then, though the cup might not pass from Him, His prayer was heard and a special ministry from God strengthened Him. Just how, we know not, but probably by refreshing His mind with the precious promises and prophetic pictures of the coming glory, which none of His disciples had sufficiently comprehended to thus comfort Him in this hour when the gloom of thick darkness settled down upon His soul. It was Jehovah's hand upholding Him, according to His promise, that He might not fail nor be discouraged.

The result of that blessed ministry was a reinforced courage which commands the deepest admiration. With His eye of faith upon the glorious victory of truth and righteousness, when He should see of the travail of His soul and be satisfied—satisfied with the eternal joy and blessedness of a redeemed world, with the welcome and wealth of the Father's blessing, and the love and gratitude of every loyal creature in heaven and in earth—yes, comforted and encouraged thus with a realising sense of the rewards of faith and faithful endurance to the end, He could now calmly and even courageously go forth to meet the foe. Yes, this was the victory by which He overcame, even His faith, and so we also are to overcome.

He had passed beyond the need of His disciples' help. His victory was won. The cross was already as good as behind Him. With calm courage that feared no evil, with masterful faith that scattered the darkness of Calvary, He said, "Rise up, let us go; lo, he that betrayeth Me is at hand." Mark His calm, dignified fortitude, as He addresses Judas and the Roman soldiers, and its effect upon them. They were so overpowered with the grandeur and nobility of this wonderful man that they could not have taken Him had He not voluntarily placed Himself in their hand. Notice, too, His kind consideration for the bewildered and weary disciples, and His loving excuse for them, "The spirit truly is willing, but the flesh is weak," and His request to the Roman soldiers at the time of His arrest that they might be permitted to go their way, that so they might escape sharing in His persecutions. So through all the trial and mocking, and finally the crucifixion, His courage and solicitude for the welfare of others never failed.

Let the curtain go down on Calvary, on the darkness of the reeling crosses, on the death of God's beloved Son, the great antitypical passover Lamb. Let it go down on the weeping women, on the disciples, on the Roman soldiers and on the cruel Pharisees and scribes. Then let it rise on the glorious morning of His resurrection, when a mighty angel had rolled away the stone from the tomb, and said to those who came to embalm the body, "Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen."

How the Christian feeds on these events—the death and resurrection of Jesus! They are the very essence of life and power at the present time, just as they have been for nearly two thousand years. The feast that God has provided through His Son is to be eaten with unleavened bread—the bread of pure truth—and with bitter herbs of persecution. This feast has continued throughout the Gospel Age.

"A broken loaf—a cup of crimson wine,
On snowy table laid,

Ah! emblems these of wondrous sacrifice—
The costly price He paid!

That precious body, broken once for me,
That precious blood once spilt

For me, that I through Him might be made fret;
Aye, free—from death and guilt !

And has this broken loaf, this crimson wine,
A further meaning still?

Ah yes, through grace I am a part of Him,
His sufferings to fulfil.

My body to be broken with my Lord,
My blood with Him be shed,

And as I die with Him, with Him I live,
My ever glorious Head.

"Let a man examine himself" says the Apostle; let him see to it that in partaking of the emblems he realises them as the ransom-price of his life and privileges; and further more that he by partaking of them is pledging himself to share in the sufferings of Christ and to be broken for others. Through lack of proper appreciation of this Memorial, which symbolises not only our justification, but also our consecration to share in the sufferings and death of Christ, the Apostle says, "Many are weak and sickly among you and many sleep." The truth of this remark is evident; a failure to appreciate and a losing sight of the truths represented in this Supper, are the cause of the weak, sickly, and sleepy condition of many in the Church. Nothing so fully awakens and strengthens the saints as a clear appreciation of the atoning work of our Lord and their share with Him in His sufferings and sacrifice on behalf of humanity. "Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread and drink of that cup." These words are not to be taken in the sense of a discouragement by any sincere follower of the Master, but rather in the sense of impressing the solemnity and depth of meaning that should always be associated with the partaking of the emblems. Far from discouraging any who desire to walk in the Master's footsteps His own words are sufficient—"Come unto Me. . . . Take My yoke upon you, for My yoke is easy and my burden is light."

Let us never forget that unless we partake of His Cup, unless we are immersed into death with Him, we can have no share in His kingdom of glory; we can never sit with Him in His throne. Let us, then, count all the things of this earth as loss and dross that we may attain this Pearl of Great Price. As the experiences of our consecrated way come to us, let us not be afraid, nor "think it strange concerning the fiery trials that shall try us" for even "hereunto were we called," to suffer for our beloved Master now, and by and by be glorified together with Him in the Kingdom eternal!

Let us also at this time take warning as well as encouragement, not only from our dear Lord's life of sacrifice, but also from the lives of the Apostles who were with Him for the greater part of His earthly sojourn. We might particularly think of three; in the first place how sad is the case of Judas; we all know the terrible result of the secret, selfish desire of the natural heart which allowed Satan to fully enter, as exhibited finally in the betrayal of his Master for thirty pieces of silver, and that with a kiss. We may be sure that the details of Judas' act in this way, being recorded by the four Evangelists, is so arranged as a lasting lesson for all the Lord's people. Oh, how we each need to keep our hearts with great diligence, to preserve our first love for the Lord, for if our hearts are right and we make mistakes, which we are all prone to do, we shall soon be restored to the Lord's favour and find grace and strength to be on guard against any weaknesses in the future. Such was the case with Peter; his heart was right, and after the acknowledgment of his denial of His Master and receiving the necessary admonitions, we find that he was recovered and reestablished in the Lord's favour and confidence. The recording of Peter's denials and subsequent forgiveness of the Lord has undoubtedly been a very great help to many Christians who have been overtaken in a fault, and then sought the Lord's forgiveness with the result that, as with Peter, they have realised much strengthening of character, with greater determination to serve the Lord faithfully in all the days ahead.

Then we think of loving John, the one with whom the Lord seemed to have most fellowship of the twelve; he was ever alongside his Master, even to following Him to the judgment hall, and also to Calvary's hill, and where from the cross his Lord commended the caring of His earthly mother to his charge. Oh, that we might be more like loving John, tender-hearted, affectionate, and fully devoted to our Lord, willing, yes, cheerfully rendering our all so fully so completely to Him, to whom we belong, since we have covenanted to follow in His steps, and then willing to be used in the interests of His people and cause as He may direct.

"Let us keep the feast," then, in both senses, (1) Appropriating and feasting on the great work done for us by our Redeemer and the riches of grace granted us through Him and (2) Appreciating our privilege of joint-sacrifice with our Redeemer—laying down our lives in His service, for the brethren, and thus "filling up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ." Left behind, not because our Lord could not suffer enough for all, nor because His sufferings were not sufficient for all, but because He wished to have us with Him to share His nature and His glory, and only by suffering with Him and as His members could we be allowed to share His glory, honour and immortality.

The hour is late—the end is drawing nigh
As we gather here,

Brethren beloved, to share this holy feast,
We know the time is near

When all His loved ones shall be gathered home,
Our tears all wiped away,

And all the shadows that oppress us here
Shall yield to perfect day.

Then with rejoicing let us now partake ;
Our journey's almost o'er;

The light is breaking o'er the heav'nly hills!
Our King is at the door.

Memorial Services.

The anniversary of the institution of the Memorial of Christ's death falls this year on Thursday evening, 3rd April, after sundown, and wherever possible the Lord's people will gather together and keep the observance "in remembrance of Christ." The spirit of the Memorial is of course the most important thing and friends who may be isolated or otherwise hindered from joining others on 3rd April could well arrange another date. Brethren isolated altogether should also keep the Memorial as our Lord directed; He will no doubt add His blessing to the ones or twos as well as to the larger gatherings of His people.

The following services have been arranged to which all sincere believers in the ransom sacrifice of Christ will be welcome.

Melbourne.—Thursday, 3rd April, at 8 p.m., at 19 Ermington Place, Kew, E.4.

Geelong, Vic.—Thursday, 3rd April, at 8 p.m., at Sons of Temperance Hall, Ryrie Street.

Adelaide.—Thursday, 3rd April, at 7.45 p.m., at Willard Hall, Wakefield Street.

Sydney.—Thursday, 3rd April, at 7 p.m., at Child Study Rooms, 75 Liverpool Street (near George Street). (Fellowship also from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m.)

Easter Conventions.

Adelaide.—The usual Convention is being held again this year by the brethren in Adelaide, and they extend a hearty invitation to all friends able to gather with them for the four days, Good Friday, 4th April to Easter Monday, 7th April. The meetings are to be held in Druid's Hall, Flinders Street, Adelaide, and further information is procurable from the Class secretary—Mrs. H. Pilgrim Way Ended.

Word is to hand recently advising that Brother G. Nairn of Christchurch, New Zealand, passed under the veil on 14th March. It has been a great pleasure to hear from Brother Nairn for many years and his last letter received in February, when he had not been well for some months, revealed the same deep love for the Lord and zeal for His truth as was always manifest.

The following from one of our brethren who knew Brother Nairn personally will be appreciated by the friends. — For well over thirty years we have been in contact, passing through various testings and trials and in every case have been able to stand together for what we believed to be truth and right. Brother Nairn was one whose faith was based not upon human theory or teachings of men, but upon the impregnable rock of Holy Scripture, though he appreciated the writings and works providing the present truth to the household of faith.

Brother was “an example to believers” and a great help and encouragement to the friends in New Zealand. For some years he was able to visit the classes and isolated brethren throughout New Zealand. It was good to converse with him, for he was a developed Christian; he seemed to have the correct poise in the development of grace and knowledge, ever realising that the chief aim of a Christian's life is to become like Christ in heart and mind, disposition and character.

To have fellowship with Brother Nairn was always to be encouraged in faith and so to meet the trials on the road.

He came from Scotland about thirty-five years ago and is not forgotten by the friends there. Since ill-health and age prevented his visiting the friends in New Zealand he has been a source of strength to them by way of correspondence, and his good letters will be greatly missed by many there and here.

While “we do not sorrow as do others” and rejoice to think of him as an overcomer entering upon his reward, being “changed in a moment,” “caught away to be with the Lord,” (1 Thes. 4:13-18), yet we extend our sincere sympathy to his three daughters and son in their bereavement. To those who knew him as a Brother in Christ his life is an incentive to follow him even as he followed Christ,—Praise ye the Lord.

Hebrews 13:5

When from my life the old-time joys have vanished,
Treasures once mine I may no longer claim;
This truth may feed my hungry heart so famished,
Lord Thou remainest, Thou art still the same.

When streams have dried (those streams of glad refreshing),
Friendships so blest, so rich, so free;
When sun-kissed skies give place to clouds depressing,
Lord, Thou remainest, still my heart hath Thee.

When strength hath failed and feet now worn and weary,
On gladsome errands may no longer go;
Why should I sigh or let the days be dreary,
Lord, Thou remainest, couldst Thou more bestow.

Then through life's days, whoe'er or what may fail me,
Loves, friendships, joys, in small or great degree;
Songs may be mine, no sadness need assail me,
Lord, Thou remainest, still my heart hath Thee.

The Kingdoms of this World.

IN the first chapter of the Divine Revelation, God declares His purpose concerning His earthly creation and its government: “And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness, and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. So God created man in His own image; in the image of God created He him: male and female created He them. And God blessed them. And God said to them, Be fruitful and multiply, and fill the earth, and subdue it; and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth.”

Thus the dominion of earth was placed in the hands of the human race as represented in the first man Adam, who was perfect, and therefore fully qualified to be the lord, ruler or king of earth. This commission to multiply, and fill, and subdue, and have dominion over the earth was not to Adam alone, but to all mankind: “Let them have dominion,” etc. Had the human race remained perfect and sinless, this *dominion would never have passed out of its hands.

It will be noticed that in this commission no man is given dominion or authority over fellowmen, but the whole race is given dominion over the earth, to cultivate and to make use of its products for the common good. Not only its vegetable and mineral wealth is thus placed at man’s command, but also all its varieties of animal life are at his disposal and for his service. Had the race remained perfect and carried out this original design of the Creator, as it grew in numbers it would have been necessary for men to consult together, and to systematize their efforts, and to devise ways and means for the just and wise distribution of the common blessings. And as, in the course of time, it would have been impossible, because of their vast numbers, to meet and consult together, it would have been necessary for various classes of men to elect certain of their number to represent them, to voice their common sentiments, and to act for them. And if all men were perfect, mentally, physically, and morally; if every man loved God and His regulations supremely, and his neighbour as himself, there would have been no friction in such an arrangement.

Thus seen, the original design of the Creator for earth’s government was a Republic in form, a government in which each individual would share; in which every man would be a sovereign, amply qualified in every particular to exercise the duties of his office for both his own and the general good.

This dominion of earth conferred upon man had but one contingency upon which its everlasting continuance depended; and that was that this divinely-conferred rulership be always exercised in harmony with the Supreme Ruler of the universe, whose one law, briefly stated, is Love. “Love is the fulfilling of the law.” “Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind; . . . and thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.”—Rom. 13:10; Matt. 22:37-40.

Concerning this great favour conferred upon man, David, praising God, says: “Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; Thou crownest him with glory and honour; Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands.” (Psa. 8:5, 6.) This dominion given to mankind in the person of Adam was the first establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth. Man thus exercised dominion as God’s representative. But man’s disobedience to the Supreme Ruler forfeited not only his life, but also all his rights and privileges as God’s representative ruler of earth. He was thenceforth a rebel, dethroned and condemned to death. Then speedily the kingdom of God on earth ceased, and has not since been established, except for a short time, in a typical manner, in Israel. Although’ in Eden man lost his right to life and dominion, neither was taken from him suddenly; and while the condemned life lasts man is permitted to exercise the dominion of earth. according to his own ideas and ability, until God’s, due time for him whose right it is to take the. dominion which He purchased.

Our Lord’s death redeemed or purchased not only man, but also all his original inheritance,, including the dominion of earth. Having purchased it, the title is now in Him: He is now they rightful heir, and in due time, and shortly, He will take possession of His purchase. (Eph. 1:14.) But as He bought man not for the sake of holding him as His slave, but that He might restore him to his former estate, so with the dominion of earth: He purchased it and all of man’s original blessings for the purpose of restoring them when man is again made capable of exercising them in harmony with the will of God. Hence the reign of Messiah on earth will not be everlasting. It will continue only until, by His strong iron rule, He will have put down all rebellion and insubordination, and restored the fallen race to the original perfection, when they will be fully capable of rightly exercising the dominion of earth as originally designed. When thus restored, it will again be the Kingdom of God on earth, under man, God’s appointed representative.

The kingdom of Israel is the only one, since the fall, which God ever recognized as in any way representing His government, laws, etc. There had been many nations before theirs, but no other could rightfully claim God as its founder, or that its rulers were God’s representatives. When the diadem was taken from Zedekiah and the kingdom of Israel was overturned, it was decreed that it should remain overturned until Christ, the rightful heir of the world, should come to claim it. Thus, inferentially, all other kingdoms in power until the re-establishment of God’s kingdom are branded -kingdoms of this world,” under the - prince of this world”; and hence any claims put forth by any of them to being kingdoms of God are spurious. Nor was this, Kingdom of God “SET UP” at the first advent of Christ. (Luke 19:12.) Then and since then God has been selecting from the world those who shall be accounted worthy to reign with Christ as joint-heirs of that throne. Not until His second advent will Christ take the kingdom, the power and the glory, and reign Lord of all.

All other kingdoms than that of Israel are Scripturally called heathen or Gentile kingdoms—”the kingdoms of this world,” under the “prince of this world”—Satan. The removal of God’s kingdom in the days of Zedekiah left the world without any government of which God could approve, or whose laws or affairs He specially supervised. The Gentile governments God recognized indirectly, in that He publicly declares His decree (Luke 21:24) that during the interregnum the control of Jerusalem and the world should be exercised by Gentile governments.

This interregnum, or intervening period of time between the removal of God’s sceptre and government and the restoration of the same in greater power and glory in Christ, is Scripturally termed “The Times of the Gentiles.” And these “times” or years, during which the “kingdoms of this world” are permitted to rule, are fixed and limited, and the time for the re-establishment of God's Kingdom under Messiah is equally fixed and marked in Scripture.

Even as these Gentile governments have been, they were permitted or "ordained of God" for a wise purpose. (Rom. 13:1.) Their imperfection and misrule form a part of the general lesson on the exceeding sinfulness of sin, and prove the inability of fallen man to govern himself, even to his own satisfaction. God permits them, in the main, to carry out their own purposes as they may be able, overruling them only when they would interfere with His plans. He designs that eventually all shall work for good, and that finally even the "wrath of man shall praise Him." The remainder, that would work no good, serve no purpose or teach no lesson, He restrains.—Psa. 76:10.

Man's inability to establish a perfect government is attributable to his own weaknesses in his fallen, depraved condition. These weaknesses, which of themselves would thwart human efforts to produce a perfect government, have also been taken advantage of by Satan, who first tempted man to disloyalty to the Supreme Ruler. Satan has continually taken advantage of man's weaknesses, made good to appear evil, and evil to appear good; and he has misrepresented God's character and plans and blinded men to the truth. Thus working in the hearts of the children of disobedience (Eph. 2:2), he has led them captive at his will and made himself what our Lord and the apostles call him—the prince or ruler of this world. (John 14:30; 12:31.) He is not the prince of this world by right, but by usurpation; through fraud and deception and control of fallen men. It is because he is a usurper that he will be summarily deposed. Had he a real title as prince of this world, he would not thus be dealt with.

Thus it will be seen that the dominion of earth, as at present exercised, has both an invisible and a visible phase. The former is the spiritual, the latter the human phase—the visible earthly kingdoms measurably under the control of a spiritual prince, Satan. It was because Satan possessed such control that he could offer to make our Lord the supreme visible sovereign of the earth under His direction. (Matt. 4:9.) When the Times of the Gentiles expire, both phases of the present dominion will terminate: Satan will be bound and the kingdoms of this world will be overthrown.

The fallen, blinded, groaning creation has for centuries plodded along its weary way, defeated at every step, even its best endeavours proving fruitless, yet ever hoping that the golden age dreamed of by its philosophers was at hand. It knows not that a still greater deliverance than that for which it hopes and groans is to come through the despised Nazarene and His followers, who as the Sons of God will shortly be manifested in kingdom power for its deliverance.—Rom. 8:22, 19.

The world is fast coming to realize that the "kingdoms of this world" are not Christlike, and that their claim to be of Christ's appointment is not unquestionable. Men are beginning to use their reasoning powers on this and similar questions; and they will act out their convictions so much more violently, as they come to realize that a deception has been practised upon them in the name of the God of Justice and the Prince of Peace. In fact, the tendency with many is to conclude that Christianity itself is an imposition without foundation, and that, leagued with civil rulers, its aim is merely to hold in check the liberties of the masses.

O that men were wise, that they would apply their hearts to understand the work and plan of the Lord! Then would the present kingdoms melt down gradually—reform would swiftly follow reform, and liberty follow liberty, and justice and truth would prevail until righteousness would be established in the earth. But they will not do this, nor can they in their present fallen state; and so, armed with selfishness, each will strive for mastery, and the kingdoms of this world will pass away with a great time of trouble, such as was not since there was a nation. Of those who will be vainly trying to hold to a dominion which has passed away, when the dominion is given to Him whose right it is, the Lord speaks, urging that they are fighting against Him—a conflict in which they are sure to fail. He says:

"Why do the nations tumultuously assemble, and the people meditate a vain thing? The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together against the Lord, and against His Anointed, saying, Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us. He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh: the Lord shall have them in derision. Then shall He speak unto them in His wrath, and vex them in His sore displeasure [saying], I have anointed My king upon My holy hill of Zion. . . . Be wise now, therefore, O ye kings: be instructed, ye judges of the earth. Serve the Lord with fear and rejoice with trembling. Kiss [make friends with] the Son [God's Anointed] lest He be angry, and ye perish in the way; for His wrath may soon be kindled. Blessed are all they that take refuge in Him."—Psa. 2:1-6, 10-12.

The Palace Beautiful.

The Bible is like unto a magnificent palace constructed of precious oriental stone, comprising sixty-six stately chambers. Each one of these chambers is different from its fellows, and is perfect in its individual beauty, while together they form an edifice incomparably majestic, glorious and sublime.

In the book of Genesis we enter the grand Vestibule, where we are immediately introduced to the records of the mighty work of God in creation. This Vestibule gives access to the Law Courts, passing through which we come to the Picture Gallery of the historical books. Here we find hung upon the walls, scenes of battles, heroic deeds, and portraits of valiant men of God. Beyond the Picture Gallery we find the Philosopher's Chambers—the Book of Job—passing through here, we enter the Music Room—the Book of Psalms—and here we linger, thrilled by the grandest harmonies that fall on human ears. Then we come to the Business Office—the Book of Proverbs—in the very centre of which stands the motto, “Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people.” Leaving the Business Office we pass into the Research Department—Ecclesiastes—and thence in to the Conservatory—the Song of Solomon— where the fragrant aroma of choicest fruits and flowers: And the sweet singing of birds greet us. We then reach the Observatory where the Prophets with their powerful telescopes are looking for the appearing of the “Bright and Morning Star.” Crossing the courtyard, we come to the Audience Chamber of the King—the Gospels—where we find four life-like portraits of the King Himself, revealing the perfections of His infinite beauty. Next we enter the workroom of the holy spirit—The Acts of the Apostles—and beyond that the Correspondence Room—the Epistles— where we see Paul and Peter, James, John and Jude, busy at their tables under the personal direction of the spirit of truth. Finally, we enter the Throne Room—the Book of Revelation—where we are enraptured by the mighty volume of adoration and praise which is ever addressed to the enthroned King, and which fills the vast Chamber; while in the adjacent Galleries and Judgment Hall are portrayed solemn scenes of judgment and wondrous scenes of glory.

The Holy Spirit of Power, of Love and of a Sound Mind.

(Convention Address.)

“God has not given US the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind.” (2 Tim. 1:7).

IN this text the Apostle is discussing the character of this spirit which God has given us. It is not the spirit of fear, nor the spirit of dread, nor the spirit of timidity. Where the spirit of selfishness is, there is more or less fear accompanying it. It was the spirit of fear which impelled our first parents to hide themselves from the Lord (Gen. 3:

10). So all down through the ages, the spirit of fear has exerted a powerful influence upon mankind. All fear, being a manifestation of one form of selfishness, is made up of the elements of self-love. People fear lest they may lose some of the things which they selfishly desire to retain. The spirit which actuates many of the heathen, as well as many in Christian lands, is a spirit of fear. They are serving God not from a desire to be co-laborers in His work, but from fear. They have been taught that they ought to go to church; they know not what God might do to them if they were to neglect to go. Some have said, “If, I believed that there is no eternal torture, I would do all the wicked things imaginable.” They show by these words that they are not impelled by a holy spirit, but by a spirit of fear, a spirit that belongs to sin. The spirit of fear does not come from God.

There is, of course, a holy fear—a fear to do anything to offend God, or to offend a friend. And we ought to be afraid of offending a friend, afraid of hurting or injuring a friend or anybody. If we love our Heavenly Father, we ought to fear to do anything to displease Him. In Heb. 4:1, the Apostle says, “Let us fear, lest a promise being left us of entering into His rest, any of you should seem to come short of it.” Let us not fear evil but let us fear lest we fail to attain the blessings promised to the overcomers. God will give those blessings only to those who reach a certain development of character. But the fear of the world is wholly improper. If any of the Lord’s people have that fear they have received it from some other source than the spirit of Truth.

The Apostle proceeds to tell us what this spirit of the Lord has brought to us. It has been a spirit of power, of courage. All who are seeking, to walk after the spirit and have a knowledge of the Lord’s love He will not forsake, but will deliver them from evil. These have a courageous spirit, or influence of mind proceeding from this spirit of power. It gives them such energy that they, are able to do more than otherwise they could. They have the peace of God to rule in their hearts, and His spirit works in them to cause them to will and to do His good pleasure.

The child of God who is filled with the holy spirit is a giant in comparison with his own natural self; because his fears are quelled his heart is established, his faith is rooted and grounded, and his soul is anchored sure and steadfast within the wail. Thus he is held from being driven back on to the rocks of disaster when the stormy winds of trouble prevail. The holy spirit is thus a power to those who possess it, which has often caused amazement to their enemies. The gospel of Christ usually takes hold upon the weaker ones who feel their weakness and who realise more than do the stronger their need of help. Yet such is the transforming influence of the holy spirit upon those who receive it, that in their weakness they are made strong. The weak things of this world are made mighty through God (through the spirit, the power of God) to the pulling down of strongholds of error and sin, and to the endurance of a good fight as good soldiers of the Lord Jesus Christ. (1 Cor. 1:27; 2 Cor. 10:4; 2 Tim. 2:3, 4).

This was true in time past, when the weak ones of the world espoused the cause of Christ, and were firm to the very end of life, as martyrs, enduring unwaveringly trials and difficulties before which the strongest of the world quailed. And the same thing is still true of the same class, for although the particular features of persecution have greatly changed, nevertheless it is still necessary to “endure hardness as good soldiers,” and to “lay down our lives for the brethren,” and the weak things of the world, yea, those that are naught, whom God hath chosen, are still confounding the wisdom and might of this world. (1 Cor. 1:27, 28; Isa. 40:28-31; Psa. 29:11; Psa. 27:14).

This spirit of God in His people is not only a spirit of power, but a spirit of love, says the Apostle. The love here mentioned is not the natural love possessed to some extent by all mankind, and even by the brute creation—in large measure a spirit of selfishness. In those who receive the holy spirit of love this natural love should become intensified, broadened, deepened, and should more and more lose its selfish characteristics, and become a generous love, a self-sacrificing love, based not upon selfishness but upon principles of righteousness, truth, goodness, and the possession of the spirit, disposition of God. And this spirit of love should continue increasing and abounding more and more, until that which is perfect is come and that which is in part will be done away. So we find that those who receive the truth are very different from what they were before they had received its spirit; and as a rule their neighbours and friends discern the change. All who have been in the school of Christ become better people than they have ever been before. They are not necessarily better looking, but the spirit of the Lord helps them to keep their clothes tidy and neat. It helps them to be more particular as to what they say and how they say it. It influences their words, actions, conduct—everything. It makes them more patient and brotherly-kind. All these qualities are manifested increasingly.

We are to receive more and more of the spirit of love. The love of God is to be shed abroad in our hearts. We must carefully and patiently cultivate and exercise the spirit of love in its various phases—mercifulness, long suffering, kindness, lowliness, meekness, self-control, etc. (Rom. 12:9, 10; Col. 3:12-14; 1 John 3:14, 16-18; 1 John 4:7-13, 16-21.).

In proportion to the measure of the holy spirit which we have, we shall have love, first, toward God; secondly, to the children of God; thirdly, to our neighbours and friends, and lastly it will extend even to our enemies. It would lead us to be considerate of birds and beasts also. The spirit of love has a generally benevolent influence. Whatever affects the thoughts is sure to affect the words. Whoever has the spirit of love will manifest its influences and will become more loving and more loveable as that spirit increases. (2 Tim. 1:5; 1 Thes. 3:12; 2 Thes. 3:5; Luke 11:9-13.).

In our text the Apostle assures us that God gives us also the spirit of a sound mind. When God created man He gave him a well-balanced mind, Adam and Eve did not need an outward record of God's law; they had the sense of right and wrong so well defined in their minds that they knew right from wrong instinctively. But when they fell, by disobeying God, they lost this balance of mind.

As we come down the centuries from their day to ours, we find that this keen sense of right and wrong has become dull. Today we see the indications of the spirit of an unsound mind on every hand. We find people worshipping bonds, stocks, giving the best of their time to the worship of Mammon. They do not know what they are doing. These people are well illustrated in Bunyan's picture of the man with the muck-rake in his hand, drawing to himself straws, small sticks and the dust of the floor. Above his head was one with a celestial crown in his hand. This crown he proffered to the man in exchange for the muck-rake, but the man neither looked up, nor regarded what was said.

Today we see some who use muck-rakes, gathering all the trinkets of life, not knowing what to do with them after they have been accumulated. The Lord's people have the spirit of a sound mind, but the man who was raking for sticks and straws and dust lacks the spirit of a sound mind. More or less we see all around us the spirit of an unsound mind, overlooking the things that are really valuable and grasping at trifles.

There is no more wonderful manifestation of the holy spirit in the Lord's people than that which the Apostle denominates "the spirit of a sound mind." The Lord's people, by nature, are not more sound of mind than are the world's people. Quite the contrary. The tendency of the Gospel is to attract the more imperfect who realise their own impotency and their need of grace and strength from on high, rather than to influence those who are of stronger and sounder minds, who, comparing themselves with others, have a self-satisfied, self-righteous spirit of mind.

But whenever the Truth is received into good and honest hearts and brings forth its legitimate fruitage, and the Lord's people become partakers of His holy whether naturally strong or weak, they thereby obtain the "spirit of a sound mind";—their judgments are clearer, truer, more trustworthy, than before, because they have before their minds, first of all, the explicit directions of the Lord's Word in respect of what they should do, and what they should not do,—directions which cover almost every feature and aim of life. Those who have accepted the Lord as their instructor and teacher, and who have His spirit of obedience to the Father's will, have the "spirit of a sound mind," because they do not trust merely to their own understanding, but by obedience to the Lord's directions they are preserved in the vicissitudes of life from the snares and difficulties which befall those who have not the guidance of superhuman wisdom.

The question arises; How, or wherein, does the impartation of the holy spirit to the Christian serve to repair his judgment, and become to him the spirit of a sound mind? The answer is—the divine mind is perfect, absolutely "sound," and consequently to whatever extent Christians are able to set aside their own minds or judgments, on any or all matters, and to accept instead the divine mind, will, judgment, for the control of their lives, to that extent they will have the spirit or disposition of a sound mind—God's mind. We do not mean that the brains of Christians undergo a change or a reversal of the order of nature in their operation, but that under the guidance of the holy spirit, the spirit of the Truth, such learn gradually to rectify the errors of their own judgments in respect of all the various questions which come before them, to harmonise with the teaching of the holy spirit through the Word of God. (Prov. 3.).

What we and all mankind need is a sound mind, but the time for the general healing of the world's mental and physical ailments at the hands of the Great Physician is the Millennial Age, when fully introduced; but that age cannot be introduced and its relief and blessings cannot come until the due time. Meantime, however, the called-out Gospel Church obtains, through her Lord and His Word, His holy spirit—the spirit of His sound mind, which is the same as the Father's mind or spirit. And in proportion as each member utilises his privileges in this connection he will be helped over the natural mental and physical troubles which beset us in common with the whole world of mankind.

The Word of the Lord, through the Apostle, directs us thus—"I say . . . to every man that is among you not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly (not according to the flesh, but according to his new nature) according as God has dealt to every man the measure of faith." (Rom. 12:3.) It is a life work with many to conquer their too high appreciation of themselves, and to obtain the spirit of a sound mind as respects their own talents, but they are assisted in this work of rectifying their pride by the words of the Master—"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." They are assisted also by the words of the Apostle, "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace (favour) to the humble." "Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that He may exalt you in due time." (Matt. 5:5; James 4:6; 1 Pet. 5:5, 6.).

As a matter of fact, however, not many great, nor many wise, according to the course of this world and according to their own estimation of their own wisdom, hath God chosen, but rather the poor of this world, rich in faith—those who trust not to their own wisdom, nor to their own righteousness, but accept Christ as their wisdom, their justification, their all.

Those who are too humble (too lacking in self-confidence) are encouraged and uplifted and made useful to themselves and to others by the same spirit of truth which reproves and corrects, those who are over-confident, self-assertive, self-conscious, self-conceited. The former are encouraged by assurances of God's aid; the latter are restrained, moderated, brought into subjection and taught what is pleasing to God and helpful to themselves. As the Apostle says, "If any man (confidently) think that he knoweth anything (of his own wisdom), he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know." (1 Cor. 8:2.). But transformations of character come not from saying, "Lord, Lord," nor from having a Bible in one's possession; nor from joining a human organisation called a church, but from joining Christ and receiving from Him the spirit of His Word, the spirit of truth, the spirit of holiness, the spirit of a sound mind—His holy spirit and the Father's.

The man who has, by the grace of God and his own acceptance of that grace, come into possession of the spirit of a sound mind, has much advantage every way over the remainder of mankind; for the spirit of a sound mind is a spirit of wisdom. Such a one values more correctly than others the things of this life—wealth, fame, social position, etc. From his new standpoint he sees things connected with all these which others do not notice. His mind, instructed from the Lord's Word, discerns that if he should amass all the wealth of the world, he could take none of it with him when he dies. He sees that fame is a very hollow and very transitory thing. He sees that society is very shallow, and its professions of esteem, etc., often insincere. The children of God, now begotten of the holy spirit to the "high calling" of this Gospel Age, have something offered to them which attracts their minds away from the trifles and delusions which captivate and often frenzy the minds of mankind in general. Theirs are higher joys, higher ambitions for a higher social standing, for greater riches and for a Kingdom—for heavenly riches and a heavenly and eternal Kingdom. The ambitions inspired by these heavenly promises are holy ambitions, full of mercy and good fruits, and operate along the lines of love, while the operations of the earthly ambitions are along the lines of selfishness.

The man or woman whose aim is lifted from these earthly toys and vanities and ambitions, and placed upon the heavenly, certainly has much better opportunities for exercising a sound judgment in respect of all the affairs of this present life, because he looks upon them from a comparatively disinterested standpoint. He is in the world, and obliged to live and provide things needful, decent and honest in the sight of all men; but being relieved of inordinate ambitions toward worldly things he is proportionally relieved from the pressure of avarice, covetousness, pride, etc., and the better enabled to think and to act justly, and to exercise kindly sympathy toward all. This spirit of a sound mind, or better judgment of the experienced Christian, is a new mind or disposition begotten in him from above by the exceeding great and precious promises of the Word of the Lord. (2 Pet. 1:4.). He is thus helped by the spirit or disposition of a sound mind, the holy spirit of the Lord. His mind will be sound in proportion as he receives and is filled with the holy spirit, and this will be rapid or slow in proportion as his love for the Lord and His righteousness is fervent or cool.

When the present life is viewed from the standpoint of the holy spirit, presented in God's Word, it is seen to be but a schooling season, a preparation for a future life for all who see that prize and hear the "call." However, only those whose eyes are opened and who see from the inside can realise how unwise is the course of the majority of the world, who, so far from curbing their own selfish propensities, and Cultivating the nobler and truer elements of their fallen natures, are in many instances undermining character, and leaving the world at death weaker in character than when they were born into it.

On the other hand, while the Word of God and the holy spirit of that Word restrain our ambitions for earthly riches, and assure us that the "love of money is the root of all evil," (1 Tim. 6:10), they protect us from the opposite extreme of slothfulness, indolence, instructing us that each should provide things honest in the sight of all men, and especially for the necessities of his own household. They exhort us to be "Not slothful in business, but fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." (Rom. 12:11). Thus, those who have the Lord's Spirit are guarded against the folly of those who spend their life with Bunyan's "muck-rake," gathering to themselves treasures of no real worth; they are also guarded against the unsoundness of indolence and exhorted to be energetic in all good services which will be helpful to humanity and which will meet with Divine approval and be accepted as a service "done unto the Lord," which will have His abundant reward in the life everlasting.

The spirit of a sound mind sees in the present life opportunities for the attainment of riches of character, riches of grace, and for the laying up of treasures which neither moth nor rust will consume, but which will be enduring—eternal joys. Not that the spirit of a sound mind leads us to live in the future to the neglect of the present; rather, it lives wisely in the present by keeping in memory the future.

The spirit of a sound mind broadens and deepens character along all its good lines; it not only helps its possessor to take correct views of himself, but also to take correct views of his fellows in degradation, and it enlarges his sympathies. He realises the impairment of his own mind and body through the fall, and his own need of mercy and helpful correction, as well as the similar derangement of the whole world of mankind and the general need for sympathy and aid for correction. As he learns to rectify the deficiencies and inequalities of his own mind, he sympathises the more with others who are without this regulating principle, this spirit of a sound mind, and who are hindered from accepting it by reason of the opposition of the Adversary, "the god of this world," who blinds the minds of them that believe not, lest the glorious light of divine goodness, in the face of Jesus Christ, should shine into their hearts and should bring to them the spirit of a sound mind (2 Cor. 4:4.).

In proportion as he develops in this holy spirit of sonship, "a new creature in Christ Jesus," he becomes, through its operation, gradually more patient, more loving—more Godlike. And these benevolences of character will affect not only the outward acts of his life, but also his words and his thoughts. In proportion as this holy spirit discountenances a dishonorable or dishonest action, in the same proportion it discountenances a dishonorable or a dishonest word in respect of friend or neighbour or enemy; and similarly, it discountenances the slightest injustice or unkindness of thought to any of these.

The one possessed of this spirit of a sound mind, the holy spirit, the spirit of love, will, in proportion as he comes into possession of it, be less touchy in respect of his own rights, privileges, preferments, and more considerate for the rights and feelings and preferences of others. The will of the Lord must, of course, stand first, but next to pleasing the Lord he will take pleasure in pleasing others with whom he may come in contact, especially those of his own family; and in harmony with this desire to serve and to please the Lord first, and then the Lord's family, and all men as he may have opportunity, his thoughts will operate, his words be guided and regulated, and his conduct shape itself.

It is doubtless true that on whatever plane of mental decrepitude, immortality or unwisdom, the truth and grace of God shall reach a man or woman it will lift up and make him or her the nobler, the purer, the kinder, the gentler, the more considerate of others—in proportion as he or she receives this new mind, the spirit of a sound mind.

We do thank God for this gift He has given us—the gift of His holy spirit in our hearts—the spirit of power, and of love, and of a sound mind. We realise that this blessing has come to us because we are abiding in Christ. Let us strive by earnest faith and prompt obedience to the Word and spirit of the Lord to cultivate and increase in our hearts the fruits of His spirit, so that we may be developed more and more and ultimately be counted among those who will hear those words of commendation from the Master—“Well done good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord.” Only the servants and handmaids of the Lord have yet received this holy spirit of God—this spirit of a sound mind. Thank God the time is near when through the ministries of these servants and handmaids, glorified and empowered with the King of glory, all the world shall be blessed and the Lord shall pour out His holy spirit, the spirit of power, and of love, and of a sound mind, “upon all flesh.”

We would see Jesus—for the shadows lengthen,
Across this little landscape of our life;
We would see Jesus, our weak faith to strengthen,
For the last weariness—the final strife.

We would see Jesus—the great Rock foundation,
Whereon our feet were set with sovereign grace;
Not life, nor death, with all their agitation,
Can thence remove us, if we see His face.

We would see Jesus—other lights are paling,
Which for long years we have rejoiced to see;
The blessings of our pilgrimage are failing,
We would not mourn them, for we go to Thee.

We would see Jesus—this is all we’re needing,
Strength, joy, and willingness come with the sight:
We would see Jesus, dying, risen, pleading,
Then welcome, day! and farewell, mortal night.

Convention News.

Adelaide

THE Easter Convention at Adelaide was once more a happy and helpful season of spiritual refreshment and blessing. The four days from Good Friday to Easter Monday were well occupied in afternoon and evening meetings, and the Lord's blessing was surely upon the gatherings.

We were glad to welcome some brethren from Melbourne and from the country -in South Australia.

The Bible studies which occupied our thoughts were from John 15:1-21; Heb. 2:1-9, and 1 Cor. 13:1-13.

The topics of the: addresses by various brethren were as follows:—"Some Thoughts on Christ's Resurrection"; "Running the Race"; "What Hast Thou Done?"; "Some Thoughts from 2 Tim. 1:7"; "Is there Hope of Deliverance from Present Distress of Nations?"; "Think on These Things"; "Exhortation in Philemon," and "The Brotherhood of Christ."

Also a Praise and Testimony meeting; a Question meeting; a discussion on "What Scriptures are most applicable for today?" and a fellowship meeting with "Hymns we love," added to the interest and helpfulness of the occasion.

We were pleased to receive messages of Christian love and greeting from various Classes and brethren; and the message sent by the Convention to the Classes and friends is found in 1 Cor. 16:13, 14.—"Watch ye; stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong; Let all your things be done with _charity."

Earnest students of God's Word are well aware of the significance of the times in which we are now living. The signs both in the church and in the world surely indicate that we are fast approaching the end of the age—the end of the harvest period. "The harvest is the end of the age." The Convention gatherings do help us to be alert and zealous, seeking by the Lord's grace to "make our calling and election sure," by giving "the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip.

The Convention closed with the usual Love Feast, and singing the hymns "Blest be the tie which binds," and "God be with you till we meet again," and with prayer of thanks to the Giver of every good gift for His blessings bestowed, and for His grace and strength to help us in the days ahead that we may bring forth much fruit to His praise. "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Sydney

On looking back we all find that the Convention just closed has been a great blessing to all who attended it. Judging it from a worldly standpoint it would be pronounced "a poor show," for the world always judges by numbers, but viewed from a spiritual standpoint it attained a mark to which the world can never attain.

The attendance grew slightly over the three days from Good Friday with 20 present on Easter Sunday. We had the pleasure of the company of friends from Canberra and Glenbrook, as well as a dear Sister who so valiantly works in the radio witness, and a dear old Brother among us again after some years of ill health. Altogether the tone of the gatherings was very high.

The addresses were very helpful and uplifting. The first on the subject "Think on These Things," was a great aid in the purification of heart and mind. The next on "Universal Joy" brought home to our minds the great love of God for the church and for the world as outlined in His divine plan. Another address on "The Reign of Christ" recalled the importance of the Kingdom, while the following address on "The Signs of the Present Time," exhorted us not to grow apathetic but continually to look for and desire Christ's Kingdom. A further address was very helpful and uplifting also, being based on the grace of God and how it is only by a realisation of the ransom that we began to appreciate our need of salvation and other related subjects. The closing address pointed out that though parting was sad, and, under present conditions inevitable, we were all looking forward to that great General Convention, beyond, which would be eternal, and where there would be no more parting.

On Sunday afternoon a half hour session was devoted to "Hymns we love," during which friends suggested a verse or two of a hymn which was sung and then a little testimony was given in connection with it.

Finally, we wish to place on record the wonderful co-operation of the friends from Canberra and Glenbrook without whom the high mark of success of this Convention could not have been achieved, also the zealous work of the dear Sisters who laboured so hard to provide the amenities and the music for these gatherings. To all these dear colabourers may the Lord give His richest blessings.

Perth -

At Easter time a very helpful Convention was held in Perth from Good Friday to Easter Sunday. We were glad to see some visitors from other parts and feel assured that the fellowship was of benefit alike to members of the Perth Class and visitors.

On Friday afternoon the programme provided for a study on 2 Cor. 5:16-19. The fellowship session taken at teatime was along the lines of "My favourite Manna Text," and was very helpful. In the evening a symposium had been arranged—four brethren speaking on Matt. 7:13-29, a few verses being allotted to each brother.

The Saturday session was held at the home of one of the brethren. The study was on Eph. 4:14-21, and in the evening three addresses were given on the subjects "What is our Sabbath?"; "What is our Baptism?" and "What is our Hope?"

Sunday, April 6th was the closing day. In the afternoon our study was from Zechariah 14:1-9. Tea was followed by a Praise and Testimony meeting, and in the evening the final address was given the subject being—"What the spirit saith unto the Churches" (Rev. 2 and 3).

Messages of goodwill from Classes in three of the Eastern States and from individual members were much appreciated. A very helpful Convention closed with the singing of the hymn "God be with you till we meet again."

Memorial Observances.

Melbourne

THE brethren in Melbourne gladly gathered on the evening of 3rd April to observe the Memorial of Christ's death in harmony with His request to "Do this in remembrance of Me."

Studies over the previous weeks had refreshed the minds of all on the significance of this solemn service instituted by our Lord on the night in which He was betrayed.

Appropriate hymns and prayers, with Scripture readings from the Gospels of Matthew and John, and an address covering particularly the last hours of our Redeemer's earthly course assisted all present to view again the death of Christ in its truly sacrificial sense as "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world." The deeper significance of the Memorial, as revealed by St. Paul, whereby the consecrated followers of Christ were privileged to sacrifice their lives in the same manner as their Lord was impressed again; thus from the primary and deeper standpoints those observing the Memorial "show forth the Lord's death till He come."

Following the prayers for the Lord's blessing upon the emblems and upon the other dear members in Christ everywhere, the brethren partook thankfully of the bread and wine in silent contemplation of the solemn vows once again symbolised before the Lord and in the presence of His people, to be kept faithfully, by His grace and strength, to the close of the pilgrim way. It was a joy to have some newly consecrated members present to partake of the Memorial for the first time.

Geelong, Vic.

On Thursday evening, April 3rd, a little band of those who love the Lord met together to obey His injunction to "do this in remembrance of Me."

Studies in Exodus 12 on two previous Sundays, together with readings that night in Mark 8:27-38; Matt. 26:17-20, 26-29; 1 Cor. 11:23-36; 10:16, 17; Luke 22:7, 14-20, and a short address that called to mind what our Saviour's sacrifice meant to us, rehearsed His last days and hours on earth and tracing our relation to those experiences as His followers, sought to bring us humbly and reverently to the table of the emblems, which were partaken of in a manner strictly adhering to that instituted by our Lord and made known to us by the Apostle Paul.

The singing of hymn 166 (B. S. Hymnal) dismissed our gathering in which we were strengthened by His grace to endure yet a little longer "the sufferings of this present time," in calm and certain hope that if we abide faithful to the end we shall participate eternally in the glory to follow.

Birchip. Vic.

On the evening of Sunday, March 30th, three visiting Brothers from different parts of the state were privileged to assemble with two Sisters in the Birchip home where in previous years happy hours of Christian fellowship had been spent, the purpose being to commemorate together the Memorial Supper as instituted by our Lord.

All present participated in the simple service of hymns, prayer, Scripture reading and short address that preceded the partaking of the emblems during which we remembered reverently and thankfully His sacrifice for us, and considered and renewed our own consecration vows, our readiness to be broken with Him and drink of the cup of which He drank, in the joyous hope of one day soon, drinking it new with Him in the Kingdom—the suffering all past and naught by glory to follow.

Adelaide

The Memorial of our Lord's death was observed by the Adelaide Class on Thursday evening, April 3rd. We esteemed it a privilege to "Do this in remembrance" of that great transaction consummated at Calvary over nineteen centuries ago.

We realise that all our hopes of life, both for the Church and for mankind in general, were dependent upon the faithful carrying out of our Lord's sacrifice even unto death. We sang some hymns suitable to the occasion, and read some Scriptures reviewing the typical Passover and those which record our Lord's last hours on earth, and a Brother presented some thoughts appropriate to the occasion. Then, after prayers for the Lord's blessing upon the service, and upon His faithful people everywhere, we partook of the emblems with grateful hearts for the privilege granted us of thus "showing forth the Lord's death" as the only basis of our hope of life, and also resolving that by His grace we will endeavour to be faithful to Him and to our pledge of consecration to be "dead with Him," to "suffer with Him" that we may be permitted to enter into His Kingdom of grace in due time.

Sydney

For this solemn ceremony twelve of the brethren gathered together at the Child Study Room, Liverpool Street, Sydney. We had expected more but heavy rain prevented some of the aged friends who live at a distance.

After singing hymn 122 a Brother addressed the gathering on the life, love and sacrifice of our Lord, and the grand example He is to all His footstep followers. Dwelling on this subject for some time the Brother pointed to the purpose of our being gathered together that evening and invited the members to join in partaking of the Memorial.

Another address was given on the subject of the Passover Memorial itself by reading from Exodus 12:1-14 on the subject of the Jewish Passover and then comparing type with antitype, pointing especially to the Passover Lamb, and that with the death of our dear Redeemer on Calvary's cross the type ceased, being supplanted by the antitype.

We recalled also our participation in the Lord's cup of suffering, and our communion in the loaf as members of His Body. After reference to our privileges and obligations as members of the Body of Christ, and to whom is worthy to participate, a brief period of silent self-examination was recommended, following which a blessing was asked upon the bread and the cup and the emblems were partaken of.

After the singing of hymn 174 the gathering silently dispersed and thus ended another one of these blessed seasons, and with God's blessing another milestone to eternity.

Canberra

Once again it has come to the time for us to remember our Lord's death and the occasion brings vividly to our minds the reason why He died, also the circumstances in which that death took place and the most important events that followed His resurrection and thus the approval given by the Heavenly Father of the worthiness of our Lord's sacrifice to take away sins.

The meaning of the bread and fruit of the wine was ably explained by a Brother and we realise again the need to be crushed together with our Redeemer before we can drink the new wine together with Him in the Kingdom. The thought of having grace sufficient for the journey to its end is an added incentive to press forward to the mark of the prize before us, and so we renewed our devotion and consecration realising that the time is not far distant when the end of the Narrow Way will be reached and the Highway will be ready for traffic.

There were eight of us to keep this simple feast this year. The number was few but we experienced a rich blessing from the Lord, to whom we give thanks for the privilege of walking in His steps.

Glenbrook, N.S.W.

Once again the solemn Memorial season has passed and here at Glenbrook seven of us were privileged to partake of the sacred feast. Our minds were carried back to the origin of this most sacred Pascal Memorial as found in the early history of the Hebrews—the ceremony as originally instituted and described in Exodus 12. We saw that the Israelites understood only the letter of this ceremony, but we, by the grace of God, can see that Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us (1 Cor. 5:7), and that Jesus, the Lamb of God, was the antitype of the Passover lamb.

We were reminded that this solemn and sacred feast called for great sobriety and humbleness of mind in approaching it, so with all our hearts' deep devotion we partook of the solemn feast with grateful thanks to God for the blessed privilege which was ours.

Perth

The members of the Perth Class celebrated the Memorial of our Lord's death on the evening of Thursday, 3rd April. Eighteen members were present. The officiating Brother drew the attention of the friends to the solemnity of the occasion and to the significance of the emblems. The depth of the meaning of the service was also explained with readings from the Gospels and from writings of the Apostle Paul. The service was a particularly helpful one, and we feel sure that all participating felt encouraged to press on more zealously in the narrow way of sacrifice and devotion to the service of our Lord and Head.

Bumie, Tas.

The Memorial Service was held this year at the home of a Sister with five in attendance. The Brother gave a very interesting address beginning with the Passover in Egypt and showed how the passed over ones (the first-borns) were used by God to lead the whole nation forth from bondage and slavery to the promised Cannan.

Passing on to the "upper room" he dealt with the real Lamb of God. After a brief survey of His childhood He was shown at Jordan where the surrender of His humanity was so complete that He could say thereafter that the works He did and the words He spoke were not His but His Father's.

Reviewing further the events in that "upper room" it was shown in the breaking of the bread and passing it to His followers that they were permitted to become part or members of His body, which body is still being offered at the hands of the great High Priest and which later will constitute the Bride in glory. Other illustrations were given to show that we have no merit in ourselves, but we are justified by faith in Christ in order that we may be acceptable to present our bodies a living sacrifice as we walk in the steps of our Lord.

Conducting Bible. Studies

THE manner in which Bible studies are conducted in the various Classes is important for the welfare of members, and an observer is impressed with the fact that while the chairmen desire to promote the progress of all at the studies, one fault in evidence is too much speaking on the part of the leaders themselves.

It is an incorrect idea for class leaders to feel they are called upon to give a little speech after each member of a class has spoken on any particular subject; it tends to hinder rather than encourage members to express themselves when they are waiting for the chairman to cease before they are able to speak on a subject already before the class. It matters not that the leader has the very best of thoughts; it is not Bible study for the chairman to take up as much time as all the other members combined. Provided members keep to the subject or verses of Scripture under review there is no necessity for the chairman to add more than a word or two of thanks between each speaker, (except when a wrong thought is expressed) until the summing up, which also should be as briefly as possible. Especially should this matter of refraining from speaking after each member be observed by the chairman at the tea table when the "Manna" text or question is being considered in more informal fellowship.

Members having had the opportunity of speaking freely on a subject should refrain from covering similar thoughts again after the chairman has summed up, and all can help greatly by keeping strictly to the particular matter before the class.

Most happy and blessed are those studies where the members come well prepared with their thoughts and related Scriptures, and are alert to which verses are under review and express themselves briefly and to the point, the chairman calling for all thoughts on each subject or verse without entering the discussion himself, apart from directing the study, and then concluding the matter with a helpful summing up that gives a feeling of helpfulness and satisfaction to all present. To conclude a study abruptly and leave a subject in the air, so to speak, is not helpful; far better to cover less ground and for all to realise a feeling of finality and blessing from a well completed examination under the guidance of the spirit of the Lord.

Correction.

We are glad to acknowledge a mistake in April "Peoples Paper" on page 27, second column, as pointed out by one of our brethren, as follows:—"Your Memorial article was very good and impressive and should be of much benefit to new creatures. There was one slight mistake, as Jesus was not arrested by Roman soldiers. There were no Roman soldiers in r and the Jewish rabble consisted of the servants of the high priest and the attendants of the Synagogue, armed with sticks and staves. The Romans had no concern with Jesus until He was brought before Pilate in the morning to be further maltreated."

The Kingdom of God.

ANY who have not carefully examined this subject, with concordance and Bible in hand, will be surprised, on doing so, to find its prominence in the Scriptures.

Our Lord Jesus in His talks with His followers strengthened and encouraged their expectations of a coming kingdom, saying to them, "I appoint unto you a kingdom as my Father hath appointed unto Me, that ye may eat and drink at My table in My kingdom, and sit on thrones, judging [ruling] the twelve tribes of Israel." (Luke 22:29, 30.) And, again, "Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." (Luke 12:32.)

And when, instead of being crowned and enthroned, their recognized king was crucified, His disciples were sorely disappointed. As two of them expressed it to the supposed stranger on their way to Emmaus after His resurrection, they had "trusted that it had been He which should have redeemed Israel"—delivering them from the Roman yoke, and making of Israel the Kingdom of God in power and glory. But they were sadly disappointed by the changes of the few days previous. Then Jesus opened their understanding by showing them from the Scriptures that His sacrifice was needful first of all before the kingdom could be established.—Luke 24:21, 25-27.

God could have given to Jesus the dominion of earth without redeeming man; for "The Most High ruleth over the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever He pleaseth." (Dan. 4:32.) But God had a grander design than could have been accomplished by such a plan. Such a kingdom could have brought blessings which, however good, could have been of only a temporary character, since all of mankind were under condemnation to death. To make the blessings of His kingdom everlasting and complete, the race had first to be ransomed from death and thus legally released from the condemnation which passed upon all in Adam.

That in explaining the prophecies Jesus revived the disciples' hope of a coming kingdom is evident from the fact that afterward, as He was leaving them, they inquired, "Lord, wilt Thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" His answer, though not explicit, did not contradict their hopes. He said, "It is not for you to know the times and seasons which the Father hath put in His own power."—Acts 1:6, 7.

True, the disciples at first, in common with the entire Jewish nation, had an imperfect conception of the Kingdom of God in supposing it to be exclusively an earthly kingdom, even as many to-day err in an opposite direction in supposing it to be exclusively a heavenly kingdom. And many of the parables and dark sayings of our Lord Jesus were intended in due time to correct these misconceptions. But He always held forth the idea of a kingdom, a government, to be established in the earth and to rule among men. And He not only inspired in them a hope for a share in the kingdom, but He also taught them to pray for its establishment—"Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done ON EARTH as it is in heaven."

To the worldly-wise among the Jews, our Lord seemed an imposter and fanatic; and they considered His disciples mere dupes. His wisdom and tact, and His miracles, they could not well gainsay, nor reasonably account for; yet, from their standpoint of unbelief, His claim that He was the heir of the world, and would establish the promised kingdom which should rule the world, and that His followers, all of them from the humbler walks of life, would be joint-rulers with Him in that kingdom, seemed too absurd for consideration. Rome, with its disciplined warriors, its able generals and immense wealth, was the master of the world, and was daily growing more powerful. Who, then, was this Nazarene? and who were these fishermen, without money or influence, and with but a meagre following among the common people? Who were these that they should talk about establishing the kingdom long promised to be the grandest and mightiest earth had ever known?

The Pharisees, hoping to expose the supposed weakness of our Lord's claims, and thereby to undeceive His followers, demanded of Him—When will this kingdom which you preach begin to make its appearance? when will your soldiers arrive? when will this Kingdom of God appear? (Luke 17:20-30.) Our Lord's answer would have given them a new thought had they not been prejudiced against Him and blinded by their own supposed wisdom.

He answered that His kingdom would never appear in the manner in which they expected it. The kingdom which He preached, and in which He invited His followers to joint-heirship, was an invisible kingdom, and they must not expect to see it. "He answered them, and said, The Kingdom of God cometh not with observation [outward manifestation]; neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for the Kingdom of God is [to be] in your midst." In a word, He showed that when His kingdom should come, it would be everywhere present and everywhere powerful, yet nowhere visible. Thus He gave them an idea of the spiritual kingdom which He preached; but they were unprepared and received it not. There was a measure of truth in the Jewish expectation concerning the 'promised kingdom, which will in due time be realized, as will be shown; but our Lord's reference here is to that spiritual phase of the kingdom, which will be invisible. And as this phase of the kingdom will be first set up, its presence will be unseen, and for a time unrecognized. The privilege of heirship in this spiritual phase of the Kingdom of God was the only offer then being made, and has been the one hope of our high calling during the entire Gospel age, which then began. Hence Jesus referred to it exclusively. (Luke 16:16.) This will be more clearly seen as we proceed.

When the parables of our Lord are carefully examined, it will be found that they clearly teach that the coming or setting up of the Kingdom of God in power is future; and, as a matter of course, not until the King comes. Thus the parable of the young nobleman going into a far country to receive a kingdom and to return, etc. (Luke 19. 11-15), clearly locates the establishment of the Kingdom at the return of Christ. And the message sent by the Lord to the Church long years afterward was, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." (Rev. 2:10.)

From this it is evident that the kings who will reign with Him will not be crowned nor reign as kings in this life.

The Church at present, therefore, is not the Kingdom of God set up in power and glory, but in its incipient, embryo condition. And so, indeed, all the expressions of the New Testament with reference to it teach. The kingdom of heaven now suffers violence at the hands of the world; the King was maltreated and crucified; and whosoever will follow in His footsteps shall suffer persecution and violence in some form. This, it will be observed, is true only of the real Church, and not of the nominal one. But the promise is held out that if now we (the Church, the embryo kingdom) suffer with Christ, we also, in due time, when He takes to Himself His great power and reigns, shall be glorified and shall reign with Him.

With the early Church, the promises of kingdom honour and joint-heirship with the Master were strong incentives to faithfulness under present trials and persecutions, which they had been forewarned to expect; and in all the words of comfort and encouragement in the Apocalypse, given to the seven churches, none shine out more clearly and forcibly than those which declare, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with My Father in His throne"; and, "To him that overcometh will I give power over the nations."

These are promises which could not reasonably be misconstrued to apply to a present work of grace in the heart, nor yet to reign over the nations in the present life; since they who would overcome must do so by death in the service, and thus gain the kingdom honours.—Rev. 20:6.

Two PHASES OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

While it is true, as stated by our Lord, that the Kingdom of God cometh not—does not make its first appearance—with outward show, in due time it is to be made manifest to all by outward, visible and unmistakable signs. When fully set up, the Kingdom of God will be of two parts, a spiritual or heavenly phase and an earthly or human phase. The spiritual will always be invisible to men, as those composing it will be of the divine, spiritual nature, which no man hath seen or can see (1 Tim. 6:16; John 1:18); yet its presence and power will be mightily manifested, chiefly through its human representatives, who will constitute the earthly phase of the Kingdom of God.

Those who will constitute the spiritual phase of the kingdom are the overcoming saints of the Gospel age—the Christ, head and body—glorified. Their resurrection and exaltation to power precedes that of all others, because through this class all others are to be blessed (Heb. 11:39, 40.) Theirs is the first resurrection. (Rev. 20:5.) The great work before this glorious anointed company—the Christ—necessitates their exaltation to the divine nature: no other than divine power could accomplish it. Theirs is a work pertaining not only to this world, but to all things in heaven and in earth—among spiritual as well as among human beings.—Matt. 28:18; Col. 1:20; Eph. 1:10; Phil. 2:10; 1 Cor. 6:3.

The work of the earthly phase of the Kingdom of God will be confined to this world and to humanity. And those (the Ancient Worthies) so highly honoured as to have a share in it will be the most exalted and honoured of God among men. As the spiritual nature is necessary to the accomplishment of the work of Christ, so perfect human nature is appropriate for the future accomplishment of the work to be done among men. These will minister among and be seen of men, while the glory of their perfection will be a constant example and an incentive to other men to strive to attain the same perfection. And that these Ancient Worthies will be in the human phase of the kingdom and seen of mankind is fully attested by Jesus' words to the unbelieving Jews who were rejecting Him. He said, "Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the Kingdom of God." It should be noticed also, that the Master does not mention that He or the apostles will be visible with Abraham. As a matter of fact, men will see and mingle with the earthly phase of the kingdom, but not with the spiritual; and some will, no doubt, be sorely vexed to find that they rejected so great an honour.

As Jerusalem was the seat of empire under the typical Kingdom of God, it will again occupy the same position, and be "the city of the Great King." (Psa. 48:2; Matt. 5:35.) A city is a symbol of a kingdom or dominion and so God's Kingdom is symbolized by the New Jerusalem, the new dominion coming from heaven to earth. At first it will consist of only the spiritual class, the Bride of Christ, which, as seen by John, will gradually come down to earth; that is, it will gradually come into power as the present empires break in pieces, during the Day of the Lord. In due time, however, the earthly phase of this city or government will be established, parts or members of which will be the Ancient Worthies. There will not be two cities (governments), but one city, one heavenly government, the one for which Abraham looked, "a city which hath foundations"—a government established in righteousness, being founded upon the sure rock foundation of the righteousness of Christ the Redeemer, the value of man's ransom which He gave, and the firmness of divine justice, which can no more condemn the redeemed than it could previously excuse the guilty. —Rom. 8:31-34; 1 Cor. 3:11.

Glorious City of Peace! whose walls signify salvation, protection and blessing to all who enter it, whose foundations laid in justice can never be moved, and whose builder and designer is God! It is in the light which will shine from this glorious city (kingdom) of God that the nations (people) will walk on the highway of holiness, up to perfection and to full harmony with God.—Rev. 21:24.

THE IRON RULE.

Many erroneously suppose that when Christ's Millennial Kingdom is inaugurated every one will be pleased with its ruling. But not so. Its regulations will be far more exacting than those of any previous government, and the liberties of the people will be restricted to a degree that will be galling indeed to many now clamouring for an increase of liberty. Liberty to deceive, to misrepresent, to overreach and to defraud others, will be entirely cut off. Liberty to abuse themselves or others in food or in drink, or in any way to corrupt good manners, will be totally denied to all. Liberty or license to do wrong of any sort will not be granted to any. The only liberty that will be granted to any will be the true and glorious liberty of the sons of God—liberty to do good to themselves and others in any and every way; but nothing will be allowed to injure or destroy in all that Holy Kingdom. (Isa. 11:9; Rom. 8:21.) That rule will consequently be felt 'by many to be a severe one, breaking up all their former habits and customs, as well as breaking up present institutions founded upon these false habits and false ideas of liberty. Because of its firmness and vigour, it is symbolically called an iron rule—"He shall rule them with a rod of iron." (Compare Rev. 2:26, 27; Psa. 2:8-12.) Thus will be fulfilled the statement, "Judgment will I lay to the line and righteousness to the plummet. And the hail [righteous judgment] shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters [truth] shall overflow the hiding place," and, every hidden thing shall be revealed.--Isa. 28:17; Matt. 10:26.

Many will feel rebellious against that perfect and equitable rule because accustomed in the past, under the rule of the present prince, to lord it over their fellow mortals, and to live wholly at the expense of others without rendering compensating service. And many and severe will be the stripes which a present life of self-indulgence and gratification will naturally demand and receive under that reign, before such will learn the lessons of that kingdom — equity, justice, righteousness. (Psa. 89:32; Luke 12:47, 48.) The lesson on this subject comes first to the living generation, and is near at hand.—James 5.

But, blessed thought! when the Prince of Life has put in force the laws of righteousness and equity with an iron rule, the masses of mankind will learn that "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

They will learn that God's plan and laws are best in the end for all concerned, and ultimately they will learn to love righteousness and hate iniquity. (Psa. 45:7; Heb. 1:9.) All who under that reign have not learned to love the right will be counted unworthy of lasting life and will be cut off from among the people.—Acts 3:23; Rev. 20:9; Psa. 11:5-7.

PEOPLES PAPER AND HERALD OF CHRIST'S KINGDOM.

Berean Bible Institute General Report.

ANOTHER year's work of the Berean Bible Institute was terminated at the end of April and we are happy again to express gratitude and thanksgiving to our heavenly Father for the many blessings and favours bestowed in connection with the efforts to serve His cause of truth in these last days of the harvest time.

It is fitting also to place on record once again the generous and loving assistance of many of our brethren, whereby, under the Lord's providence, the work over the past year has continued steadily with considerable evidence of success.

Our readers will realise, however, that no "great works" are claimed nor sought after; we are still living in the day of small things when the important work is the encouragement of our brethren in Christ, and the finding of other sincere people whose hearts and minds respond to the fuller and more satisfying truths of God's Word, enabling them to be freed from the creeds of denominational bondage, in harmony with our Lord's exhortation to all who have ears to hear—"Come out of her (Babylon) My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." (Rev. 18:4 etc.) The witness thus given to find the last members of "My people," being heard by a considerable multitude will also bear fruit in the next age, the Kingdom age, "in the day of visitation" for all mankind. (1 Pet. 2:12.)

Our monthly "Peoples Paper and Herald of Christ's Kingdom," now in its 30th year of publication, is distributed to a number of countries throughout the world, as well as to all the Australian states, and from reports received its message is much appreciated. To all contributors to the columns of "Peoples Paper" appreciation is expressed for the help thus rendered in the service of the Lord. Some of our friends forward subscriptions for others and this is of good assistance; however, subscriptions to the "Paper" are not sufficient to cover its full cost, so the deficiency is made up from the General Fund. Considerable quantities of the journal are distributed free to all who give evidence of desiring spiritual things, and our readers are welcome to submit names and addresses of all whom they feel may be assisted by copies of this publication and other free literature.

Quantities of free tracts have been distributed by willing workers, including supplies of the radio dialogues, and all our friends are invited to procure this free literature for witnessing at all opportunities. Kingdom cards are also in use again and over the years have proved a good means of creating interest for literature. Supplies are available to all who are willing to assist in witnessing to the truth.

The work of forwarding the Consolation Cards to bereaved persons has been continued in some areas and it is truly a means of comfort and consolation to many in their time of special sorrow. These cards are supplied free, together with full information about this service, to any of our friends who will undertake this work in their own localities.

Proclaiming the message of the Kingdom at public meetings has not been neglected over the past year and these gatherings are productive of encouragement to all in attendance as well as enlightening and instructive to new friends. The glad tidings of the Kingdom are too good to be kept and should be proclaimed publicly, as well as privately, by each group of the Lord's people whenever appropriate, in harmony with the spirit and guidance of the Lord.

Books and booklets have been supplied to the order of many of our friends over the year past. The new edition of "Plan of God in Brief' is being used to good advantage. We are sorry, however, that publishing costs for the proposed new edition of "Foregleams of the Golden Age" are such as to prohibit this work at the present time. However, copies of this valuable book are still available to all able to place them to advantage. Opportunity is taken at this time to express appreciation to all friends who offered to assist with the proposed new edition of "Foregleams of the Golden Age", and should conditions prove more favourable at a later date, this work may then be undertaken. Any of our friends able to devote some time to the distribution of books and booklets are advised to apply for full information about this service.

The financial side of the year's work in general is shown by the General Tract Fund below. The voluntary donations no doubt represent much sacrifice on the part of the dear brethren as a whole, rendered as to the Lord.. The expenses are also met in the service of Christ and are such as it is felt would have His approval. It will be observed that some good assistance has been transferred to the General Fund from the Reserve Fund to cover all activities, and leaving a small balance of £2/15/6 in credit towards the year ahead.

From the Reserve Fund account it will be seen also that considerable help has been transferred to the Radio Fund, thus enabling more to be done in the witness over the air, reference to which will be found in this issue of "Peoples Paper." The use of the full amount at the credit of the Reserve Fund was undertaken with a view to faithful use of this means in the service of the Lord while the opportunities were still with us. By His providence this assistance was made available for use in His service, and with prayer for His guidance its use has been blessed over the year past.

Entering upon another year of service for the truth cause, it does all God's people good to meditate upon the privileges of being granted a part in this the highest and most esteemed service offered to any one in the world. And think of it, this service is available to every one who has named the name of Christ; to neglect a part in the service of Him who has done so much for us, manifests a lack of appreciation of His sacrifice on our behalf. The time is short, how short we may not know; some of our dear brethren have passed beyond the veil in the year past. It may be as the poet expresses it—'Another year, or more, or less, and we have crossed the wilderness.' World conditions certainly show that the harvest of the Gospel Age draws to a close; yet it is still harvest time, "And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal: that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together." (John 4:36.)

The prayers of all dear friends for God's blessing and guidance upon the work generally are sought at this time again, that all may be done to His praise and glory, in the service of His people.

The Radio Work,

THE opportunity of sounding forth the glad news of the Gospel of Christ over various radio stations has been with us now for nearly 4½ years, and this is cause for further thankfulness to the Lord. The assistance of our brethren in voluntarily providing the means to enable this work to continue is no doubt well pleasing to God, and also most encouraging. The help given by our brethren in U.S.A. towards the radio efforts in this country is also greatly appreciated again at this time.

Looking back upon this effort over the air to reach those people who have ears to hear the truth message, the response can be said to be very encouraging. From the great number of enquiries received some have been brought to a full knowledge and appreciation of the truth, and this is cause for rejoicing indeed. Fresh cases of interest are continually being found and the Lord, who knows all hearts will no doubt bless the message to all in right heart condition at this time. Then, of course, there are benefits which will be manifest only in the age to come and of which no estimate can be formed at present.

Changes in radio stations have been necessary throughout the year past, but at present 3GL Geelong, Victoria, and 2KY Sydney are reaching a large circle of appreciative listeners, while our friends in Perth continue steadily with the same witness over 6KY Perth.

The offering of printed copies of all Dialogues broadcast over the air has been well worth while, and many friends receive the weekly copies with their "Peoples Paper." While this service entails an amount of additional work it will be continued as long as possible.

Considerable quantities of radio advertising cards have been distributed throughout the year and this work is urged upon all who can distribute within hearing of a station and have a talent of time for use in this way. The cards are supplied free from the Radio Fund, and as they contain a little witness to the truth, as well as advertising the broadcasts, the work with these serves a double purpose.

The financial position in connection with the radio witness is shown by the Radio Fund and the voluntary contributions over the past year once again manifest the loving desire of many dear friends to assist in this form of witness in the service of the Lord. With the additional help from the Reserve Fund all expenses have been met and a credit of 15/13/1 is carried forward in this fund for the new term. The prayers of our brethren are desired for the Lord's guidance and blessing in connection with this service in the interest of His cause.

Illness of the World.

Millions of Men Under Arms.

Under the above headings the following appeared in the Melbourne press of May 13th last:—

New York, May 11 (A.A.P.).—Almost 19,000,000 men are under arms throughout the world, and about 40 nations are spending at least 27,400,000,000 dollars (approximately £ A9,000,000,000) a year on armaments, according to a “New York Times” survey, based on data gathered by its military editor (Mr. Hanson Baldwin) and correspondents in many other countries.

The survey indicates nations are spending perhaps 10,000,000,000 dollars (approximately £A3,000,000,000) more on armaments than they did in 1938.

Probably more men are in uniform to-day than in the pre-war years despite the disappearance of Germany and Japan as military powers.

“The picture the survey reflects is drab. It shows nations, many of them wrecked by war and struggling under major economic burdens, attempting to maintain large military forces. Even small nations bowed beneath crushing taxation are allocating major parts of their budgets to military expenditures, although the forces thus created could do little against the strength of a major power.

“China, engaged in a bitter civil war,, has more men in her armies—between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 Nationalists and 1,000,000 to 1,500,000 Communists—than any other nation. China is also spending the greater part of her inflation-swollen budget for armaments; more than any other nation—probably over 80 per cent.

Largest Army.

“Exclusive of the amorphous half-armed masses divided into the warring armies in China, the Russian armed forces are the largest in the world. The Russian army is probably in numbers 3,500,000 to 4,100,000 strong. She probably has about 200 divisions organised or partly organised, and numbers in her reserve classes between 7,000,000 and 12,000,000.”

The biggest spender on armed forces is the United States, which in dollar value at unofficial exchange rates (an unreliable index) will spend 34 per cent. of her projected 1948 budget on military items.

The “New York Times” admits that because of the carry-over of war-time secrecy into the post-war era and other causes there are big gaps in the survey, but despite these limitations it claims the survey “gives a better picture of the illness of the world” than any available since before the war.

What a dread picture is presented in the above report on present world conditions. What a spectacle must the civilized (?) world present to the Lord as He “looked down from the height of His sanctuary; from heaven did the Lord behold the earth, to hear the groaning of the prisoners, to loose those that are appointed to death.” (Psa. 102:19, 20.)

Does it surprise us to find that God really determines “to loose those that are appointed to death” when, so soon after the conclusion of the great global war, and the hopes expressed at the United Nations Organization, we find conditions as above stated? Well, our God is a gracious heavenly Father, sure enough; but let it not be thought that the deliverance of those “appointed to death” is to be accomplished smoothly, from the present conditions in the world.

Various of God’s prophets, as well as our Lord and the apostles, describe the complete overthrow of_ present governments and man-made institutions of every kind—religious, political, social and financial. The prophet Jeremiah vividly portrays the passing of the present order of things as follows:—“For thus saith the Lord God of Israel unto me, Take the wine cup of this fury at my hand, and cause all the nations to whom I send thee to drink it. And they shall drink, and be moved, and be mad, because of the sword that I will send among them. . . . Therefore thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel; Drink ye; and be drunken, and spue, and fall, and rise no more . .

. A noise shall come even to the ends of the earth: for the Lord hath a controversy with the nations: He will plead with all flesh: He will give them that are wicked to the sword, saith the Lord.” (Jer. 25:15, 16, 27, 31, etc.)

The prophet Malachi also declares—“For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch.” (Mal. 4:1.) Thus we have it revealed that the greatest event in the world’s history is about to take place in the near future—the complete passing of man’s order of things, to make way for the Kingdom of God’s dear Son. What confusion, what bewilderment this will cause to all who are trusting in any way in present-day church systems, financial institutions or other apparent strongholds of men. All these, with their leaders, will be reduced to the dust, so that throughout the Kingdom of Christ, all the willing and obedient may learn to trust only in the Deliverer who alone is worthy of all praise and worship. Thanks be to God that by His deliverance “the groaning of the prisoners” will cease, and “those appointed to death” shall be loosed to enjoy the beauty of the restored earthly paradise. “Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, as it is done in heaven.”

Think on these Things.

(Phil. 4:8. Convention Address.)

RECENTLY a Sydney paper reported that Professor Murdoch was asked the question whether people should be encouraged to think for themselves. He did not think so, because there are plenty of people to do their thinking. He went on to say that he thought it was not good at all, this thinking. It was a pernicious habit, because it caused too many schisms. He pointed to the fact that France was riven with different factions because they had the audacity to think individually. But the point is in regard to us, as New Creatures; there is a difference. We should think.

Now the will or mind is symbolized by the heart: and we read in Psa. 51:10, "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me." With an ideal state of health, there must be a healthy heart. It necessitates healthy conditions, with no weaknesses of any kind. Consequently, we should have a healthy will. That is just in harmony with the Scriptures. It says, "Be ye holy, for I am holy." The Heavenly Father gives that to us as a message. People tend to become like their pursuits. As the Scriptures say, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Therefore, it is a challenge for us to think.

We, as Christians, are exhorted to be able to give a reason for the hope that is within us. It is no use taking things for granted, saying so and so said so. What do you think for yourself? It is your individual character that counts, and you cannot rest upon other people's opinions. You have to develop an opinion of your own, a will of your own, a mind of your own, to enable you to come off conqueror. That is the requirement of the kingdom. Those who are going to be associated with the Master must be tried and proved and fitted for that glorious work that will ensue in the times of restitution of all things.

Now the point is, we must have consecrated thinking. We know what that means, our heart belongs to the Lord and our thinking is in harmony with His will.

The next point is, how are we to think? Prov. 21:5 says, "The thoughts of the diligent tend only to plenteousness; but of every one that is hasty only to want." Now the lesson we draw from that is that we should not allow our thoughts to browse in any old corner. Our thoughts want regimenting or controlling in harmony with our objective. We might say that this is only a synopsis of the subject of thinking, but we only hope it will be blessed of the Lord insofar that it will stimulate thinking and cause us to realise the value of thinking.

Now in Psa. 1:2 we read, referring to the man of God, that his delight is in the law of the Lord, and in His law doth he meditate both day and night. What does that mean? Just to read the law and word of God? No, it means to read it carefully, not carelessly and hurriedly, but to think over it and meditate upon it. The Psalmist says he meditated on the law in the night watches, whilst he lay in bed. We should not at any time sit and think of nothing at all. That is wrong. There should be activity if we are going to develop the character-likeness of the Master.

If we turn to Romans 12:1-3 it enables us to trace the steps necessary to attain that character-likeness to reach the goal—"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God. For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith." Take a sober outlook on yourself and those around you, and see in what way you can help yourself and others, and be helped by them.

Now, what should we think? You know, there is a difference between an avocation and a vocation. We say, Oh yes, our avocation or our job requires concentration. Certainly it does. There are some repetition jobs where you might be able to relax and think a bit, but the majority of them require concentration and thought if you are going to do justice to the job and to those who are employing you. But then, the point for us to remember is that in our vocation--we know what that is, "we are all called in the one hope of our calling"—it is imperative that we develop the character through thought. It is not the thoughts that come into our heads which count, but those which we dwell upon, and allow to stay there. That is the important thing. We cannot prevent the crows flying over our heads, but we can stop them making their nests there.

Now let us come to the main text. We say, Oh yes, that is all right, we put into practice the Golden Rule, even keep in mind the New Commandment, to "love one another as I have loved you." But by studying, by thinking and analysing Phil. 4:8, we are able, perhaps, to implement that idea of developing a character-likeness of the Master.

Now we can divide this exercise of thought into two sections, positive and negative. "Whatsoever things are true." That is God's Word. That is true. It is what we call "the Truth." There are so many aspects of it. There is the restoration of Israel, the riven nominal systems, things which are predicted and which we expect. "There is a prevailing tendency towards disintegration, and the momentum seems to be becoming more pronounced every day. We realize that is just in harmony with prophecy, it is the truth. Well, there is sufficient in the truth without thinking about the negative things, but nevertheless it is as well to keep them in mind too, and to exclude idle speculation, which often leads us astray. Another thing to exclude is gossip, evil surmisings. Are they true? No, we do not know whether they are true or not. Then, when it comes to the movies and fiction, a big percentage of it is exaggerated and not conducive to spirituality to those who are striving to attain the likeness of Christ. People say, You are too narrow, but anyone who thinks soberly knows the world's way is not conducive to developing the image of Christ in their minds.

"Whatsoever things are honest." Things that are noble, honourable, think on these things. The good deeds of somebody. But we may dilate on the good deeds of somebody, perhaps at the expense of somebody else. We must be careful that nobody else is ignored or overlooked. Then, on the negative side we have to see to it that there is no hypocrisy, no intrigue, and that we do not speak about the weaknesses or follies of our brethren or our fellows. It may be true, but it is not honest, or honourable.

“Whatsoever things are just.” Equitable to all concerned, on the positive side. On the negative side, whatever encroaches upon the interests of others. But we must not become obsessed with one idea. You know, there are many periodicals which dilate upon the evils of society. If we unduly think upon these things we may become biased. We want to remember to be just in our thoughts, and think more about the justice of God, and- how He will by no means clear the guilty, and in due time these things will be put right.

“Whatsoever things are pure.” The perfect character of God, and our Lord Jesus. The truth. All else should be painful to us. That is on the positive side. We think of the perfection of our Lord. We cannot really appreciate it, but we can continue to think on those things in connection with His life which are pure and good. On the negative side, it means excluding impurity of mind and things that will tend towards impurity. Then, we necessarily see to it that our society is pure. You remember Lot, he was vexed with the wickedness around him. Don’t we chafe, too, under the conditions at times., the wickedness and violence, and still it enhances the purity. Bad language, too, must be shunned. There are all kinds of literature, which do not stir up good thoughts, but bad. We would not waste time looking at them. The same applies to art. Some people say, “To the pure all things are pure.” But who is pure? There are lots of things, in our fallen condition, which need regulating in order that we may attain that purity without which no man shall see the Lord.

“Whatsoever things are lovely.” Think of the loveliness of Jesus. “Behold, never man spake like this man.” He had a beautiful nature and disposition, and how it was manifested, even towards little children—“Suffer little children to come unto me.” How He wept at Lazarus’ grave. Negatively, here, we should exclude anger, hatred and strife, and vindictiveness, and contention. When we think on lovely things, these other things are relegated to the background.

“Whatsoever things are of good report.- Are they reputable? Do they bring to light the noble words or deeds or sentiments of anybody? Not necessarily in their presence, of course, as that could possibly have an adverse effect on their characters, making them proud. If we are thinking on things of good report, it will necessarily mean we will have no unprofitable rubbish. There is much muck-raking in the world, but it is not conducive to our development as New Creatures. We might think, it is just to have these things exposed. We might touch upon them in a passing way, but to let our minds dwell on them would be just the opposite of thinking on things of good report. Better to leave them to the Lord to see to in His own good time.

So, in conclusion, it is obvious we should think on these things, and not lower the standard. That is the tendency with people of the world to-day. Our standard is high—“Be ye perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect.” We should see to it that everything is regulated and brought into harmony with the purifying influence of the Truth, so our new heart will be developed and fitted for that new body. We should also, as was mentioned earlier, keep company with those that so do—“not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is.”

In conclusion, let us read Psalm 19:14—“Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my redeemer.”

Price—Threepence

The Days of the Son of Man.

THE thoughts in this article have been presented in these columns before, but as there seems some doubt in the minds of some of our friends respecting the ending of the Gospel Age and the inauguration of the Millennial Age, it is hoped that the following may again prove helpful in the light of the Scriptures as a whole.

It is well to keep in mind that the "Times of the Gentiles" mentioned by our Lord in Luke 21:24 is not to be considered a period of any divine favour or covenant with the nations; it was simply the period of time during which God punished Israel by not protecting them from the "beastly" powers of Daniel's prophecy. Bible students are agreed that 2520 years covered the "Gentile Times" from 606 B.C., to 1914 A.D., but there is nothing to say that immediately that time was fulfilled Christ's Kingdom would be in control of the world's concerns. There is no statement in the Bible to say that all the Church would be glorified by that time, nor that the image of Gentile powers would be smitten by the stone and scattered to the four winds right away. (Dan. 2:34, 35.) All this seemed possible as we looked forward many years ago, but it was not a correct view. We are learning more and more that our thoughts are not always God's thoughts; His ways are so much higher and greater than ours, and Peter (2 Pet. 3) seems to warn us against having too limited views, particularly in connection with dispensational truths and the ending of this Age. Our Lord said: "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Since the 1914-18 war Jerusalem is no longer trodden down and Palestine has flourished to a great extent. The fig tree is "putting forth leaves" as our Lord foretold. (Matt. 24:32, 33)

The time features of prophecy concerning the "time of the end" stated by Daniel are important, and all have been fulfilled. The 1260 days (years) ended in 1798-9, when the persecuting power of Rome was broken; the 1290 days ended 1828-9 with the Millerite movement And the announcement of the coming of Christ; the 2300 days ended 1846 with the cleansing of the sanctuary class, and the 1355 days brought us the promised blessing of the feast prepared by our Lord for "the days of the Son of Man" from 1874 onward. (Luke 12:36, 37; Rev. 3:20.) These time features are not dependent upon any system of Bible Chronology.

As far as Chronology is concerned we do not believe that we have yet reached the 6000 years since the creation of man. We believe that Christ's reign will begin when the Seventh thousand year period begins and that the Church must be all glorified and begin the reign with Him and that Satan will be bound during the same time. We do not know when the 6000 years will be reached, but are assured that it will be within reasonable time, for all the signs of the presence of the Son of Man and of the end of the age, which Christ gave to His disciples, are before us today, and He said, "This generation shall not pass till all these things begin to be fulfilled." (Matt. 24:34, corrected translation.)

There can be no doubt but that Daniel's prophecy about the "Time of the end" refers to quite a lengthy period of time and that the "running to and fro and increase of knowledge" had its beginning prior to the middle of last century. Our Lord also clearly indicates a certain time of Harvest—"The harvest is the end of the age." He also spoke of the work of harvest of the Jewish Age in His own day. At that time it was wheat being separated from chaff, the harvest being followed by the burning up of the chaff. Now it is separating the wheat from the bundles of tares and the tares are to be symbolically burned. He surely spoke of being present again to conduct this Harvest work, for He said that the Lord of the harvest will first say to the reapers, "Bind the tares in bundles," etc. This work has been proceeding ever since the Millerite movement, since which time there has always been a separated class. In Volume 3 it is pointed out that a separation work began in Miller's day, but the trouble has been that we expected everything to culminate too quickly. It would seem that the thoughts about the Parallels and Jubilee calculations misled to the conclusion that the harvest of the Gospel Age would be a period of forty years, and that the times of restitution and the setting up of the Kingdom would date from 1878. The Parallels are not intimated in the Bible nor the Jubilee cycle; there is no mention, of any seventy jubilees at all. It seems strange how we took the land sabbaths of 2 Chron. 34:21 to mean jubilees. These seventy sabbaths are the same period as Daniel's seventy weeks, and had fulfilment in our Lord's day and three and a half years later.

Instead of comparing the ending of the present evil world with that of the Jewish Age, both our Lord and Peter refer to the ending of "the world that was before the flood" and to Noah's day as being comparable to the second presence of the Son of Man. When we consider the matter, does it not seem reasonable that there should be as long a period of probation or warning or preparation or of separating of the godly from the wicked at the end of this present evil world, before its final destruction, as there was in the days of Noah prior to the flood? When the Lord announced the end of that Age to Noah, He said that it would not be for 120 years—"yet man's days shall be 120 years." That Age was of short duration and of meagre population in comparison with the present Gospel Age. It would seem that "the days of the Son of Man," the presence of Christ prior to the great time of trouble, for searching out and dealing with His people and preparing for the establishment of His Kingdom, may correspond as in other respects to the time of probation in Noah's day.

The question arises as to when "the days of the Son of Man" began and there is this suggestion. In Daniel 12:11 we read of a period of 1290 days (representing years) but as the verse stands there is no mention as to what was to happen at the end of that time. However, it was pointed out by a student some time ago that the correct order of the verses in Daniel 12 is to begin the chapter with verse 5, read on to verse 11, then verse 1, then verse 12, then 4, 3, and 2, and lastly verse 13. There are instances of verses not being in proper sequence in the Scriptures; for instance, Matt. 24:28 ought to come after verse 41, as can be seen by comparing Luke 17:34-37. Daniel's prophecy had to be sealed unto the time of the end and maybe this mixture of the verses was for that purpose. When the verses are placed in their proper sequence it is seen that following the 1290 days (years, ending 1829) of verse 11, verse 1 reads,—"And at that time shall Michael stand up" etc. Our Lord is represented in Scripture as seated at the right hand of God until the time comes to put down His enemies. This standing up seems to indicate a return and commencing a work of preparation for His Kingdom. That may then be the time when the "parousia" had its beginning. One hundred and twenty years is not a long time in God's sight with whom "a thousand years are but as yesterday." Nor is it long even from a human viewpoint as the "Day of Preparation," including the resurrection of the Church, first those who have fallen asleep in Christ and then those who remain alive are to be "changed in a moment"—at death—"caught away" to be together with the Lord at the same time, "the time of the end," the Harvest time.

After the Lord's discourse in Matt. 24 respecting "the signs of His presence and the end of the Age," He gave three parables to illustrate the procedure at that time. The Ten Virgins indicated the condition of the Church at His coming and the separation work to follow. Some who had sufficient light to be awakened in expectation, failed through lack of oil in their vessels (hearts). It also emphasised what He had said in His discourse—the necessity of watching, for some say, "The Lord delayeth His coming." In 2 Pet. 3:4 we have also a class indicated that says, "Where is the promise of His presence." This Virgin Parable has been in course of fulfilment since the Millerite movement, as also the next parable of the Talents. The sleeping saints were to be raised and receive rewards; according to the use of their talents they would be given responsibilities in the coming Kingdom. No doubt they are being instructed respecting their relative positions, etc., while at the same time those alive and remaining are being dealt with in the same way, as they finish the earthly course, and are "caught away to be with the Lord in the air."

There is also another parable that speaks of the inspection of the guests by the King, and some may be found who have taken off the "Wedding Garment." These go out of the light of truth and it seems evident that this parable is also in operation. Then, when the "Harvest is ended and the summer is past," when the Church is complete and with her Lord, the winter time of trouble will prepare poor humanity for the Age of blessing and the Parable of the Sheep and Goats will proceed and take 1000 years to accomplish.

Though these matters have been seen in this way for many years, they all seem to grow clearer as the days go by. There is no attempt, however, to force these views, nor any thought that all must see alike on such out-workings of prophecy; at the same time one could not feel the free happy fellowship with those who once rejoiced in the "parousia" truths and now deny them—the fellowship was broken between the wise and the foolish virgins, and it appears just like that.

The blessedness at the end of the 1335 days in Dan. 12:12 (1874-5) was the feast of present truth provided by our Lord who had then been present quite a time, engaged regarding the cleansing of the sanctuary, etc., but by this time (1874 onward) He had girded Himself and prepared the promised blessing of truth that has gladdened all our hearts.

It is clearly evident that a Harvest work has been proceeding; the sound of the trumpet called us from the four winds of heaven (Matt. 24:31)—from all the sects of Christendom—and the bundles of tares have become more and more bound up in errors. Harvest siftings have been frequent, many have fallen out, lost the light of Present Truth. Some, like the Fish, returned to the Sea, some like the one talented man gone into outer darkness, some like the foolish virgins who failed to enter the Marriage Chamber, and some like the man that took off the wedding garment deny the necessity and efficacy of the Cross, the Ransom for all, by adopting theories such as Universal Reconciliation, etc. The false prophets are many (Matt. 24:23, 25). The testings such as might, if it were possible, deceive the elect, must be along the lines of teachings, and what we see about us confirms our faith that we are living “in the days of the Son of Man,” (His parousia) and that ere long all the saints will have been glorified and the Kingdom will be inaugurated for which we have so long prayed and still do, “Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as in heaven.”

The message to the church of Philadelphia was “Hold fast that which thou hast that no man take thy crown.” The intimation appears to be that a time was approaching when the particular danger would be to let slip the things that had been received, which had stirred so much joy and zeal in the service of Christ. The prevailing spirit and temptation of the day would be lukewarmness—a compromising of truth and principle, in doctrine as well as practice. This spirit is quite evident today among those who did rejoice in present truth and must be overcome by those who are to be granted the wonderful reward. (Rev. 3:14-21.)

The Great Company.

THE Divine plan for human salvation is a perfect one, and God’s provision for the great company on the spirit plane appears necessary in order that the full measure of that completeness may be made up.

We know full well that the invitation extending over the Gospel Age is to the end that we may form with Jesus the reigning power. Consequently the promises of sharing His nature and throne are absolutely definite.

The hope of obtaining spiritual life apart from the glory, honour and immortality promised to the body members of Christ, is, of necessity, not nearly so clearly stated, for “we are all called in the one hope of our calling,” nevertheless, the hope of obtaining a spiritual birth, aside from the 144,000, is variously set forth in the Scriptures both new and old.

The fact that our heavenly Father has made provision for a great company who enter for, but fall short of winning the prize of the High calling, is not only prefigured by the scapegoat, but also alluded to in Psalm 45:14, “The virgin and her companion virgins” (bridesmaids, as it were, making complete the wedding party), the same circumstance is supported by Rebecca and her damsels.

Then we may gather the same view from Matt. 25:1-2. Verse 7 says, “All the virgins arose,” not all the world, in fact, not any of the world. The parable shows the subsequent unpreparedness of the foolish virgins. They were “too late,” or not ready in time. Is it either reasonable or scriptural to conclude that such a class as they, in losing the prize of the High calling, were lost themselves? If not, what is the only alternative? They surely cannot be dealt with a second time, when the time will have come for the world’s judgment or trial. Having become new creatures (in Christ) all earthly rights were given up, and so that avenue of life cannot be opened to them. All who have started in the way now open to life, have left the world forever, and it seems unthinkable that any who have exchanged earthly hopes for heavenly, should eventually gain the former. Consecration to death with Christ can by no means lead on to life on earth.

The question then is: Where are those spirit-begotten ones to be who are not included in the Bride class, having not fully overcome, but later having been “saved so as by fire”? The Scriptures answer: “Blessed are they that are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb.” Called to be the Bride but not chosen, the great company, in keeping with God’s bounty, are favoured wedding guests. (Rev. 19:9; 7:9-15.)

He Cometh with Clouds.

THE Scripture in Rev. 1:7 is generally quoted as a proof that our Lord Jesus at His Second Coming will be visible to the whole human family; that they will all have great mourning when they see Him; that it will be a sad day for them—especially for the Jews. Our thought respecting the passage, in the light of other Scriptures, is different from this. In the first place, the Lord Himself said, “Yet a little while, and the world seeth Me no more, but ye shall see Me.” Only the Lord’s faithful followers were to see Him. The Apostle Paul explains that Jesus’ followers will see Him because they are to be changed in the First Resurrection, “in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye.” The Scriptures clearly indicate that our Lord’s present condition is the Heavenly, the spirit condition, not only as high a condition as before He came into the world, but still higher.

The Lord prayed to the Father that He would glorify Him with the glory that He had with Him before He came into the world—“before the world was.” The Father assured Him that He had glorified Him and would glorify Him again. (John 17:5; 12:28. Vatican MS.) The Scriptures also assure us that our Lord in His glorified condition is far above angels, principalities and powers. (Phil. 2:9, 10.) When He was a man, He was “a little lower than the angels.” (Heb. 2:6-9.) The Scriptures declare that the Lord is now the express image of the Father’s person (Heb. 1:3), and also declare of Him, “Whom no man hath seen nor can see.”

Another Scripture tells us that the coming of Christ will be for the blessing of the world. The very object of His coming will be for the lifting up of the poor and fallen race. St. Peter tells us that there will be “Times of Restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of ALL His Holy Prophets since the world began.”—Acts 3:20, 21.

How shall we harmonise this last statement with that of our text, which says that He shall come with clouds; that every eye shall see Him; and that all mankind “shall wail because of Him”? The answer is that in harmony with other Scriptures the coming with clouds would signify the coming in a period of trouble—the word “clouds” being used to signify trouble—in the dark Day. He is coming in clouds, in that the time in which He will first manifest Himself to the world will be a very dark Day to the world—“a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation,” and, we are told, never shall be again. (Matt. 24:21.) That will be a dark, cloudy Day.

In that Day, ultimately all eyes shall be opened; and all mankind shall see Him with the eyes of their understanding—see Him in the sense that we see Him now, and have knowledge of Him and of the Father. A blind man sees in the same sense. He says, “I see now”—meaning that he sees with his intellectual sight. It is far better to see with the intellect than with the natural sight.

Darkness now covers the earth. “The god of this world hath blinded the minds of all those who believe not.” (2 Cor. 4:4.) There are a great many blinded minds at the present time. They do not know the object of Christ’s coming. They do not have the scriptural teaching as to why He comes. But their blinded eyes shall be opened. Every human being shall come to an understanding of the fact that the Lord’s Kingdom is for the blessing of “all the families of the earth” according to God’s Promise made to Abraham and all the Prophets after his day.

The Jews will come to recognise Him. The Apostle Paul says, “Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved” (Rom. 11:25, 26) from their blindness, from their ignorance, from their misunderstanding at His presentation of Himself at His First Advent. Another Scripture says that when they see Him, recognise the “sign of the Son of Man in the heavens, then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory.” (Matt. 24:30.) The Prophet says that those that “pierced Him” shall mourn for Him as a man mourns for his only son. (Zechariah 12:10.) Thus they will appreciate Christ, and their eyes will be the first that will be opened. But at that same time, when their eyes begin to see out of obscurity, they will not see the Lord with the natural sight.

There is first of all a parousia, or presence of Christ, which is known only to the spiritual class. The culmination of His work in the parousia will be the gathering of the Church to Himself in the First Resurrection. The Scriptures go on to say that He shall be revealed in flaming fire, taking vengeance.

The “clouds of heaven” well represent the confusion in general. The world for a time will be in ignorance of His presence. But gradually they will come to know that they are in the time of trouble, the Day of wrath, in which this Age is to close. Then they will mourn. The whole world will be in mourning. If the world has mourned in the past, much more shall we expect it to do so when the trouble will be general. In the midst of that trouble, they will gradually learn of the grace of God. Human selfishness, they will find, has been so over ruled as to lead up to the glorious Kingdom of Messiah, through which are to come all the blessings which God has promised.

Our Bad Goodness,

The following short article from the “Christian World” was printed some years ago, but it is thought will be helpful and appreciated by many new readers as well as all other friends again.

THERE are two famous prayers, apparently contradictory but really complementary, which I should like to put side by side that we may learn their lesson.

The first is Augustine’s anguished cry, “Domine, libera me a homine malo—a me ipso,” which may be freely translated, “Lord, save me from that evil man—myself.” The second is the well-known prayer of an early Wesleyan preacher, James Spence, ‘ Lord, save me from that good man, James Spence.’ I confess that I do not know which of the two is the greater or betrays the deeper insight. They are both typically Christian prayers, perhaps at different poles of life and thought: but there are moments in our experience which each must be offered.

Every one can understand Augustine’s prayer. He had passed through the scorching fires of passion, and he was thinking of the downward pull of the lower desires. He knew the evil in himself, the evil that was himself! For he knew that we men and women are our own worst enemies. The things that hurt us are not outside us; the men that wound us are not other men: we are despoiled by the “evil man” within us. God’s best salvation is to save us from ourselves—from the lower dream, the pet passion, the fond indulgence.

But James Spence saw as deeply. He knew that a true Christian must be rescued not only from his sins but also from his virtues—the virtues on which he prides himself, the virtues on which he is too apt to rely. There is no greater moment of spiritual danger for a Christian than when he admires himself, or is complacent about his fine attainments. That good man, James Spence, is actually James Spence’s worst enemy, especially when he is conscious how very good James Spence is as compared with other men. Thus I think that the Wesleyan’s prayer is the more discriminating of the two, “Save me from that good man, James Spence.”

Two men went up into the Temple to pray. One of them, a Publican, cried out in abandoned shame, “Lord, be merciful to me, a sinner.” This is the parallel of Augustine’s cry, “Save me from the evil that is in me—save me from that evil man, myself.” The other, a Pharisee, was a good man, undoubtedly a good man. He attended church, lived correctly, performed all his daily duties to his neighbour and his God, and was unquestionably the best kind of citizen of his own day. But alas, he knew it—and even told Almighty God all about it in his confessions! I think we must admit his virtues: every word he said was strictly true. It is quite nonsense to say he was a hypocrite. He was an ornament of that good class of men, the Puritans of their time, the Pharisees. But this should have been his prayer, “Lord, save me from that good man, James Spence.”

Our Lord never wearied of showing that a good man’s main danger lay in self-satisfaction, which is a milder or disguised form of pride. I imagine that in our human weakness no honest man can be wholly unaware of his own virtues and attainments. We know that we don’t drink, or misbehave, or shirk our duties, or dodge the income tax. A man cannot help knowing his virtues as well as his faults and sins. But the finest Christian prays to be saved both from his virtues and his sins! Our deadliest sin is self-satisfaction and pride, as Jesus showed in His parable: it kills the very virtue it exults in. Let us do anything at all with our hands except pat ourselves on the back. “Lord, save me from that good man, James Spence.”

The Best Wine.

“Thou hast kept the good wine until now.”—John 2:10.

When from life’s feast the glory has departed,
And weariness creeps on,

When on thy lips the bread has turned to ashes
And all the wine is gone,

Then fill the jars once more, though but with water.
And fill them to the brim ;

And to the waiting guests about thy table
Pour out thy best—for Him.

His power only waits for thy small effort,
To add His mighty touch,

Transmuting thy poor gift to His rich vintage,
Making thy little—much.

So shalt thou know again the joy of service
That thou hadst thought was past,

And find the Master of the Feast has given
The best wine at the last.

The Day of Jehovah.

THE “Day of Jehovah” is the name of that period of time in which God’s Kingdom, under Christ, is to be gradually “set up” in the earth, while the kingdoms of this world are passing away and Satan’s power and influence over men are being bound. It is everywhere described as a dark day of intense trouble and distress and perplexity upon mankind. And what wonder that a revolution of such proportions, and necessitating such great changes, should cause trouble. Small revolutions have caused trouble in every age; and this, so much greater than any previous revolution, is to be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation—no, nor ever shall be.—Dan. 12:1; Matt. 24:21, 22.

It is called the “Day of Jehovah” because, though Christ, with royal title and power, will be present as Jehovah’s representative, taking charge of all the affairs during this day of trouble, it is more as the General of Jehovah subduing all things, than as the Prince of Peace, blessing all. Meantime, as false and imperfect views and systems fall, the standard of the new King will rise, and eventually He shall be recognized and owned by all as King of kings. Thus it is presented by the prophets as Jehovah’s work to set up ‘Christ’s dominion: “I will give thee the Gentiles for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession.” (Psa:2:8.) “In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom.” (Dan. 2:44.) The Ancient of days did sit, and there was brought before Him one like unto the son of man, and there was given him a dominion, that all kingdoms should serve and obey him. (Dan. 7:

9, 13, 14, 22, 27.) Added to these is Paul’s statement that, when Christ shall accomplish the object of His reign, “then shall the Son also Himself be subject unto Him [the Father] that PUT ALL THINGS UNDER HIM.”-1 Cor. 15:28.

This period is called the “Day of Vengeance of our God, ‘ and a “Day of Wrath.” (Isa. 61:2; 63; 1-4; Psa. 110:5.) And yet the mind that grasps only the idea of anger, or supposes divine malice, seriously errs. God has established certain laws, in harmony with which He operates, and those who from any cause come into conflict with these reap the penalty or wrath of their own course. God’s counsel to mankind has .been continually rejected, except by the few; and, as we have shown, He permitted them to have their own way and to drop Him and His counsels from their hearts. (Rom. 1:28.)

THE PRESENT SITUATION.

We here mark more particularly the present aspect of affairs in the world, as we now see them shaping themselves for the rapidly approaching conflict—a conflict which, when its terrible climax is reached, must necessarily be a short one, else the race would be exterminated. The two rival parties to this battle are already visible. Wealth, arrogance and pride are on one side, and widely-prevailing poverty, ignorance, bigotry and a keen sense of injustice are on the other. Both, impelled by selfish motives, are now organizing their forces all over the civilized world. With our eyes anointed with truth, wherever we look we can see that the sea and the waves are already roaring and lashing and foaming out against the mountains, as represented in the threats and attempts of anarchists and discontents whose numbers are constantly increasing. We can see, too, that the friction between the various factions or elements of society is rapidly getting to the point described by the prophets, when the earth (society) will be on fire, and the elements will melt and disintegrate with the mutually generated heat.

All this trouble will but prepare the world to realize that though men may plan and arrange ever so well and wisely, all their plans will prove futile as long as ignorance and selfishness are in the majority and have the control. It will convince all that the only feasible way of correcting the difficulty is by the setting up of a strong and righteous government, which will subdue all classes, and enforce principles of righteousness, until gradually the stonyheartedness of men will, under favourable influences, give place to the original image of God. And this is just what God has promised to accomplish for all, by and through the Millennial Reign of Christ, which Jehovah introduces by the chastisements and lessons of this day of trouble.—Ezek. 11:19; 36:25, 36; Jer. 31:29-34; Zeph. 3:9; Psa. 46:8, 10.

DUTY AND PRIVILEGE OF THE SAINTS. . .

An important question arises regarding the duty of the saints during this trouble, and their proper attitude toward the two opposing classes now coming into prominence. That some of the saints will still be in the flesh during at least a part of this burning time seems possible. Their position in it, however, will differ from that of others, not so much in that they will be miraculously preserved (though it is distinctly promised that their bread and water shall be sure) but in the fact that, being instructed from God’s Word, they will not feel the same anxiety and hopeless dread that will overspread the world. They will recognize the trouble as the preparation, according to God’s plan, for blessing the whole world, and they will be cheered and comforted through it all. This is forcibly stated in Psa. 91; Isa. 33:2-14, 15-24.

Thus comforted and blessed by the divine assurance, the first duty of the saints is to let the world see that in the midst of all the prevailing trouble and discontent, and even while they share the trouble and suffer under it, they are hopeful, cheerful and always rejoicing in view of the glorious outcome foretold in God's Word.

The Apostle has written that "Godliness with contentment is great gain," and though this has always been true, it will have double force in this Day of the Lord, when discontent is the chief ailment among all worldly classes. To these the saints should be a notable exception. There never was a time when dissatisfaction was so widespread; and yet there never was a time when men enjoyed so many favours and blessings. Wherever we look, whether into the palaces of the rich, replete with conveniences and splendours of which Solomon in all his glory knew almost nothing, or whether we look into the comfortable home of the thrifty and temperate wage-worker, with its evidence of taste, comfort, art and luxury, we see that in every way the present exceeds in bountiful supply every other period since the creation, many-fold; and yet the people are unhappy and discontented. The fact is that the desires of a selfish, depraved heart know no bounds. Selfishness has so taken possession of all, that, as we look out, we see the whole world madly pushing and driving and clutching after wealth. A few only being successful, the remainder are envious and soured because they are not the fortunate ones, and all are discontented and miserable—more so than in any former time.

But the saint should take no part in that struggle. His consecration vow was that he would strive and grasp and run for a higher, a heavenly prize, and hence he is weaned from earthly ambitions, and labours not for earthly things, except to provide things decent and needful; for he is giving heed to the course and example of the Master and the apostles.

Therefore they have contentment with their godliness, not because they have no ambition, but because their ambition is turned heavenward and absorbed in the effort to lay up treasure in heaven and to be rich toward God; in view of which, and of their knowledge of God's plans revealed in His Word, they are content with whatever of an earthly sort God may provide. These can joyfully sing:

"Content, whatever lot I see,

Since 'tis God's hand that leadeth me."

If the example of the saints is thus one of contentment and joyful anticipation, and a cheerful submission to present trials in sure hope of the good time coming, such living examples alone are valuable lessons for the world. And in addition to the example, the counsel of the saints to those about them should be in harmony with their faith. It should be of the nature of ointment amid healing balm. Advantage should be taken of circumstances to point the world to the good time coming, to preach to them the coming Kingdom of God, and to show the real cause of present troubles, and the only remedy.—Luke 3:14; Heb. 13:5; Phil. 4:71.

Correspondence.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Please would you send me a copy of your Talks on “God’s Chosen People” which you have been speaking of over Geelong Station 3GL during the past Sundays. I have been interested in your Talks each Sunday. Thanking you; I am, Yours sincerely.

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Hearing your Dialogue on “Christ’s Return” from the local station on Sunday I wondered if copies of same were still available. I would also be glad of the booklet “Christ’s Second Presence.” If you will please advise I will be happy to forward cost of same. Thanking you; Yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Brothers—I have been listening in to your lectures of a Sunday, and I am very interested in what you say, so would be very pleased if you would send along some of your literature. Yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—It is only a few weeks since I first heard your Sunday morning Dialogue, and they appeal to me. I am an old pensioner living alone, and have been a believer 66 years. I have a good wireless and I am seeking for truth all the time. Do I understand you have some literature available? If so, I shall esteem it a favour if you will send particulars. Thanking you in anticipation.

Dear Frank and Ernest—You will find enclosed a postal note for 5/- towards your Radio Fund. I received all the books and Dialogues quite O.K., for which many thanks, and the “Heavenly Manna” is a lovely little book. Re “Peoples Paper”, that was a nice thought.

If ever there was a time for Christianity it is now; the way things are going people don’t seem to be satisfied with Sunday, with surfing, sports, gambling, drink, etc., and Godless homes; and to think that God has never broken a promise to one who trusts in Him. Yours faithfully.

Dear Frank and Ernest—Would you kindly forward the following—”The Divine Plan of the Ages,” “Some of the-Parables,” “Hell and Spiritism,” and “God and Reason.” Enclosed you will find 10/- to pay for the books, the balance to go for the Radio Fund. I want you to get 5/- for the Fund; if the books are more than 5/- I will send same on, and oblige, Yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I would be very grateful if you would forward to me the discussions which are broadcast over Station 2KY. I have listened with great interest to your Talks when it has been permissible in my house, as my people are all against me because I am a Christian.

I wish you every success in your effort to spread the Word of God, and thanking you, I am, Yours in His service.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I have listened to your Talks on 2KY on prophetic and world events with much interest. I am a Bible student and feel that you will accomplish much by your Talks in the way of awakening and enlightening the careless public. I thank God for the work you are doing and pray that many may be helped by it.

Thank you for your offer of free literature; I would much appreciate it if you would send me the books you recommend in your Talks. Address to me as above. Yours sincerely.

Dear Brothers—In our letter box this morning we found card re your kind offer of free literature on “Scriptural Explanations of World Events.” This subject has been a vital point in my work for the Master, and over 33 years I have, in my medical missionary work, travelled through N.S.W., and S.W. Queensland continually.

My work has been “love work”—fares are provided in trains to where I have to catch any kind of available vehicle, to be swung across rivers in flying foxes, and then on to a waiting horse. In such places all travelling has to be in saddle. I find plenty of accommodation. The Lord uses the medical side of work to open hearts and doors of the very hardest. I have many calls in the cities, etc., through which I pass and have many opportunities to pass on such valuable and needful truths.

I will be most grateful if you can spare me some of your literature to pass on with earnest prayer for the dear Master’s blessing and guidance. May His richest blessing rest upon your work for Him. Gratefully yours in His glad service, till He comes.-

P.S.—There is so much cult and modernistic literature everywhere that it is good to have that on the definite clear Word of God.

Dear Frank and Ernest—Would you kindly send me a copy of the two booklets mentioned in your Sunday Talk, 8th June. My husband and I are regular listeners and are very interested. Yours sincerely.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I listened to your Dialogue over the air for the first time at 8.15 a.m. on June the 1st. I found your Station in trying to trace another one, but was delighted with your Dialogue, also to know I could have a copy of them. I would be so glad if you would post me a script of them from the 1st June, beginning with the Dialogue about “Peter and the Rock” as it will help me in my Bible study, and the booklet too. Thanking you, I am, Yours in the Master’s service.

P.S.—Please find enclosed postage stamps to cover postage.

The Second Advent and Parouisa (Presence) of Christ.

(Convention Address.)

WHEN thinking of this matter of the Second Advent of our Lord it is well to hold in mind the fact that God's plan is one harmonious whole, which is being wrought out through Christ; and that the Second Advent stands related to the work of the First as effect to cause. That is, that the great work of Restitution at the Second Advent follows the work of Redemption accomplished at the First Advent as a logical sequence according to the Divine Plan. The Lord's return is therefore the dawn of hope for the world, the time for the bestowment of the favours secured by the redemption—the 19 centuries of the Gospel Age being an intervening space, during which the Bride of Christ is being selected, to be associated with her Lord in the great work which He comes to accomplish.

When rightly understood the object of our Lord's Second Advent is truly a glorious one. He comes to bring in the long promised times of restitution, when the whole world shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of God.

The Scriptures tell us that when Christ comes the second time, Satan will be bound and all evil will be restrained.

"The ransomed of the Lord (i.e., all mankind) shall return (from the sleep of death) and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads."

At that time God will pour out His spirit upon all flesh, and shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain. The Scriptures clearly teach that when Christ comes the second time He comes to reign, and He must reign until He has put down all enemies—all opponents, all things in the way of the great restitution which He comes to accomplish—the last to be overthrown being death (1 Cor. 15:25-26) and that He will reign for a thousand years.

What a great change will be brought about when Christ comes to reign; everyone shall know about it; and see that it is indeed the Lord's Kingdom which has at last come. Instead of the wicked prospering as they do today, then shall the righteous flourish. Instead of war, and strife, and commotion, unrest and strikes, there shall be "abundance of peace." "He shall judge Thy people with righteousness, and Thy poor with judgment. He shall judge the poor of the people and save the children of the needy, and break in pieces the oppressor." (Psa. 72.)

We see then that the Second coming of our Lord is indeed a greater matter altogether than that of the First Advent. It is not confined to the one nation of Israel; it is not even to occupy a literal throne like the kings of the earth, but Christ shall be king over all the earth, "King of kings and Lord of lords," and much more powerful than if He were once more changed to the limitations of the human body. (Psa. 98.)

Seeing clearly the object of our Lord's Return, that it is to take up His great power and reign, it becomes a matter of intense interest to His people to know how or in what manner He is to be expected. Some Christian people think that when Christ comes the second time He will come again as a man. This conclusion is based upon a too literal interpretation of some scriptures. In 1 Thess. 4:16 we read, "The Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the Archangel, and with the trump of God." The voice and the trumpet mentioned here correspond with the same figures used in Rev. 11:15-19. "The seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying The Kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of His Christ, and He shall reign forever and ever . . . And the nations were angry, and Thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged." This expression agrees also with the statement of the prophet Daniel, ch. 12:1-2, "And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great Prince . . . and there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation . . . and many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake."

It seems clear that Daniel and John both refer to the same time of which the Apostle Paul speaks in 1 Thess. 4:16. It is the time of our Lord's appearing, and the preparation for the establishment of His Kingdom in the midst of a great time of trouble. The "shout," the "voice of the Archangel" and the "trump of God" are all symbols. We would not expect that the second coming of our Lord would be announced by a literal, audible sound on the air. It seems clear that Paul is here referring to what the Revelator terms "the seventh trumpet," the "last trump" in a series of symbolic trumpets. We note also the Apostle Paul's reference to the same trump in 1

Cor. 15:51-52. "Behold I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed; in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."

The proof that these references are to the same trumpet is found in the record of the events connected with each.

Paul mentions the resurrection, and the establishment of the Lord's Kingdom, as connected with "the Trump of God," and the Revelator mentions the same with even greater minuteness. The sounding of the "seventh" or "last trump" is an indication of the presence of our Lord; the events due to take place at the sounding of the "last" or "seventh trump" are visible to the eye of faith. There can be no doubt that we are living in the day of His preparation the period which precedes the actual reign of Christ and His Church. On every hand there is evidence of the fulfilment of Daniel's prophecy (ch. 12) in which he states that when Michael shall stand up there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation. The name Michael signifies "who as God" or one representing God, a fit name for Him who is "the express image of the Father's person."

The Scriptures show that it is the preparation for the setting up of Christ's Kingdom in the earth that causes the dissolution of the kingdoms of this world of which Satan is the ruler.

Another text which is sometimes taken to show that Christ will come in human form, is found in Acts 1:11. It reads—"This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come, in like manner, as ye have seen Him go into heaven." Some think the meaning of this passage is—As ye see the Lord ascend into heaven, so, in like manner you shall see Him come again. A little careful consideration of this text, however, reveals that it does not say that those who saw Him go will see Him come, nor that anyone else will see Him come. What is stated in this Scripture is that the manner of His coming will be like the manner of His going? And what was the manner of His going? Was it with great spectacular demonstration? Was it with trumpet sound and voices and a great shout rending the air? If so, we should expect His coming again to be "in like manner." On the other hand was it not quietly and secretly, quite unknown to the world, and known only to the little flock of His own footstep followers? His statement (John 14:19) "Yet a little while and the world seeth Me no more," has never yet been disproved; for none but the brethren saw even His manifestations after His resurrection, and no others witnessed His ascension. And in like manner as He went away (quietly, secretly, so far as the world was concerned, and unknown except to His followers), so, in this manner, He comes again. And as when He went away He lifted up His hands and blessed them, so, when He comes again, it is that their joy may be full, as He said "I will come again, and receive you unto Myself," "I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you." (John 14:3; 16:22.)

Describing His Second Advent our Lord also said, "Behold I come as a thief." How does a thief come? He comes stealthily, and at a time when people are unaware of his presence. But did not the Scripture say "Behold He cometh with clouds and every eye shall see Him"? The Greek word here translated "see" signifies "to discern." It will be with the eyes of their understanding that all men will "see" or discern the great change of dispensations taking place.

"And when He was questioned of the Pharisees when the Kingdom of God should come, He answered them and said, The Kingdom of God cometh not with observation" (marginal reading, not with outward show. Luke 17:20).

These Scriptures show that the Lord will be present unseen, doing a work of which the world for a time will be entirely unaware. His arrival must therefore be in a quiet manner, unobserved, and unknown to the world, just "as a thief" would come, without noise or other demonstration to attract attention.

The Scriptures assure us that the Lord does not leave His people in ignorance concerning the fact of His presence. His direction to His disciples when about to leave them was, "Watch therefore for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." Again He said, "Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning, And ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, . . . that when He cometh and knocketh, they may open unto Him immediately. Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when He cometh shall find watching; verily I say unto you, that He shall gird Himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them."

Surely the Lord's consecrated people in these last days have realized the fulfilment of this promise. The light, the knowledge and understanding which God's people now have concerning the Plan of the Ages together with its times and seasons, surpasses anything which the church has had since the times of the Apostles. According to His promise the Lord has indeed come forth to serve His people, and what a blessing has come to us as we have feasted our minds upon the rich treasures of His grace as now revealed to us through His Word. The world of mankind around us cannot appreciate the light of truth which now shines out from the pages of God's Word. The natural man perceiveth not the things of the spirit; they are foolishness unto him, therefore we need not wonder that the worldly-minded are unable to see the signs which indicate the presence of our Lord.

Our Lord's presence will be manifested to the world by exhibitions of "power and great glory," not, however, merely to the natural sight, but to the eyes of their understanding, as they shall open to an appreciation of the great changes which will then be effected. His presence and righteous authority will be recognized in the punishments, and later in the blessings that will flow out to mankind when His reign begins.

In that Day, evil powers are to be overthrown, and righteousness, established by a gradual process, shall speedily work out a corresponding retribution to evil-doers, and blessings to them that do good—"Tribulation and anguish upon every soul of man that doeth evil, . . . but glory, honour and peace to every man that worketh good—in that day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God, who will render to every man according to his deeds."

(Rom. 2:9, 10, 6, 5.)

And since there is so much that is wrong now the retribution will be very severe at first, making a “time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation.” Thus, in vengeance, and trouble, and wrath upon the nations, will the Lord reveal to the world, the fact of the change of dispensations. And thus, “when the judgments of the Lord are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness.” (Isa. 26:5-11.)

Our Lord will thus reveal Himself gradually. some will discern His presence sooner than others, but ultimately “every eye shall see (discern) Him.” (Rev. 1:7.)

But “He cometh with clouds,” and while the clouds of trouble are heavy and dark, when the mountains (kingdoms of this world) are trembling and falling, and the earth (organised society), is being shaken, disintegrated, melted, some will begin to realize that the great day of Jehovah has come; that the foretold day of trouble and wrath upon the nations is beginning; and that Jehovah’s Anointed is laying justice to the line and righteousness to the plummet. (Isa. 28:7.) And He must reign until He shall have put down all authorities and laws on earth, contrary to those which control in heaven.

While the Lord’s presence will be revealed to the world by means of the judgments of the fiery time of trouble; (see 2 Thes. 1:7-8) yet a different method is used to make known to His footstep followers the fact that that important event has taken place. Our Lord repeatedly urged upon His followers the necessity for earnest watchfulness respecting His Second Advent. His words are, “Watch therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.”

And when His disciples inquired what would be the sign of His presence and the end of the Age, the Lord gave them certain signs or indications which would enable us to know of the fact of His presence after it had occurred.

In our Authorised Version the Greek word “Parousia” is incorrectly rendered “coming.” In the Emphatic Diaglott and in Prof. Young’s translation it is rendered “presence,” and in the marginal reading of the Revised Version “presence” is acknowledged to be the true definition of the word. This Greek word “parousia” invariably signifies personal presence, as having come, having arrived; and it should never be understood as signifying to be on the way, as the English word “coming” is generally used.

In the 24th chapter of Matthew’s Gospel we have what has been termed our Lord’s great prophecy, and when we remember that it was in answer to the question “What shall be the sign of Thy presence and of the end of the Age”? it assists us to identify the Divinely provided signs. Coming down to verse 27 in this 24th of Matthew, our Lord furnished us with a most beautiful illustration of the manner in which His presence will be revealed. His words are,

“As the bright-shining emerges from the east, and illuminates even unto the west, so will be the presence of the Son of Man.” That most translations of this verse are faulty in using the word lightning, where sunlight is meant, is evident; for lightning flashes do not come out of the east and shine unto the west. They just as frequently come from other quarters, and rarely, if ever, flash clear across the heavens. The Lord’s illustration, and the only one which will comport with His words, is the sun’s brightness, which does invariably emerge from the east and shine even unto the west. The Greek word “astrape,” here used is thus shown to be improperly translated in this text, and also in the account of the same words by Luke (ch. 17:24.) Another instance of the use of the word “astrape” by our Lord is found in Luke 11:36, where it applies to the brightness of a candle, and in the common version is rendered “bright- shining.” “As the bright-shining of a candle doth give thee light.” Incorrect ideas of the manner of our Lord’s coming and revealing, firmly fixed in the minds of the translators, led them into this error of translating “astrape” by the word “lightning.”

They supposed that He would be revealed suddenly, like a flash of lightning, and not gradually, like the dawning sunlight. But how beautiful is the figure of sunrise, as illustrating the gradual dawning of truth and blessing in the day of His presence. The Lord associates the overcomers with Himself in this figure, saying, “Then shall the righteous shine forth as the Sun in the Kingdom of their Father.” (Matt. 13:43.) And the Prophet, using the same figure, says,

The Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His beams.” (Mal. 4:2.) The dawning is gradual, but finally the full, clear brightness shall thoroughly banish the darkness of evil, ignorance, superstition and sin.

In Matt. 24:30 our Lord refers again to the sign of His presence among His professing people. “Then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven.” The sign or proof of His “parousia” will be given in heaven. Not in the heaven of the Father’s presence, and before the holy angels, but in the symbolic heaven, the ecclesiastical heaven. It is in this heaven the professedly spiritual class—that the sign or evidence of our Lord’s presence will first be apparent. Some will “see” the fulfilment of the prophetic declarations respecting this day of the second presence, in the marvellous unfolding of the Divine plan of the Ages, and will recognize it as one of the signs of His presence. (Luke 12:37.) The judgment of Babylon, Christendom, social and ecclesiastical, is another sign that the Judge has come, and is reckoning first of all with those to whom as stewards He committed His goods. (Matt. 25:19; Luke 19:15.) “Judgment must begin with the house of God.” It is to Laodicea the last or seventh period in the church’s history that the announcement is made “because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold or hot, I will spue thee out of My mouth.” (Rev. 3:14-16.)

The gathering together of God’s elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other, referred to in verse 31, is also a sign of our Lord’s presence. It is a sign in the heavens—amongst the professedly spiritual class. Have we not all observed that during the past 60 or 70 years particularly, there has been a work of separation going on amongst the Lord’s people? And have we not heard and responded to the call, “Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins and receive not of her plagues.” (Rev. 18:1-5.)

The Harvest work in progress is probably one of the clearest proofs of our Lord's presence. The parable of the wheat and tares illustrates the special work which marks the closing period of the Gospel Age. We are all familiar with the parable which pictures the man who sowed good seed in his field, and how later his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat. When the servants of the householder noticed the growth of the tares they became alarmed and said to their lord, “Wilt thou that we go and gather them up? But the lord says nay, lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them. Let both grow together until the harvest, and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them, but gather the wheat into my barn.”

In explaining this parable our Lord said—“The harvest is the end of the age.” The tares or imitation Christians are to be gathered in bundles for the burning, while the wheat, which represents God's true people, the “little flock” of overcomers, is to be gathered into the barn of safety. Just as our Lord was present during the Harvest of the Jewish Age in the gathering of the wheat from the chaff of that nation, so also He is present during the Harvest period of the Gospel Age, gathering the “wheat from the tares.” His presence during this harvest as chief Reaper is shown in Rev. 14:14, 16.

Verse 32. The parable of the Fig-tree is another sign, this one on the earth. In Luke 13:6-9 we have a parable of the fig-tree which was fruitless, and the owner threatened to cut it down, but afterwards spared it in order to give it a further opportunity to bear fruit. It would seem to illustrate the unfruitful condition of the Jewish nation, and the Lord's long-suffering with that people. Also in Matt. 21:19 there is the incident of the unfruitful fig-tree which Jesus cursed and immediately it withered away. Both these references seem to point to the Jewish nation as represented by the fig-tree. So in Matt. 24:32. In this verse we believe our Lord is referring to the Jewish nation under the figure of the fig-tree. The fig-tree putting forth its leaves would, we believe, illustrate the revival of the Jewish national hopes. God had promised that He would restore them again to their own land and establish them there, and as the times of the gentile domination over Israel come to a close we see the indications of God's returning favour to His people.

The fact that we can see these indications is proof that we are living in the time of the Lord's presence. Our Lord's words in verse 34 indicate that the generation living at the time when these signs could be recognized would not pass till all these things be fulfilled (commence to have their fulfilment.) The presence of Christ indicates the very near approach of His Millennial Kingdom.

Verse 35. “Heaven and earth shall pass away” (see 2 Pet. 3:10.) The fiery time of trouble which marks the full end of the Gospel Age will destroy the present “heavens” (ruling power of which Satan is Prince) and the “earth” (the present order of things which is based on injustice;) “but My words shall not pass away.”

In verses 37-39 our Lord refers again to the disciples' question regarding His “parousia.” He says “As the days of Noah so shall also the ‘parousia’ (presence) of the son of man be.” The comparison we notice is not between the coming of Noah and the coming of our Lord, nor between the coming of the flood and the coming of our Lord. The coming of Noah is not referred to at all; neither is the coming of our Lord referred to; for as we have seen “parousia” does not mean coming, but “presence.” The contrast, then, is between the time of the presence of Noah among the people “before the flood,” and the time of the “presence” of Christ in the world, at His Second Advent, before the fire of trouble which marks the full end of the present dispensation.

And though the people were wicked in Noah's day before the flood, and will be wicked in the time of our Lord's presence, before the hot fire of trouble comes upon them, yet this is not the point of comparison or likeness to which our Lord refers; for wickedness has abounded in every age.

The point of comparison is clearly stated, and is readily seen if we read the passage carefully. The people, except the members of Noah's family, were ignorant of the coming flood, and unbelieving as to the testimony of Noah and his family, and hence they “knew not”; and this is the point of comparison. So shall also the “presence” of the Son of man be. None but those of the family of God will believe here; others will “know not,” until society, as at present organised, begins to melt with the fervant heat of the great time of trouble now impending.

This is illustrated by the words, “As in the days that were before the flood, they were eating, drinking and marrying until the day Noah entered into the ark, and knew not, “so shall also the parousia (the presence) of the Son of man be.” In the time of the presence of the Son of man, therefore, the world will go on with its eating, drinking, planting, building and marrying—not mentioned as sinful doings, but as indicative of their ignorance of His presence, and of the trouble that will prevail in the world. This, then, is our Lord's answer to the question of the disciples—What shall be the sign (or indication) of Thy presence and of the end of the Age? It is as though the Lord said: There will be no sign for the worldly masses; they will not know of My presence and the new dispensational changes. Only a few will know, and they will be taught of God before there is any sign which the worldly could discern.

The closing verses from verse 42 on, are full of meaning.. In verse 37 our Lord had shown that the world would not know of the parousia of the Son of man; and now He cautions His professed disciples that, unless on their guard, they will be similarly in darkness relative to His presence. He says, “Watch, therefore; for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.” If one expected a thief to come at a definite time, they would stay awake so as not to be taken unawares; so the Lord urges upon us to be ever awake, always ready, and watching for the first evidence of His presence.

“Who, then, is a faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord hath made ruler over His household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord when He cometh shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you,

That He shall make him ruler over all His goods.” All the storehouse of precious truth shall be opened to such faithful servants, to supply and feed the household of faith.

But if the servant’s heart is not right, he will say, My Master tarries (He has not arrived) and may smite his fellow-servants (who are declaring that the Lord has arrived.) Such may eat and drink with the intemperate (become intoxicated with the spirit of the world), but the Master of that servant will come (will have arrived) in a day not expected, and in an hour in which that servant is not aware, and will cut him off and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites.

Thus we see that the period of the Lord’s presence among His people during the Harvest time of the Age is a time of separating His faithful people and gathering them together unto Himself in harmony with the Prophet’s statement.

“Gather My saints together unto Me those that have made a covenant with Me by sacrifice.”

In the Lord’s sight it is evidently an important matter that His Church, His prospective Bride, should continue to maintain an attitude of watchfulness. If we fail to watch we will not discern His presence, and even after being made acquainted with the fact of His presence we must still keep on the alert. In this connection how appropriate are the Master’s words in Luke 21:34-36. “Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth. Watch ye therefore, and pray always that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all those things that shall come to pass and to stand before the Son of Man.”

News and Views.

THE war of religions—Christianity versus Communism—is now being fought in Europe, and it is one of the most important happenings in the world today.”

The above announcement introduces a report which appeared in the Melbourne press some few weeks ago from Alexander Clifford of the London “Daily Mail” who had gone to Rome in search of an answer to the question, “Kremlin or Vatican?” This report, quoted in part, continues as follows “Vatican City.—The bells of St. Peter’s shake down their golden notes into the heavy Roman sunshine. The pigeons wheel among the fountains. The pilgrims come and go in shabby victorias drawn by scrawny horses.

“Cardinals and monsignori glide by in sleek cars and at the doors in the wall of the Vatican stand guards in Renaissance uniforms. The sun-soaked wall itself was built to outlast eternity. But there is writing on it these days. ‘Viva II Communismo!’ says the writing. Hammers and sickles are scrawled around the words. How seriously does the Vatican take the threat of this new religion which is lapping its very walls? Does it realise its danger?

“Communism, whether you like it or not, is a spreading faith which claims to be valid for all mankind. Catholicism, whether you like it or not, is an internationally-organised Church with over 300,000,000 adherents. The two faiths are diametrically opposed. And now, in Poland, Yugoslavia, Hungary and Czechoslovakia, Communism has overlapped into Catholic territory.”

After questioning what Catholic tactics are going to be under these circumstances, and suggesting three possible lines which the Vatican can take in this extreme crisis, the press reporter concludes “The Pope—the Catholic commander-in-chief in this war of religions—has a reputation for intelligence rather than fighting strength. It may be that he is meeting Communism with some deeper, subtler scheme which has not yet shown itself. But as far as an outsider can judge in this camp, the Vatican is leaning most heavily on its spiritual strength as a defensive weapon and its faith that evil cannot in the end prevail. And judging by the inroads already made by Communism in Catholic countries, that is not enough.”

The above report is certainly of much interest to the Lord’s people who are observing the fulfilment of Bible prophecy in the last days of this “present evil world.” Much has happened to restrict and weaken the influence of Catholicism in Europe since 1914 (apart from the time of the Reformation onward), but this, including what is happening today, is in no way unfavourable to Christianity, strange as this may seem to some people. The explanation is found of course in the fact that the Papal system, existing since the sixth century, has never represented Christianity in the world. St. Paul very clearly predicted the setting up of this great antichristian system, which he styled “The Man of Sin,” and “The Mystery of Iniquity.” (2 Thes. 2:3-7.) Likewise, our Lord warned against the same when in Matthew 24:15 He quoted from Daniel respecting the “abomination of desolation.” Again, the all-seeing Lord in His messages to the churches in Revelation, comforted His true people as they remained faithful amidst “Satan’s seat,” and “the synagogue of Satan,” (Rev. 2:13; 3:9), both references being to the wicked, persecuting system of the Papacy. It will be seen, therefore, that the conflict above mentioned in Europe is incorrectly styled Christianity versus Communism; rather should it be termed Churchianity versus Communism.

True Christianity has no more reason to fear today than when its Founder was put to death and His cause apparently defeated in the eyes of the worldly wise. All through the darkest days of the persecuting power of Rome the message of Christianity was doing its work, confirming the saints and supporting them in the faith, even unto death. And the same is also true today; the pure truths of Christianity continue to be the means whereby the Lord is “taking out a people for His name,” from the world, and from the religious systems of which the Papacy is termed the “Mother.”

But though Christianity is prospering in harmony with God’s will, in that one here and there is drawn to the Son by the Father (John 6:44) and developed in preparation for the heavenly Kingdom, what can be expected as a result of this conflict between the Papacy and Communism? The Scriptures make it very clear that we are approaching the time when the Catholic system will be destroyed from the face of the earth. In Daniel 7 a prophecy is given depicting the four world empires of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome. There can be no doubt that Daniel 7:7-11 reveals the rise and fall of Papacy within the Roman Empire. Verse 11 reads, “I (Daniel) beheld then (in vision) because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake (pompous claims of the Papacy); I beheld, even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame.” Note also Dan. 7:15-27; verses 23 to 26 are especially descriptive of the rise and consuming of Papacy.

If, then, the influences of Communism are to be used to promote the consuming of the great Catholic system, which has deceived all nations, surely it will mean the liberation, in preparation for Christ’s Kingdom on earth of 300,000,000 human beings who are at present captivated by the abominable doctrine of the Mass, bowing down in superstitious worship of the Virgin Mary and held by other gross errors in this “mystery of iniquity.”

While the above is not to be taken as indicating that Communism could solve the world’s troubles, yet any system which the Lord may use to break the power of the great antichrist, even though it produce anarchy in so doing, must be endured by mankind until Christ’s Kingdom takes over control and brings “the desire of all nations” for the benefit of all the obedient.

The position of Protestant Churches is also of interest in view of world conditions, and the following news item appeared in the Melbourne “Age” of 21st July last, under the heading “The Dullness of Christianity.”

“Christianity, respectable, tame and harmless in its modern form, lacked challenge, and as a result many young people were turning to Communism, a revolutionary cause to which they could give their lives. This assertion was made last night by Rev. J. Arthur Lewis when speaking in Collins-street Baptist Church on 'The Joy of Getting Into Trouble.' Although their perspective is wrong, in my opinion, their spirit is to be admired,' added Mr. Lewis. By common consent the trend of modern Christians was not to manifest any of the fanatical goodness associated with early Christianity. As a result the modern Christian was 'just mediocre.' Playing safe and keeping out of trouble was the main worry of most Christians."

How well Mr. Lewis has described present-day church systems which the Lord has cast off from His favour, and not Christianity, can be seen by comparing his remarks with Christ's message to Laodicea, the seventh and last church period, as given in Rev. 3:15-17—"I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth. Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked."

What a terrible condition is thus revealed by the Lord, and the fact that many young people were turning from such systems to Communism is quite natural, inasmuch as they have never understood Christianity. The fault lays not with these young people, but with church leaders who claim to represent Christianity and yet continue to associate with the luke-warm, worldly systems of Christendom, whose teachings are contrary to the Word of God.

The most glaring errors held by most of the so-called Protestant Churches are also part of the teachings of Roman Catholicism and are as follows: The Immortality of the Soul, which, if correct, would cancel the necessity for Christ's sacrifice; the Doctrine of the Trinity; Hell; Infant Baptism; Misconception of the Second Advent and Times of Restitution. Additional errors held by the Roman Catholic Church are the Mass, worship of the Virgin Mary, and Purgatory. It is not to be wondered that we find the Catholic Church system referred to as the "Mother of harlots" in the Scriptures (Rev. 17:5 etc.) and the so-called Protestant Churches aptly take the position of children and follow to a great extent in the steps of the "Mother." Be it noted that the term "Mother of harlots" clearly denotes that the daughter systems have also entered into illegal union with the world, and thus have been rejected by the Lord.

Under the title of "Babylon" both mother and daughter systems are described in Revelation 18 from verse 2—"Babylon the great is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird. For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies." Then follows in verse 4 the Lord's appeal to those of sincere heart condition within these systems—"Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues: For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities."

The plagues on Babylon may be brought about by Communism, or at least by a rising of the masses of mankind generally, but whatever the forces used, the Lord makes no mistake when He exhorts His people to free themselves from any assembly holding any of the errors of Babylon, that they may be "accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man."

These true hearted Christians are likened to keen-eyed eagles. They appreciate the truths of God's Word when they find them; unhindered by the errors of man-made creeds they delight to assemble together with other alert Christians to partake of the food which the Lord provides for all who worship Him in spirit and truth.—"Whosoever the body (food) is, thither will the eagles be gathered together." (Luke 17:37.)

Brethren Finish the Earthly Way.

Two elderly brethren have finished the pilgrim way recently—Brother Fox of Sydney on 28th June last, and Brother Biggin of Digby, Victoria, on the 21st July.

Brother Fox first gained a knowledge of the truth, by the Lord's providence, through the reading of a tract about 15 years ago, and he rejoiced greatly in the glad tidings ever since. Having been a Roman Catholic, he ceased not to praise the Lord for deliverance from such a bondage, and often remarked how he prayed for the Lord's blessing upon all God's true servants and the printing presses which produced the literature containing the truth message. Of a most loveable disposition, a visit to the dear old Brother made one feel blessed indeed, as the spirit of the Lord overflowed to those about him. The visits from one and another, including two friends from a distance, were always appreciated, especially as failing eyesight and other bodily weaknesses kept Brother Fox confined to his room in recent years. He had reached the advanced age of 88 years and was looking forward to his heavenly Home. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints."

Brother Biggin had rejoiced in the truth for many years, having first received the message of the kingdom through a tract placed in his goods by a Brother in the same district. For a number of years the home of Brother and Sister Biggin was the meeting place for the little Class at Digby, and quite a few visiting friends who passed through at different times will well remember the cheery, rejoicing manner and appreciation of the truth manifest by our dear Brother. He will be missed very much by elderly Sister Biggin with whom he has shared companionship in life for about 64 years, also by the members of his family and the brethren in Digby and Merino. Sincere sympathy is extended to Sister Biggin and family in their great loss; no doubt the message of the truth will give great comfort especially to our elderly Sister Biggin, who will sorrow not as those without hope. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, from henceforth: Yea, saith the spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them."

Onward Go !

(“Let US go ON.”—Heb. 6:1.)

Pray on, pray on, dear pilgrims! God hears and answers prayer!
He'll lighten every burden, He'll drive away your care.
Pray on, pray on, ne'er ceasing, pray with thanksgiving, too,
There's much to own to goodness, God is so good and true.

Work on, work on, dear pilgrims! the need is truly great!
The fields are white to harvest ! work ere it be too late.
Be steadfast and unmoving, abounding day by day,
His grace is all sufficient, however rough the way.

Sing on, sing on, dear pilgrims! then sighing will depart !
The song which gladdens others, will cheer your weary heart.
Sing songs of joy and gladness, this world is full of woe,
Sing in the shade or sunshine, sing everywhere you go.

Wait on, wait on, dear pilgrims! the time is drawing near,
When labours will be ended, and Christ will re-appear;
Our eyes shall then behold Him, we'll see His blessed face,
And tell with hearts enraptured, the story of His grace.

Press on, press on, dear pilgrims! the upward way leads Home!
The wilderness or desert is only “Till He Come.”
The past is all forgiven, the future fair and bright:
Soon, soon will be the “Welcome,” and ended be the night.

Cheer up, cheer up, dear pilgrims! oft tried with griefs and pain!
We must, through tribulation, the Heavenly glory gain.
The suff'ring of this present, compared can never be
With glories that shall follow, through all eternity.

What Hast Thou Done?

The Simplicity of the Master's Service.

(John 18:35, 36. Convention Address.)

ORDINARILY, when an innocent person is brought before a law court and accused of wrong doing, he is quick to deny the charge. If asked as Jesus was, "What hast thou done?" human wisdom dictates that the answer should be "I have done nothing." Jesus did not reply thus to Pilate, however, because He was not there to defend Himself, and besides He could not truthfully say He had done nothing. Jesus had done much! He had spent three and a half years doing things which had aroused the hatred of Israel's religious leaders against Him, and now they had brought Him before Pilate and demanded that He be crucified.

It was true that Jesus had committed no crimes that could be justly charged against Him, but He had been active in doing good. He had healed the sick, cleansed the lepers, cast out demons, opened blind eyes, raised the dead, and equally praiseworthy the gracious words which proceeded out of His mouth had helped to loose the shackles of superstition that had been fastened upon Israel by their hypocritical leaders. These works of grace and goodness were appreciated by many of the common people who heard Him gladly; indeed, His popularity rose to a point where the Pharisees became fearful that if He were left alone the whole world would become His followers, as it is written in Matthew 23:25. This is why Jesus was hated by those whose position of power and authority in the nation was jeopardised by His teachings and works of righteousness. As members of the fallen race motivated by selfishness and unrighteous ambitions, they were utterly unable to understand (much less appreciate) the Master's selfless viewpoint and untiring zeal for the blessing of others. To them, Jesus was a misfit, one whose precepts and example exposed their unrighteousness, and in time might prevent their grasping practices of devouring widows' houses. They wanted to put a stop to His going about doing good, because they selfishly desired to continue their practice of doing evil, so they cried, "Crucify Him, crucify Him."

While Pilate probably knew, in a general way, something of the Master's activities throughout Judea, yet his question, "What hast Thou done?" was no doubt a sincere effort on his part to get a better understanding of what had caused the religious leaders of Israel to rise up against Jesus and demand His death. As for the priests and Pharisees themselves, however, there was no need for them to seek information concerning the details of Jesus' life, because He had seen to it that they were made acquainted with His activity. As evidence of this we have the account of Matthew 8:1-4, telling us of the cleansing of the leper. After Jesus had performed this outstanding miracle He said, "See thou tell no man, but go thy way, show thyself to the priest, and offer the gift that Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them."

From this, we see that while the Master was not interested in promoting Himself in the eyes of the public, He did desire that those who sat in Moses' seat should be aware of what He was doing and that His benefactions should be reported to the priests, in keeping with the spirit of the law given through Moses. In this, as in other miracles performed by Jesus there is revealed an utter lack of any desire or effort on His part to be personally benefited. Jesus was not willing to use the divine power at His command on behalf of Himself, but on all appropriate occasions He was glad of the opportunity to bless others.

The first suggestion made to the Master that He perform a miracle came from Satan. Jesus had been fasting for forty days, and of course would be virtually famished for food. Satan appeared and suggested that He use the power now at His command to turn stones into bread. As no one would be benefited but Himself, and in addition it would reveal a lack of faith in the manner in which God was caring for all His interests, Jesus turned down this suggestion; but when the leper came to Him saying, "Lord if Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean," we read that Jesus said, "I will; be thou clean," and immediately his leprosy was cleansed.

If the scribes and Pharisees could discover that in any way Jesus was seeking to promote or benefit Himself by the good He was doing, they might have found a way to co-operate with Him in a way to serve their own selfish interests, but what selfish compromise could they suggest to a man who was willing to devote His whole life purely in the interests of others? There was only one way to deal with one like this, and that was to put Him 'out of the way'.

The spirit of selfishness which motivated Israel's leaders was further manifested in their planned effort that what little good they selfishly did should be seen and heard of men; but not so with Jesus. The spirit of God which was in Him promoted a beautiful simplicity and straightforwardness in what He did that calculated to divert attention from Himself and to direct it toward God, the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

When the centurion came to Jesus, informing Him that his servant was "at home sick of the palsy," Jesus' simple reply was, "I will come and heal him." (Matt. 8:6, 7.) There was no bargaining, no hint that the centurion, by accepting this favour, would be placed under obligation, nor any attempt to wrest from him a pledge of future support—all tactics by which a selfish world, through boastfulness, has perverted charity into gainful exploitation. This was utterly lacking in Jesus.

Matthew 8:14 reads, "And when Jesus was come into Peter's house, He saw his wife's mother laid, and sick of fever." Again, there is no show or unnecessary ado. Here was a human being who needed help, and Jesus helped her. After all, the Master had come into the world that through Him all might have health and life, and why should the healing of Peter's mother-in-law be anything extraordinary for Him to do? So we read, "He touched her hand and the fever left her and she arose."

Again in Matthew 8:16, 17 we read that "When the even was come, they brought unto Him many that were possessed with devils: and He cast out the spirits with His words, and healed all that were sick; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses." It would seem that in spite of the fact that Jesus made no effort to acquaint the people with His miracle-working powers, His fame spread, and by the close of this day He found Himself the centre of attraction, and His popularity increasing. That the Master was not seeking this result from the good He was doing is apparent from the 18th verse, which reads, "Now when Jesus saw great multitudes about Him, He gave commandment to depart unto the other side."

The plan of God reveals that in due time all men will be drawn to Jesus, that He is the true light which yet is to enlighten every man that cometh into the world. But Jesus was not desirous that the multitudes at that time be drawn to Him, nor that they should be attracted merely because of the temporary good He was able to bestow upon them. The drawing of all men in His Father's due time, was to be based, as Jesus explained, upon the fact that He would be lifted up as man's Redeemer and sin-bearer, even as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness.

This supreme example of love that does good, even in sacrificing of His life that the world through him might have forgiveness of sin, must be the real drawing power for those who come unto God through Jesus, and in so coming it is necessary that one not only appreciate the unselfish sacrifice of the Master, but that he himself partake of the spirit of unselfish love that prompted it.

Jesus recognised that the crowd which followed Him for the loaves and fishes and the benefits of His miracle-working power, were not ready to recognise their need of sin atonement, and much less were they willing to follow His example of unselfishness by laying down their lives for others. They were glad to obtain all they could from Him, but few of them were willing to sacrifice their lives for the unselfish cause which He represented.

When Jesus arranged to cross to the other side of the lake to get away from the multitude that was singing His praises as long as they could receive His benefits, we are told that "a certain scribe came and said unto Him, Master,

I will follow Thee whithersoever Thou goest." (Matt. 8:19.) Most religious leaders would have 'been flattered and pleased with this expression of devotion and pledge of support, but not Jesus. His reply to the scribe was calculated to cause the would-be disciple to change his mind unless he had indeed caught the spirit of the Master's teaching and example, and was ready to follow in His steps of self-sacrifice unto death. Jesus said, "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay His head." The scribe could get no other implication from these words except that if he followed Jesus, he, too, would have no place to lay his head, and from the world's standpoint would be homeless and an outcast. Such is the cost of a life of doing good, in this present evil world.

The good works of the Master were not occasional incidents, but His life's habits. He was never too occupied to give heed to the needs of those who came to Him for help. Not only did He use the miracle-working power of God, which was at His command, to heal the sick and raise the dead, 'but He gave all His own strength as well. So unselfishly and generously did He thus give, that His perfect human body was practically worn out in His short ministry of three and a half years.

Jesus' ministry was that of doing good unto all men, but He devoted special care and attention to His own disciples who were in training to carry on as the household of faith, following His return to heaven. This is outlined by the Apostle Paul as being the proper course for the Lord's people during this Gospel Age—"As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith." (Gal. 6:10.)

Matthew 9:18-38 gives us an interesting cross-section view of the Master's life, showing how He spent His time and His unselfish interest in the people for whom He was laying down His life. Verse 18 tells of a ruler whose daughter had died, and of his request that Jesus lay His hand upon her that she might live. In response to this plea for help we read that "Jesus arose, and followed him." Ordinarily, one going on such an important mission as that of raising the dead would not wish to be delayed by matters less important. But Jesus was not like ordinary fallen men, who often become so impressed with the importance of their immediate undertakings that they lose sight of the human needs with which they are surrounded.

While on His way to raise the ruler's daughter from the dead, a woman who had been diseased for twelve years came behind Jesus and touched the hem of His garment. Jesus turned around, and when He saw her, He said, "Daughter, be of good comfort, thy faith hath made thee whole. And the woman was made whole from that hour." (Matt. 9:22.) Then He went on to the ruler's house and despite the derision heaped upon Him by the "minstrels and the people," He proceeded with the work in hand, and awakened the maid from the sleep of death.

The fame of this miracle went abroad into all the land, we are told, with the result that, first, two blind men followed Him, asking to have their sight restored; then a dumb man possessed with a devil sought help. These good works by the Master were gaining too much popularity for Him, so the Pharisees began discounting the value of the miracles by claiming that He was casting out devils through the power of Beelzibub, the prince of the devils. But their effort failed. The hour for Jesus' death had not come; He was still to enjoy a season of measurable popularity with the people, during which time He could continue to preach the Kingdom message, and to give illustration by His miracles of the blessings that were to come to all mankind in God's due time. And so we read, "Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues and preaching the gospel of the Kingdom and healing every sickness and every disease among the people." (Matt. 9:35.)

What a following Jesus could have obtained and what power in Israel He could have wielded had He so desired. It would be even so to-day. Individuals, even now, who profess ability to heal the sick always have large crowds at their meetings. Were these "miracles" genuine, as were those of the Master's, the whole world would soon be following any man, or group of men, who could thus heal diseases, and especially so if they could raise the dead. Jesus knew that this would be true in His case, and it became true to the limited extent that the Master permitted it. But He was not then undertaking to convert the world, nor had the time come for the restitution blessings to be dispensed to all mankind.

He rejoiced in the privilege of distributing samples of Kingdom blessings, but it was not time for the flood-gates of the River of Life to be thrown open for the healing of the nations. However, in the miracles He did perform, and His attitude toward the people displayed in connection therewith, we see manifested the real spirit of Christ and His genuine interest, not alone in those He was specially instructing as Apostles, but also in the larger number who had no deeper interest in Him than the material blessings He was able to give them. We read, "But when He saw the multitude, He was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd. Then saith He unto His disciples, the harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few; Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth labourers into His harvest." (Matt. 9:36-38.)

This request of the Master's reveals that those who truly follow Him are invited to join in His works of grace and love. In John 14:12 we read, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth on Me, the works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto My Father." Those who are filled with the Master's spirit of self-sacrifice and are faithful in following Him into death, by laying down their lives for others will, in the Kingdom, share with Him in the work of healing all the sick and raising all the dead. The healing of the people in that, day will be permanent—those who are awakened from the sleep of death will have the opportunity of living forever, on the restored earth, if they will. Thus, all the true followers of the Master will truly share with Him in doing works far greater than those which He performed at His first advent.

But, even now, and in order that we may demonstrate the spirit by which we are controlled, God gives us the opportunity, as ministers of His Word, to do all we can toward opening spiritually blind eyes, and unstopping spiritually deaf ears. We also now may use the Word of reconciliation to cleanse away the disease of sin. Those dead in trespass and sins may even now, by accepting the Gospel message as proclaimed by the feet members of the Body of Christ, be awakened to righteousness and have their mortal bodies quickened by the spirit, to serve the living God. And now, even as in the days of Jesus, those who zealously lay down their lives in thus seeking to bless their fellowmen, will not be held in high esteem by the religiously influential of our time. But it is far better that the servant of God have heaped upon him the reproaches of the world on account of his doing good, than to be placed in a position where he would need to confess that while called out of darkness into the marvellous light of the Gospel, he had done nothing about it so far as the blessing of others was concerned!

Jesus was before Pilate because He had spent His life doing good in the Father's way. He had preached unpopular truth and had exposed popular error and now the pent up animosity of Israel's leaders was being heaped upon Him, and He was rushed to Calvary. However, the Gospel accounts of the Master's life indicate clearly that while the religious leaders of that day finally were successful in causing Him to be put to death, yet there were long periods of His ministry during which He was comparatively free from opposition and persecution.

While persecution and Christian suffering are evidence of God's favour upon the true disciples, constituting important witnesses of the, spirit that we are the children of God, yet let us not be so concerned merely with the desire to be persecuted that we will be induced to do foolhardy or wrong things, in order to elicit the opposition of the powers that be. It would be a tragedy for any followers of Christ to suffer on account of their own wrong doing. It would be equally tragic for a Christian, in order to avoid the ill will of the world, or to maintain a respectable standing in his community, to refrain from faithfulness in proclaiming the glad tidings of the Kingdom. As followers of the Master there is no other course that will have God's 'approval except that of emulating His example, which is preeminently that of interest in others, at the cost of sacrifice. Jesus was consumed by the zeal of His Father's house, a zeal for doing good, for manifesting the spirit of divine love which prompted His Father to send Him into the world, that the world through Him might have life.

For us not to be interested in this viewpoint, and not to be concerned with the well-being of others, especially in connection with the understanding of God, would manifest a lack of the divine spirit by which we may be conformed more and more into the image of God's dear Son.

The Apostle Peter, who, while in a moment of supreme test and without the aid of the holy spirit, denied the Lord, nevertheless, through his association with the Master and by observing the unselfishness of His example and wisdom of His methods., learned well the lesson of love which leads to the laying down of life for others. Years later, Peter expressed himself on the subject, saying, "For what glory is it if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye take it patiently? But if when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God. For even hereunto were ye called, because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example that we should follow in His steps, who did no sin, neither was guile found in His mouth," (1 Pet. 2:20-22.)

We should all note well the many Scriptural declarations that if we suffer with Christ we shall also reign with Him. But let us also remember the only basis for true Christian suffering; namely, not for doing evil, nor for doing nothing, but for doing good. When we suffer for this cause and take it patiently, rejoicingly and faithfully, even unto death, we are thereby demonstrating our wholehearted devotion to God and to the spirit of divine love which must rule supreme in all those who will be blessed with life everlasting.

It will be the Church's privilege, during the Kingdom period, to instruct the world of mankind in the advantages of this way of life. Hence, all its members must qualify in advance to share in such a glorious programme of education, a programme by which the knowledge of the glory of God will be caused to fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. While the world of mankind, when restored to human perfection, will not be called upon to suffer for doing good, they will of necessity need to learn and to practice the love principle in their dealings with others. This is revealed in the Master's explanation to the restored world, as we find it in the Parable of the Sheep and the Goats. To those who are invited to inherit the Kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world, Jesus, explains that the basis of their acceptableness is the fact that they had manifested their interest in others. They had not busied themselves in acts of kindness with the hope of receiving a reward, but had cooperated in the restitution project because they had imbibed the spirit of God who planned it. They had been so wholehearted in the manifestation of the love which ruled their hearts that they were surprised to learn they had done that which had merited their inheritance of the restored paradise. Like the Church of this Age, they entered into eternal life, not because they had refrained from doing evil, nor because, like the goats, they had done nothing, but because they had visited and cared for their brethren.

May Pilate's question to Jesus, "What hast Thou done?" serve as a reminder to us that there is indeed something good for us to do, and that by doing it we may prove worthy to suffer and reign with Christ, and may we ever keep the sympathy of the Master's service before us, and thus follow in His steps.

Conversion of Japanese. Missionary Sceptical.

“The Age” (Melbourne) Special Correspondent in Tokio, 22nd August, 1947.

CHRISTIAN missionaries who returned to Japan to find their churches had been set on fire by the Japanese between Emperor Hirohito's acceptance of the Potsdam Declaration and the arrival of the first occupation troops a fortnight later, are most sceptical about official claims of the surprising rapidity with which the Japanese are adopting Christianity.

Rev. Edwin Dozier, field representative of the Baptist Foreign Mission Board, who has lived in Japan 25 years, said that after ten months' survey of the missionary outlook in post-war Japan, a certain number of Japanese are becoming Christians because of a strong patriotic motive to save the nation. “A great number of Japanese are finding it popular and profitable to become Christians,” added Mr. Dozier. A great number of Japanese also regard Christianity as being synonymous with Western Civilisation with the result that many are becoming Christians in name only, without realising that Christianity requires repentance and change of heart, he said.

News reports such as the above, with reference to present conditions in Japan, are not at all surprising to the Lord's people. But supposing that the official claims of “the surprising rapidity with which the Japanese are adopting Christianity” were correct, what would this mean? It would mean that numbers of the Japanese people were becoming attached to one or another of the denominational churches in similar manner to existing conditions in Australia, Britain and America etc. But would this make the Japanese people really Christians, any more than church attendance makes Christians of English speaking people? The answer is supplied by Mr. Dozier himself, when he admits that “a great number of Japanese are finding it popular and profitable to become Christians.” This proves that true Christianity is not the drawing power in Mr. Dozier's movement, for at no time since our Lord founded the Christian religion and opened up the heavenly calling has it been popular or profitable (from the worldly standpoint) to follow in the steps of Christ.

Where true Christianity is preached it never becomes popular, because the truths of God's Word call for sacrifice—a denial of self and the ways of the world, and service for fellow men, even unto death—and few of mankind are attracted by these terms, as the Scriptures attest. If any movement is so constituted that its message is contrary to the Word of God, then that movement may become popular, but it would not represent the Lord and His cause. It was the popularizing of the Christian movement in the early centuries of this Gospel Age that constituted the great falling away from the faith, and God's true people had to withdraw at that time and have ever since been separate from any movement affiliated with the world and its spirit.

The true Christian way is clearly shown by the words of Christ—“How narrow is the gate of life! how difficult that way leading thither! and how few are they who find it.” (Matt. 7:14, Diaglott.) And again in Luke 12:32 He declared—“Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom.” How strange it would be for the Lord to so express the heavenly calling if He were seeking the conversion of mankind as a whole. Yes, there has been great misrepresentation of the message of the Bible where people have been urged to “win the world for Christ,” as, also when evangelists have taught that the more conversions that were made the more Christ's Kingdom was extending. If more attention were given to the words of the Lord it would be seen, as He declared, “My Kingdom is not of this world,” (this “present evil world” or age—Gospel Age, John 16:36). And even if all the heathen of Japan, China, India and Africa etc., were converted to the present condition of Christendom they would still need to be converted to be Christians to have an inheritance in the heavenly kingdom, for there is probably more evil and wickedness in the so-called Christian nations than among the heathen.

How clear it is that God is, during this Gospel Age, “taking out a people for His name” from the nations (Acts 15:14) and the few who find this way to life, as stated by Jesus, are those who are drawn and called by God (John 6:44; Acts 2:39) first of all to acknowledge and appreciate Christ as their Saviour, being justified by faith in His sacrifice, and then to gladly “present their bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, their reasonable service,” (Rom. 12:1,) that they may be “conformed unto the image of God's Son,” (Rom. 8:29), and thus prepared to participate in the glorious work of the thousand-year Kingdom on earth. This will be the time when all the Japanese, Chinese, Indians and Africans, yes, and Australians, as well as all others of mankind not included in the “little flock” for the Bride of Christ shall have the opportunity together with all the resurrected of mankind generally, of inheriting the restored earth, in harmony with the Lord's prayer: “Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, as is done in heaven.” See also Eph. 1:10 and Rev. 21:3-5. The fact that it states that God shall wipe away all tears, and that there shall be no more death, sorrow, crying and pain reveals that these things shall be removed from the earth, inasmuch as none of these have ever existed in heaven.

How favoured are the true followers of Christ who have the truths of God's Word revealed to them—“Even the mystery which hath been hid from ages and generations, but now (during the Gospel Age) is made manifest to His saints.” Be it noted that only the saints, those called to be saints since our Lord's first advent, understand this mystery of selecting from mankind the Bride of Christ—“Christ in you, the hope of glory.” (Col. 1:26, 27.) Note also how clearly the Apostle describes the important work of this Gospel Age in Eph. 4:11, 12, and makes no mention at all of mankind in general—“And He gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ.” This is in complete harmony with that wonderful prayer of our Lord's in John 17, where we read—“I pray for them: I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine. . . . Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on Me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in Me, and I in Thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe (in the next age, the Kingdom Age) that Thou hast sent Me.” (Verses 9, 20, 21.)

The work of “perfecting the saints” is very important indeed, and each child of God has a part to play in accomplishing this, both as respects his or her own sanctification and the finding and building up of other members, under the Lord’s supervision. To be faithful in the service of Christ means that the Lord’s will must alone guide and direct in all things, and all talents of both means and time are to be faithfully used in as direct service as possible.

The prevailing conditions amongst professed Christians to-day are lukewarmness and association with the world, and the tests for the Lord’s own people are very often in this same direction. Even the joys of the truth that once thrilled the Lord’s saints, and for which they gladly attended meetings far and near, can possibly become a little common if the affections are not continually set upon things above. To allow the affections to be divided between the Lord and family, home, business or other attraction is to “leave the first love,” with corresponding loss of spirituality. “He that loveth father or mother more than me, is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me, is not worthy of me. And he that taketh not his cross and followeth after me, is not worthy of me. He that findeth his life (withholds what he has covenanted to sacrifice), shall lose it; and he that loseth his life for my sake (proves faithful unto death) , shall find it.” (Matt. 10:37-39.)

With the completion of the body or Bride of Christ, world conversion will follow, for with the Kingdom established on earth, “the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that is athirst come: and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.” (Rev. 22:17.) This will be the time when God’s spirit is poured out “upon all flesh’s whereas during the present Gospel Age the spirit of the Lord is upon God’s servants and handmaidens only. (Acts 2:17, 18.)

The effect of God’s spirit upon all flesh in the Kingdom or Millennial Age is shown by the Apostle Paul in Hebrews 8:8-13, in his quotation from the prophet Jeremiah. Commencing with the nation of Israel the enlightenment will extend to all nations and be so effective that “they shall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord; for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest.” (See also Acts 15:14-18.) Then, under this great enlightenment, the Lord will require obedience to the laws of His Kingdom on earth, for “it shall come to pass, that every soul which will not hear (obey) that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people.” (Acts 3:23.)

In view of the world conditions to-day with increasing evidence of deterioration in the set-up of the present financial, political, social and religious elements of society, who that understands God’s plan of the ages will doubt that we are living at the very time predicted by the Apostle Peter—“The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens (ecclesiastical systems) shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also (social order), and the works that are therein, shall be burned up.” This is accomplished not by literal fire, but by the fiery time of trouble so vividly described by many of the prophets, our Lord and His Apostles. St. Peter continues, “Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conduct and godliness.” (2 Pet. 3:10, 11.) Yes, only God’s grace and strength and the pure truths of His Word will be sufficient to enable all the true people of God to stand in this evil day. “Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand: . .

Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints.” (Eph. 6:13-18.)

Kept in Perfect Peace.

“Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed in Thee.” (Isa. 26:3.)

HIS thought is very precious to us as New T Creatures. “The peace of God, which passeth all understanding,” is to rule and keep our minds and hearts (Phil. 4:7). We are to count the things of the present life as not worthy of comparison with the glories of eternity. And so the Apostle says, “For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal. but the things which are not seen are eternal” (2 Cor. 4:17, 18). When our minds are stayed on the Lord, and we take the proper view of our experiences, we can sing with the poet:

“No storm can shake my inmost calm,
While to this Refuge clinging.”

We have peace, no matter what the outward conditions may be. The trials and difficulties of life come to the Lord’s people commingled with joys—the rain and storm, then the sunshine. They enjoy all righteous pleasures that are in harmony with their consecration. They learn to cultivate patience in trial, knowing that patience works out experience, and experience works out more and more that hope which maketh not ashamed (Rom. 5:3-5).

So, then, it is to the Christian that our text brings the assurance that when God gives quietness, none can make trouble. They “shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for My sake,” said the Master, but then we are to “rejoice and be exceeding glad.” “Let not your heart be troubled” (Matt. 5:11, John 14:1) .

Trouble Necessary To Our Proving.

Our Heavenly Father designs that various kinds of trouble shall come upon us, that these may develop and prove our characters. It is a part of the Divine Plan to permit us to have experiences of affliction (Psalm 119:67, 71, 75; 34:19, 20). So when we see God’s people in trouble or trial to-day we are not to say that God is against them. We are each to demonstrate our willingness to suffer according to His will, and often to suffer unjustly. Our Lord set us an example of cheerful, patient, submission to God’s will. We are to walk in His footsteps. We have the examples of the Apostles, when trials and difficulties and persecutions came upon them; and the example of other saints all down the Age.

Trouble is not necessarily a sign of the disfavour of God. On the contrary, we know that “many are the afflictions of the righteous,” and that “All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution.” The truth will cost them something. Faithfulness to the Lord will cost them much. As the Apostle says, “If ye be without chastisement (discipline, training), then are ye bastards and not sons” (Heb. 12:8). If God gives peace of heart, who can upset the one who is thus in harmony with God, in whom this peace of heart is ruling? This, then, is the greatest blessing of all. And He grants this peace to those who are faithfully striving to walk in the footsteps of Jesus. We have a Refuge, which none but His own can know. No harm can reach us within this shelter; no storm can shake us from our moorings, for we are securely anchored to the Rock of Ages. “And we know that all things work together for good of those who love God, to the called according to His purpose” (Rom. 8:28).

“What though my joys and comfort die !
The Lord, my Saviour, liveth ;
What though the darkness gather round!
Songs in the night He giveth.

No storm can shake my inmost calm,
While to that Refuge clinging;
Since Christ is Lord of Heaven and earth,
How can I keep from singing ?”

If there is any charge let me know.

Wishing your session every success and may it continue to be an inspiration and help to all who listen. I remain, Yours sincerely.

(The copies of broadcast Dialogues are supplied free to all who promise to read them carefully.—B.B. Institute.)

Dear Christian Friends—Just a few lines to let you know that I received the little book called “Daily Heavenly Manna” and two other booklets and some literature. Frank and Ernest, My Dear Friends--I am very interested in your Sunday morning Talks and would like to secure printed copies so that I can study at leisure. I am an old man and cannot bear in mind like I used to be able. Thanking you in anticipation. I am, Yours sincerely.

P.S.—I would gladly pay any expenses necessary to secure a constant supply of good reading which would help me to see and understand the truths of the Word of God.

Frank and Ernest—I would like you to send me a book on the subject you were discussing on Sunday last, also “Hope Beyond the Grave” and “Where are the Dead?” I think that your Dialogues are very interesting and instructive. Yours truly.

Dear Mr. —.—It is a long time since you heard from me, but I find difficulty in getting any time for letter writing. However, I manage to read the “Peoples Paper” and most of the enclosed Dialogues every month and it is this month’s “Paper” that causes me to write this letter. I would like two extra copies of this “Paper” as the article on “The Second Advent” is exceptionally good I think, and a friend of mine will be very interested to read it I know.

We had quite a long discussion on the subject recently and also some of the “News and Views” article came into it, so I feel sure he will read it with interest. I would also like a copy of the booklet entitled “God and Reason.”

I see by last month’s balance sheet that the Radio Fund is not too financial, but I believe it must do no end of good and have pleasure in enclosing cheque for L1. Take out “Peoples Paper” subscription for further twelve months and cost of articles asked for, and use balance towards fund. Now with kind regards; sincerely yours.

Volume XXX. No. 10 MELBOURNE, 1st OCTOBER, 1947 Price—Threepence

The Manner of Christ's Return and Appearing.

IN order to appreciate the Bible teachings as a whole it is absolutely necessary that we have clear views both of the object of our Lord's second coming, and of the manner in which He will be revealed. The object of His coming is to reconcile "whosoever will" of the world, to God, by a process of ruling, and teaching, and disciplining, called judging and blessing and the student must hold clearly in mind the object while studying the manner of our Lord's return. This is needful as an offset to the erroneous views, based upon false ideas of both the object and the manner of our Lord's coming.

Grasp and hold in mind as firmly as possible the fact that God's plan is one harmonious whole, which is being wrought out through Christ; and that the work of the second advent stands related to the work of the first as effect to cause: That is, that the great work of Restitution at the second advent follows the work of Redemption accomplished at the first advent as a logical sequence according to the divine plan. Therefore the Lord's return is the dawn of hope for the world, the time for the bestowment of the favours secured by the redemption—the Gospel Age being merely an intervening parenthesis, during which the bride of Christ is selected, to be associated with her Lord in the great work of restitution which He comes to accomplish.

And since the Church of Christ, which has been developing during the Gospel age, is to be associated with her Lord in the great restitution work of the Millennial age, the first work of Christ at the second advent must be the gathering of His elect Church, to which reference is made through the Prophet (Psa. 50:5), saying, "Gather my saints together unto me—those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." This harvest period not only accomplishes the separation of wheat from tares in the nominal Gospel church, and the gathering and glorification of the wheat class, but it is also to accomplish the burning (destruction) of the tares (as tares, or imitation wheat—not as individuals: the fire of destruction is symbolic as well as the tares) and the gathering and destruction of the corrupt fruitage of "the Vine of the earth" (human ambition, greed and selfishness) which has been growing and ripening for centuries in the kingdoms of this world and in the various civil and social organisations among men.

While our Lord's return is a personal coming, let us again guard the student against confusion of thought in considering the two apparently conflicting expressions of our Lord—"Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world" (aionos, age), and, "I go to prepare a place for you, . . . and will come again and receive you." (Matt. 28:20; John 14:2, 3.) The following incident will serve as an illustration of the harmony of the two promises:— One friend said to another as they were about to part, Remember, I will be with you through all your journey. How? Certainly not in person; for there they took trains to go in opposite directions to distant points. The idea was that in love, and thought, and care one for another, they would not be separated. In a similar yet fuller sense, the Lord has always been with His Church, His divine power enabling Him to oversee, direct and assist them, from first to last.

But we are now considering, not our Lord's presence with us in this figurative sense, but the manner of His second personal presence and appearing, "when He shall come to be glorified in His saints and to be admired in all them that believe in that day."

The Scriptures teach that Christ comes again to reign; that He must reign until He has put down all enemies—all opponents, all things in the way of the great restitution which He comes to accomplish—the last to be overthrown being death (1 Cor. 15:25, 26); and that He will reign for a thousand years. It is therefore only as should be expected, that we find a much larger space in prophecy devoted to the second advent and its thousand years of triumphant reign and overthrow of evil than to the thirty-four years of the first advent for redemption. And as we find that prophecy touches the various important points of those thirty-four years, from Bethlehem and Nazareth to the gall and vinegar, the parted raiment, the cross, the tomb and the resurrection, so we see that prophecy likewise touches various points of the thousand years of the second presence, particularly their beginning and ending.

The second presence of our Lord will cover a much longer period of time than the first. The mission of His first advent was finished in less than thirty-four years, while it will require a thousand years to accomplish the appointed work of His second presence. And thus it may be seen at a glance that, while the work of the first advent was no less important than that of the second advent—yea, though it was so important that the work of the second advent could never have been possible without it—yet it was not so varied, and hence required less description than the work of the second advent.

In considering the second advent we must not, any more than at the first advent, expect all prophecies to mark one particularly eventful moment of our Lord's arrival and to call the attention of all men to the fact of His presence. Such is not God's usual method: such was not the case at the first advent. The first advent of Messiah was not marked by any sudden or surprising demonstration, out of the usual order of things, but it was manifested and proven by the gradual fulfilment of prophecy showing to thoughtful observers that the events which should be expected were being accomplished on time. And thus it would be at His second advent. It is of less importance that we discover the exact moment of His arrival than that we discern the fact of His presence when He has arrived, even as at the first advent it was important to be able to recognise His presence, and the sooner the better, but much less important to know the exact date of His birth. In considering the second advent, the act of coming and the moment of arrival are too frequently the thought, whereas it should be thought of as a period of presence, as was the first advent. The precise moment at which that presence would begin would then seem less important, and His object and work during the period of His presence would receive the greater consideration.

We must bear in mind, also, that our Lord is no longer a human being; that as a human being He gave Himself a ransom for men, having become a man for that very purpose. (1 Tim. 2:6; Heb. 10:4, 5; 1 Cor. 15:21, 22.) He is now highly exalted, to the divine nature. Therefore Paul said, "Though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now, henceforth, know we him [so] no more." (2 Cor. 5:16.) He was raised from the dead a life-giving spirit being (1 Cor. 15:45), and not a man, of the earth earthy.

He is no longer human in any sense or degree; for we must not forget that natures are separate and distinct. Since He is no longer in any sense or degree a human being, we must not expect Him to come again as a human being, as at the first advent. His second coming is to be in a different manner, as well as for a different purpose.

Noting the fact that our Lord's change from human to divine nature at His resurrection was even a greater change than the one which occurred some thirty-four years previously, when He laid aside the glory of spiritual being and "was made flesh," we may with great profit consider very minutely His every action during the forty days after His resurrection before He went "to the Father"; because it is the resurrected Jesus of those forty days who is to come again, and not the man Christ Jesus who gave Himself as our ransom, in death. He who was put to death a flesh being was also in His resurrection quickened [made alive] a spirit being.—1 Pet. 3:18.*

At His second advent He does not come to be subject to the powers that be, to pay tribute to Caesar and to suffer humiliation, injustice and violence; but He comes to reign, exercising all power in heaven and in earth. He does not come in the body of His humiliation, a human body, which He took for the suffering of death, inferior to His former glorious body (Heb. 2:9); but in His glorious spiritual body, which is "the express image of the Father's person" (Heb. 1:3); for, because of His obedience even unto death, He is now highly exalted to the divine nature and likeness, and given a name above every name—the Father's name only excepted. (Phil. 2:9; 1 Cor. 15:27.) The Apostle shows that it "doth not yet appear" to our human understanding what He is now like; hence we know not what we shall be like when made like Him, but we (the Church) may rejoice in the assurance that we shall one day be with Him and like Him, and see Him as He is (1 John 3:2)—not as He was at His first advent in humiliation, when He had laid aside His former glory and for our sakes had become poor, that we through His poverty might be made rich.

If we consider the wisdom and prudence of our Lord's methods of manifesting His presence to His disciples after His resurrection, as well as previously, it may help us to remember that the same wisdom

(*In this passage, the words "in the" and "by the" are arbitrarily supplied by the translators, and are misleading. The Greek reads simply,—"Put to death flesh, quickened spirit." Our Lord was put to death a fleshly or human being, but was raised from the dead a spirit being. And since the Church is to be "changed" in order that she may be like Christ, it is evident that the change which occurred in the Head was of a kind similar to that described as in reservation for the over-corners, who shall be changed from human to spiritual nature, and made like him—

”partakers of the divine nature.” Hence, the following description of the change of the saints is applicable also to their Lord; viz.—”It is sown in dishonour, it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power; it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body.”) will be displayed in His methods of revealing Himself at His second advent, both to the Church and to the world—methods not necessarily similar, but in each case well suited to His object, which never is to alarm or excite men, but to convince their cool, calm judgments of the great truths to be impressed upon them. Our Lord’s first advent was not a startling, exciting or alarming event.. How quietly and unobtrusively He came! So much so that only those who had faith and humility were enabled to recognise in the infant of humble birth, in the man of sorrows, in the friend of the humble and poor, and finally in the crucified one, the long-looked-for Messiah.

After His resurrection, the manifestation of His presence would in the nature of the case be a more astounding fact, particularly when His changed nature is taken into consideration. Yet the fact of His resurrection, together with the fact of His changed nature, had to be fully manifested, not to all the world at that time, but to chosen witnesses who would give credible testimony of the fact to succeeding generations. Had all the world been made acquainted with the fact then, the testimony coming down to our day would probably have been much less trustworthy, being coloured and warped by men’s ideas and mixed with their traditions, so that the truth might appear almost or quite incredible. But God entrusted it only to chosen, faithful and worthy witnesses; and as we notice the account, let each mark how perfectly the object was accomplished, and how clear, positive and convincing was the proof of Christ’s resurrection and change offered to them. Mark, too, the carefulness with which He guarded against alarming or unduly exciting them while making manifest and emphasising these great truths. And be assured that the same wisdom, prudence and skill will be displayed in His methods of making known the fact of His glorious presence at His second advent. The cool, calm judgment will be convinced in every case, though the world in general will need to be brought by severe discipline to the proper attitude to receive the testimony, while those whose hearts are right will have the blessed intelligence sooner. All the proofs of His resurrection and change to spiritual nature were not given to His disciples at once, but as they were able to bear them and in the manner calculated to make the deepest impression.

During the three and a half years of our Lord’s ministry, His disciples had sacrificed friends, reputation, business, etc., to devote time and energy to heralding Messiah’s presence and the establishment of His kingdom. But they had necessarily crude ideas regarding the manner and time of their Master’s exaltation, and of their promised exaltation with Him. Nor was full knowledge then necessary: it was quite sufficient that they should faithfully take each step as it became due; hence the Master taught them little by little as they were able to receive it. And near the close of His ministry He said, “I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit, when he, the spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth . . . and show you things to come, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.”—John 16:12, 13; 14:26.

Who can tell their great disappointment, even though so far as possible they had been armed against it, when they saw Him suddenly taken from them and ignominiously crucified as a felon—Him whose kingdom and glory they had been expecting and declaring, and which only five days before His crucifixion had seemed to them so near a realisation. (John 12:1, 12-19.) . Though, they knew Him to be falsely accused and wrongfully crucified, this did not alter the fact that their long cherished national hopes of a Jewish king, who would restore their nation to influence and power, together with their own individual hopes, ambitions and air-castles of important offices and high honours in the kingdom, were all suddenly demolished by this unfavourable turn which matters had taken in the crucifixion of their king.

Well did the Master know how, desolate and aimless and perplexed they would feel; for thus it was written by the Prophet, “I will smite the Shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered.” (Zech. 13:7; Mark 14:27.) . And during the forty days between His resurrection and ascension, it was therefore His chief concern to gather them again, and to re-establish their faith in Him as the long-looked-for Messiah, by proving to them the fact of His resurrection, and that since His resurrection, though retaining the same individuality, He was no longer human, but an exalted spirit being, having “all power in heaven and in earth.”—Matt. 28:18.

He broke the news of His resurrection gradually to them—first, through the women (Mary Magdalene, and Joanna, Mary the mother of James and Salome, and others with them—Mark 16:1; Luke 24:1, 10), who came early to the sepulcher to anoint His dead body with sweet spices. While they wondered whom they should get to roll away the stone from the door of the sepulcher, behold, there was an earthquake, and when they came they found the stone rolled away, and an angel of the Lord sat upon it, who addressed them saying, “Fear not, for I know that ye seek Jesus which was crucified’. He is not here; for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him.”— Matt. 28:5-7.

It seems that Mary Magdalene separated from the other women and ran to tell Peter and John (John 20:1, 2), while the others went to tell the rest of the disciples, and that after she had left them Jesus appeared to the other women on the way, saying (Matt. 28:9, 10) “All hail.” And they came and held Him by the feet and worshipped Him. Then said Jesus unto them, “Be not afraid: go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee [their home], and there shall they see me.” And with fear and joy they ran to tell the other disciples. In their mingled feeling of surprise, perplexity, joy and fear, and their general bewilderment, they scarcely knew how to report their strange and wonderful experience. When Mary met Peter and John she said sadly, “They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulcher, and we know not where they have laid him.” (John 20:2.). The other women told how at the sepulcher they had seen a vision of angels who said He was alive (Luke 24:22, 23) , and then how they afterward met the Lord in the way.—Matt. 28:8, 10.

The majority of the disciples evidently regarded their story merely as superstitious excitement, but Peter and John said, We will go and see for ourselves; and Mary returned to the sepulcher with them. All that Peter and John saw was that the body was gone, that the grave clothes were carefully folded and laid by, and that the stone was rolled away from the door. So in perplexity they turned away, though Mary still remained there weeping. As she wept she stooped down and looked into the sepulcher and saw two angels, who said, “Woman, why weepest thou?” She answered, “Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.” And as she turned about she saw Jesus standing, but did not know Him. He inquired, “Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou?” And she, supposing him to be the gardener, answered, “Sir, if thou hast borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away.” Then, in the old familiar tone which she quickly recognised, the Lord said, “Mary!”

That was enough to establish her faith in the statement of the angel, that He had risen, which until now had seemed like a dream or an idle tale; and in her joy she exclaimed, “Master!” Her first impulse was to embrace Him, and to tarry in His presence. But Jesus gently informed her that there was a very important mission for her to perform now, in bearing witness to the fact of His resurrection, and that she should be in haste to carry the message and establish the faith of the other disciples, still in perplexity and uncertainty, saying, “Touch [Greek, haptomai, embrace] me not [do not tarry for further demonstration of your affection now]; for I am not yet ascended to my Father [I will be with you for a short time yet]: but go to my brethren and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father, and to my God, and your God.” (John 20:17.) Through the other women also He had sent them word that He would meet them in Galilee.

Next, He overtook two of the sad and perplexed disciples as they walked from Jerusalem to Emmaus, and inquired the cause of their sadness and despondency. (Luke 24:13-35). And one of them answered: “Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and has not known the things which are come to pass there in these days? And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people: and how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death and have crucified him. But we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel: and besides all this, today is the third day since these things were done. [Here they were probably calling to mind John 2:19, 21, 22.] Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulcher. And when they found not his body, they came saying that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said he was alive. And certain of them which were with us went to the sepulcher, and found it even so as the women had said; but him they saw not.”

No wonder they were perplexed; how strange it all seemed! how peculiar and thrilling had been the events of the past few days!

Then the stranger preached them a stirring sermon from the prophecies, showing them that the very things which had so disheartened them were the things which the prophets had foretold concerning the true Messiah: that before He could rule and bless and lift up Israel and all the world, He must first redeem them with His own life from the curse of death, which came upon all through Adam, and that afterward, raised to life and glory by Jehovah, their Master would fulfil all that was written by the prophets concerning His future glory and honour, as truly as He had fulfilled those prophecies which foretold His sufferings, humiliation and death. A wonderful preacher! and a wonderful sermon was that! It started new ideas and opened new expectations and hopes. As they drew near the village they constrained Him to tarry with them, as it was toward evening and the day was far spent. He went in to tarry with them; and as He sat at meat with them, He took bread and brake and gave it to them. Then their eyes were opened; and He vanished out of their sight.

Not until that moment did they recognise Him, though they had walked, and talked and sat at meat together. He was known to them not by face, but in the simple act of blessing and breaking bread in the old familiar way, thus assuring their faith in what they had already heard—that He had risen, and would see them again.

Then the two surprised and overjoyed disciples arose that same hour and returned to Jerusalem, saying to each other. “Did not our hearts burn within us while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the Scriptures?” Arriving in Jerusalem they found the others rejoicing also, saying, “The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon.” And they told what things were done in the way, and how He was known of them in breaking of bread. Probably they were nearly all there that evening, homes, business and everything else forgotten—Mary Magdalene with her tears of joy, saying, I knew Him the moment He called my name—I could not credit the angel’s assurance of His resurrection until then; and the other women telling their wonderful experience of the morning, and how they had met Him in the way. Then Simon had His story to tell; and now here were two other witnesses from Emmaus. What an eventful day! No wonder they desired to meet together on the first day of every week after that to talk the matter over and to call to mind all the circumstances connected with this wonderful event of the Lord’s resurrection, and to have their hearts “burn” again and again.

While the excited and overjoyed little company were thus met and relating to each other their several experiences, the Lord Jesus Himself suddenly stood in their midst (Luke 24:36-49) and said, “Peace be unto you!” From where had He come? All such meetings were held secretly with closed doors, for fear of the Jews (John 20:19,26), but here was a sudden appearance without any visible approach; and they were terrified, and supposed they had seen a spirit. Then He comforted them, told them to calm their fears, and showed them His hands and His feet, saying, “It is I, myself; handle me and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have.” And while they yet believed not for joy, and wondered, He said unto them, “Have ye here any meat?” and they gave Him a piece of a broiled fish, and He took it and did eat before them. Then He opened their understanding, their mental eyes, and expounded the Scriptures to them, showing from the law and the prophets that these things had come to pass exactly as foretold. But Thomas was absent (John 20:24); and when the other disciples told him that they had seen the Lord, he would not believe it, but said, “Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe.”

Eight days passed without further manifestations, and they had time calmly to think and talk over the experiences of that wonderful day, when, the disciples being again assembled as before, Jesus stood in their midst, just as on the first evening, saying, “Peace be unto you.” (John 20:26). This time Thomas was present, and the Lord addressed him, saying, “Thomas, reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side; and be not faithless, but believing.” He thus showed that He knew what Thomas had said without being told, and He gave that proof of His resurrection which Thomas had said would satisfy him; and with joy Thomas answered, “My Lord and my God!”

Church of One Million People

United Movement in South India.

UNDER the above headings the following appeared in the Melbourne press on 20th September last:—India is facing momentous issues in these days, and it is significant that in the midst of the turmoil a vast movement to unite the churches of Southern India will culminate in an inauguration service in Madras Cathedral on September 27.

More than 1,000,000 members will go into this united church, which represents the Anglicans, Methodists of England and America, Church of Scotland, Congregationalists of America and Britain, Basel Mission (Reformed Lutheran), and the Evangelical Lutheran Church.

It is a Federal movement, rather than an organic one. Negotiations began in 1908, when the first united church was organised among eight church and mission bodies operating in South India. This united effort was found very satisfactory. Since then negotiations have been going on to enlarge the union, and to bring in those which stood outside.

Dr. A. J. Saunders, Professor of Economics at Madras University for more than 30 years, who recently returned to Australia, said there were three main reasons for this movement: the Indian Christians could not understand the reason for denominationalism; they wanted an Indian church, free from direction and control by foreign bodies; and, lastly, pressure groups of nationalism, agnosticism and materialism, and revived Hinduism and Islam were driving the Christians together into fellowship and co-operation.

The basis of the church organisation will be the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments; the Apostles' and Nicene creeds; the two sacraments—baptism and the Lord's Supper; and historic Episcopalianism. They have already agreed on Episcopalianism as the best form of church government in India.

Events in India in recent times have been tragic indeed with the caste riots, and it is doubtful if even the best informed outside the trouble areas can approximate the suffering and distress which "man's inhumanity to man" has brought upon the many millions in that unfortunate land. The above news item undoubtedly indicates a desire on the part of church leaders in Southern India to present some united stand, in the way of church organisation, to India's millions of inhabitants, and the question may be asked if this effort could mean the spread of Christianity with better hopes for peace and general harmony amongst even this small fraction of the great population of India.

While not wishing in the least to belittle the efforts of any organisation, associated with church systems or otherwise, which seeks to promote better relationship between the various castes in India, or any other land, when it is a question as to whether such a union of churches means the spread of Christianity it is quite a different matter.

The general idea amongst the promoters of church unity is to assemble numbers and record them on their list of members, thus implying that adherence to the church really makes Christians. An instance of this was well illustrated about twelve months prior to the outbreak of the Second World War, when at the Tenth World's Christian Endeavour Convention, held in Melbourne, a leading Indian missionary was quoted in the press as follows:

"Rev. Dr. Stanley Jones, India, urged the 20,000 people present at the evening convention to send men and women to help India, particularly as 60,000,000 'untouchables' were on the verge of turning to Christianity. He appealed for a united Church in Australia, as a divided world would not turn to a divided Church for guidance."

Viewing conditions in India today, after nine years since the above appeal by Dr. Stanley Jones, can it be concluded that the failure of men and women to respond has meant the loss of 60,000,000 to the cause of Christianity? No, indeed! The implication that if we can only do enough, or if all Christians can work hard enough, or if we can bring enough pressure to bear upon the governments of earth, Christ's Kingdom will be extended and "peace on earth, goodwill to men" will result, manifests a failure to understand God's Word and His purpose during this Gospel Age.

At no time did our Lord or the Apostles ever indicate that multitudes would be converted to Christianity in this Gospel Age. With the exception of the early days of the Apostles, when, following the day of Pentecost numbers were added to the true Church, the increase has been mainly by the ones and twos throughout the whole world. How true it is, that it is one thing to have names written upon church memberships on earth, but quite another matter for the names to be written in heaven.

However, the fact that the Lord's true people are constituted a "little flock" in no way is intended to discourage zeal amongst the members of this true church, but rather the opposite. Scarcity of any commodity increases its value, and this is truly so as respects the followers of Christ. St. Paul in writing to Titus declared that "Christ gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works.” (Tit. 2:14.) The Lord permits His people to show their zeal for good works in using their strength and means in sacrificial service, to find other members who delight also to walk in the steps of the Master, while at the same time making their own calling and election sure, by His grace.

The following few lines so aptly describe the true church on earth—”The Lord’s church, the only one to which the name ecclesia, body or church is properly applicable, is so insignificant, so unostentatious, and comparatively so poor in this world’s riches, that it is not recognised nor recognisable from the worldly standpoint. It is neither man-made nor man-ruled; nor are its members enrolled on earth, but in heaven. (Heb. 12:23) . Its head and bishop is the Lord, its law is His Word; it has but one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism; and it is built upon the testimonies of the holy apostles and prophets—Jesus Christ Himself being its chief corner-stone.”

This description is in harmony with the words of Paul to Timothy—”All Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.” (2 Tim. 3:16, 17.) It will be noted by these words of the Apostle that the Scriptures are fully sufficient for the guidance of all members of the true Church, therefore the addition of the manmade creeds as the basis for the organisation in Southern India set up by the “united church” is unwarranted. While both the creeds mentioned contain much Bible truth, they also contain some error, and it is the mixture of truth and error in the creeds of men which makes void the Word of God today, just as our Lord declared of the religionists of His day. (Mark 7:13, etc.).

The announcement of the united church movement in Southern India is also significant in view of world conditions, for the same restlessness which is manifest throughout India is evident in most countries; this, of course, as seen from the Scriptures, is a clear sign of the end of the age at hand, and it is very likely that further church union will take place in various parts of the world, the idea being to hold the present institutions together at all costs. However, the Lord has declared that all the unions in the world will not, save any of the present-day church organisations; their uniting together will make their fall the more complete when the time comes for “heaven and earth to pass away,” to make way for the “new heavens and new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.” (Matt. 24:35; 2 Pet. 3:10, 13.).

In Revelation 6:12-17 we have described in symbolic language the passing scenes which will witness the close of this “present evil world,” covering perhaps about 160 years of the end of this age. The following quotation referring to the “great earthquake” of Rev. 6:12 is significant—”In the symbolic language of Revelation, the French Revolution was indeed a ‘great earthquake’—a social shock so great that all ‘Christendom’ trembled until it was over; and that terrible and sudden outburst of a single nation’s wrath may give some idea of the fury of the coming storm, when the wrath of all the angry nations will burst the bands of law and order and cause a reign of universal anarchy . . . A nation intoxicated with Babylon’s wine of false doctrines in church and state, and long bound by priestcraft and superstition, there vomited forth its pollution and spent the force of its maddened rage. In fact, the French Revolution seems referred to by our Lord in His Revelation to John on Patmos as a prelude to, and an illustration of, that great crisis now approaching. It should be observed also that the same causes which operated to bring about that great calamity, are now operating to produce a similar, but far more extensive revolution, a revolution which will be world-wide.”

Concerning the other symbols in this passage in Revelation 6, the sun represents the Gospel light, the Truth—and thus Christ. The moon as a symbol represents the light of the Mosaic Law. The (twelve) stars as symbols represent the inspired teachers of the Church—the Apostles. The heavens represent the ecclesiastical powers of Christendom. In fulfilment of the use of these terms the following is explanatory:— “God has recognised or appointed twelve apostolic stars for the Church. From these and the sun and moon all the enlightenment of the Church was to proceed. But Papacy, assuming ecclesiastical lordship of earth, has placed or “ordained” various stars, lights, “authorities,” “theologians,” in her firmament; and the various Protestant denominations have done likewise, until the whole number is innumerable . . . Wherever we look we can recognise the fact that while God’s consecrated people are being specially fed and enlightened at the present time, yet with the nominal Church it is not so. Its sun is being darkened; its moon is being turned into blood and its stars are falling.”

Significant indeed is the 14th verse of Revelation 6 —”And the heavens departed as a scroll when it is rolled together.” The fulfilment of this feature we would look for in the present ecclesiastical heavens, with an attempt on their part to unite that they might prevent the overthrow of the present order, as has been expressed:—”Religious people in general, not discerning that God’s time has come for a change of dispensation, will ignore reason, logic, justice, and Scripture in defending the present order of things. It will be of little consequence then that the ecclesiastical heavens (the religious powers, Papal and Protestant) will have rolled together as a scroll. (Isa. 34:4.).

The combined religious power of Christendom will be utterly futile against the rising tide of anarchy when the dread crisis is reached. Before that great army (Joel 2:1-11), all the host of heaven (the Church nominal) shall be dissolved."

Verses 15-17 complete the picture with reference to all mankind, and have been explained as follows—"As the trouble increases, men will seek, but in vain, for protection in the 'dens' and caves, the great rocks and fortresses of Society (Trade Unions, Trusts, Free Masonry, Odd Fellowship, and all societies, secular and ecclesiastical), and in the mountains (governments) of earth; saying, 'Fall over (cover, protect) and hide us from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of His wrath is come.' In that time, financial institutions, including insurance companies and beneficial societies, will go down; and 'treasures' in them will prove utterly worthless. These caves and rocks of the mountains will not furnish the desired protection from the wrath of this 'evil day,' when the great waves of popular discontent are lashing and foaming against the mountains (kingdoms.) "

The Lord's people alone can view the coming tumults of earth in faith and confidence, knowing that following the "night of weeping" there comes "a morning of joy" for the poor groaning creation. And as respects their own inheritance they rejoice in the words of Paul—"Wherefore we receive a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear." (Heb. 12:28.).

"HER CREED."

She stood before the chosen few,
With modest air and eyes of blue;
A gentle creature, in whose face
Were mingled tenderness and grace.

"You wish to join our fold," they said
"Do you believe in all that's read
From ritual and written creed,
Essential to our human need?"

A troubled look was in her eyes;
She answered as in vague surprise,
As though the sense to her were dim,
"I only strive to follow Him."

Creeds change as ages come and go,
We see by faith, and little know ;
Perchance the sense was not so dim
To her who "strove to follow Him."

The Peace of God.

“The peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.” “Great peace have they which love Thy Law: and nothing shall offend them.”—Phil. 4:7; Psa. 119:165.

GOD’S LAW represents God’s will. All who are right minded, rightly disposed, will rejoice in having God’s will well done. Originally, God’s will was written in man’s nature. After sin had effaced it there, God wrote it upon tables of stone for Israel. It is the righteousness of this Law that Christians obey (the Divine regulations, the Divine requirements, whatever they may be) so far as possible. We delight to do God’s will.

To love God’s Law, then, would be to appreciate the fact that God has a great purpose; to take delight in finding out what God’s will is; and to have full confidence in His Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power. Great peace have all those who so do. They do not understand every dealing of Divine Justice, but their faith holds to the fact that He is too wise to err. Thus they have peace in confiding their interests to Him.

In this text the Apostle differentiates between the mind and the heart. The heart represents the affections. The Apostle urges not only that we should have good feelings in the matter, but that our minds should be at rest. If after we have made a consecration of ourselves to the Lord we should do something to violate our conscience in some respect, we would feel estranged from Him. Then our hearts should know that we might draw near to the Lord again; and we should endeavour by prayer to get back into harmony with God and thus to effect a reconciliation. Our Lord has made provision on our behalf, that we should have an Advocate with the Father. (1 John 2:1.) He who appeared in the presence of God for us at first is the same One who ever liveth to make intercession for us. So we come to the Lord through the arrangement which He has made; and we rejoice that we may obtain forgiveness and grace to help in time of need.

The text does not refer to our own peace, but to the peace of God, the peace which comes to us through a realisation of God’s power, of His goodness and willingness to hold us by His right hand as His children. This peace stands guard continually, as a sentinel, to challenge every hostile or worrying thought or fear.; It so keeps the Christian’s mind that he at heart has peace with the Lord, fellowship, communion; and it guards his mind also, his reasoning faculties, instructing him and assuring him respecting the Divine power, wisdom and love.

We should make request increasingly for grace and wisdom, and the fruits of the spirit, for opportunities for serving the Lord and the brethren, and for growing more and more into the likeness of God’s dear Son. Under these conditions the promised “peace which passeth all understanding” will guard our hearts and our thoughts. Selfishness and ambition would find little room in hearts so filled. Even when in “deep waters” Divine peace can dwell in our hearts and keep them.

The Apostle’s thought seems to be that those whom he addresses have come into harmony with God through acceptance of His terms. Turning from all opposition, they have become the children of God through faith, obedience, self-sacrifice and consecration to death. The Apostle urges that God’s peace should be in these and should continue. They should be guarded by that peace. The expression, “through Christ Jesus,” suggests that as we entered into this peace through our great Advocate, so we can continue in this peace only by His continuing to be our Advocate; otherwise, through imperfections of the flesh, we would get out of harmony continually.

“Let us, therefore, come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need.” (Heb. 4:16.) Thus as we come daily and say, “Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us,” we abide in the peace; for we have this great Advocate. Therefore, this peace abides—a continuing supply of grace through the great Advocate,

AFTER this, there must have been quite a long interval before there was any further manifestation of the Lord's presence, and the disciples who were Galileans began to think of home and the future; and remembering the Lord's message by the women, that He would go before them into Galilee, they went thither. Probably on their way, the Lord met them, as Matthew relates, in a mountain. They were perplexed; they no longer felt the same familiarity they once had toward Him; He seemed so greatly changed since His crucifixion from what He used to be—He appeared and disappeared in such peculiar times and places; He no longer seemed like "the man Christ Jesus;" so Matthew says "they worshipped Him—but some doubted." After a few words with them the Lord "vanished" from their sight, and left them to wonder what next would happen. For some 'time after their return to Galilee nothing unusual T. occurred, and there was no further indication of the Lord's presence. Doubtless they met together and 'talked over the situation, and wondered why He did not appear to them 'more frequently.

As they waited, the days and the weeks seemed long. They had long ago given up the ordinary pursuits of life, to follow the Lord from place to place, learning of Him, and preaching to others, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." (Matt. 10:5-7) . They did not now wish to go back to the old pursuits; and yet, how should they proceed with the Lord's work? They comprehended the situation clearly enough to know that they could no longer preach as formerly the kingdom at hand; for all the people knew that their Master and King had been crucified, and none but themselves knew of His resurrection. While all of the eleven were thus perplexed and anxious, waiting for something, they knew not what, Peter said, Well, it will not do to remain idle: I will go back to my old fishing business; and six of the others said, We will do the same: we will go with you. (John 21:3.) And probably the rest also turned again to their old employments.

Who can doubt that the Lord was invisibly present with them many times as they talked together, overruling and directing the course of circumstances, etc., for their highest good? If they should have great success and become swallowed up by interest in business, they would soon be unfit for the higher service; yet if they should have no success, it would seem like forcing them; so the Lord adopted a plan which taught them a lesson such as He often teaches His followers, viz.: that the success or failure of their efforts, in any direction, He can control if He please.

The old firm of fishermen reorganised: got together their boats, nets, etc., and went out for their first catch. But they toiled all night and caught no fish, and began to feel disheartened. In the morning a stranger on shore calls to them to know of their success. Poor success! We have caught nothing, they answer. Try again, said the stranger. Now cast your net on the other side of the boat. No use, stranger, we have tried both sides all night long, and if there were fish on one side, there would be on the other. However, we will try again and let you see They did so, and got an immense haul. How strange! said some; but the quick and impressionable John at once got the correct idea, and said Brethren, the Lord only could do this. Don't you remember the feeding of the multitudes, etc.? That must be the Lord on shore, and this is another way that He has chosen to manifest Himself to us. Don't you remember that it was just so when the Lord first called us? Then, 'too, we had toiled all night and caught nothing until He called to us, saying, "Let down your nets for a draught." (Luke 5:4-11) . Yes, surely that is the Lord, though, since His resurrection, we cannot recognise Him by His appearance. He now appears in a variety of forms; but we know each time that it is He by some peculiar circumstance like this, calling to mind some marked incident of our past acquaintance with Him.

And when they got to shore they found that Jesus had bread as well as fish, and they learned the lesson, that under His direction and care and in His service they would not be left to starve: (Luke 12:29, 30.) They did not ask Him if He were the Lord; for on this as on other occasions, the eyes of their understanding being opened, they knew Him, not by physical sight, but by the miracle. Then followed the instructions of that delightful hour, re-assuring Peter of His continued acceptance notwithstanding His denial of the Lord, for which he repented and wept. He now learned afresh, of His Master's love, and of his continued privilege of feeding the sheep and the lambs. We seem to hear the Lord say, You need not go back to the fishing business, Peter: I called you once to be a fisher of men, and, knowing your heart to be still loyal and zealous, I renew your commission as a fisher of men.

"And, eating together with them, He commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith He, ye have heard of me. For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the holy spirit not many days hence." (Acts 1:6—margin.) So they came to Jerusalem as instructed, and here it was forty days after His resurrection, that He met with them for the last time and talked with them. They summoned courage this time to question Him about the kingdom He had promised' them saying, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" This thought of the kingdom was the one uppermost in the mind of every Jew. Israel, they understood, was to be chief among the nations under Messiah, and they knew not of the long Times of the Gentiles, and they saw not yet that the chief blessing had been taken from fleshly Israel (Matt. 21:43; Rom. 11:7) , and that they themselves were to be members of the new (spiritual) Israel, the royal priesthood and holy nation, through whom, as the body of Christ, the blessing of the world would come. They as yet understood none of these things. How could they? They had not yet received the holy spirit of adoption as sons but were still under condemnation; because, though the ransom-sacrifice had been made by the Redeemer, it had not yet been formally presented on our behalf in the Most Holy, even Heaven itself. (John 7:39.) Hence our Lord did not attempt any explanatory answer to their question, but merely said, "It is not for you [now] to know the times and seasons which the Father hath put in his own power. But ye shall receive power* after that the holy spirit is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."—Acts 1:7, 8.

*This promised power to know and to understand times and seasons, and all things pertaining to a proper witnessing, applies to the whole Church from first to last; and under the guidance and power of the holy spirit, meet in due season concerning every feature of the plan is provided, in order that we may be His witnesses, even to the end of this age.—Compare John 16:12, 13.

Then the Lord, who was walking with them, when they reached the Mount of Olives, lifted His hands and blessed them, and He was parted from them and went upward; and a cloud received Him out of their sight. (Luke 24:48-52; Acts 1:6-15.) They began to see something more of God's plan now. The Lord who came down from' heaven had returned to the Father, as He had told them before He died;—had gone to prepare a place for them and would come again and receive them ;—had gone afar to receive the promised kingdom, and to return (Luke 19:12); and meantime they were to be His witnesses in all the earth to call and make ready a people to receive Him when He would come to be glorified in His saints, and to reign King of kings and Lord of lords. They saw their new mission, of proclaiming to every creature a coming king from heaven, "with all power in heaven and in earth," to be a much more important work than that of the preceding years, when they heralded "the man Christ Jesus," and followed Him who was "despised and rejected of men." Their risen Lord was changed indeed, not only in His personal appearance—appearing sometimes in one way and place, and again in a different way and place, manifesting His "all power"—but He was changed in condition or nature also. No longer did He appeal to the Jews, nor show Himself to them; for since His resurrection none saw Him in any sense except His friends and followers. His words, "Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more," were thus verified.

Thus was the faith of the apostles and of the early Church established in the fact of the Lord's resurrection.

Their doubts were scattered, and their hearts rejoiced; and they returned to Jerusalem and continued in prayer and supplication and study of the Scriptures, waiting for the adoption promised by the Father, and their endowment with spiritual understanding, and with special miraculous gifts of power, to enable them to convince true Israelites, and to establish the Gospel Church, at the day of Pentecost.--Acts 1:14; 2:1.

Though our Lord at His second advent will not manifest His presence in the same way that He did during those forty days after His resurrection, yet we have His assurance that the "brethren shall not be in darkness." Nay, more: we shall have an aid which they could not and did not have to help them during those forty days, viz., "power from on high," to guide us into the understanding of every truth due to be understood, and, even as promised, to show us things to come. Hence in due season we shall have full understanding of the manner, time and attendant circumstances of His appearing, which, if carefully watched for and marked, will be no less convincing than were the evidences of our Lord's resurrection furnished to the early Church, although of a different kind.

That our Lord at His second advent could assume the human form, and thus appear to men, as He did to His disciples after His resurrection, there can be no question; not only because He thus appeared in human form during those forty days, but because spirit beings have in the past manifested the power to appear as men in flesh and in various forms. But such manifestations would be out of harmony with the general tenor of God's plan, as well as out of harmony with the Scriptural indications given, relative to the manner of His manifestation, as we shall see. Instead, it is the Lord's plan that His spiritual kingdom shall communicate, operate, and manifest its presence and power through human, earthly agencies. Just as the prince of this world, Satan, though unseen by men, exercises a wide influence in the world through those subject to him, and possessed of and controlled by his spirit, so the new Prince of Peace, the Lord, will chiefly operate in, and manifest His presence and power through, human beings, subject to Him and possessed of and controlled by His spirit.

Seeing with the natural eye and hearing with the natural ear are not all there is of seeing and hearing. "No man hath seen God at any time" thus, yet all God's children have seen Him, and known Him, and held communion with Him. (John 1:18; 5:37; 14:7.) We hear God's call, our "high calling," we hear the voice of our Shepherd, and are constantly looking unto Jesus, and see the prize, the crown of life which He promises—not by natural sight and hearing, but by our understanding. Far more precious is the sight we have of our glorified Lord as the spiritual, highly exalted King of glory, our Redeemer as well as our King, by the eyes of our understanding and faith, than the sight afforded to the natural eye before Pentecost.

There was a necessity for our Lord's appearing in the manner He did to His disciples, after His resurrection, which will not exist at His second advent. His object then will be better served in a different way. In fact, to appear so at His second advent would be detrimental to the purpose then to be accomplished. His object in appearing to His disciples after His resurrection was to convince them that He who was dead is alive forevermore, that they might go forth as witnesses to the fact of His resurrection (Luke 24:48), and that their testimony might be a sure foundation for the faith of coming generations. Since no man can come to God acceptably, to receive the holy spirit of adoption, without faith in Christ, it became necessary, not only for the sake of the disciples then, but for all since, that the evidences of His resurrection and change should be such as natural men could grasp and appreciate. After they had become partakers of the holy spirit and understood spiritual things (See 1 Cor. 2:12-16), they could have believed the angels at the sepulcher, that He had risen from the dead condition, even if they had seen the fleshly body of the man Christ Jesus still lying in the tomb; but not so before—the body must be away to make faith in His resurrection possible to them. After the holy spirit had enabled them to discern spiritual things, they could have believed the testimony of the prophets that He must needs die, and would rise from the dead, and that He would be highly exalted as King of glory, without its being needful for Him to appear as a man, and assume various bodies of flesh as a garment, so that they could handle Him and see Him ascend. But all this was needful for them and for all natural men. By believing, we come to God by Him and receive forgiveness of sins and the spirit of adoption, to understand spiritual things. Even while removing the natural obstacles to faith, by assuming human form, etc., our Lord convinced the disciples and made them witnesses to others, not by their natural sight and touch, but by reasoning with them out of the Scriptures: "Then opened He their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures, and said unto them, Thus it is written and thus it behoved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day, and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. And ye are witnesses of these things." (Luke 24:45-48.) Peter also states this object clearly, saying, "Him God raised up the third day, and permitted Him to become manifest—not to all the people, but to those witnesses previously chosen of God, to us, who did eat and drink with Him after He arose from the dead. And He commanded us to proclaim to the people that this [the resurrected Jesus] is He who has been appointed by God the judge of the living and the dead."—Acts 10:40-42. Diaglott translation.

With our Lord, after His resurrection, it was simply a question of expediency as to which way of appearing to His disciples would best accomplish His object, of making known His resurrection and change of nature. Had He appeared as a flame of fire, as the angel appeared to Moses in the burning bush (Exod. 3:2), He might indeed have conversed with them, but the evidence thus given would have been far from being as convincing as the method He did adopt, both to the apostles and to the world at large to whom they witnessed.

If He had appeared in the glory of the spirit form, as the angel did to Daniel (Dan. 10:5-8) the glory would have been greater than the witnesses could have borne. They would probably have been so alarmed as to be unable to receive instructions from Him. To none except Paul did the Lord ever thus show Himself; and Paul was so overcome by that glimpse that he fell to the ground and was blinded by its brightness, which was above that of the sun at noonday.

In our examination of the method of manifestation adopted by our Lord during those forty days, we saw that He "permitted" Himself to become manifest even to the chosen witnesses only a few times, and then but briefly. The entire time that He was manifest to them, had it all been crowded into one day instead of being at intervals during the forty days, would probably have been less than twelve hours, or one eightieth of that entire time. This being true, it is evident that He was present with them unseen about seventy-nine eightieths of that period of forty days. And even when they did have manifestations, they were not (except once, to St. Thomas) in a form exactly like the one they had known so intimately for three years, and had seen but a few days before. It is not once intimated that they knew Him by the familiar features of His face, nor even that He was recognised by the same appearance as in other manifestations.

Mary supposed Him to be “the gardener.” To the two on their way to Emmaus He was “a stranger.” He was also a stranger to the fishermen on the sea of Galilee, and to the eleven in the upper room. On every occasion He was recognised by His actions, His words, or the familiar tones of His voice.

When Thomas declared that only the proof which addressed his natural sight and touch would be acceptable to him, the Lord, though He granted that demand, gently reproved him, saying, Because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed; blessed are those who believe, not having seen. (John 20:27-29.) The stronger evidence was that which was not addressed to natural sight, and more blessed are those who hold themselves in readiness to receive the truth through whatsoever proofs God is pleased to substantiate it.

He thus showed them, not only that He now had the power to appear in a variety of ways and forms, but also that no one of those bodies which they saw was His spiritual, glorious body, though the facts of His resurrection and presence were thus manifested to them. The different forms, and the long intervals of invisible presence with no outward manifestation, made evident the fact that though their Lord and teacher was alive and not yet ascended to the Father, He was now a spirit being, really invisible to human sight, but with ability to manifest His presence and power in a variety of ways at pleasure.*

The creating of the body and clothing in which He appeared to them in the very room in which they were gathered, was proof unquestionable that Christ was no longer a human being, though He assured His disciples that the body which they saw, and which Thomas handled, was a veritable flesh and bone body, and not a mere vision or appearance. As a human being He could not come into the room without opening the door, but as a spirit being He could and there He instantly created and assumed such a body of flesh and’ such clothing as He saw fit for the purpose intended.

Nor can we for a moment admit the suggestions offered by some, that our Lord opened the doors without being observed; for the record is plain and clear that He came and stood in their midst while the doors were shut—probably very carefully barred and bolted too—“for fear of the Jews.”—John 20:19, 26.

The lesson of His changed nature was still further emphasised by His manner of leaving their sight: “He vanished out of their sight.” The human body of flesh and bones, etc., and its clothing, which appeared suddenly while the doors were shut, did not go out of the door, but simply disappeared or dissolved into the same elements from which He had created them a few moments before. He vanished out of their sight, and was no longer seen of them when the flesh and bones and clothing in which He had manifested Himself were dissolved, though doubtless He was still with them— invisibly present; and so also much of the time during those forty days.

On special occasions, for special instruction, God has granted similar power to other spirit beings, angels, enabling them to appear as men, in bodies of flesh and bones which ate and talked to those they instructed, just as our Lord did. (See Gen. 18; Judges 6:11-22; 13:3-20.).

The power manifested by our Lord, and the angels referred’ to, to create and dissolve the clothing in which they appeared, was just as superhuman as the creating and dissolving of their assumed human bodies; and the bodies were no more their glorious spiritual bodies than were the clothes they wore. It will be remembered that the seamless robe and other clothing which our Redeemer wore before His crucifixion had been divided among the Roman soldiers, and that the grave clothes were left folded away in the sepulcher (John 19:23, 24; 20:5-7), so that the clothing in which He appeared on the occasions mentioned must have been specially created, and probably was the most appropriate for each occasion. For instance when He appeared as a gardener to Mary, it was probably in such apparel as a gardener would wear.

That the bodies in which our Lord appeared were real human bodies, and not mere delusions, He gave them clearly to understand when He ate before them, and invited them to handle Him and see that the body was real flesh and bones, saying, “Why are ye troubled? . . . Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have.”

Some Christians draw very absurd conclusions from this expression of our Lord as to the verity of His assumed flesh and bone body. They regard the assumed body as His spirit body, and declare that a spirit body is flesh and bones, and just like a human body, excepting that an indefinable something, which they call spirit, flows through its veins instead of blood. They seem to disregard the statement of our Lord, that this was not a spirit body—that a spirit being has not flesh and bones. Do they also forget John's statement, that "It doth not yet appear" what a spirit body is, and that we shall not know until we are changed and made like Him and see Him, not as He was, but as He is? (1 John 3:2.) Do they also forget the Apostle Paul's express statement that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God?"—and his further assurance that therefore all the heirs with Christ must also "be changed?"-1 Cor. 15:50, 51.

*The occurrence recorded by Luke (4:30) should not be regarded as a case parallel to His appearing and vanishing after His resurrection. That was not a disappearance in the sense of becoming invisible to the people. It was merely an adroit, prompt movement, by which He eluded the murderous design of His enemies. Before they had executed their plans for His death He turned about, and, passing through their midst, no man had courage or power to molest Him, because His hour had not yet come.

Let no one hastily suppose that we are here following Spiritism, Swedenborgianism or any other ism. We are simply following and logically connecting the apostolic account. The vast difference between the Bible teaching and that counterfeit of it promulgated by Satan, known as Spiritualism, we distinctly discern. Suffice it here to point out that Spiritism affects to communicate between dead men and living men, while the Bible condemns this (Isa. 8:19) , and teaches that such communications as were true have been made only by spirit beings, such as angels, and by our Lord; and not by our Lord while He was "the man Christ Jesus," nor while He was dead, but after His resurrection change, when He had become a life-giving or "quickening spirit" being.

Suppose There Were No Death?

THE following is an extract from an article by Rev. C. Irving Benson of Melbourne, which appeared in the Melbourne "Herald" recently under the above heading.

"It is at first startling but increasingly reassuring to learn that death is simply one of Nature's devices for the furtherance of life. 'It is as natural to die as to be born,' said Lord Bacon . . . Suppose there was no death? A world without a cemetery would be a world without a cradle. What if all the people born into this world still lived? The planet could not support such a population. Death, therefore, is a social necessity."

The above is just a sample of the great ignorance of the teachings of the Bible on the part of church leaders in our times. What a terrible state of affairs exists when we find a "Doctor of Divinity" teaching "that death is simply one of nature's devices for the furtherance of life." Such a statement at once denies the necessity of the sacrifice of Christ to redeem mankind from death.

If it were true that "It is as natural to die as to be born," why did the Prophet Ezekiel, as a mouthpiece of the Lord, declare: "For why will ye die, O house of Israel? For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God: wherefore turn yourselves, and live ye." (Ezek. 18:31, 32). Jeremiah, another faithful prophet of God, declared that death is "the land of the enemy." (See Jer. 31:15-17). There certainly is nothing "natural" in going to "the land of the enemy" and St. Paul explains so clearly why death is the enemy of mankind when he states—"Wherefore, as by one man (Adam) sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." (Rom. 5:12). And again—"The wages of sin is death." (Rom. 6:23).

There is nothing natural about sinning, so death, the penalty for sin, must be most unnatural. Indeed, so unnatural is death that after nearly 6,000 years of dying, mankind, in losing its loved ones today, is as grief-stricken as were our first parents with the loss of Abel, so terrible is the wages of sin. On one occasion, Jesus Himself was so touched with the grief of the sorrowing relatives of Lazarus that it is recorded of Him—"Jesus wept." Our Lord did not tell them that it was quite natural for Lazarus to die, nor that the death of His friend was "a device for the furtherance of life."

It is surely high time that all thinking people examined their Bibles for themselves, that they be not deceived by the "blind leaders of the blind" as our Lord indicated in His day. How assuring is the Scriptural record that "Christ died for our sins," and again the words of Christ Himself—"I am He that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell (Hades—the death condition) and of death." (1 Cor. 15:3; Rev. 1:18).

Here we have the glorious promise that the risen Lord is going to unlock the prison-house of death, and call forth all mankind in the resurrection morn. Because of the sacrifice of Christ, God has provided this resurrection day when He will create bodies anew (1 Cor. 15:37, 38), and give again the breath of life and personality to each body, thus constituting living souls.

For the saints in the first resurrection, spirit bodies are created, that they may inherit the heavenly Kingdom with Christ. St. John declared—"It does not yet appear what we shall be: (he could not describe the spirit form) but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is." This is the glory which Paul also sought to describe in Rom. 8:18; 1 Cor. 4:17, 18, etc. For the world of mankind in the general resurrection, which takes place during the Millennial reign of Christ, earthly bodies will be created and they shall inherit the restored earth, as they progress on to perfection, by obedience to the laws of Christ's Kingdom. (Acts 3:20-23; 15:16-18, etc.). Both the spiritual and earthly resurrections are shown by St. Paul in 1 Cor. 15:35-40.

The statement that the earth could not support the full population if there were no death will be disproven to all mankind, including Dr. Benson, in the Kingdom age, because "all that are in the graves (death condition) shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and come forth." (John 5:28, 29, Revised Version). A Scriptural explanation of this matter is provided in the very helpful work "The Divine Plan of the Ages" under the section "Ransom and Restitution." All readers desirous of knowing the truth on this matter should apply for a copy of this book, which is supplied at 2/6 in handy size.

The Greek Word “Parousia.”

Some years ago an investigation was made of the meaning of the Greek word “parousia” from some of the leading authorities whose works are deposited in the Melbourne Public Library, and the findings were printed in these columns. These are again presented below and should prove helpful and convincing to our readers. It is clear that these scholars recognise that the true meaning of this Greek word is “presence.”

Young Concordance.—Gk. Parousia: A being alongside, presence.

Woodhouse.—Presence = Gk. Parousia. “Coming” in the sense of “journey” is one Greek word, in sense of “arrival” is another, and in sense of “presence” = parousia.

Liddell and Scott.—Gk. Parousia (1) Being present, presence of persons or of things. Example from the Greek Sophocles: “that we have no friends present to assist us.” (2) Arrival.

Edwards.—Presence = Parousia. Coming = a quite different word.

Arnold and Browne.—Presence Parousia.

Kyriakides.—Parousia = presence; (in theology) the final judgment, the second coming or advent of Christ.

Greek Lexicon of the New Testament. Grimm (Thayer). Parousia = (1) Presence, 1 Cor. 16:17; 2 Cor. 10:10; opposed to Gk. for “absence,” in Phil. 2:12. (2) The presence of one coming, hence coming; arrival, advent, 2 Cor. 7:6; 2 Thes. 2:9; Phil. 1:26. In the New Testament, especially of the advent, i.e., the future return from heaven of Jesus, the Messiah, to raise the dead, hold the last judgment and set up formally and gloriously the Kingdom of God, Matt. 24:3.

Melbourne Christmas Convention.

The brethren of the Melbourne Class wish to announce that their Annual Convention is to be held this year over the four days, Christmas Day, 25th December, to Sunday, 28th December. On New Year’s Day further meetings are to be held, and both the Convention and New Year’s Day gatherings are to be held at Masonic Hall, 254 Swan Street, Richmond, which is easily reached from the city and all suburbs.

A hearty invitation is extended to all friends able to attend these assemblies for undenominational worship, fellowship and study of the Bible. All can be assured of a really helpful time, and Christian friends who are able to attend are advised to communicate as early as possible with the class secretary—Mr. J. Hiam, 44 Heath Avenue, Oakleigh, S.E.12, Victoria.

Reply to Criticism.

In recent weeks a criticism of an article appearing in the “People’s Paper” has come under our notice. The writer of the “P. Paper” article has prepared a reply which is now available for all friends who make personal application for same.

Appreciation of Food Parcels.

In August, 1946, a letter of appreciation received by two sisters in Australia from Mr. G. A. Ford, 13 Cranleigh Gardens, Luton, Beds., England, the distributor of the Benevolent Fund for the brethren in Britain, was published in these columns. Since that time many parcels of food have been despatched by the brethren in Australia to Brother Ford for distribution amongst the needy, and the following extract from a letter recently received from Brother Ford by one of our friends speaks for itself:

“It has been very sweet of you to send as you have done; everything has been of good use, and all things have been despatched to different dear brethren in all parts of the British Isles. We deeply appreciate this very generous and practical sympathy. Our hearts overflow in gratitude to the Lord for all His mercies and abounding love, and providences on our behalf, The aged, infirmed, lonely, sick and needy have been and are touched with your loving gifts. Their faith and confidence in the Lord, is encouraged, their hopes brighter, and even though we look forward to a hard winter we are fully assured of the Lord’s grace, mercy and peace, and can enter more and more fully into that rest which remaineth for the people of God. Thank you Sister and all others you may know who are sending to us . .

We are kept busy in our spare time, caring for the needs of the brethren; but the Lord is so good and we delight to serve.”

Thy Will Be Done.

“With quivering heart and trembling will
The word hath passed thy lips,

Within the shadow, cold and still,
Of some fair joy’s eclipse.

‘Thy will be done!’ Thy God hath heard,
And He will crown that faith-framed word.

“Thy prayer shall be fulfilled—but how?
His thoughts are not as thine;

While thou wouldst only weep and bow,
He saith, ‘Arise and Shine!’

Thy thoughts were all of grief and night,
But His of boundless joy and light.

“Thy Father reigns supreme above;
The glory of His name

Is Grace and Wisdom, Truth and Love.
His will must be the same.

And thou halt asked all joys in one,
In whispering forth, ‘Thy will be done.’ —F.R.H.

“Correspondence.

Dear Brother,—Just a few lines wishing you all that is good, and sending along a few shillings to help along with the good work, which we hope is having a sanctifying influence on those who hear. There are those who think a knowledge of the truth is most important, but to me the “grace” (character development) aspect is of equal importance. One cannot very well separate the two; we could not be like our Father in heaven in character without knowing Him, and His character is very plainly revealed in His word, but how can we appreciate the depths of His Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power if we do not try to copy Him as best we can?

I have received a circular some time ago, criticising an article in the “P.P.” It did not strike me as worth the paper written on, as far as constructive criticism goes. I do not know why people baulk at the thought of Christ’s presence, when evidence is produced indicating that it is already a fact; many seem to go out of their way to try to prove that the idea is wrong, but the evidence seems to be mounting every day. No doubt they will be sorry when they realise that the harvest is past.

The world is in a sorry plight today, and getting no better fast; the carnage in India is a sad sight and seems to picture what would happen in any country when the restraining influences are removed. As has been said, any government is better than anarchy, and we see the truth of this before our eyes.

is enclosed for the Radio Fund. and £ for the General Fund, from this family. Yours in the Lord.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Friends,—I notice that it is mentioned in one of the letters in your “Paper” that the Radio Fund is not very financial. I would like the privilege of helping to put out the glad tidings, and as this seems to be the only way that I am able, will be most pleased if you will place the enclosed sum of to the Fund.

How thankful I am that the Lord is pleased to allow this message to be put out in such a Scriptural fashion at this time; surely we may hope that the time when it will bear much fruit is in sight. The poor world so sadly needs this comfort and to think we have been blessed in having it so long. May the Lord keep you and guide you. With kind Christian regards.

Dear Brother,—Am thankful for the great privilege of contributing the enclosed Z. towards the Radio Fund.

It is the means of blessing to so many hungry souls and we have the assurance that “His Word will not return unto Him void.” What a comfort that is!

Since putting out those last 2KY cards, I have not had the opportunity of doing any more of that work; have been busy along other lines and expect to be for the near future, but the work was sweet to me.

The “night” seems to be closing in rapidly, and with it our hope grows brighter of seeing our Father and dear Heavenly Bridegroom. May He bless you and all the other dear brethren is the prayer of your Sister by His kind favour.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs,—Thanks for the free literature received; always enjoy your Sunday morning’s discussion. Please find 10/- note enclosed which will pay annual subscription (in advance) for your monthly “Paper” and at your convenience would like several copies of “Foregleams of the Golden Age.” Yours faithfully.

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Friends.—I listened to your broadcast last Sunday for the first time (“The Sorrows of Satan”). My husband has been listening for years, also getting your literature; he has convinced me that there is no hell, so your Dialogue was of special interest to me.

I have a relative in the Apostolic Church and she was horrified at what she called an “easy” religion, and said if there was no hell, it would not have been necessary for Christ to die; however, if the wages of sin is eternal torment, then the debt is still unpaid. Will you send me copies of the Dialogue as I’d like to send some to friends, also any tracts you would like passed on. Yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs,—Many thanks for your Letter, also the Frank and Ernest Dialogues and some reading matter which came under separate cover.

That which came to hand has given me much food for thought, and thrown new light on some of the problems (for problems they are, when it comes to an endeavour to put a workable interpretation on many themes of Scripture which we have come to regard as commonplace over the years). These seem to be the days of intensive study. and when Daniel said that in the “latter days” knowledge will increase, Biblical knowledge was meant also to be under that heading. Personally, I am finding out things these days that I have never heard from over the pulpit all my life.

Will you please forward me a copy of "Foregleams of the Golden Age" and "Daily Heavenly Manna" as advertised on some of your literature you sent the other day? Enclosed is a postal note for 5/-; if more required, please let me know. Yours very faithfully.

Dear Christian Friend,—For some time now I have intended to write to you. As I am sometimes away at weekends I do not always have the opportunity of hearing your Dialogues and would be happy if you would let me have copies of them with the "People's Paper."

I was much interested in the Dialogues "The Sorrows of Satan" and "Baptised for the Dead." They gave me some new angles on the Bible teachings which I would like to pass on to some friends who do not listen to your session, so if printed copies of these are available I would be glad to have them. With kindest regards, I remain. Yours faithfully.

(Copies of the weekly broadcasts are gladly supplied to all who promise to give them a careful reading.—B.B. Institute).

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sir,—Thank you very much for your reply to my request for copies of "Devils and Demons" and also for the booklets you so kindly sent.

I am not a regular listener to Frank and Ernest as the time is not always convenient, but I enjoy the session very much when I have the opportunity to listen. The reason why I like it and find the session so helpful, is because it answers the same doubts and puzzling points that beset we poor humans and does it so simply and naturally.

I am enclosing two postal notes for 10/- each. Please enrol me for one year for "People's Paper" and the "Frank and Ernest Talks." Deduct also for the other literature you have so kindly sent and also for "Foregleams of the Golden Age" which you recommended me to read. Should the enclosed be insufficient to cover cost and postage please let me know, and if there is any surplus use it in your work. Thanking you once again. Yours sincerely.

To Frank and Ernest,—I should like to take advantage of your kind offer and would accept with thanks a copy of his morning's address from 2KY station.

Thanking you in anticipation; I thank you also for a very helpful talk; when I am able I always listen to your talks and find them very helpful.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs,—I listen with interest to your discussions over the air on Sunday mornings and would very much like to have copies of your Talks. I am sorry to trouble you about past numbers. but on 5th October your discussion on Hell was particularly interesting. I would be very grateful if you could supply me with one or two copies of that Dialogue. I will gladly pay postage on same. God bless you. Yours sincerely.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sir,—My subscription to the "People's Paper" must be long overdue; please find enclosed a postal note for the sum of 6/-. Thanking you sincerely for continuing to send the "Paper"; there is no other to compare with it. I am, Yours sincerely.

Dear Sir,—Will you please quote me the price of wall texts, small and medium size for children. Also please have you any small books of Bible Stories suitable for children who have no chance of going to Sunday School and have had no religious training. These children are neighbours of mine and I would like to try and encourage them to learn something about Jesus Christ. A Catholic mission was here a few days ago and tried to get the children to join them, but I do not want this to happen.

I am trying to teach my own child and thought I may be able to help these children if I had some books or papers that they could read. My father has had books and papers from you.

Trusting you will be able to help me to bring light into the lives of these children. I am, yours faithfully.

(The book "The Ten Camels" is very useful for assisting young children, and the larger story book "God's Promises Come True" is excellent for older children or teachers. Both these books present the truths of the Bible in interesting and appealing manner, and are now priced at 3/- and 14/6 respectively.—B.B. Institute.).

God's Best Gift.

WE approach again the end of the year, and the thoughts of Christians turn more particularly to the accepted time of the anniversary of the birth of Christ. Even though Christmas Day is evidently not the birthday of our Lord Jesus, inasmuch as He was 331 years old at the time of His death at the Passover season, making His birth about the beginning of October, yet the Lord's people can sincerely enter into the spirit of the Christmas season, especially as our Lord did not indicate that any particular time be accepted as His birthday.

Students of God's Word cannot but be impressed with the fact that throughout the Gospels, which record the life of Jesus on earth, so little reference is made to the boyhood and manhood years of the Lord, prior to His consecration to His Heavenly Father at the age of thirty years. His birth of course was heralded throughout Israel and we have a choice record of this in Luke, chapter 2; yet even here the emphasis is laid on the fact that—"Unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." (verse 11). This of course was stressing the fact that the babe then born would become the Christ, the anointed One, at which time He would indeed be the Saviour of Israel and all the world.

Apart from the account of Jesus as a boy in the temple (Luke 2:41-52), nothing more is recorded of Him until at thirty years of age, a mature man under the Law, He presented Himself to the Father to do His will, knowing of course that His mission to earth was "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many." (Matt. 20:28.) In looking back to the time of Jesus' life on earth, therefore, it is the 3 years of His ministry that our Lord would have us meditate upon particularly at this the Christmas season, as well as at all other times of the year.

"For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for your sakes He became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich," states the Apostle Paul in 2 Cor. 8:9, and we at once try to grasp the greatness of this Gift of God's love—God's Best Gift. Try as we may, however, our poor minds cannot take in, much less retain, the full graciousness of our Heavenly Father in providing His well-beloved Son to be our Saviour and Redeemer, as also the great love and humility of Jesus manifest in the prophetic utterance — "I delight to do Thy will, O my God: yea, Thy law is within my heart", (Psa. 40:8)—as well as in the words of Paul—"We see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels, for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour; (of perfect humanity) that He by the grace of God should taste death for every man." (Heb. 2:9.)

As the Lord's people thus "see Jesus," beholding Him first as "the man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a ransom for all," and then as their risen Lord and Saviour, the One altogether lovely, whose "love constraineth us," and beside whose sacrifice they would lay down their little all, their inward joys shall know no bounds as this Christmastide, and every season of the year, brings its blessings upon their heads.

This attitude of heart and mind, of rejoicing in Christ; Gift of God's love, is not an inconsistent one as the Christian also views the poor world of mankind in distress and perplexity today, for the same loving sacrifice of Jesus which redeems the Church of Christ, also brings salvation to all mankind in the age to come, though mankind at large cannot as yet understand nor appreciate this. How clearly this matter was stated by the angel at the birth of Jesus--

"Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." Yes, indeed, all people are to yet hear and have the opportunity of rejoicing in the glad news of salvation through Christ, just as the Lord's people experience that privilege today, and have the added favour of the heavenly calling, the "so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him." (Heb. 2:3.)

Just as our Lord would have us view His ministry of service and sacrifice from Jordan to Calvary as the allimportant period of His life on earth, so the follower of Jesus is encouraged to estimate his or her important lifetime as really beginning at consecration to God. All the former years of a Christian's life, at best, can be said to be but preparatory to the new life, with new hopes, aims and ambitions which begin with the acceptance of God's call to sonship (1 Pet. 5:10). This, the greatest privilege ever offered to any of the human race, is presented so clearly by Paul—"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." (Rom. 12:1.) The great mercy of God in providing such an opportunity to "fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ" (Col. 1:24) , should be the appealing factor to all in right heart condition, and should bring a ready response on their part. Delay or failure to grasp this invitation shows a lack of love and loyalty to the Lord who bought us with His precious blood.

From the Psalmist comes also the prophetic appeal — "Hearken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear; forget also thine own people, and thy father's house; So shall the King greatly desire thy beauty; for He is thy Lord, and worship thou Him." (Psa. 45:10, 11.) How necessary it is to "hearken, and consider, and incline thine ear," to enable one to be led to full submission to the will of God, and those who have "ears to hear" and hearts to appreciate what they do hear, soon respond and "forget also thine own people, and thy father's house." Their father's house would be Adam's house, the world in general with its human hopes, aims and ambitions, and they forget their own people in the sense that the Lord must come first in their affections, and they perform all responsibilities toward their human relatives and friends from this new standpoint of service for Him. Yes,. all things correctly and rightly done on behalf of loved ones, by the consecrated people of God, are accepted by Him as service rendered, while at the same time these followers of the Master are alert to grasp their opportunities for more direct service as well, in the cause of Christ and His truth.

In giving thanks to God for the gift of Jesus and the great high calling opened up for us through His sacrifice, we can show our deepest appreciation for this "unspeakable gift" by true devotion and worship of the Lord, by love and encouragement in the Christian way to other members of God's family on earth, by love and kindly attention to our earthly relatives and friends, and doing good to all mankind as we have opportunity. "So shall the King greatly desire thy beauty (the beauty of character development, the graces and fruits of the spirit) , for He is thy Lord, and worship thou Him."

Baptized into Christ's Death

There is always encouragement to the Lord's people as a whole when other members are added to the family of God on earth, and the outward witness of full consecration to God, by immersion in the waters of baptism, brings the same blessing today to all true-hearted followers of Christ as was experienced in the days of our Lord and the Apostles.

A recent Baptism Service took place in Geelong, Victoria, when two Sisters gladly symbolised their consecration to God—"to be dead with Christ, if so be that they may live with Him." A number of beautiful hymns, the prayers of the brethren, and thoughts expressed on such Scriptures as Matt. 3:13-17; Matt. 11:28-30; Rom. 6:3-5; 1 Pet. 3:18-22; Luke 12:50 and Rev. 14:1-4 contributed to make the occasion blessed of the Lord.

It was impressed during this service that the real baptism or immersion was of course the "baptism into Christ's death," the covenant of sacrifice entered into by the two Sisters with their Lord, in similar manner to all other members of the Body of Christ, and that the water immersion was the sign or symbol, as in the case of Jesus, of being dead to all earthly hopes, aims and ambitions, and living with heavenly hopes as we walk in the steps of Christ—"For if we have been planted together in the likeness of His (sacrificial) death, we shall be also in the likeness of His resurrection." Prayers for God's blessing and keeping power to be upon the two Sisters and the brethren in Christ generally were offered, that all may gladly "follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth," and thus prove faithful at the end of the earthly way to inherit that heavenly Home not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

Show me Thy face—one transient gleam
Of loveliness Divine,

And I shall never think or dream
Of other love than Thine:

All other lights will darken quite,
All lower glories wane,

The beautiful of earth will scarce
Seem beautiful again.

Show me Thy face—I shall forget
The weary days of yore:

The fretting thoughts of vain regret
Shall hurt my soul no more;

All doubts and fears for future years
In quiet trust subside,

And naught but blest content and calm
Within my breast reside.

Show me Thy face—the heaviest cross
Will then seem light to bear,

There will be gain in every loss,
And peace with every care.

With such light feet the years will fleet,
Life seem as brief as blest,

Till I have laid my burden down,
And entered into rest.

What is Victory?

When you are set at nought, your wishes crossed, your tastes offended, your advice disregarded, and you take it all in patient loving forbearance,

This is victory!

When you will not approve by word or silent acquiescence, exaggeration, evil speaking, vain imagination, or perverse conduct,

This is victory!

When you do not love to refer to yourself in conversation, nor glory in your own pious deeds, when you can in honour prefer others,

This is victory!

When you can be conscientious under all conditions, when you can be faithful in things small and great, when you can practice true Christianity equally in your home as in public life,

This is victory!

When you have stumbled into error, foolishness, weakness or sin, and you thereafter grasp more firmly the hand of the Lord,

This is victory!

When you seem overwhelmed by discouragement, disappointment, difficulty, pain, affliction, sorrow or wrong, and you can confidently look to the Lord for deliverance,

This is victory!

When you can stand face to face with the opponents of truth and righteousness, who misunderstand, hate, and persecute you; and you faithfully endure it all as Jesus did,

This is victory!

“Thanks be to God, who giveth us the Victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.”-1 Cor. 15:57.

Booklet replacing January's Peoples Paper.

The booklet “Do the Dead Know Anything?” is taking the place of the January issue of “Peoples Paper” and is being posted out with this the December number. A rereading of this booklet by our friends who have had it before will no doubt prove of some help, and it can be used to advantage for passing on to others who may not be clear on this important subject. Further copies of “Do the Dead Know Anything?” are also available at 4d. each, or 3/- per dozen copies.

The Radio Witness.

ANOTHER six months has passed since the last report and balance sheet was presented in connection with the witness of the truth over the air, and it is a pleasure at this time to announce again some good encouragement in this feature of the work carried on by the Berean Bible Institute. In a few weeks' time five years of this service will have been completed, and it is with much gratitude to the Lord that we look back on the last six months of this privilege which He has blessed to many in the various parts where the programmes are heard, and where the printed Dialogues are sent.

While the response from new, listeners is not now as great as in the opening years of this work, yet the benefits seem to be greater in proportion to the stations used, as listeners have increased and many are now rejoicing in the truths of God's Word and commending the sessions to others. Our listeners can do much in this way, as new friends are more likely to be encouraged to listen by those they know than by an advertising card, etc. It would therefore be a good service if each listener could encourage only one other person to listen each month, and it is hoped our friends will seek to do this, in the interest of the Lord's work. Only the Lord knows where the sincere-hearted are located, and the radio witness is one means He can use to bless those who desire the glad message He provides through His people.

The advertising cards have been used to some extent over the past six months but not as extensively as formerly; if our friends could keep a supply in their pockets or handbags as they travel- around many opportunities for witnessing will be found even without special efforts for distribution. These cards are supplied free from the Radio Fund to all applying for same.

The Lord alone knows the full benefits obtained by a work of this kind, but what we do know gives cause for much thankfulness to Him, as quite a number of friends have been brought to a knowledge and appreciation of the Lord and His truth by this means. What may be our privileges in this witness with the increasing restlessness apparent in many parts we may not know for far ahead, but we are happy to continue to sound forth the glad tidings of the Kingdom in harmony with the good will and pleasure of the Lord, and by His grace.

The financial assistance for this feature of the work has been supplied by the voluntary contributions of our friends, and the help in this way has been encouraging over the past six months again. In the Lord's providence the assistance received has enabled the credit balance to increase to £ 82/7/9, and which is carried forward for this work as from 1st November last. Would all our dear friends join in prayer for the blessing and guidance of the Lord upon this work which is undertaken in His name, and with desire to serve and glorify Him.

RED CHALLENGE TO THE VATICAN.

(From Alexander Clifford.)

Vatican City.—The prelates and the acolytes and the beggars and the nuns and the pilgrims and the tourists flutter and swirl and gossip in the vast porch of St. Peter's. You shove your way through them to where the mighty door frames a distant glimpse of marble cherubim and gilded altars and soaring columns and twinkling chandeliers.

Then a courteous, but burly, plainclothes man steps up to you and says, "May I see what you have in your brief case?" It may be a tiny thing, but it is a sign of war. Bomb outrages in the mother-church of the Catholic world are considered a possibility. The Vatican is taking its precautions. The faithful can be searched at the door. For without fuss—almost in a whisper—war has been declared. Gradually but steadily throughout this summer the Catholic Church has been reinforcing her challenge to Communism, her one great internationally-organised enemy in the world. Now by word and deed the signs of war are becoming visible.

(The above significant news item appeared in the Melbourne press on 26th November last. A previous news report from Alexander Clifford at Rome appeared in August 1947 issue of "Peoples Paper", copies of which are still procurable as desired.)

The Manner of Christ's Return.

(Part 3. Continued from November Issue.)

MANY Christians have the idea that our Lord's glorious spiritual body is the very same body that was crucified and laid away in Joseph's tomb: they expect, when they see the Lord in glory, to identify Him by the scars He received on Calvary. This is a great mistake, which a very little consideration should make manifest—Firstly, It would prove that His resurrection body is not glorious or perfect, but scarred and disfigured: Secondly, It would prove that we do know what a spirit body is, notwithstanding the Apostle's statement to the contrary: Thirdly, It would prove that our redemption price was taken back; for Jesus said, "My flesh I will give for the life of the world." It was His flesh, His life as a man, His humanity, that was sacrificed for our redemption. And when He was raised to life again by the power of the Father, it was not to human existence; because that was sacrificed as our purchase price. And if that price had been taken back, we would still be under the condemnation of death, and without hope.

We have no more reason to suppose that our Lord's spirit body since His resurrection is a human body than we have for supposing, that His spirit body prior to His first advent was human, or that other spirit beings have human bodies; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones; and, says the Apostle Peter, our Lord was "put to death in the flesh but made alive in spirit."

Our Lord's human body was, however, supernaturally removed from the tomb; because had it remained there it would have been an insurmountable obstacle to the faith of the disciples, who were not yet instructed in spiritual things—for "the spirit was not yet given." (John 7:39.) We know nothing about what became of it, except that it did not decay or corrupt. (Acts 2:27, 31.) Whether it was dissolved into gases or whether it is still preserved somewhere as the grand memorial of God's love, of Christ's obedience, and of our redemption, no one knows;—nor is such knowledge necessary. That God did miraculously hide the body of Moses, we are assured (Deut. 34:6; Jude 9); and that as a memorial God did miraculously preserve from corruption the manna in the golden bowl, which was placed in the Ark under the Mercy Seat in the Tabernacle, and that it was a symbol of our Lord's flesh, the bread from heaven, we also know (Exod. 14:20, 33; Heb. 9:4; John 6:51-58) .

To regard our Lord's glorious body as a body of flesh would not in the least account for His peculiar and sudden appearances during those forty days prior to His ascension. How could He so suddenly appear and then vanish? How was it that He kept Himself invisible during those forty days? And why was it that His appearance each time was so changed as not to be recognized as the same one seen on any former occasion, or as the one so well-known and loved by all, before His crucifixion, only a few days previous?

It will not do merely to say that these were miracles, for then some use or necessity for the miracles should be named. If His body after His resurrection were flesh and bones, and the same body that was crucified, with all the features and scars, why did He perform miracles which not only did not establish that fact, but which were likely, we see, to teach the opposite?—that He himself was no longer human—flesh and bones—but a spirit being who could go and come as the wind, so that none could tell whence He came or whither He went, but who, for the purpose of instructing them, appeared as a man in various bodies of flesh and bones which He created and dissolved as occasion required.

Before our Lord's crucifixion, He had been on familiar terms with His disciples, but after His resurrection, though He loved them none the less, His manner toward them was more reserved. This was doubtless to impress them more forcibly with the dignity and honour of His high exaltation, and to inspire due reverence for His person and authority. Though as a man Jesus never lacked that dignity of deportment which commands respect, yet a greater reserve was necessary and expedient after His change to the divine nature. Such reserve has always been maintained by Jehovah toward His creatures, and is expedient under the circumstances. This reserve marked all our Lord's interviews with the disciples after His resurrection. They were very brief, even as He had said, "Hereafter I will not talk much with you."—John 14:30.

Those who believe that our Heavenly Father is a spirit and not a man should find no difficulty in realizing that our Lord Jesus, who is now exalted to the divine nature, and who is not only a moral likeness of God but in fact "the express image of the Father's person," is no longer a man but a spirit being, whom no man hath seen nor can see without a miracle. It is just as impossible for men to see the unveiled glory of the Lord Jesus as it is for them to behold Jehovah. Think for a moment how even a reflection of the spiritual glory affected Moses and Israel at Sinai.

(Heb. 12:21; Exod. 19; 20:19-21; 33:20-23; 34:29-35.) "So terrible was the sight," so overwhelming and fear-inspiring, "that Moses said, I exceedingly fear and quake." And though Moses was supernaturally strengthened to behold the glory of the Lord, so that for forty days and forty nights, alone with God, overshadowed by His glory and without either food or drink, he received and wrote the divine law (Exod. 34:28), yet when he desired to see the Lord face to face he was told, "Thou canst not see my face; for there shall no man see me and live." (Exod. 33:20.)

All that Moses ever saw, therefore, was an appearance representing God, and nothing more was possible. This accords, too, with the Apostle's statements: "No man hath seen God at any time"; He is the King immortal, invisible, whom no man hath seen nor can [ever] see. (1 Tim. 6:15, 16.) But that spirit beings can and do see God, who Himself is a spirit being is clearly stated.—Matt. 18:10.

If our Lord is still "the man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a ransom for all" (1 Tim. 2:5, 6)—if being put to death in the flesh He was raised again in the flesh, and not, as the Apostle declares, a life-giving spirit—then instead of being exalted higher than angels and every name that is named in heaven as well as in earth, He is still a man. And if He retains the form of a servant, which He took for the purpose of suffering death for every man, and is still a little lower than the angels, He never can see God. But how unreasonable is such a view when fully examined in the light of apostolic testimony. Consider, too, that if our Lord's flesh, that was pierced and wounded with nail and spear and crown of thorns, and marked with sorrow, is His glorious spiritual body, and if the scars and marred human features are part and parcel of the exalted Lord, He would be far from beautiful, even if we should love the wounds endured for us. And if He thus bears an imperfect, scarred, marred body, and if we shall be like Him, would it not imply that the apostles and saints who were crucified, beheaded, stoned to death, burned, cut to pieces and torn by beasts, as well as those who met with accidents, would each likewise bear his blemishes and scars?

And in that view would not heaven present a most awful spectacle—to all eternity? But this is not the case, and no one could long hold so unreasonable and unscriptural a view. Spirit beings are perfect in every particular, and so the Apostle reminds the Church, who are heirs of heavenly or spiritual glory and honour, that, though sown [in death] in weakness [with marks and wounds, etc.] it [the being] is raised in power; though sown in dishonour [with lines of care and sorrow, etc.] it is raised in glory; though sown a natural body [literally, "an animal body"] it will be raised a spiritual body; and that as we have borne the image of the earthly father, we shall bear the image of the heavenly Lord. (1 Cor. 15:42-51.) Our Lord Jesus for our sakes took and bore the image of the earthly also, for a while, that He might redeem us. But in His resurrection He became the heavenly Lord (Rom. 14:9) and we, if faithful, shall soon bear the image of the heavenly Lord (spiritual bodies) as we now still bear the image of the earthly lord, Adam (human bodies).

Remember Paul's case—In order that he might be one of the Apostles, he must be a witness—must see the Lord after His resurrection. He was not one of those who saw the manifestations of resurrection and presence during the forty days, hence he was given a special glimpse of the Lord. But he saw Him, not as did the others—not veiled in flesh and garments of various forms. And the merest glance at the unveiled glorious person of our Lord caused him to fall to the ground blinded with a glory far "above the brightness of the sun at noon-day": from which blindness, to restore him to even partial sight, required a miracle. (Acts 9:17, 18.) Did not Paul see the Lord as He is—a spiritual being? And did not our Lord during the forty days appear as He was, i.e., as He had been previously, for the special purposes and reasons already pointed out? There is no room to doubt this. But the Lord had an object in appearing to Paul thus, just as He had, and served another object by appearing differently to the others. This object Paul shows, saying: "Last of all He was seen of me also—as by one born before the due time." (1 Cor. 15:8—literal rendering.)

As the resurrection of our Lord was His birth from the dead, to the full perfection of spiritual being (Col. 1:18; Rom. 8:29), so the resurrection of the Church, the body of Christ, is here and elsewhere referred to as a birth. In our birth or resurrection as spirit beings, we shall see the Lord as He is, just as Paul saw Him; but we, being changed or born then, as spirit beings, will not be stricken down nor blinded with the sight of our Lord's glorious person. Paul's statement means that he saw Him as we shall see Him—"as He is": he saw Him as all the body of Christ shall see Him, but before the due time, before he was born from the dead, and therefore before able to endure it;—yet "as" each one so born shall in due time see Him.

Moses, coming down from the mount to communicate to Israel the Law Covenant, was a type of the greater Law-giver and Mediator of the New Covenant, who at His second advent shall come forth to rule and bless the world.

Moses typified, therefore, the entire Church, of which our Lord is the Head. Moses' face was caused to shine, so that the people could not look at him, and he must thereafter wear a veil, as a type of the spiritual glory of Christ, an illustration of the point we are now examining. Christ has the real glory and brightness, the express image of the Father's person, and we shall be like Him, and no man can behold that glory; hence whatever manifestation of the Lawgiver there will be to the world when the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, the glory of the spiritual persons cannot be seen. They will speak through the veil—under the cover. This, as well as more, was meant by Moses' veil.—Exod. 34:30-33.

As we give the matter careful study, we come more and more to recognize the divine wisdom displayed in the manner of revealing the resurrection of our Lord to the apostles, that they should be thoroughly satisfied and reliable witnesses, and that the meek of the world might be able to receive their testimony and believe that God raised our Lord from the dead—that they might recognize Him as the one that was dead, but is now alive forevermore, and, believing, might come unto God by Him. And as we consider Him under the leadings of the holy spirit of truth, our minds expand and we see Him no longer the man Christ Jesus, but the Lord of glory and power, partaker of the divine nature. And thus we know Him, for whose coming and kingdom the Church has so earnestly prayed and longed. And no one properly recognizing His great exaltation can expect at His second coming the man Christ Jesus in the body of flesh prepared for sacrifice and wounded and given in death as our ransom. Nor should we expect that at His second coming He would "appear," or manifest Himself, in various flesh and bone forms to the world—that was needful for those early witnesses, but not so now. He will, as we shall see, manifest His second presence very differently.

From what we have seen regarding spirit beings and their manifestations in times past, it is evident that if our Lord were to manifest Himself at His second advent either by opening men's eyes to behold His glory, as He did with Paul and Daniel, or by assuming a human body, it would be detrimental to the plan revealed in His Word. The effect of appearing in glory to the world, their eyes being miraculously wrought upon to enable them to see Him, would be almost to paralyze them with the overwhelming sight, while to appear as a man would be to lower the standard of dignity and give a lower than the true estimate of the divine nature and form. As neither would seem to be necessary or advisable now, we cannot presume that either of these methods will be adopted.

On the contrary, we should expect that the Christ would be manifest in the flesh of mankind in the same manner that when the Lord was "made flesh" and dwelt among men, God was manifest in His flesh. Human nature, when perfect and in harmony with God, is a likeness of God in the flesh; hence the originally perfect Adam was a likeness of God, and the perfect man Christ Jesus was also; so that He could say to the disciple Philip, who asked to see the Father, "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father"—he hath seen the likeness of God in the flesh, "God manifest in the flesh."

So, too, mankind in general, as its members come gradually back to the long-lost image of God, will be fleshly images and likenesses of the Father and of the Christ. At the very beginning of the Millennium, there will be samples of perfect manhood before the world: Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and the holy prophets, already tried and approved, will be the "princes" among men, the exponents and representatives of the spiritual, invisible kingdom. In these Christ will be manifested—in their flesh—even as the Father was manifested in His flesh. And as "whosoever will" reaches perfection and comes into full harmony with the will of Christ, every such one will be an image of God and of Christ, and in each of these Christ will be manifested.

Because created in God's moral image, the perfect man, fully consecrated, will be able to appreciate perfectly the holy spirit and Word of God; and the glorified Church will direct him. No doubt, too, visions and direct revelations, and general communications between the spiritual kingdom and its earthly representatives and exponents, will be much more free and general than similar communications ever were before—more after the order of the communions of Eden, before sin brought condemnation and separation from God's favour and communion.

Nothing, then, either in reason or in Scripture, demands that our Lord shall at His second advent appear in various bodies of flesh and bones. That such a procedure is not essential is evident from the success of Satan's kingdom, which operates through human beings as agents. Those who partake of the spirit of evil and error represent the great unseen prince, most fully. He is thus manifest in their flesh, though himself a spirit being, is invisible to men.

The Christ "changed," made partakers of the divine nature, shall be spirit beings as truly as is Satan, and equally invisible to men. Their operations will be similar in manner, though directly opposite in character and results; their honoured agents, not bound and made slaves by ignorance and weakness, as are most of the servants of Satan, but made perfect, and "free indeed," will act intelligently and harmoniously, from choice and from love; and their appointments will be rewards of righteousness.

Melbourne Christmas Convention.

As announced last month the Annual Convention is to be held by the Melbourne brethren this year from Christmas Day, 25th December, to Sunday, 28th December, in Masonic Hall, 254 Swan Street, Richmond, Melbourne. Further meetings will also be held in the same hall on New Year's Day.

Arrangements are now well in hand, and the programme will be available shortly. Visiting friends who have not yet indicated their intention of attending the Convention should do so as early as possible. The Melbourne friends extend a cordial invitation to all sincere Christians able to attend. Further information and programmes may be obtained from the secretary—Mr. J. Hiam, 44 Heath Ave., Oakleigh, S.E.12, Victoria.

Correspondence.

Dear Christian Friends—I should have written before but failing sight compels me to put off all correspondence and sewing and reading, etc., until with a mighty effort I get a few short notes written. I trust all the brethren are well.

We do not get too good a reception on the radio so cannot hear the Talks too well. I am enclosing 10/- for the "Peoples Paper" (excellent) which I am sure is long overdue and thank you for your love in sending it for so long. I am sure there will be no balance, but if there is, use the small sum in whatever way you wish.

How wonderful the truth is! And how true that "perfect love casts out fear." When one views the world's sorrow and perplexity today, with fear in men's hearts everywhere, it is a great solace to know the Lord and believe His promises. "I will not fear though the earth be removed." God bless and keep you all. Yours in Him.

Dear Brother—Please find enclosed P.O. order 10/-, my subscription to the "P.P.", the remainder for Frank and Ernest. Am sure the Radio Talks are doing good.

I've been quite enjoying the "P.P." of late, the "Parcusia" of our Lord, etc. It seems not all are doing so by that circular letter. I quite agree with that letter in November "P.P." Kindly send me, two "Reply to Criticism," also the Sept. "P.P."; I have mislaid mine. Your Sister in the one Hope.

P.S.—Keep those articles going; there are a good many who need same.

Dear Friends—I would very much like to have some more of your previous Dialogues, as they are very interesting and whereby much knowledge is gained regarding spiritual things of the Bible of which I think we should all know more. To sit down and quietly read your Talks at leisure is to get a better understanding of things; please send me your booklet also. Yours in sincerity.

Dear Sir—I desire to thank you for the literature and your kind letter which I received this week. I have been quietly reading the pamphlets you so kindly sent along... The thing I fail to understand is that so many men who claim to be Christians and students of God's Word differ so much, especially men with university education, twisting the Scriptures to suit their own belief. Under these conditions how is it possible for a man or woman who has had only a poor education to understand who is right? I don't want you to think I am grumbling; not so. I am only trying to do what I consider is the right thing.

I am very much interested in the discussions by Frank and Ernest every Sunday morning; in fact I love to listen to men who are trying to educate the masses to accept Christ. My letter may seem disjointed, but I have tried to make my position clear. Thanking you once again.

(The Lord's promise to all sincere people is that "Every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. . . And if ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?" (Matt. 7:7-11.) Further, worldly education is not necessary to understand the Bible; very often it is a hindrance, as Jesus indicated in His prayer to God—"I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in Thy sight." (Matt. 11:25, 26.) If there is sincerity of heart and a desire to know the Lord and His truth, and a constant searching and harmonising of God's Word, the Lord will no doubt lead all such into all truth.—B.B. Institute.)

Dear Frank and Ernest—We have listened to your Talks on Biblical subjects coming through Sydney station 2KY on Sunday mornings (8.15 a.m.) and it is refreshing to hear so much Scriptural truth put out for "whosoever will" listen and learn. Would you be good enough to send to the above address a copy of the booklet mentioned, and also the copy of your address we heard this Sunday morning November 16th on Daniel and the dream image of Nebuchadnezzar. Thank you in anticipation. With Christian greetings; Yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—For some considerable time I have been a very interested listener to your Sunday morning broadcasts, and shall be glad to receive any copies of your free literature you may find it possible to send me.

If your Scriptural Dialogues are published in book form I shall be pleased to purchase a copy of same on hearing from you as to cost. With all good wishes for the success of your endeavours for the glory of God. Sincerely yours.

(Copies of the Dialogues are supplied in leaflet form to all desiring to receive them regularly, upon personal application.—B.B. Institute.)

Dear Brethren—Enclosed please find P. Note for 5/- for "Peoples Paper" and any change please keep towards postage of it and the Frank and Ernest broadcasts you kindly post to me and which I find a great help. A week or so ago I was pleased to be able to post some of your booklets and the Dialogues on to an elderly woman who is well-respected locally, and I think in that family the seed will fall on good ground. She was sitting at my table when having a meal in—and we were discussing the discordant state of the world when she asked me if I could post her any Christian literature. I then told her about the work of your Institute and she is going to listen in to the Frank and Ernest Dialogues. . . With best wishes for your great work. Yours, by grace and faith in our King of kings, the Prince of Peace.

Dear Sirs—Would you be kind enough to send to me a copy of your Talk of Sunday, 2nd Nov., from station 3GL, the theme and sentiments of which greatly interested me. Yours truly.

Have Faith in God

(Mark 11:22-24. Convention Address.)

THE words of the Apostle Paul found in Heb. 11:1 are interesting and helpful. Another translator renders this verse as follows:—"Now faith is a well-grounded assurance of that for which we hope, and a conviction of the reality of things which we do not see." Commenting on this verse one has said:—"Faith is that principle, that exercise of mind and heart, which has for its object things not seen but hoped for, and instead of sinking under them as too ponderous, whether from their difficulty or from their uncertainty, stands firm under them—supports and sustains their pressure; in other words, is assured of, confides in and relies on them." (1 John 5:4.)

In Heb. 11:6 Paul says:—"But without faith it is impossible to please Him, for he that cometh to God must believe that He is and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him."

In Rom. 5:1 Paul tells us that it is by faith that we are justified—"Being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Then in Gal. 5:22 we are told that "faith" is the fruit of the spirit. "But the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, . . . faith." Faith is the operation, the exercise of our minds, in respect of God and His promises.

In John 6:29, in answer to some who inquired "What shall we do, that we might work the works of God," Jesus said:—"This is the work of God, that ye believe on Him whom He hath sent."

Faith is necessary to salvation; see Rom. 10:9-11, also 10:17. Having come into Christ by faith and full consecration, we must continue to abide in Him: see John 8:31, 32; Col. 2:6, 7. We must become established in the faith. It is through the knowledge of God, supplied to us through His Word, that we are given a firm basis for our faith. The Apostle Jude says we should "earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints." (Jude 3.) Paul says:—"Take heed unto thyself and unto the doctrine," (1 Tim. 4:16) and again, "Hold fast the faithful word." (Tit. 1:9; 2 Tim. 1:13.)

God's Word tells us that man was created perfect and through disobedience he fell into sin and came under the penalty of God's justice—"Dying thou shalt die." (See also Rom. 5:12.) God has permitted evil for a limited time, in order to allow the human family to have an actual experience with the bitter results of sin. Then we see the love of God manifested in the provision of His only begotten Son to be man's Redeemer. We see too the great love of Christ, manifested in His willingness to leave the courts of heaven, and all its happy associations. We observe how He humbled Himself and took the lowly estate of man, and gave up His perfect human life in sacrificial death so that He might become the Saviour of mankind. (1 Cor. 15:21, 22.)

We thank God that He has opened our eyes of understanding and enabled us to see His purpose in respect of the call of the Bride during this Gospel Age. We see that it is a call to sacrifice the good things of this world. It is a call to walk in the Master's steps, and to be developed into His character-likeness, and to share His future glory and work of blessing all mankind in the Kingdom Age.

In order to strengthen our faith and give us a firm basis for confidence in our Heavenly Father, He has led us to an understanding of the Great Covenants of the Bible. The Abrahamic Covenant is the statement of God's purpose to bless all the families of the earth through the Seed. The true Seed is Christ (Gal. 3:16), and His Church, His Bride (Gal. 3:29)—the Heavenly Seed, developed during this Gospel Age. Then there is the earthly seed which will come into its inheritance under the terms of the New Covenant during the Millennial Age.

The Church, the "little flock," shares with Christ in His covenant by sacrificing during this Gospel Age, the antitypical Atonement Day; and with her Lord and Head she will share in His great future work of blessing and uplifting of Israel and the world under the New Covenant.

How we rejoice too in the understanding of the Bible which we now have concerning the Second Advent of Christ. We see how the first phase of Christ's Second Presence is known only to His chosen people. His Word assures us that He would give His people certain signs by which they would know of His Second Presence after it had taken place.

We believe we have these signs with us today. We believe we are now living in the days of the presence of the Son of Man and that soon His glorious presence will be revealed to all men, and the blessing of all the families of the earth will be due to take place.

Then we feel that our faith in God has been greatly strengthened by the understanding which He has given us of the glorious doctrine of the Resurrection. Jesus said, "I am the resurrection and the life." Yes, indeed, there could be no resurrection apart from Christ. He who died to ransom all, has in His hand the power to deliver all; He has the "keys of death and of the grave," and in due time all in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and shall "come forth"—the Church, the Bride, to enjoy the blessing of joint-heirship with Christ, as Kings and Priests in His own blessed likeness, and the remainder of men to attain once more by God's grace, the original perfection from which our first parents fell.

Thank God for the harmony and beauty of His wonderful Plan of the Ages. How it rejoices our hearts to see and understand to some extent the grand doctrine of Restitution for all the willing and obedient of mankind in due time. How it enlarges our confidence and strengthens our faith in God when we can understand that as a result of the ransom-sacrifice of our Lord Jesus Christ there will come the grand "times of restitution" during which every member of the human family (with the exception of the Church class, called out and selected during this Gospel Age) will have the blessed privilege of being uplifted once more into the perfection which Adam had before sin entered the world.

The Bible also makes it clear that while God has no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, and would rather that all men should turn from their wicked ways and live, yet those who persist in wilful opposition to the laws of Christ's Kingdom will be destroyed from among the people.

How we rejoice in this firm basis for faith which is provided for us by God's grace in His precious Word. Let us keep these great doctrines clear before our minds, by keeping in close touch with God's Word of truth, and with the helps—the Scripture Studies—in which we have these beautiful truths so clearly presented.

Just as the truth of God's Word in its simplicity and beauty tends to strengthen our faith and build us up in Christian character, so on the other hand the false teachings of error inculcated by Satan tends to destroy true faith and undermine character. In 2 Cor. 4:4, Paul tells us that Satan, the god of this world, has blinded the minds of men, and thus hindered them from understanding the truth of the Bible. How does Satan blind men's minds? He does it by means of false teachings—Immortal Soul-ism, the blinding and confusing doctrine of the Trinity, eternal torment, Evolution, Universal Reconciliation, the false teachings of Spiritism and Christian Science etc. These are the means our Adversary uses; he goes about as a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour—in the sense of destroying the faith of believers, and in hindering men from getting clear views of truth. So the Apostle Peter urges us to resist him steadfast in the faith.

We must hold firmly to our faith in God and in His Word. "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." "The holy scriptures are able to make us wise unto salvation, through faith in Christ Jesus." "The just shall live by faith."

We are living in days of peculiar trial and testing of faith. We will need to have and keep on the "whole armour of God." We may come in contact with scoffers and unbelievers who deny the existence of God. Our faith will be tested. Let us remember that we will be "made partakers of Christ if we hold fast the beginning of our confidence and the rejoicing of our hope firm unto the end." (Heb. 3:6.) Let us remember Moses who endured "as seeing Him who is invisible." Let us remember Job, and Noah, and Abraham, and Joseph, Daniel and David—those faithful men of God of ages past whose faith failed not in the hour of trial. Let us remember Paul, that mighty man of God whose faith triumphed over every obstacle; let us remember Jesus.

There are many examples in the Scripture of faith and its operation in the lives and experiences of God's faithful people. One of these is found in the 20th chapter of the 2nd book of Chronicles, verses 1-20. Note in verses 6-12 how simply and earnestly Jehoshaphat lays before God the matter that was causing the people to be distressed. May we not take a lesson from Jehoshaphat, and in the face of trials and troubles which sometimes threaten to overwhelm us, let us lay them before the Lord, realising that He is the All-powerful One, and He has promised to provide and care for His children, and to make "all things work together for good to those who love God."

We may feel like Jehoshaphat that we have in ourselves no might to successfully overcome the oppositions of the forces of darkness; we may not know which way to turn, "but our eyes are upon Thee" This is the language of faith—"Our eyes are upon Thee.” Danger threatens us; we know not how to surmount or overcome it, but our God is all-powerful, faithful and true. He is too wise to err; too good to be unkind. We will wait upon God and He will help us. Let our eyes be upon Him, waiting for His guidance and direction and deliverance. See also verses 14-17 etc.

As we read in the Gospels the accounts of our Lord’s sayings and doings, we note how it pleased Him to see people exercise their faith in God and in Himself as the Son of God—the Messiah. How He sought to encourage faith in the hearts of those with whom He came in contact. (See Matt. 8:1-3.) In verse 2 we have a very beautiful expression of confidence from the lips of the poor leper. Bowing before the Master, he uttered those words which must have gladdened the heart of Jesus. “Lord, if Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean.” A cry such as this cannot fail to bring instant response from the Friend of sinners. Without hesitation the Master’s hand goes out with healing touch accompanied by the prompt assurance, “I will; be thou clean.”

These miracles of Jesus contain some deep and valuable lessons for us all. Leprosy is typical of sin. As members of the fallen race we are all tainted with the leprosy of sin, and even after we have come into Christ by faith and consecration, we find there are in us certain tendencies maybe to something of pride or vanity, or envy, or self-will; and from these we would be cleansed; we would seek to “purge out the old leaven,” and seek the Lord’s grace for a larger infilling of His holy spirit of meekness, gentleness, patience, faith and love. “Ask and ye shall receive; seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you.” (Luke 11:9-13.)

In Mark 5:22-43 we have the touching story of Jairus and his daughter. Jairus was a ruler of the synagogue; his little daughter, twelve years of age was seriously ill. Jairus earnestly entreats the Master to come and heal her. Jesus went with him and there appears to have been a good deal of delay on the way, the crowds thronging around, and the incident of the healing of the woman whose faith impelled her to press through the throng, feeling assured that if she could but touch the Master’s clothes she would be healed. And it was so, for after telling the Lord what she had done, He said, “Thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace, and be whole of thy plague.”

Perhaps we can understand the feelings of Jairus. His thoughts would be regarding his little daughter. If the Lord did not hurry to her assistance she would soon die. Even now it might be too late, for she is indeed seriously ill; and now even while they tarry there comes a messenger from Jairus’ house who brings the dreaded news--“thy daughter is dead; why troublest thou the Master any further?” But note what follows—Jesus knew very well what was passing through the mind and thoughts of Jairus; how he had been chafing under the delay; and now the news of the death of his little daughter would leave Jairus well nigh stunned. How comforting then are Jesus’ words in the face of this dread calamity—“Be not afraid, only believe.” How comforting would these words be in the ears of Jairus.

Friends, these words of Jesus are helpful to us too. When, we are called upon to pass through the deep waters of affliction, let us remember these words. We are living in days of peculiar trial and testing of faith, and we will need to have our minds buttressed with such comforting and assuring words as these:—“Be not afraid--only believe.” (See also Isa. 41:10; 54:10-17; Heb. 3:12-14; 10:21-23; 4:14-16.)

Increase our Faith

Luke 17:5— "And the Apostles said unto the Lord, Increase OUR faith."

Increase our faith beloved Lord.
For Thou alone canst give;
The faith that takes Thee at Thy Word,
The faith by which we live.

Increase our faith, so weak are we,
That we both may and must Commit our very faith to Thee,
Entrust to Thee our trust.

Increase our faith for there is yet
Much land to be possessed;
And by no other strength we get
Our heritage of rest.

Increase our faith—on this broad shield,
All fiery darts be caught;
We must be victors in the field Where
Thou for us hast fought.

Increase our faith that we may claim
Each starry promise sure,
And always triumph in Thy Name
And to the end endure.

Increase our faith, O Lord we pray
That we may not depart From
Thy commands, but all obey
With free and loyal heart.

Increase our faith, increase it still
From heavenward hour by hour,
And in us gloriously fulfil
The work of faith and power.

Increase our faith that never dim
And trembling it may be,
Crowned with the perfect peace of him
"Whose mind is stayed on Thee."

Increase our faith, for Thou hast prayed
That it should never fail;
Our stedfast anchorage is made
With Thee within the veil.

Increase our faith that unto Thee,
More fruit may still abound,
That it may grow exceedingly
And to Thy praise be found.

Increase our faith, O Saviour dear,
By Thy sweet sovereign grace.
Till changing faith for vision clear
We see Thee, face to face.

Convention News.

ONCE again it is a pleasure to report a most helpful season of refreshing throughout the Annual Convention gatherings arranged by the Melbourne Class over the four days of the Christmas season and New Year's Day. The Lord truly blessed these assemblies richly, and sincere gratitude to God for the feast of spiritual good things was continually expressed throughout the assemblies and since.

The Melbourne friends gladly welcomed a nice number of visiting members from interstate and country parts of Victoria, and the visiting brethren largely contributed in making the programme one of the best and evenly balanced for many years, fulfilling to some extent the words of the Apostle in Eph. 4:-16—"From whom (Christ, the Head) the whole body fitly joined together, and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."

During each of the five days the various sessions provided the helpful variety in the gatherings, and it was very evident that while at the end of each day there was a measure of bodily tiredness felt by the friends yet the appetite for the spiritual good things continued alert. The Bible Studies, Addresses, and Fellowship Meetings all played an important part in providing the blessings which the Lord bestowed throughout the gatherings to all assembled in His name.

The portions of Scripture which engaged the attention of the brethren were as follows :—Matt. 5:1-9 ; Matt. 5:10-16 ; Jude 17-25 ; and Eph. 1 :3-10. Many profitable thoughts were brought out at these studies respecting the general plan of salvation; also the truths pertaining to the "days of the Son of Man," the present harvest time of the age when the Lord's true people are drawn to Himself and enlightened and developed to make up the complete number of the Bride class; and the devotional side of the Christian life by which the fruits and graces of the holy spirit are encouraged and increased from day to day. (It is felt that where Conventions of the brethren are held overseas and no Bible studies are provided there is a loss to the assemblies which cannot be made up by other sessions. Where gatherings may be rather large for studies together, these can be divided and each section have its own chairman and study the same Scriptures.)

Each of the addresses contained a message of help and encouragement and the various subjects taken up by the speakers were as follows:—"Fear Not, Little Flock"; "The Road to Damascus—and After"; "Thoughts on the Holy Spirit"; "Walking Worthy"; "Being Beheaded—for the Witness of Jesus and the Word of God"; "Christian Attainments"; "Studying to be Quiet"; "Peace Desired—War Continues! Can Christianity Save the World?"; "Lord, to Whom Shall We Go?"; and "Have Faith in God." For the benefit of our readers as a whole some of these addresses will appear in the "Peoples Paper" from time to time.

The Fellowship Meetings were of the nature of Praise and Testimony and "My Favourite Hymn and Why," and proved most uplifting. Also the Question Meeting gave opportunity for free expression on a number of questions handed in.

The greetings received at the Convention from the various Classes and individual brethren from near and far were very much appreciated, and it was helpful also to know that numerous brethren were praying for the Lord's blessing upon the gatherings. Throughout the sessions the brethren continually remembered at the throne of grace the dear members who were not able to attend, and the general message from the Convention is found in Psalm 61 and is sent to our brethren in every place together with the warm Christian love of all assembled.

The usual Love Feast fittingly closed the four days of Convention together with the appropriate hymns and prayer. At the closing session on New Year's Day on "New Year Resolutions in Word and Hymn" a really blessed time was experienced, and thus completed this season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, to whom all praise belongs.

Adelaide Easter Convention.

The Adelaide friends wish to announce that their usual Convention will be held again this year (D.V.) over the Easter season, in Druid's Hall, Flinders Street, Adelaide. A hearty invitation is extended by the brethren in Adelaide to all friends able to attend the gatherings; further information will appear in March "Paper" and in the meantime all enquiries should be made to the secretary—Mrs. H. Bartel, 10 Winston Avenue, Clarence Gardens, Adelaide,

Passover Memorial, 1948.

The Jewish date for the anniversary of the institution of the Lord's Supper falls this year four weeks after Easter —on the evening of Thursday, 22nd April, after sundown. This will therefore be the appropriate time to keep the Memorial of Christ's death by the Lord's people generally.

The Manner of Christ's Return.

OUR Lord's presence will be manifested to the world by exhibitions of "power and great glory," not, however, merely to the natural sight, but to the eyes of their understanding, as they shall open to an appreciation of the great changes which the new Ruler shall effect. His presence and righteous authority will be recognized in both the punishments and the blessings that will flow to mankind from His reign.

It has long been generally believed that distress and trouble come as punishments for evil doing, upon the wicked. This seeming to be a natural and proper law, people in general have accepted it, thinking that it should be so, even if it is not; yet the hard facts of experience agree with the Bible, that in the past it has been the godly who have oftenest suffered afflictions and persecutions. (2 Tim. 3:12.) But in the "Day of Trouble," the period introducing Messiah's reign, this order will begin to be reversed. In that day, evil powers are to be overthrown, and righteousness, established by a gradual process, shall speedily work out a corresponding retribution to evil-doers, and blessings to them that do good—"Tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man that doeth evil, . . . but glory, honour and peace to every man that worketh good"—in that "day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God, who will render to every man according to his deeds." (Rom. 2:9, 10, 6, 5.) And since there is so much that is wrong now, the retribution will be very heavy at first, making a "time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation." Thus, in vengeance, and trouble, and wrath upon the nations, will the Lord reveal to the world the fact of the change of dispensations, and the change of rulers. And thus, "When the judgments of the Lord are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." (Isa. 26:5-11.) They will learn that under the new order of things right-doers are to be exalted and evil-doers restrained and punished. For clear prophetic testimony relative to this kingdom and its operation on behalf of the humble, the upright, the poor, the needy and the oppressed, and its overthrow of monopolies and every system of injustice and oppression, and the general equalization of human affairs, read carefully Psalm 72:1-19 ; 37:1-14.

Our King will thus reveal Himself gradually: some will discern the new Ruler sooner than others, but ultimately "every eye shall see [horao—discern] Him." (Rev. 1 :7.) But "He cometh with the clouds;" and while the clouds of trouble are heavy and dark, when the mountains (kingdoms of this world) are trembling and falling, and the earth (organized society) is being shaken, disintegrated, melted, some will begin to realize what we now pro claim as already at hand—that the great day of Jehovah has come; that the foretold day of trouble and wrath upon the nations is beginning; and that Jehovah's Anointed is taking to Himself His great power and beginning His work, of laying justice to the line and righteousness to the plummet. (Isa. 28:17.) And "He must reign until" He shall have put down all authorities and laws on earth, contrary to those which control in heaven.

As the trouble increases, men will seek, but in vain, for protection in the "dens" and caves, the great rocks and fortresses of society (Free Masonry, Odd Fellowship, and Trades Unions, Guilds, 'Trusts, and all societies secular and ecclesiastical) , and in the mountains (governments) of earth; saying, "Fall over* [cover, protect] and hide us from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of His wrath is come."—Rev. 6:15-17.

The idolatry of money in which the whole world has gone mad, and which is to have so prominent a place in the trouble, causing not only anxiety for its accumulation, but also for its preservation, is to be completely overthrown, as shown in Isa. 2:8-21 ; Ezek. 7:17-19.

The great day of trouble will be recognized, and from its storm all will seek protection, though few will recognize the judgments of the Lord then abroad in the world as the result of His presence, the setting up of His authority, and the enforcement of His laws. In the end, however, all shall recognise ["see"] the King of glory ; and all who then love righteousness will rejoice to obey Him and conform themselves fully to His just requirements.

That will be a time of retribution upon all who by fraud or force, sometimes in the name of law and under its sanction, have unrighteously grasped the rights or property of others. The retribution, as we have seen, will come from the Lord, through the uprising of the masses of the people. In their distress, loth to part with a pound or an acre, or an assumed right or dignity long enjoyed and long undisputed, yet seeing the approaching retribution, many will seek the covering of the hitherto powerful organizations—civil, social and ecclesiastical—to promote and shield their interests, feeling that alone they must fall. But these shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the Lord's anger. The approaching conflict and retribution will cause all the families of the earth to wail; for it will be a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation—no, nor ever shall be again. It will be "because of Him" that they will wail; because of His judgments producing in a natural way the great trouble; because the Lord ariseth to shake terribly the earth, and to destroy its corruptions. (Isa. 2:21.) So far-reaching will be the judgments and the trouble that none shall escape. Ultimately every eye shall discern the change, and recognize that the Lord reigneth. The trouble might be greatly lessened could men see and -promptly act upon principles of equity, ignoring and relinquishing all unjust privileges of the past, even though legalized; but this, selfishness wilt not permit until the trouble shall break and overthrow the proud, humble the powerful and exalt the meek.

But not until the great day of trouble is about closing—not until the Gentile kingdoms are ground to powder and utterly removed, no place being found for them—not until great Babylon is utterly overthrown and her influence over the world broken —will the great mass of mankind come to realize the true state of the case. Then they will see that the great trouble through which they will have passed was that symbolically termed “The , battle of the great day of God Almighty” (Rev. 16:14) ; that in proportion as they have aided error and wrong, they have been battling against the law and forces of the new empire and the new Ruler of earth; and that in proportion as their tongues, and pens, and hands, and influence, and means, were used to support the right and the truth on any subject, they had been to that extent fighting on the Lord’s side.

Some will learn the significance of the trouble more quickly than others, because more teachable. And during all the trouble there will be in the world those who will bear witness to its cause, declaring the Lord’s presence and the setting up of His kingdom (which is in opposition to the powers of darkness) to be the real cause of the trouble and shaking and overturning of society, showing that all who oppose truth and righteousness are the enemies of the new kingdom, and that unless they quickly surrender they must soon suffer ignominious defeat. Yet the masses will be heedless of wise counsel, as they have always been, until completely humbled under the iron rule of the new kingdom, only at last realizing the folly of their course.

The true teacher and light bearer (Matt. 5:14) , the true Church, the body of Christ, is not to be left in darkness to learn of her Lord’s presence by the manifestations of His wrath and power, as the world will learn of it. For her enlightenment special provision has been made. By the sure word of prophecy, which shines as a light in a dark place, she is clearly and definitely informed just what to expect. (2 Peter 1:19.) Through the prophetic word, she shall not only be shielded from discouragement, and enabled to overcome the besetments, snares and stumbling-stones so prevalent in “the evil day,” and thus to stand approved of God, but she becomes the light-bearer and instructor of the world. The Church is thus enabled to point out to the world the cause of the trouble, to announce the presence of the new Ruler, to declare the policy, plan and object of the new dispensation, and to instruct the world as to the wisest course to pursue in view of these things. And though men will not give heed to the instruction until the lesson of submission has been forced upon them by the trouble, it will greatly aid them then in learning the lesson.

What is Perfect Love?

“Perfect love is gentle and teachable, kind and easy to be entreated. It enters the school of Christ, as a pupil, not as a master, realising how much is yet to be learned, rather than how much has been attained. Perfect love shows us our ignorance and begets the inextinguishable desire to dissipate that darkness, and to enter the realm of real and reliable knowledge. If you find yourself ‘growing wise above all your teachers, inclined to become dogmatic, to criticise your fellow disciples and set yourself up as a standard for the whole church, you have no little reason to fear that you are not controlled by the Spirit of God. Self-wisdom may easily assume the place of Divine wisdom; and Satan may appear as an angel of light even in one who concerns himself with the most holy things. In no way are his ends more effectually secured than by inducing people to promote the subject of holiness by exceptional methods, and in an unteachable and arrogant spirit.”

Members Finish Earthly Way.

On the 25th of last month elderly Sister Biggin of Digby, Victoria, finished the pilgrim way after a long illness at the age of 85 years. In her early years this dear friend was a Roman Catholic, then joined the Church of England, but later grasped the truth and with her husband, the late Brother Biggin, their home became the meeting place for the Digby Class for a number of years. Friends visiting Digby will well remember these dear friends. Sister Biggin’s favourite hymns were—”How Vain is all Beneath the Skies,” and “Hold Thou My Hand.” “Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord.”

Word received from Sydney in December advised that elderly Brother Ivett passed away suddenly early on the morning of the 13th December. Hearing from this friend first in 1938 he showed much appreciation of literature, and since that time he has rejoiced in the truth. However, ill-health kept him at home until it was necessary for him to receive hospital attention some years ago. During his hospital sojourn he was faithfully attended to the last by regular visits from a fellow member of the Lord’s people; other friends also visited him from time to time and thus he became known to these, though he was unable to attend the meetings at all. Those who knew Brother Ivett best state that he was well grounded in the truth, and we trust for this dear member an entrance into the heavenly Kingdom, by the Lord’s grace.

Greeks Losing Faith in U.N.

(Melbourne “Age” Special Correspondent.)

London, January 19.—The Greek reaction to the interim report of ‘the United Nations Balkans Commission is one of disappointment. Greek diplomatic circles believe that the Commission’s finding, that “aid in the form of logistical support (moving or supplying of armies) is being furnished from Albania to guerillas operating in Greek territory,” only calls attention to long known facts.

The “Daily Telegraph’s” correspondent at Athens says the Greeks are disappointed and frustrated because no machinery exists for taking speedy action. Many Greeks are saying the Commission will be “quite useless” unless it is granted executive authority. Referring the issue back to the General Assembly of the United Nations it is felt will produce many fine speeches but no result.

The situation is being compared pessimistically to the League of Nations handling of the Abyssinian and Spanish issues and there is said to be a growing fear that Greece may be “sold down the river” to appease Slav imperialism.

(The Scriptural explanation of the outcome of present world events is given in the book “Plan of God in Brief” which is supplied at 1 /- per copy.)

“Obituary.”

The story has been told of a clergyman who when informed that his church was dead, staged a funeral service. His flock attended from curiosity and filed past the coffin. In it was a large mirror! It has been suggested that the correct procedure would be for the clergyman to lead the procession to the mirror.—Matt. 15:14.

Correspondence.

Dear Brother.—Just a few lines to say how we are over this way. The Convention is over but it has left sweet memories with us all. We were glad to see so many of the friends while there; it is especially interesting to meet others from distant parts and talk over the truth with them. Those with whom we meet generally are acquainted with one another's views and that is one reason why we like to meet others who may see things we have overlooked. Besides, the imperfections of those best known to us have a habit of being unduly enlarged, whereas those we meet from other places have not that obstacle. It also is quite a help to get out of the usual routine and approach the truth from a different angle; talks, testimonies, studies all help in this way.

Our studies are now in Matthew 5, and Old Testament characters—Noah, Abraham, etc. There is quite an amount of the Bread of Life in both studies. . . It will be refreshing to read what we have heard at the Convention; it will help to fix it in the mind better. Hoping the friends are all well in Melbourne. Yours in the Lord.

Dear Sirs.—I desire to express my most grateful thanks to you for sending me the booklet “Do the Dead Know Anything?” I can assure you that it was a very great comfort for me to read the book, also to say that it helped to clear grave doubts from my mind. I can honestly recommend the book to others to read; I am quite sure that it would give them the peace of mind that it gave me, and that it would help to comfort and cheer them and put them on the right path.

I would be very grateful to you if you would be kind enough to forward to me the paper “A Blessed Hope for Suffering Humanity.” May God bless you and give you strength to carry on the good work you are doing. I remain, most faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs.—I listened to your broadcast on this Sunday morning and was delighted with your broadcast and am asking you to send to above address literature promised over the air. I pray that God's richest blessing will follow your very instructive Talks. I am, yours in the Master's service.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs.—Kindly forward to me copies of your Talks on the “Trinity” together with this morning's address. Your addresses are instructive and today's discourse should, to my mind, be delivered frequently as most of the teaching of the various churches is confusing on the subject matter. Thanking you and may your work be highly blessed with success. Yours faithfully.

Dear Frank and Ernest.—Please send me two copies of last Sunday's Talk “How Old Is Man?” I received the copies of the Talk “Jesus the Son of God”, also the leaflet on the Trinity for which I thank you. I misguidedly sent them to a C. of E. minister who wrote back and told me the idea was not new, that every so often someone got up and dressed it up in modern language and started yelling it from the housetops, and that it didn't benefit anyone who listened to it. But I noticed he never quoted one Scripture to bolster up his side of the argument. He also said some things best not repeated and suggested I look up certain references in the Prayer Book about ordaining bishops etc., as he thought I was unaware of the purpose of the church. There is no doubt about it, Matt. 23 describes his class of people to a T. I remain, yours in His service.

Frank and Ernest, E.4, Victoria, Dear Sirs.—A friend of mine in this district told me of your session on Sunday mornings over 2KY. Ever since I have listened with interest to your explanation of the passages of Scripture, and derive much benefit thereby, especially from your Talk on Isaiah 8:14, pertaining to “both houses of Israel.” I would esteem it a favour if you would let me have a copy of that Talk please; thank you.

I am very interested in the happenings of to-day regarding God's chosen people, and cannot help wondering what will happen in Palestine now since the partitioning. My husband's brother who has been in that country thinks that the Arabs have everything in their favour, which to me seems wrong, as God promised the land to the children of the “free woman.”

It does one good to hear the things of God broadcast these days; I wish more people would listen to them. . . . With Christian greeting and trusting God will bless your endeavours to interest the people in matters concerning Him. Your sincerely.

P.S.—Will you accept the enclosed towards expenses of broadcasting?

The Secretary, Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sir.—My parents and I have been listening with keen interest to “Frank and Ernest” on 2KY each Sunday morning since we were informed about the session, and wish to let you know how very much we appreciate the clear Scriptural messages. They have certainly made many things clearer to me; and my father, who has been a Bible student for many years, is often pleased to find views expressed which he has held, against opposition.

Enclosed please find the small sum of £1 (postal note).

We would be pleased to receive copies of some of the Dialogues presented recently, including those on the Trinity; thank you.

Trusting that God may see fit to use the session to bring enlightenment to many Christians and hope to many others. Yours, because His.

Gentlemen.—Regarding your advertisement of free literature which appeared in the Adelaide “Chronicle” 24/12/47, would you kindly forward some to my wife and self, as we are interested in things eternal and are both “born again” children of God. With Christian regards, Yours sincerely.

England.

Dear Friends in Christ.—I have had several copies of your literature given to me by a patient of mine, and I should really be greatly obliged if you could send me some of your other copies. I am a very ardent Bible student and long for the day when Christ will come to establish His kingdom upon this earth.

I would like to add how deeply grateful we British people are to you Australian people for your kindness and true Christian action in sending your parcels over here. With all good wishes, I remain, Yours in His service.

The Manner of Christ's Return.

(Part 5. Continued from February Issue.)

SEEMINGLY CONFLICTING SCRIPTURES.

THERE are some statements of Scripture with reference to the manner of the Lord's return and appearing which, until critically examined, appear to be contradictory of each other. And no doubt they have for centuries served the divine purpose of concealing the truth until the due time for it to be understood; and even then, from all except the special class of consecrated ones for whom it was intended.

For instance, our Lord said, "Behold I come as a thief"; and, "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man [the days of His presence] : They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage," "and knew not until the flood came." "And when Jesus was questioned of the Pharisees when the Kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The Kingdom of God cometh not with observation" [marginal reading, "not with outward show"].—Rev. 16:15; Luke 17:26, 27, 20; Matt. 38, 39.

These scriptures plainly state and illustrate the manner of the Lord's coming. They show that He will be present unseen, doing a work of which the world for a time will be entirely unaware. His arrival must therefore be in a quiet manner, unobserved, and entirely unknown to the world, just "as a thief" would come, without noise or other demonstration to attract attention. As in the days of Noah the world went on with its affairs as usual, not in the least disconcerted, and without the slightest faith in the preaching of Noah with reference to the coming flood, so in the early part of the Day of the Lord, the world, having no faith in the announcement of His presence and of the impending trouble, will go on as usual, giving no heed whatever to any such preaching until, in the great flood of trouble, the old world—the old order of things—goes down, passes away, preparatory to the full establishment of the new order, the Kingdom of God under the whole heavens.—"As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it also be in the days [of the presence] of the Son of man."

On the other hand, we find scriptures which at first sight seem to be in direct conflict with these; as, for instance: "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the Archangel, and with the trump of God."—"The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty messengers, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ"—"They [the world] shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."—"Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him."—1 Thes. 4:16; 2 Thes. 1:7, 8; Matt. 24:30; Rev. 1:7.

As seekers after truth, it will not do for us to say, in view of these passages, that the majority of them seem to favour whatever view we incline to prefer, and then to ignore the others. Until we have a view of the matter in which every Bible statement finds a reasonable representation, we should not feel sure that we have the truth on the subject. One statement of God is as true, and as firm a foundation for faith, as a hundred. And it would be wiser to seek for a harmonious understanding than to arrive at a conclusion or adopt a theory based on a one-sided interpretation, and thus to deceive ourselves and others.

Christians generally make no effort to harmonize these statements, and therefore their ideas are one-sided and incorrect. The last group of statements is just as positive as the first, and apparently teaches the very reverse of a quiet, unobserved, thief-like manner in the Lord's coming and presence. In addition to these statements, we are referred to two other illustrations of the manner of His coming, viz.: "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come, in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven," and "As the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." (Acts 1:11. Matt. 24:27.) To reach a correct conclusion, these also must be given due weight.

In our examination of the subject we should note that while our Lord stated, as a positive fact, that His kingdom would be established without outward show, and that His coming, His presence, would be as a thief, requiring close, attentive watching to apprehend and discern it, all of the above texts generally cited as proof of an outward, visible manifestation are in highly figurative language, except the one which says that He will come in like manner as He went away. The symbolic must always bend in interpretation to the plainer, more literal statements, as soon as their symbolic character is recognized. Whenever a literal interpretation would do violence to reason, and also place the passage in direct antagonism to plain statements of Scripture, such passage should be considered figurative, and its interpretation as a symbol should be sought in harmony with obviously plain and literal passages, and with the general character and object of the revealed plan. By recognizing and thus interpreting the symbols in this case, the beautiful harmony of all the statements is manifest. Let us now examine them and see how perfectly they agree with the statements which are not symbolic.

(a) "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the Archangel, and with the trump of God." (1 Thes. 4:16.) The voice and the trumpet here mentioned correspond in every way with the same figures used in Rev. 11:15-19—"The seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdom of this world is become the kingdom of our Lord, and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever. . . . And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged," etc. The same events are referred to in Daniel's prophecy:—"And at that time shall Michael [Christ] stand up [I assume control], the great Prince, . . . and there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation, . . . and many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake." And Paul adds to his mention of the voices and the trumpet the statement, "And the dead in Christ shall rise first." In 2 Tim. 4:1 he further states that Christ shall judge the quick (the living) and the dead, at this time of His appearing and kingdom; and the beginning of this judgment of the living nations is everywhere described as the greatest time of trouble the world has ever known.—Dan. 12:1.

Thus, Paul, John and Daniel evidently refer to the same time, the time of our Lord's appearing, and the establishment of His kingdom in the midst of a great time of trouble, and to the events preceding and introducing it. The same result is shown by each writer to follow the standing up of Michael, the voices and the trumpet: namely, trouble and wrath upon the nations and the resurrection of the dead. Next, mark the figure used:

"WITH A SHOUT."—The Greek word here translated "shout" is keleusma, which signifies a shout of encouragement. A shout implies a public message designed for the ears, not of a few, but of a mixed multitude. It is generally designed either to alarm and terrify or to assist and encourage. Or it may have the one effect upon one class, and the reverse effect upon another, according to circumstances and conditions.

The aspect of affairs in the world for at least fifty years very strikingly corresponds with this symbol, in the outbursts of world-wide encouragement for all men to wake up to a sense of their rights and privileges as men, and to consider their mutual relationships, the principles upon which they are based and the ends which they should accomplish. Where on the face of the earth is the civilized nation that has not heard the shout, and is not influenced by it! The entire civilized world has, for years past, been studying political economy, civil rights and social liberties as never before in the annals of history; and men are encouraging each other, and being encouraged, as never before, to probe these subjects to the very foundation. The shout of encouragement started by the increase of knowledge among men has already encircled the earth, and under its influence men are banding themselves together, encouraged and assisted by men of brain and genius, to contend and strive for both real and fancied rights and liberties; and as their organizations increase and multiply, the shout grows louder and longer, and will by and by result as foretold, in the great time of trouble and tumult of angry nations. This result is graphically described by the Prophet—"The noise of a multitude in the mountains [kingdoms] like as of a great people; a tumultuous noise of the kingdoms of nations gathered together: the Lord of hosts mustereth the host of battle."—Isa. 13:4.

"THE VOICE OF THE ARCHANGEL"—is another striking symbol of similar import. The name "archangel" signifies chief messenger; and our anointed Lord Himself is Jehovah's Chief Messenger—the "Messenger of the Covenant." (Mal. 3:1.) Daniel refers to the same personage, calling Him Michael, which name signifies who as God—an appropriate name for Him who is "the express image of the Father's person," and the representative of His authority and power. The voice of the Archangel represents Christ's authority and command. This symbol, then, represents Christ as taking control and issuing His commands, His official orders, announcing the change of dispensation by the enforcement of the laws of His kingdom.

The same thought is differently expressed by Daniel, when he says, Then shall Michael, the great Prince, "stand up." To stand up signifies to assume authority, to give commands. See "arise," Isa. 2:19, 21. Another illustration of this symbol is from David, who says of Christ prophetically, "He uttered his voice; the earth melted." The great time of trouble will be precipitated, and the earth (organized society) will melt, or disintegrate, under the change of administration going into effect when the new King utters

His voice of command. At His command, systems of error, civil, social and religious, must go down, however old or firmly entrenched and fortified they may be. The sword out of His mouth shall cause the havoc : The truth on every subject, and in all its varied aspects, shall judge men, and, under His power and overruling, shall cause the overturning of evil and error in all their thousand forms.

“THE TRUMP OF GOD.--Many seem thoughtlessly to entertain the idea that this trumpet will be a literal sound on the air. But this will be seen to be an unreasonable expectation, when it is noticed that Paul here refers to what the Revelator designates “The Seventh Trumpet,” the “Last Trump” in a series of symbolic trumpets. (Rev. 11:15 ; 1 Cor. 15:52.) The proof that these references are to the same trumpet is found in the record of the events connected with each. Paul mentions the resurrection, and the establishment of the Lord’s Kingdom, as connected with “the trump of God,” and the Revelator mentions the same with even greater minuteness. The propriety of calling the “seventh,” or “last trump” the “trump of God,” is evident, too, when we remember that the events mentioned under the preceding six trumpets of Revelation refer to humanity’s doings, while the seventh refers specially to the Lord’s work, and covers the “Day of the Lord.” Since the six preceding trumpets were symbols—and this is generally admitted by commentators and students who make any claim as expositors of Revelation—it would be a violation of reason and common sense to expect the seventh, the last of the series, to be a literal, audible sound on the air. And not only so, but it would be out of harmony with the Lord’s general methods, as well as with those statements of Scripture indicating the secrecy of His coming; for a thief never sounds a trumpet to announce his arrival.

The seven trumpets of Revelation are all symbolic, and represent seven great periods of time and their events.

We find ourselves to-day in the midst of the very events which mark the sounding of the seventh trumpet. The great voices, the increase of knowledge, the angry nations, etc., taken in connection with time-prophecies, establish this as a fact. Many events are yet to transpire before this seventh or last trumpet ceases to sound; as, for instance, the rewarding of the saints and prophets, the resurrection of all the dead, etc. In fact, it covers the entire period of the Millennial reign of Christ, as indicated by the events which are to transpire under it.—Rev. 10:7; 11 :15, 18.

Thus we find the “shout,” the “voice of the Archangel” and “the trump of God” all symbols, and now in process of fulfilment. Note carefully, too, the fact that each of the three prophecies just referred to (Dan. 12:1; Rev. 11:15 ; 1 Thes. 4:16) declares the Lord’s presence at the time when the events mentioned transpire. They were foretold for the very purpose of indicating the manner in which His invisible presence would be manifested to those who have faith in the word of prophecy. Paul says, “The Lord shall descend with [literally in, or during] a shout,” voice, trumpet, etc. ; John says that the kingdoms of this world become His, during the time of these events; and Daniel says, “At that time shall Michael, the great Prince [Christ] , stand up” (be present) and take to Himself His great power. If, therefore, we can recognize the shout, the voices and the sounding of the great trumpet, we should accept them as indications, not that the Lord will come soon, but rather that He has come and is now present, and that the harvest work of gathering the wheat and burning the tares is already under way. This we shall soon see is abundantly proved by time-prophecies. Yet it is not to the natural vision, but only to the eye of faith, through the sure word of prophecy, that His presence and work can be discerned.

Just here another fact should not be overlooked, namely, that the “Shout,” the “Voice of the Archangel,” and the “Trump of God,” as above explained, are all instrumentalities for the accomplishment of the harvest work of the Gospel Age. If, therefore, we see not only the meaning of these symbols, but the foretold results actually taking place, we have additional proof both that we have rightly interpreted the symbols, and that we are now in this period called the “harvest.” Many will need no aid in tracing a separating work now going on between the truly consecrated and the merely nominal Christians. Many can see the symbolic fire already under way, and can discern the “shout” of the people, the command of the new King Immanuel and the events called the “seventh trumpet,” and the “clouds” of trouble, in which the Lord comes and from and in which His power is to be manifested—subduing all things unto Himself.

The recognition of the harvest work in actual process is proof of the Lord’s presence, since He declared that He would be the chief reaper and director of the entire work, and that this would be His first work —“Behold a white cloud. and upon the cloud one sat like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle. . . . And he that sat on the cloud thrust in his sickle on the earth ; and the earth was reaped.”—“In the time of the harvest I will say to the reapers, gather” etc. (Rev. 1 5:14, 16; Matt. 13:30.) The harvest work will be accomplished gradually, but all of its days are “days of the Son of Man”—days of our Lord’s presence and power— recognized in the end by all, but at first only by the class specified by the Apostle —“Ye, brethren—not in darkness.”

“IN FLAMING FIRE.”—The next of these symbolic statements can be readily understood, if the meaning of the symbols, fire, etc., be borne in mind. It is, “The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.”-2 Thes. 1:8.

Expressed literally, we understand this to signify that our Lord’s presence will be revealed or manifested to the world from His position of spiritual control (“heaven”), in the wrath and punishment then visited upon evil and evil-doers. It will be consuming wrath, as indicated by the symbol, fire, and will leave neither root nor branch of evil systems, error, oppression, or wilful sinners; and all the proud, and all evil doers, shall be burned up as stubble in that judgment day. In its beginning—in this “harvest” period—this fire will burn very fiercely, consuming pride and evil, now of such rank growth. Happy those who will surrender their pride and evil to be destroyed, that they themselves be not destroyed also (in the “second death”), as some resisters will evidently be, during the Millennial age. It is of this time that we read, “Behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch.”—Mal. 4:1.

The “mighty angels,” messengers, or agents of His power, are various, and may properly be understood as applying to and including all the various agencies, animate and inanimate, which shall be used by our Lord in the overthrow of the evil systems of the present, and in the chastisement of evil-doers.

While the wrath or vengeance of the Lord is thus to be expressed in flaming fire, in consuming trouble, such as never before was known—so general and wide-spread, and so destructive of evil—righteousness and the righteous will begin to be favoured. And as these dealings become more and more apparent, men will begin to draw the inference that a new power has taken control of human affairs; and thus the presence of our Lord as King of kings shall be revealed to the world. “He shall be revealed in flaming fire, taking vengeance [both] on them that knew not God [who are not really acquainted with God, but who nevertheless fail to obey the light of conscience, which all to some extent possess] , and [also on those who, while knowing God, yet] obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.”

Under the chastisements and increasing light and favourable opportunities of the Millennial day, all will be brought to such a clear knowledge of the truth and the way of righteousness as to be without the excuse of ignorance, or of inability to obey the truth; and those who persistently continue enemies of God and righteousness shall be punished with lasting destruction [a destruction from which there shall be no resurrection] from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of His power.

“IN POWER AND GREAT GLORY.”—The next statement is to the effect that the world will see the Son of man coming, before His kingdom is fully set up or His joint-heirs are all gathered and exalted with Him. And, seeing His coming, all the tribes of the earth will mourn—“They shall see the Son of man coming with power and great glory.”

Already the world sees the clouds of trouble gathering and darkening; they realize that a power is now at work in the affairs of men, with which they cannot cope; the near future, from the present outlook, is dark and ominous to all who have sufficient intelligence to mark the trend of events. Thinking men observe the persistency with which questions of right and wrong, justice and injustice, are forced upon their consideration, demanding an expression of their individual principles. Many recognize the glory and power of earth’s new Ruler, yet because clouds and darkness are round about Him they do not recognize the King Himself. Men see the clouds, and therefore see Him coming in the clouds with power and great glory [the glory of power and justice], but they do not recognize Him. Not until the clouds have let fall hail stones and coals of fire (Psa. 18:12, 13) to batter down men’s pride, and selfishness, and prejudices, and consume these, will the clouds disappear, and reveal the full majesty and glory of Christ’s presence.

If men would consider, and hearken to the voice of the Lord, which now directs the course of justice, and warns of impending retribution, the great disasters of the near future would be averted; but “God speaketh once, yea, twice, yet men perceive it not. . . Then he openeth the ears of men [in the thunder tones of “the day of trouble”] and sealeth their instruction, that he may withdraw men from his [own] purpose, and hide pride from man.”

“Behold, he cometh with clouds,” and in due time “every eye shall see [discern] him,” shall recognize His presence, power and authority; and all must submit to it whether willing or unwilling, until the loosing of Satan for a little season, in the close of the Millennium, when after full experience their willingness or unwillingness will be fully tested, and the unwilling will be destroyed--the second death, symbolically called the lake of fire.—Rev. 21:8.

Thus seen, all of these symbolic explanations of the manner of our Lord’s coming accord perfectly with the plain statements which declare that His presence will be a secret for a time, known only to those watching.

PEOPLES PAPER AND HERALD OF CHRIST’S KINGDOM.

(Monthly) (80 cents) per annum, post paid,

Published by the Berean Bible Institute, 19 Ermington Place, Kew, E4, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia.

Bible Study Meetings.

IN May issue of "Peoples Paper" last year a short article was printed on the subject of conducting Bible studies; the sentiments expressed at that time seem to have been appreciated and request has been made that it be published again. This is now being done with additional thoughts respecting prayers at the gatherings of the Lord's people.

The manner in which Bible studies are conducted in the various Classes is important for the welfare of members, and an observer is impressed with the fact that while the chairmen desire to promote the progress of all at the studies, one fault in evidence is too much speaking on the part of the leaders themselves.

It is an incorrect idea for class leaders to feel they are called upon to give a short speech after each member of a class has spoken on any particular subject; it tends to hinder rather than encourage members to express themselves when they are waiting for the chairman to cease before they are able to speak on a subject already before the class.

It matters not that the leader has the very best of thoughts; it is not helpful Bible study for the chairman to take up as much or more time than all the other members combined. Provided members keep to the subject or verses of Scripture under review there is no necessity for the chairman to add more than a word or two of thanks between each speaker (except when a wrong thought is expressed) until the summing up, which also should be as brief as possible. Members having had the opportunity of speaking freely on a subject should refrain from covering similar thoughts again after the chairman has summed up, and all can help greatly by keeping strictly to the particular matter before the class.

Most happy and blessed are those studies where the members come well prepared with their thoughts and related Scriptures, and are alert to which verses or questions are under review and express themselves briefly and to the point, the chairman asking for all thoughts on each subject or verse without entering the discussion himself, apart from directing the study, and then concluding the matter with a helpful summing up that gives a feeling of helpfulness and satisfaction to all present, under the guidance of the holy spirit.

The matter of prayer at the gatherings of the Lord's people is also a very important one, and it would seem that lengthy prayers, either in opening or closing a meeting, are not generally helpful. It may be that some brethren feel they are called upon at the opening prayer to present lengthy thanksgiving and petitions to the Lord, even though the closing prayer may be much shorter. However, experience proves that a prayer of a few minutes with well chosen words from the heart brings much more blessing upon the gathering than a prayer of up to ten or more minutes duration. It seems almost impossible to avoid repetition of expression in a lengthy prayer, and, as our Lord indicated, this is not helpful.

Again, at such times as public meetings the desire may be to convey some of the wonderful truths of the plan of God in prayer; in other words, a form of short chart talk may be presented in thankfulness to God; yet there is danger in this of praying to the assembly, especially the newcomers, instead of praying to the Lord. There can be no doubt that "The Lord's Prayer" is a model of deep and reverential expression in few words which all the brethren may take as a guide to prayer on behalf of an assembly of the Lord's people before His throne of grace.

"Peoples Paper" Subscription 4/- per annum

Increasing costs of production, which now amount to 100% above those of years ago when the "Peoples Paper" subscription was 2/6 per year, leaves no alternative but to increase the price, which will now be 4/- per annum. Our friends will at once realise that even this advance will not meet the full increase, but it will assist to that end, and thus relieve the General Tract Fund of some of the deficiency to be made up in the production of "Peoples Paper." New subscriptions can assist, and our friends who can help in this way will be rendering good service, and it is hoped bring a blessing to those receiving the "Paper."

Adelaide Easter Convention.

The Adelaide friends wish to announce that their usual Convention will be held again this year (D.V.) over the Easter season, in Druid's Hall, Flinders Street, Adelaide. from Good Friday, 26th March, to Easter Monday, 29th March.

A hearty invitation is extended by the brethren in Adelaide to all friends able to attend the gatherings; further information also Convention programmes may be obtained from the secretary—Mrs. H. Bartel, 10 Winston Avenue, Clarence Gardens, Adelaide.

A small boy, when asked by an admiring spectator how it was that he had learnt to skate SO well, said: "Oh, I don't know; I think it must have been by getting up every time I fell down." SO it is, "A fast man falleth seven times, and riseth up again." (PROV. 24:16.)

Discontent is like an unlatched gate on a windy day; you won't get any peace until you stop it.

Fear Not, Little Flock.

(Luke 12:32. Convention Address.)

LET us think, first, of the effect fear has on the human mind. We read in Prov. 9:10, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; and the knowledge of the holy is understanding." This text tells us to fear the Lord, and yet our text in Luke 12 tells us to "fear not." So we see there are two kinds of fear. The one mentioned in Proverbs is a reverential fear. Strong gives the meaning of the word as "revere."

There is another text mentioning "fear," in 1 John 4:18—"There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear; because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love." This is a slavish fear. The meaning of it is "alarm," and it is the same word as used in our text in Luke 12:32. The Diaglott puts it, "bath restraint" instead of "torment." It means that fear restrains progress of Christian growth. John also tells us that perfect love will cast out this fear. Fear is one of mankind's greatest enemies, and is one way in which Satan endeavours to hinder the Little Flock from gaining a place in the Kingdom. Right down through the ages Satan has used fear as a means to control the human mind, and so separate us from God.

If many of God's prophets had given way to fear instead of having faith in God, they would not have been fit for the work allotted to them. We remember the prophet Job, how God permitted Satan to bring upon him a painful disease, and then he suffered great temporal losses. This experience would have caused many to become fearful and give up the ways of the Lord. Satan thought that eventually such disasters would cause righteous Job to turn away from the Lord, but the prophet's faith kept him from becoming fearful.

Right down the Gospel Age Satan has tried to prevent men from having a clear understanding of God's character and plan, or to turn away from God those who had accepted Jesus and had a measure of light respecting God's plan. During the dark ages Papacy taught that all who did not adhere to her teachings would be tortured in a hell of fire, while those of her faith who were not really good enough for heaven, would be required to suffer reformatory punishment in purgatory, which might be shortened and relieved by their relatives securing the prayers of the priests. This doctrine held its converts through fear. Many to-day, through ignorance, are still held by fear to continue believing this God-dishonouring doctrine, and so are prevented from obtaining a clear understanding of the character of the Creator.

We not only see Papacy holding together her subjects by fear; later on, when the iron bands of Papacy had been broken, Protestantism, while rejecting the theory of purgatory, still held to the worse idea of eternal torture for all not fit for heaven. Many Protestant denominations still teach this doctrine of eternal torture, and many are bound by fear of what will happen if they do not hold to the teachings of their particular denomination. So we find that many people are serving God, not from a desire to be co-labourers with God in His work, but because of fear.

While looking into this matter of "fear," a little passage was found which was claimed to have been spoken by some ministers of religion, and they said that if they believed there was not eternal torture, they would do all the wicked things imaginable. This shows that they were not impelled by the holy spirit, but by the spirit of fear, the spirit with which Satan controls his subjects. It reminds us of that passage in 2 Tim. 1:7, "God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind."

We know, too, that heathen nations believe all kinds of devilish doctrines which produce fear in these people. They are afraid of God because they do not understand His real character, being restrained by Satan's influence.

During the dark ages severe persecutions came upon Christians who did not accept the teachings of Papacy. In Rev. 13:7 there is a reference to a "beast," a symbol of Papacy, and it says, "It was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them; and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations." And in Dan.

7:25 there is a similar picture—"And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws: and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time.” During this period every means was used that could be thought of to crush out the free spirit of true Christianity. History tells us of the terrible persecutions of this time, and it is almost beyond us to-day to realize how a church, claiming to be the representative of Christ, could use such dreadful means of persecution to force others to believe as they did. But both history and the Scriptures confirm this fact, and it continued, we believe, for over a thousand years. It was Satan’s method to put down all opposition to his false teachings by upsetting the faith of all but the true followers of Christ. It was fear that Satan used to try to stamp out true Christians by his war with the saints.

It must have been a great comfort to the few who did not lose faith in God in those times to call to mind such texts as ours, “Fear not, little flock, it is the Father’s good pleasure to give you the kingdom.” It is a great comfort to all Christians, then, to have faith in God as their great Protector. We are reminded of the passage in Heb. 13:6, “The Lord is my Helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me.”

It is possible to trace through the pages of history and find that there was always a “little flock,” a small number indeed, who feared not what man would do to them, and who forsook the ways of the world. Although persecuted and tormented, they did not lose faith in God. Fear did not control their lives, for they knew of the great promises made to true followers of Christ.

Coming down to our day and especially the Harvest of the Gospel Age, we may enquire, how does Satan treat the followers of Christ now? Does he through fear cause those of the Little Flock to lose faith in God and the Lord Jesus Christ? It is interesting to read the passage in Psa. 46:1-3, which refers specially to Christians. -God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea; though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof.” Those who understand God’s plan with respect to His dealings with mankind need not fear. But this passage also infers that some will fear at this time. It definitely has reference to the end of the Gospel Age. And what do we find in the world to-day? Nominal Christendom, and especially the leaders of the various denominations, have a dread of the future. The trouble which is enveloping the world to-day, and has been for the past years, is all part of the preparation work for the next Age, but little do mankind in general realise the method God is using to prepare men’s hearts for the coming Age. Those who have no faith in God try to drown their fear in worldly pleasures. Satan has succeeded in capturing the minds of the great majority of mankind, and has turned them away from God to worldly pleasures. The text in Psalm 46 says “We will not fear, though the earth be removed, and the mountains cast into the midst of the sea.” So even though the present order of society becomes disintegrated and overthrown by the restless masses of mankind, and the governments are overcome in anarchy, we have the promise in verse 5, “God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved; God shall help her, and that right early.” “Fear not, little flock; for it is the Father’s good pleasure to give you the kingdom.” We have that reassuring message, even at this time.

We remember, too, the words of the Apostle Peter. He was speaking of the same time in his second epistle, ch. 3:11-14, where he says, “Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved. what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat? Nevertheless we, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of Him in peace, without spot, and blameless.” So the peace which the Christian possesses is just the opposite of fear, isn’t it?

We have also our Lord’s words to His disciples on the Sea of Galilee. They are recorded in Matt. 8:23-26. “And when he was entered into a ship, his disciples followed him. And behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, insomuch that the ship was covered with the waves; but he was asleep. Then his disciples came to him, and awoke him, saying, Lord, save us; we perish. And he saith unto them, Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith, Then he arose, and rebuked the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm.- That seems to illustrate how the Christian can be overwhelmed with fear, but at the same time what a comfort it is to us all, whether it be the great storm that will soon fill the whole world (carrying the mountains into the midst of the sea, as we read in Psalms, the whole present social structure being done away with) , or whether it be the storms of life that will come upon all of us sooner or later, we can remember the Lord’s words, “Why are ye fearful?” Jesus has the power to still the storms of trouble, if we have the faith.

In Luke 12 our Lord is telling us of various things that may prevent the Christian from entering into the Kingdom of God. He explained that if anyone desires to have a place in the Kingdom with Him, he must seek that Kingdom and not earthly goods. - But rather seek ye the kingdom of God, and all those things shall be added unto you.” The Lord did not promise His followers an abundance of earthly riches, ease or luxury. One of the company said to Him, “Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me.” This one evidently wanted the Lord to intervene in his private affairs so that he could gain some earthly treasures. But Jesus warned him of being covetous. “A man’s life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.” Then He gave a parable to illustrate that an abundance of earthly things would not assist one to a place in the Kingdom. From v. 16 we read, “And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully; and he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits? And he said, this will I do; I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods. And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee; then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God.” This parable shows us how one can put all his time into grasping after temporal things and neglecting the spiritual things.

Then Jesus goes on to speak of the birds. They did not hoard up food and so on, but are provided for by our Heavenly Father. Are we not better than the birds? The thought seems to be that one could become so anxious about earthly riches etc. that he would be drawn away completely from God. The words “taking no thought” in v. 22, mean “anxious thought,” and it seems that one can become so engrossed with earthly treasures, and so interested in his temporal well-being, that he would lose faith in God and become disunited with Him, and lose his position in the Kingdom. Hence our Lord’s words, “Fear not, little flock, it is your Father’s good pleasure to give you the Kingdom.” At the head of our Convention programme there is a text from Psa 27:1, reading “The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?” We can understand how necessary it is to have faith in God. If we have that we will not be turned away from Him through fear.

There is also a reassuring passage in Prov. 29:25, “The fear of man bringeth a snare; but whoso putteth his trust in the Lord shall be safe.” There are so many ways in which Satan endeavours to turn Christians away from the Kingdom that we need to have that faith that will keep us from becoming fearful and be led away.

Finding and Losing.

To find my life in the sense in which the Master uses the expression, means to place myself first, and thus be carnally minded. It conveys the idea of loving and living for this present world, so that at the end of the course I shall find myself defeated rather than victorious; and finally fall short of that full reward which would otherwise have been mine. Therefore to find my life is to lose it.

In contradistinction to this, to lose my life for Christ's sake means to place Him first, and thus be spiritually-minded.

It conveys the idea of living for eternity, so that at the end of the journey I shall prove victorious.

The Memorial Supper.

“This do in remembrance of Me.” (Luke 22:19.)

“Ye do show the Lord’s death till He come.” (I Cor. 11:26.)

THE former text above quoted from Luke’s Gospel, taken with the context which explains the Lord’s Supper as instituted by Christ on the night in which He was betrayed and within a few hours of His crucifixion, gives us a sure basis for observing this request of our Lord’s as a Memorial of His great sacrifice on our behalf. The plain, simple words—“This do in remembrance of Me,”—surely touches a responsive spot in the hearts of all people able to grasp the graciousness of God in providing the Saviour, and the love of Christ manifest in His willingness to become the sacrifice for sins—dying “the just for the unjust that he might bring us to God.”

Approaching again the time of the anniversary of the sacrifice of our dear Redeemer (this year the date is 22nd April after sundown) , we call to mind the fact that the Memorial of His death, instituted following the yearly Passover observance on that same night, was carried out in the upper room with His beloved disciples in all humility and quietness, without any outward show or ceremony of any kind. This surely was intended as a guide to all who have taken delight, down the centuries, in observing what may be described as our Lord’s dying request—“This do in remembrance of Me.”

How beautifully effective is this service in remembrance of Christ. The emblems our Lord presented to His disciples, the unleavened bread and wine, figurative of His body and His blood, are partaken and appropriated as indicative of the merit of Christ covering the imperfections of all who thus appropriate Him by faith as their Redeemer from the Adamic curse, by the grace of God. To all such the Apostle Paul declares—“Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.” (Rom. 5:1.) And all those who continue to hold, in all sincerity of heart, that faith in His broken body and shed blood which accepts Him as their own personal Saviour, will truly have that peace with God fitting to the justified standing in Christ. This is the important step to be taken by all who shall ultimately follow on to full consecration, which is also portrayed so clearly and solemnly in the Memorial service, as we shall see. Let us realise, however, that the primary meaning of justification by faith in His sacrifice was the main lesson presented by Christ to His little band, when, in leaving them this solemn yet simple Memorial He declared—“Take, eat; this is my body,”—and in passing the cup, the wine—“Drink ye all of it; For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins.” (Matt. 26:26-28.)

Can we wonder that our Lord was meditating deeply about this Memorial as the time approached? He had kept the previous Jewish Passovers each year at the appropriate time, though there is no reference to these in the Gospels, as they belonged to the Jewish dispensation. But now as His 31 years of ministry draws to a close this occasion is very different. He must now take the place of the literal lamb—the time had come when the words of John the Baptist were to be fulfilled for the benefit of all who could receive them—“Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.” (John 1:29.) What feelings, then, our Lord would have as He instructed Peter and John to “prepare us the Passover,” and as revealed from the words of Luke 22:14, 15—“And when the hour was come, he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him. And he said unto them, With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer.” Yes, the hour had come to institute the Memorial of His death; something His disciples would hold very precious; something that would bind them to their Saviour, to their Heavenly Father and to one another throughout all life’s pilgrimage—“This do in remembrance of Me.”

That there is also a deeper meaning in the Memorial of Christ’s death is clearly shown by the Apostles, especially St. Paul, though our Lord did not refer directly to it when He instituted this observance. No doubt this was one of the things to which He referred in John 16 :12, 13—"I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when the spirit of truth is come, it will guide you into all truth." The spirit of truth, God's holy spirit, through the faithful apostles, has revealed in no uncertain manner the secondary and deeper significance of the Lord's Supper to all followers of Christ who, being justified by faith in His sacrifice, have also responded to the invitation to "present their bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God through Jesus Christ." (Rom. 12:1.)

The second text at the head of this article, taken with its context, together with other statements, such as 1 Cor. 10 :16, 17, clearly shows that the Lord's consecrated people observe the Memorial, in addition to the primary meaning, to indicate that they are willingly sacrificing their lives in the footsteps of Christ, being broken with Him, using up their life's powers in God's service, just as Jesus did.

From this standpoint, what depth of meaning there is in the words of our text—"For as oft as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup (as each anniversary of the great sacrifice of Christ comes round) ye do shew the Lord's death till he come." In other words, this Memorial, partaken by the consecrated followers of Jesus, signifies their "communion (common participation) of the blood of Christ," and their "communion of the body of Christ." (1 Cor. 10:16.) What an amazing privilege is this! To think that the members of Christ's body here on earth, those who have gladly yielded up their justified lives to God and have been "planted together in the likeness of His (Christ's) death," (Rom. 6:5) are really "showing the Lord's death until he come."

That we may not feel doubtful about this matter of so great favour, the Lord, through His apostles, has assured us again and again that it is true. Note the words of Paul when recounting his experiences in the footsteps of his Lord.—"Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body. For we which live (in Christ's service) are always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh . . . For which cause we faint not . . . For our light afflictions (considered so, because of the privilege) , which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." (2 Cor. 4:10, 11, 16, 17.) Again in Rom. 8:36 we have Paul's words, quoted from the prophet,—"For Thy sake we are killed all the day long (all the Gospel Age, the day of sacrifice) ; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter." Further, in his letter to the Colossians we find Paul declaring —"Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church." (Col. 1:24.)

How the understanding of this matter distinguishes between nominal Christians and those who have responded to God's call to sonship in His heavenly family by making an unreserved consecration of their all to Him, henceforth, to obey the Lord's will, serving Him in spirit and truth, all their days and all their hours. "Showing forth the Lord's death," then, is the daily privilege and delight of all who have truly taken up their cross to follow Christ. And this is surely the great lesson and exhortation left for us by our dear Lord in the solemn Memorial of His death and of our union with Him in death, if so be that we may also live with Him in His glorious Kingdom.—"This do in remembrance of Me."—"Ye do show the Lord's death till he come."

"Lord, I would follow Thee
In all the way
Thy weary feet have trod;
Yes, if I may.

Help me the cross to bear,
All Thy fair graces wear.
Close watching unto prayer,
Following Thee."

“Peoples Paper” Subscription 4/- per annum

Increasing costs of production, which now amount to 100% above those of years ago when the “Peoples Paper” subscription was 2/6 per year, leaves no alternative but to increase the price, which will now be 4/- per annum. Our friends will at once realise that even this advance will not meet the full increase, but it will assist to that end, and thus relieve the General Tract Fund of some of the deficiency to be made up in the production of “Peoples Paper.” New subscriptions can assist, and our friends who can help in this way will be rendering good service, and it is hoped bring a blessing to those receiving the “Paper.”

Not mine, oh Lord, the power that I need,

Unless Thy light my path illuminate

And Thou not I, my steps control and lead.

(Part 6. Continued from March Issue.)

IN LIKE MANNER.

WHAT, now, is taught by the statement of the Angel at the time of our Lord's departure —Acts 1:11—"This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come, in like manner, as ye have seen him go into heaven"?

A careful examination of this text will manifest its harmony with the foregoing. Many seem to think the passage reads, As you see the Lord ascend into heaven, so, in like manner, you shall see Him come again. Such should read it again and again, until they note the fact that it does not say that those who saw Him go will see Him come, nor that any one else will see Him come. What it does say is, that the manner of His coming will be like the manner of His going. What, then, was the manner of His going? Was it with great splendour, and with great demonstration? Was it with trumpet sound and voices and a great shout rending the air, and the Lord's person shining in supernatural glory and brightness? If so, we should expect His coming again to be "in like manner." On the other hand, was it not as quietly and secretly as was possible, consistent with His purpose of having thoroughly convinced witnesses of the fact? None saw Him, or knew of the fact, except His faithful followers. His statement (John 14:19), "Yet a little while and the world seeth me no more," has never yet been disproved; for none but the brethren saw even His manifestations after His resurrection, and no others witnessed His ascension. And in like manner as He went away (quietly, secretly, so far as the world was concerned, and unknown except to His followers) so, in this manner He comes again. And as when He went away He lifted up His hands and blessed them, so, when He comes again, it is that their joy may be full, as He said: "I will come again, and receive you unto myself"; will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you."—Luke 24:50, 51; John 14:3; 16:22.

The angel seemed also to give special emphasis to the fact that the coming again would be the coming of this very "same Jesus"—the same one who left the glory which He had with the Father before the world was, and became man--became poor that we might be made rich; the same Jesus that died on Calvary; the same Jesus that arose a quickening spirit the third day; the same Jesus that had manifested His change during the forty days—this same Jesus now ascended up on high. Yes, it is the same Jesus who has experienced two changes of nature—first from spirit to human, and then from human to divine. These changes of nature have not destroyed His individuality. His identity was preserved, as the angel thus assures us, whether the philosophy of that fact be understood or not; and though we shall know Him no more after the flesh (as a man) but should remember His exaltation, that He is now of the divine, spiritual nature, and should anticipate His coming in harmony with this change and exaltation, yet we may remember that He is the same loving Jesus, and not changed in this respect. It is "this same Jesus," who, though present forty days after His resurrection, was seen of the disciples only, and by them but briefly, who in His second presence will be as invisible to the world as during the forty days preceding His ascension. We must remember that He does not come to give Himself as a sacrifice, and hence that He has no further use for a human body prepared for sacrifice. (Heb. 10:5.) That is all over now: He dies no more, but now comes to rule and bless and uplift the redeemed race.

Our Lord furnished us a most beautiful illustration of the manner in which His presence will be revealed, when He said, "As the bright-shining emerges from the east, and illuminates even unto the west, so will be the presence of the Son of man." (Matt. 24:27.) That most translations of this verse are faulty in using the word lightning, where sunlight is meant, is evident; for lightning flashes do not come out of the east and shine unto the west. They just as frequently come from other quarters, and rarely, if ever, flash clear across the heavens. The Lord's illustration, and the only one which will comport with His words, is the sun's brightness, which does invariably emerge from the east and shine even unto the west. The Greek word "astrape," here used, is thus shown to be improperly translated in this text, and also in the account of the same words by Luke (17:24). Another instance of the use of this word "astrape" by our Lord is found in Luke 11:36, where it applies to the brightness of a candle, and in the common version is rendered "bright- shining." Incorrect ideas of the manner of our Lord's coming and revealing, firmly fixed in the minds of translators, led them into this error of translating "astrape" by the word "lightning." They supposed that He would be revealed suddenly, like a flash of lightning, and not gradually like the dawning sunlight. But how beautiful is the figure of sunrise, as illustrating the gradual dawning of truth and blessing in the day of His presence. The Lord associates the overcomers with Himself in this figure, saying, "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the Sun in the Kingdom of their Father," And the Prophet, using the same figure, says, "The Sun of righteousness shall arise with healing in his beams." The dawning is gradual, but finally the full, clear brightness shall thoroughly banish the darkness of evil, ignorance, superstition and sin.

An imperfect translation of the word "parousia" has further tended to obscure the sense of this passage. In the Emphatic Diaglott and in Prof. Young's translation it is rendered presence, in Rotherham's it is arrival; while in the common version it is rendered coming. And though the text of the Revised Version retains this last erroneous rendering—coming—yet in the marginal reading it acknowledges "presence" to be the true definition of the Greek.

The Greek word parousia invariably signifies personal presence, as having come, having arrived; and it should never be understood as signifying to be on the way, as the English word coming is generally used. The text under consideration therefore teaches that as the sunlight gradually dawns, so shall the presence of the Son of man be gradually manifested or revealed.

Together with this illustration, our Lord coupled words of caution to guard us against certain errors which would be advanced about the time of His second advent, calculated to lead His Church astray. "Behold, I have told you before. Wherefore, if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not. For as the bright shining (sun) cometh out of the east and [gradually] shineth even unto the west, so shall be the presence of the son of man." Thus does our Lord put us on guard against two errors rapidly growing in our day. One is the claim that our Lord will come in the flesh, in the wilderness or desert of Palestine; and, so believing, some have gone thither, and are waiting to see Jesus in the flesh, with the scars, as when crucified. Expecting Him as He was, and not "as He is," they seriously err, and blind themselves to the truth, as did the Jews at the first advent. These false expectations lead this class to interpret literally the statement of the prophet (Zech. 14:4), "His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives," etc. Blinded by false expectations, they do not see that the "feet" in this passage are figurative, as truly as in Psa. 91:12 ; Isa. 52 :7 ; Psa. 7:6 ; 110:1; Eph. 6:15; Deut. 33:3; and in many other passages. If they knew what to expect, they would know not to go to Jerusalem to look for the man Christ Jesus; for the highly exalted King comes as the sunlight, making His presence and influence felt the world over. Wherefore, "Go not forth."

"If they shall say, Behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not." Spiritism, ever ready to deceive by counterfeits, and ever ready to use advanced truths as a garment of light (2 Cor. 11:13, 14) , has not hesitated to claim that we are in a period of dispensational change, the dawning of a glorious age. Among other such things, some of them even teach that Christ is present, and, we doubt not, ere long they will give seances at which they will claim to show Him in the secret chambers. Should the error present itself in this form, or any other, let us remember our Lord's words and repudiate all such claims as false, knowing that not thus will He reveal His presence, but "as the sunlight," emerging gradually —"the Sun of righteousness shall arise with healing in his beams."

Studying to be Quiet,

(1 Thess. 4:11. Convention Address.)

AS to whether quietness is a desirable thing depends on a person's outlook and state of mind. Unregenerate youth appears to revel in noise; indeed many of their elders sometimes prefer it to quietness, but generally speaking the older a person gets the greater the desire for quiet. As for a Christian, his or her very hall mark should be quietness in tone of voice, in actions and general demeanour. It appears very out of place for one who is a professing Christian to be loud-voiced, restless and dissatisfied in disposition.

The whole tendency of a knowledge of the true God and Jesus Christ whom He has sent (John 17:3) , and of the Plan of the Ages being worked out by God through Christ (Eph. 3:10, 11, Diaglott) is such as to promote peace within, as well as outwardly toward all with whom we have to do.

This being so, what was in the Apostle's mind when he exhorted the Thessalonians to "study" to be quiet? Was he counselling them to pursue studies that would increase their knowledge of God's plan and thus give peace and rest unto their souls? While such knowledge would have that effect, it does not appear to be all to which the Apostle, was referring.

A careful review of this epistle shows that he was addressing those who had understood and complied with the elementary requirements that constitute one worthy to be called a Christian. They had made some progress as followers of the Apostles and of the Lord, having received the word of truth with the afflictions that always accompany it, as well as some of the compensating joys of the holy spirit (ch. 1:6).

This being so, apparently there is another meaning attached to our text. A careful check and comparison of the two words "study" and "quiet" proves interesting. In referring to both dictionary and Bible Concordance some helpful thoughts are found. The dictionary gives what might be termed a general meaning to the words, while the concordance gives insight into the meaning of the actual Greek words used in the text. The dictionary gives the meaning of "study" as—to apply the mind to; and "quiet" -- calm, silent, tranquility. From the dictionary therefore a reasonable rendering of our text could be "apply your minds to a state of calm tranquility." The concordance (Young's) gives the meaning of the Greek word translated "study" as—"to esteem as an honour," and "quiet"—to rest, keep quiet. However, more exhaustfully it is noted that the same words are used in other places in the scripture. The word translated "study" in our text is used in two other places with the meaning of—"to labour or endeavour to strive," while the word "quiet" is twice used with the meaning of—"to hold one's peace."

Surveying all this, it seems reasonable to translate our text something like this—Apply your minds to a state of calm; and esteeming it an honour, strive to hold your peace by quietness.

Viewed thus, we see it is not so much attaining, but maintaining a condition, and possibly there has been no time in the Church's history when such has been as difficult to maintain as now. We, to whom it is given to be living in the "time of the end" of Daniel's prophecy (Dan. 12:4) , find it no easy task to keep an even keel in this day of mad running to and fro. Though not of it, we are in the world and cannot escape contact with its frenzy, but we must strive to keep ourselves from becoming intoxicated with the same spirit.

The Christian to-day, in common with all, finds a tax upon his time in going here and there, attending to this and that, and if no discretion was used he would never redeem any time for more direct service to the Lord. (Eph. 5:15, 16.)

In the words of a journalist "the world is ill," so seriously so that its very life is in danger, and the general knowledge of the fact causes alarm in the hearts of all who are desirous that the end of the world (this present evil world) should not come. The result is many remedies are applied, discussed and agitated for in the political, financial, social and religious circles of the world, causing a babble of voices the like of which no equal has probably ever been known. Here again it is no easy task for the real Christian to exercise a calm spirit and hold his peace. While none are better able to diagnose the cause of the world's distress, and none know better than we the only solution, it is not our work to attempt any reform in the present time apart from quietly letting our light shine in the surrounding darkness. This is done by showing fidelity to Christ and His teachings and the writings of the divinely inspired Apostles and Prophets, and not by participating in any partisan intrigue that inspires and encourages the babble of voices referred to above. (Phil. 2:14, 15; Psalms. 31:20.)

In these days of the Son of Man the saints of God are few. They were never more than an infinitesimal minority of the population at any period of the Gospel Age, but they are fewer than ever now. We know that the wisdom from above is the noblest science and the best instruction (Psalms. 111:10) but as we sojourn here below we live in an atmosphere, and amongst men, where only another wisdom is recognised--the wisdom of this world.

So foolish does this wisdom appear to our spirit-enlightened minds that the Christian is often hard put to it to hold his peace, and refrain from entering into debates of "profane and vain babblings" etc. (1 Tim. 6:20). No good can come of entering into such, for as Solomon said, “If a wise man contendeth with a foolish man, whether he rage or laugh, there is no rest or peace” (Prov. 29:9). Further, in Eccles. 9:17 we read, “The words of wise men are heard in quiet, more than the cry of him that ruleth among fools.” Let us remember this, then, on those occasions when we find ourselves in a circle or a company where only the reasonings of men are followed. Our quietness can often be a more effective witness than “casting pearls before swine.”

We do not desire to be misunderstood that a word spoken in season is not good. There are times when it is just what the Lord would have us do; but if the occasion seems good let it be a word of truth in the power of the spirit, and not many words endeavouring to follow the vain philosophies of men which can only engender strife of words to no profit.

Further, in quoting the text ‘casting pearls before swine’ it is not insinuating that any person is considered by us as likened to “swine.” Nor did Jesus mean it that way. He simply meant that swine would have no appreciation of the value of pearls, they would simply trample them underfoot. In the same way natural men could not be expected to appreciate the real value of spiritual things.

It was interesting to read recently a letter published in a Christian monthly, of a brother who wrote of his little shack which he had built himself as a holiday or week-end retreat in a secluded mountain area. “There,” he said, “I am able to get away to a place of real quiet at least for a little while.” We can conjure in our minds all that that little spot would mean to that brother; away from his business worries and the work-a-day world that so often saps up our energies as we seek to provide the things honest before men and for those dependent upon us; away from the blare of wireless jazz music and the overdone advertising programmes of the air with their oft attendant childish and foolish serials etc., which we are so often obliged to listen to against our wills; away from the milling crowds of pleasure seekers in the city walks and away from the din of “modern” means of travel as they jostle each other in the streets in their running “to and fro.” How the brother would appreciate his quiet time. Did not the Preacher know what he was talking about when he said in Eccles. 4:6—“Better is an handful with quietness than both the hands full with travail and vexation of spirit.”

Yes, dear friends, we can appreciate such quiet times when it pleases the Lord to grant them to us. We should be very thankful for them. Our Convention gatherings are blessed timer of rest and refreshing, when to a good degree we are able to shut out the hustle of the world around us. Perhaps some brethren are not as alive as they might be in realising how Conventions (the assembling of ourselves together) assist in restoring that quietness and confidence which is the real strength of the Christian. (Isa 30:15.)

When our Master Himself was on earth He realised the value of a quiet time for refeshing and reinvigoration, and thus we find Him calling ‘His disciples unto Him that they, together, might find a desert place or place of quietness away from the pressure that did not allow them even proper time to eat. (Mark 6:31.). But in this same narrative, be it noted, that what Jesus sought was denied Him, for if we read on from verse 33 we find that the crowds who desired His ministrations found out His retreat and followed Him, with the result that He was more pressed upon than ever (v. 34 and 56). And the heart of Jesus was filled with compassion and He did what He could to assist and bless, and despite the weariness He must have felt, still found time to pray to His Heavenly Father (verse 46) . Can we not draw valuable lessons from the foregoing. If we long and seek for the quiet time and it does not come, if we make time to pray it will do us good.

When counselling us to “study to be quiet” the Apostle did not mean that we were to run away from the difficulties that meet us, but to quietly face them in the Lord’s strength. When we find ourselves amidst much babble of voices of natural men, whether their viewpoint be political, civil or religious, let us not enter it with argumentative mind, but study to be quiet, or as the concordance has it, “to hold our peace.”

We are not interested in the jockeying for position that is now going on amongst the nations of the world, apart from the prophetic significance of it all; and until the Kingdom comes we seek for as long as it is possible to conform to the spirit of the Apostle’s teaching in 1 Tim. 2:1, 2, and 1 Pet. 2:13-17, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty.

We also are not interested in the bitter animosities between capital and labour, headed up by the continual bickerings of labour unions and vested interest combines, apart from their prophetic significance as we see them tending to terminate the order of this present evil world to make way for the Kingdom of God. Until then, let us study to be quiet; to hold our peace and recognise only the scriptural admonition given for such affairs. 1 Peter 2:18; 1 Tim. 6:1, 2; Tit. 2:9, 10; Col. 3:22, 23; Eph. 6:5-9.

It is not easy to exercise restraint or self-control under pressure. Maybe the most frequent temptations do not come along the lines just enumerated, but in seemingly smaller ways—in our own homes and amongst those with whom we live. How true are the words of James in 3:5, 6—“Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth. And the tongue is a fire” . . . Who can doubt it? Does not observation prove it daily? It is probably no exaggeration to say that 90 per cent. of the quarrelling and bickering that tends to make life so unbearable is caused by failure to exercise self-control, particularly of the tongue. Nearly always the heated argument that leads to unpleasantness is started by an utterance of someone who should have kept quiet—very often amounting to what the scriptures call “busybodying in other men’s matters” (1 Pet. 4:15)

One is amazed to notice how anxious some people are to offer advice or otherwise interfere in what is none of their concern at all. It is significant that in the passage in Peter referred to, the Apostle was exhorting Christians concerning a very important portion of Christian experience—suffering for righteousness sake and the sake of the Truth of which he says we need not be ashamed, for we glorify God by it. “But,” said he, “let none of you suffer . . . as a busybody in other men’s matters.- Let us learn well the wisdom of the Apostle’s advice and hold our tongues. (Read James 3:13-16.) The word “confusion” in v. 16 is in the margin rendered “tumult, or unquietness.” To busybody in other men’s matters will engender strife.

It seems good in passing, however, to explain that “studying to be quiet” is not to be understood as adopting a “peace at any price” attitude where the Truth itself is at stake. In declaring the Truth on proper occasions we may encounter those who will display enmity towards us, for as v. 17 says, “the wisdom from above is first pure then peaceable” etc. However, when the Truth arouses enmity, the spirit of wisdom should still prevail and if it does, the labour of the child of God will be towards quietness. The Truth we must hold to at all hazards, but there are two ways of presenting and maintaining it. It can be maintained forcefully, dogmatically in such a way as to gender strife or contention, or it can (as it ought) be presented in a quiet way with all meekness and forbearance as we remember the opposers’ difficulty, being held in the snare of the devil, (Read 2 Tim. 2:24-26.)

Our studying to be quiet along these lines requires great patience. Our own conversion out of darkness into light was not accomplished in a day, therefore let us remember the words in Jeremiah’s lamentations, ch. 3:26—“It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord.”

Even though we may have to bear long with a state of affairs as recorded in Micah 7:6, 7; Matt. 10:35, 36; Luke 12:52, 53, we have no reason to doubt or despair that our opposers may one day repent and come to a knowledge of the true God. Holding this thought in our minds should assist us to exercise quietness and forbearance during the fiery trials of the present. True, our hearts need to be filled with love—“Love suffereth long and is kind . . . love is not provoked to anger.” (1 Cor. 13:4, 5, Diaglott.) When we read scriptures like this and meditate upon them long enough to realise what they mean, we are conscious how far short we yet fall of what God requires of us.

The afflictive pressure that comes upon God’s people from time to time cannot be adequately expressed in words— “None but His loved ones know.” Must I endure all this without being provoked to anger? In view of the promise that we shall not be tempted above what we are able to bear it seems clear that we are expected to do so. That we so often fail is clear evidence that we have not yet attained to the desired mark and there is but one thing we can do about it—confess to Him who is faithful and just to forgive, then forget the things which are behind and press on toward the mark for the prize. The only sense in which we should allow remembrance of our failures to linger, is insofar as we make them stepping stones to better things.

And of many such experiences, what is the sum if we are rightly exercised thereby? Is it not a mellowed Christian character that realises more every day that quietness and confidence in God is real strength? “They that wait upon the Lord renew their strength for he giveth power to the faint” (Isa. 40:29, 31).

The ornament of a meek and quiet spirit is in the sight of God of great price or value (1 Pet. 3:4). When Peter used these words he was apparently addressing sisters in the Church. It is natural that woman, as the glory of the man, should seek to make herself attractive and pleasing to man, and doubtless, then, as now, many were the ornaments with which women bedecked themselves to that end. What spirit-filled exhortation the Apostle gave to all who can receive it—“Whose decoration let it not be that external one, of braiding the hair, and putting on of gold chains or wearing of apparel; but decorate the hidden man of the heart with what is incorruptible, a quiet and meek spirit which is very precious in the sight of God” (Diaglott rendering). We do not understand that the Apostle was upholding carelessness in attire, nor condoning slovenly appearance, but he was merely pointing out the greatest decoration of all—the spirit filled life—most pleasing to God, yea, and to all decent men also.

In conclusion we read in Isa. 14:7—“The whole earth is at rest and is quiet.” This refers to the day when “this present evil world” with all its turmoil has passed away, and Christ’s Kingdom is holding sway and Satan is bound. What a wonderful prospect!

“Drop Thy still dews of quietness,
Till all our strivings cease,
Take from our souls the strain and stress
And let our ordered lives confess
The beauty of Thy peace.”

Correspondence.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Would you please send me monthly your “Peoples Paper” and “The Voice” for which I enclose a postal note of 5/-. Will you also send me some of your broadcasts on “Our Lord’s Return” and any others that you may have on hand?

I would like to express my gratitude for your interesting Talks on the Bible and also for some “Peoples Papers” which were given to me by a friend. Yours faithfully.

The Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sirs—Will you please send me a copy of your book “Hope Beyond the Grave”. I am enclosing stamps for cost of same, and would also like a copy of the Dialogues by Frank and Ernest for the last two Sundays. Would it be possible to have them posted each week or do I have to apply weekly for them. We have had a terrible loss in the family in the death of our only daughter at an early age, and I do get quite a lot of comfort by listening to the Dialogues, and did enjoy the booklets you sent me a fortnight ago. Thanking you; I am, Yours faithfully.

(The copies of Dialogues are gladly posted regularly each month to all friends making personal application for same; these are supplied free from .the Radio Fund.—B.B. Institute.)

Dear Brethren—Many thanks for package of literature posted this week, and also for huge package posted before Xmas, every item of which I value, as within each I find food for thought, knowledge and understanding, refreshment of mind and strength of faith in God and His Word.

I thank God daily that I was led to listen to your Radio Session over 3GL some two years ago now (and I have listened intently each Sabbath since), as your summing up of the Truth and the Christian faith is so much in accord with my own beliefs, in which I seem to have had nothing hut opposition. But I just carried on fearless of man and knowing that God’s Word was true, being at all times armoured with St. Paul’s and St. Peter’s declaration that all Scripture was given by inspiration of God. . . .

Again thanking you, also please enrol me on your 'Peoples Paper’ and kindly post list of booklets. Enclosed 10/- postal note to the good work. Yours sincerely.

Dear Sirs—Thank you for the booklets and papers which you sent me; I would like you to send me a copy of “Divine Plan of the Ages.” I bought a book secondhand 25 years ago and I liked it because it was questions and answers; before I finished reading it, I loaned it to a friend who burnt it, saying that it was false teaching.

I tried everywhere to get another copy. I am sure that the one I had, had the Berean Bible Institute marked on it.

I listen in regularly to the Dialogues and enjoy doing so, although I do not see things the same as you do concerning the Jews; I have worked with them that much that I almost hate them; most of them I have found dishonest. I have studied the Bible for over thirty years and I really believe that you are correct in all your other teachings. Enclosed please find 10/- to pay for the book ordered and the rest to help the work along. Yours sincerely.

(In viewing God’s promises to the Jews it is necessary to keep in mind the words of Paul—”He is a Jew which is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, and not in the letter; whose praise is not of men, but of God.”—Rom. 2:28, 29. Those Jews who are merely nationalistic in outlook will need to be converted as truly as the majority of Gentiles when Christ’s Kingdom is set up. A helpful booklet on the Jewish subject, entitled “Chosen People” is supplied at 1/3 per copy.—B.B. Institute.)

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sirs—Will you please post me a copy of the Talk broadcast this morning on “The End of the Age.” Have you anything on the state of those who wilfully refuse to accept Christ when the second advent takes place, I mean those who reject Him in this dispensation; also the state of those who have never heard the Gospel, or have been misled by false teaching? I listen to your broadcast nearly every Sunday. I am, Yours faithfully.

(For a helpful explanation of the truths of God’s Word in handy form, the booklet “The Plan of God in Brief” is highly recommended. It is supplied at 1/- per copy.B.B. Institute.)

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I was living in for some time and used to listen to your Dialogues on the Bible on Sunday mornings and enjoyed listening to them. I cannot get them now on our wireless and as you said that you would send a copy of them, I am asking you please to send me a copy each week. You will see by the above address that I am living in . Yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Having heard your broadcast this last two Sunday mornings for the first time I was very much taken up with them, as I could listen all day hearing the Bible explained. I would be pleased to have some copies; I heard you speak about Christ reigning 1000 years; have you that copy as I often wondered when that time will take place? You did not mention the cost, so if you will let me know I will forward it along. I am a cripple at the present time and I always enjoy hearing a talk on the Scripture; so thanking you. Yours sincerely.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sir—We are enclosing a postal note for 5/- for a copy of your weekly broadcasts over 2KY on Sunday mornings, as when the static is bad we miss part of them. Please let us know when the sub. is up, as we are very interested in them and would not like to miss any. Thanking you in anticipation; I am, Yours truly.

(As previously stated, the copies of broadcasts are supplied free; friends forwarding donations are supplied with the monthly "Peoples Paper" as well as the Dialogues—B.B. Institute.)

The Manner of Christ's Return.

(Part 7. Continued from April Issue.)

OUR LORD'S PAROUSIA IN THE HARVEST.

THE Greek is a very exact language: a fact which greatly enhances its value in giving exact expression to truth. Thus, for instance, in our common English Bibles, the word come is used to translate thirty-two Greek words, each of which has a fine shade of difference. Instances:—ephistemi signifies to overtake, as in Luke 21:34—"come upon [overtake], you unawares;" sunerchomai signifies to gather, or come together, as in 1 Cor. 11:18—"come together in the church;" proserchomai signifies to approach, or come toward, as in Heb. 4:16—"Let us therefore come boldly;" heko signifies to arrive, or have come, or came, as when the action of coming is completed, as in John 2:4—"Mine hour is not yet come;" enistemi signifies to be present, and is so translated, except in two instances where it should be so rendered: 2 Tim. 3:1—"Perilous times shall come"—be present; and 2 Thes. 2:2—"That the day of Christ is at hand"—present. Parousia, too, signifies presence, and should never be translated coming, as in the common English Bible, where it is twice rendered properly, presence. (2 Cor. 10:10; Phil. 2:12.) The "Emphatic Diaglott," a very valuable translation of the New Testament, renders parousia, properly, PRESENCE, in almost every occurrence of the word.

The two Greek words, heko and parousia, and their use in the New Testament, are what we desire to notice at present, and particularly the latter of these; because a correct appreciation of their significance sheds light upon the manner of our Lord's return, through passage in which they occur, while the common but erroneous translation beclouds the very point it should illuminate.*

(The word parousia OCCURS twenty-four times in the Greek Testament, and is only twice in the English corn. ver. (2 COR 10:10; Phil. 2:12) correctly translated presence. The other occurrences, in which it is mistranslated coming, are as follows Matt. 24:3, 27, 37, 39; 1 Cor. 15:23; 16:17; 2 Cor. 7:6, 7; Phil. 1:26; 1 Thes. 2:19; 3:13; 4:15; 5:23; 2 Thes. 2:1, 8, 9; James 5:7, 8; 2 Pet. 1:16; 3:4, 12; 1 John 2:28.)

With the correct thought as to the meaning of parousia in mind—not that of coming, as being on the way, but presence, as after arrival—let us examine some passages in which the word is used. And from these we will learn that presence does not necessarily imply sight, but that it is applicable also to things present but unseen. Thus, for instance, angels, spirit beings, can be present with us, yet unseen, as our Lord was present in the world and often with the disciples during the forty days after His resurrection, without being seen of the world, or by His disciples except on the few brief occasions already referred to. Those days were days of His parousia (presence), as much as the preceding thirty-three and a half years had been.

In the conversation previous to the question of Matt. 24:3, our Lord had foretold the destruction of the temple, and the rejection of Israel after the flesh until a time when they would gladly recognise Him as their Messiah and say, "Blessed is he." He had told His disciples that He would go away, and come again and receive them unto Himself. He called their day the "harvest," or end of that age, and He had told them of a future "harvest" at the time of His second coming. (Matt. 9:37, 38; 13:39, 40.) Doubtless remembering that few recognized Him as the Christ at His first advent, they wanted to know how He might be surely recognized at His second advent—expecting probably that His second advent would occur in their day. Hence their inquiry, “What shall be the sign [indication] of thy parousia [presence] and of the end of the age?”

Because of their disposition to mix the closing events of the Jewish age, or harvest, in which they already were, with the then future “harvest,” or end of the Gospel dispensation, our Lord gave quite a detailed account of events which must intervene, indicating a lapse of a considerable period between, yet giving no clear idea of its length; for even He did not then know how long it would be.—Mark 13:32.

Our Lord’s reply in verses 1 to 14 covers the entire Gospel age; and His, words in, verses 15 to 22 have a double application—literally to the close of the Jewish age, and figuratively to the end of this Gospel age, of which the Jewish age was a shadow. Verses 23-26 contain words of warning against false Christs, and in verse 27 He reaches their question regarding His parousia, and declares [properly translated], “As the bright shining [the sunlight] cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west, so shall the parousia [the PRESENCE] of the Son of man be.” The sunlight becomes present instantly, yet noiselessly; and it is first discerned by those who are first awake.

Leaving other intermediate features of our Lord’s discourse for examination in their appropriate place, we note His second reference to their question regarding His parousia in verses 37 and 39. He says, “As the days of Noah, so shall also the parousia [PRESENCE I of the Son of man be.” Notice, that the comparison is not between the coming of Noah and the coming of our Lord, nor between the coming of the flood and the coming of our Lord. The coming of Noah is not referred to at all; neither is the coming of our Lord referred to; for, as already stated, parousia does not mean coming, but presence. The contrast, then, is between the .time of the presence of Noah among the people “before the flood,” and the time of the presence of Christ in the world, at His second advent, before the fire—the extreme trouble of the Day of the Lord with which this age ends.

And though the people were wicked in Noah’s day, before the flood, and will be wicked in the time of our Lord’s presence, before the hot fire of trouble comes upon them, yet this is not the point of comparison or likeness to which our Lord refers; for wickedness has abounded in every age. The point of comparison is stated clearly, and is readily seen if we read critically: The people, except the members of Noah’s family, were ignorant of the coming storm, and unbelieving as to the testimony of Noah and his family, and hence they “knew not;- and this is the point of comparison. So shall also the PRESENCE of the Son of man be. None but those of the family of God will believe here: others will “know not,- until society, as at present organized, begins to melt with the fervent heat of the time of trouble now impending. This is illustrated by the words, “As in the days that were before the flood, they were eating, drinking and marrying [Luke (17:28) adds “planting and building-], until the day Noah entered into the ark, and knew not, . . . so shall also the parousia [the presence] of the Son of man be.- In the time of the presence of the Son of man, therefore, the world will go on with its eating, drinking, planting, building and marrying--not mentioned as sinful doings, but as indicative of their ignorance of His presence, and of the trouble that will prevail in the world. This, then, is our Lord’s answer to the question of the disciples—What shall be the sign [indication] of thy [parousia] presence and of the end or harvest of the age? In substance, He says: There will be no sign for the worldly masses; they will not know of my presence and the new dispensational changes. Only the few will know, and they will be taught of God (in a way not here explained) before there is any sign (indication) which the worldly could discern.

Luke’s account of this same discourse (Luke 17:26-29), though not in the same words, is in perfect accord. Luke does not use the word parousia, but he expresses this exact thought, saying: “As it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man”—in the days of His presence. Not before His days, nor after His days, but in (during) His days, the world will be eating, drinking, marrying, buying, selling, planting and building. These Scriptures, then, clearly teach that our Lord will be present in the end of this age, entirely unknown to the world, and unseen by them.

Though there shall never be another flood to destroy the earth (Gen. 9:11), it is written that the whole earth shall be devoured with the fire of God’s jealousy (Zeph. 3:8) ;—not the literal, physical earth in either case, but the existing order of things in both cases: in the first instance accomplished by drowning all the people except Noah’s family; in the last, by burning all except the family of God in the symbolic fire—the great trouble of the Day of the Lord. The faithful children of God shall be counted worthy to escape all those things coming on the earth (Luke 21:36) ; not necessarily by being taken away from the earth, but possibly by being rendered fire-proof, as in the typical illustration of the three Hebrews who walked in the midst of the fiery furnace heated seven times, on whose garments, even, was not the smell of fire; because one like unto the Son of God was present with them.—Dan. 3:19-25.

Next we will notice Scriptures which teach that many in the Church will, for a time, be ignorant of the Lord’s presence, and of the “harvest” and ending of this age, while He is actually present, and the harvest work in progress.

The closing verses of Matt. 24, from verse 42 on, are very significant. In verse 37 our Lord had shown that the world would not know of the parousia of the Son of man; and now He cautions His professed disciples that, unless on their guard, they will be similarly in darkness relative to His parousia. He says, “Watch, therefore; for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come [erchomaiarrive].” If people were expecting a thief at a definite time, they would stay awake so as not to be taken unawares: so you should be ever awake. always ready, and always watching for the first evidence of my parousia. In reply to your question, “When shall these things be?” I merely tell you to watch and be ready, and when I arrive, when I am present, I will communicate the fact to all who are watching and faithful, and they only will have any right to know. All others should and must be in outer darkness, and must learn with and as the world—through trouble.

Who, then [in the “harvest”] , is a faithful and wise servant whom his Master shall make (Sinaitic and Vatican MSS. read “shall make) ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed that servant whom his Master on coming [erchomai—when he arrives] shall find so doing. “Verily, I say unto you, he shall make him ruler over all his goods”—all the vast storehouse of precious truth shall be opened to such faithful servants, to arm and supply and feed the entire household of faith.

But if the servant’s heart is not right, he will say, My Master tarries [has not arrived] , and may smite [oppose and contradict] his fellow servants [those who differ with him; those, therefore, who are declaring the opposite—My Lord does not tarry, but has come, is present.] Such may eat and drink with the intemperate [become intoxicated with the spirit of the world] , but the Master of that servant will come [Greek, heko—will have arrived] in a day not expected, and in an hour in which that servant is not aware, and will cut him off [from being one of the servants privileged to hand meat in due season to the household] and will appoint him his portion with the hypocrites. [Though not a hypocrite but a genuine servant, he must, because unfaithful and overcharged, have his portion with the hypocrites in the perplexity and trouble coming upon Babylon.] “There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.”

The foregoing, carefully examined, clearly teaches us that in the end of this age there will be one class denying that the Lord is present (not denying that He will come sometime, but that He has come) , and smiting or harshly opposing those fellow servants who must therefore be teaching the opposite —that the Lord has come. Which is the faithful, truthful servant, and which the one in error, is clearly stated by our Lord. The faithful one whom He finds giving seasonable “meat” will be exalted and given fuller stewardship over the storehouse of truth, with increased ability to bring it forth to the household, while the unfaithful one will be gradually separated and drawn into closer sympathy with the mere professors or hypocrites. And note the fact that the unfaithful is thus cut off, or separated, at a time of which he is not aware—in the harvest time—while His Lord is really present unknown to him, searching for and gathering His jewels.—Matt. 13:30; Psa. 50:5; Mal. 3:17; Matt. 24:31.

We particularize here, merely to show that, in answer to the question of the disciples about signs and evidences of His second presence, our Lord taught that neither the world nor the unfaithful servants would be aware of it, until the intense fire of trouble is at least commenced. And the faithful evidently will see Him present merely by the eye of faith—through the Scriptures written aforetime for their learning, to be apprehended as they become due. Present truths on every subject are parts of “His goods” and treasures new and old which our Lord had laid up for us and now freely gives us.—Matt. 24:45-47.

While thus, by foretold indications, the Lord made ample preparation to enable the Church to recognise His presence when due, though they should not see Him with the natural eye, He also carefully warned us against deceptions which should arise—deceptions which should appear so plausible as to deceive the very elect, if it were possible. But it is not possible, because all the elect give earnest heed to the warning, and studiously acquaint themselves with the foretold indications of His presence, and are watching for their fulfilment. Those otherwise minded are not of the elect class. Only the over-corners are to reign with the Lord, These deceptions are already in existence, and are deceiving many. But, thank God, the elect are forewarned and forearmed, and shall neither be deceived nor disheartened. Though clouds and darkness are round about Him, they recognise His presence, and rejoice that their deliverance draweth nigh. If any man should say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there [in any particular place] believe it not. And if they shall say unto you, Behold, He is in the desert, go not forth: behold He is in the secret chambers, believe it not; for as [like] the bright shining sunlight, which gradually dawns upon and fills the earth, so shall His presence be. (Matt. 24:23, 26, 27.) It will be manifested as foretold, by the dawning light of truth—truth on every subject, as we now see it so rapidly and gloriously unfolding. A few years more, and the Sun of righteousness will have fully risen with healing in its beams to bless and raise up the death-stricken world.

In view of the evidences presented, we have no hesitation in announcing the heart-cheering intelligence, that the harvest of the Gospel age is upon us, and that the Master is again present as the Chief Reaper—not in the flesh, as in the Jewish harvest, but in power and great glory, as the “highly exalted,” divine Christ whose glorious body is now “the express image of the Father’s person,” though His glorious person is graciously veiled from human sight. He is inaugurating His reign of righteousness; His sickle of truth is separating; He is gathering together into oneness of heart and mind, the ripe first-fruits of spiritual Israel; and soon that elect “body” complete shall rule and bless the world.

This announcement with reference to the manner and the attending circumstances of the Lord’s appearing is not given to alarm the world, nor to satisfy idle curiosity, nor to awaken a sleeping nominal church; but it is given in order that those who are not asleep, and not of the world, but who are awake, consecrated and faithful, and earnest students of their Father’s plan, may be informed of the significance of transpiring events, and not be in darkness on a subject and with regard to events in no other way discernible with certainty—the harvest, the presence of the great Reaper, the threshing and sifting of the true wheat, the bundling and burning of the tares in the time of trouble, etc.

Question Box.

Question:— 2 Pet. 3:10. This “day of the Lord,”—Is it part of the Millennium?

Answer:— The “heavens” referred to in this verse are said to “pass away with a great noise,” and the “earth,” is to be “burned up” in the fiery time of trouble which marks the end of the “present evil world.” It is the same “heavens and earth” referred to in verse 7—the “heavens and earth” belonging to the “world that now is.” In contrast with the “heavens and earth” of verses 7 and 10, is the “new heavens and earth” of verse 13.

The “day of the Lord” which comes as “a thief in the night” and brings destruction to the present evil world— “heavens and earth”—is, we believe, no part of the Millennium. Rather we think it is the “day of vengeance,” or “day of wrath,” or “day of Jehovah,” (See Isa. 61:2; Psa. 110:5; Joel 2:1, 2, etc.) which precedes the actual 1000 years reign of Christ. The Millennium with its “new heavens and new earth,” cannot come in until the “world that now- is,” with its “heavens and earth” has passed away.

In Scripture Studies Vol. 1, page 307 we find these words—“The ‘Day of Jehovah’ is the name of that period of time in which God’s kingdom, under Christ, is to be gradually, ‘set up’ in the earth, while the kingdoms of this world are passing away etc. . . . It is everywhere described as a dark day of intense trouble and distress and perplexity upon mankind . . .

“It is called the Day of Jehovah’ because, though Christ, with royal title and power, will be present as Jehovah’s representative, taking charge of all the affairs during this day of trouble, it is more as the General of Jehovah, subduing all things, than as the Prince of Peace, blessing all.”

See also Scripture Studies Vol. 3, page 230.—“The test of patience will be the final trial of the Church. Then ‘God will help her at the dawning of (her) morning’ (Psa. 46:5, Leeser’s translation) —not the morning which is to dawn on the world at the brightness of her rising with her Lord as the sun of righteousness, but at the dawning of her morning, in which she is to be changed to the nature and likeness of her Lord. Her morning is to precede the Millennial morning.”

Our Lord’s words in Matt.. 13:39—“the harvest is the end of the world,” (age)—referring to the gathering in of the last members of the church in the close of this Gospel Age, agrees with the above. Likewise in Rev. 14:13-16 is depicted in vision the harvest of this Gospel Age; then in verses 17-20 of this same chapter the “vine of the earth” is shown as being reaped which corresponds with the same events described in 2 Pet. 3:10. How clear it is that when the great Millennial Sabbath is ushered in, the Lord will have spoken peace to the raging masses of mankind.—Psa. 46:9, 10.

Convention News.

THE Convention at Adelaide- held during the Easter season has proved once more to be a time of real, helpful, spiritual fellowship and blessing. There was evidence that the members generally had partaken richly of the Lord's spirit and His blessing was surely in our midst. "How good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." Our hearts go out in thankfulness to our Heavenly Father for His great goodness to us; and our desire is that we may serve Him more faithfully in the days before us.

It was a pleasure to welcome a goodly number of visiting brethren from Victoria and some from Perth, W.A; also some from country parts of South Australia. Regret was expressed that one of our members was unable to be present on account of having met with an accident. It is hoped our Brother may make a good recovery to health again soon.

The addresses given by various brethren were as follows:— "The Love of God"; "The Love of Christ"; "The Love of the Brethren"; "Daniel"; "Peter"; "The Test of Sonship"; "If Christ Came to Adelaide! In which Church would He be Found?" ; "Christ -our Wisdom and Righteousness"; and "Christ our Sanctification and 'Redemption.'"

The Bible studies were very helpful and were as follows:— Eph. 4:1-7; Eph. 4:8-16; 1 Thes. 5:1-11; and Heb. 12:18. Also the discussion, "What are some of the evidences of the Second Presence of Christ?" proved most helpful as we reviewed the various Scriptures which clearly show that we are living in the days of the Son of man. The Praise and Testimony meeting and the Fellowship meeting, "A Hymn I like and why," also a Question meeting, helped to make the various sessions interesting and profitable to us all.

The Convention came to a close in the usual way with the singing of a 'beautiful hymn, "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love," during which we all bade each other good-bye with hearty hand-shake, and singing "God be with you till we meet again," and the closing prayer of thanks to the Giver of all good for the many blessings bestowed, and with earnest request for His blessing upon the Israel of God in every place. Heb. 12:1-3 is the greeting sent by the Convention to our brethren everywhere. "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Memorial Observances

Melbourne

THE brethren esteemed it a privilege to gather together on the 22nd of April to remember the Lord in the manner requested by Him when He instituted the observance on the evening before His death as the Redeemer of the world. Three helpful studies on Exod. 12:1-15, and Matt. 26 :17- 29 over previous weeks had refreshed the minds of the friends on this important subject and impressed the great favour bestowed upon us in being granted an insight into and appreciation of the great deliverance from sin and death provided for in the sacrifice of the Lamb of God.

The service comprised heartfelt prayers of gratitude to our heavenly Father, with remembrance of all other dear members who were likewise observing this solemn Memorial in every place, whether isolated, or in groups, large or small; Scripture readings of Isa. 53 ; Mark 14:12-46 ; and Mark 15 :1- 39 ; the hymns 364, 345, 280, 437 and 414 from B.S. Hymnal ; a helpful address covering the main features of the Memorial; and the partaking of the emblems representing the body and blood of our Saviour, appropriated by faith for our justification, with participation in the breaking and sacrificing experiences as members of the Christ, the anointed company, the members of which our Lord and Head is not ashamed to call His brethren. (Heb. 2:10, 11.)

The following verses by Horatius Bonar seem especially appropriate in these last days of the pilgrimage of the saints. They are based on Heb. 13:13—"Let us go forth therefore unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach."

Girded wayfarers of the waste

SILENT, like men in solemn haste,
Girded wayfarers of the waste,
We pass out at the world's wide gate,
Turning our back on all its state;
We press along the narrow road
That leads to life, to bliss, to God.

We cannot and we would not stay;
We dread the snares that throng the way;
We fling aside the weight and sin,
Resolved the victory to win ;
We know the peril, but our eyes
Rest on the splendour of the prize.

What though with weariness oppressed?
'Tis but a little and we rest.
This throbbing heart and burning brain
Will soon be calm and cool again:
Night is far spent and morn is near—
Morn of the cloudless and the clear.

No idling now, no slothful sleep,
From Christian toil our pow'rs to keep;
No shrinking from the desperate fight,
No thought of yielding or, of flight;
No love of present gain or ease,
No seeking man or self to please.

No sorrow for the loss of fame,
No dread of scandal on our name ;
No terror for the world's sharp scorn,
No wish that taunting to return ;
No hatred can to hatred move
The soul that's filled with pitying love.

No sigh for laughter left behind,
Or pleasures scattered to the wind ;
No looking back on Sodom's plains,
No listening still to Babel's strains;
No tears for Egypt's song and smile,
No thirsting for its flowing Nile.

'Tis but a little and we come
To our reward, our crown, our home!
Another year, or more, or less,
And we have crossed the wilderness;
Finished the toil, the rest begun,
The battle fought, the triumph won!

Geelong, Vic.

In the evening of April 22nd. 'a little band of seven Christians gathered together in a "room prepared," with sincere desire to appropriately remember again the Lord's great sacrifice on our behalf.

The solemn little service, during which the emblems were partaken of, consisted of prayer, reading of Scripture passages (John 6:47-60 ; Mark 14:12-17, 22-26, 32-36; Heb. 2:10-13; 9:19-24; 10 :14-25) , the singing of hymns 239, 437, 345 (B. S. Hymnal) , and a few words of exhortation with the object of enabling each one present to draw near to their Lord in the present hour with true hearts in full assurance of faith.

Our hearts rejoiced as our minds were renewed in understanding of the deliverance wrought for us. the antitypical firstborns, by the shed blood of Jesus, and as we reviewed the further privilege that is ours—presenting our justified bodies, our little all, as living sacrifices in the present age, identified with our Lord now in the sufferings of the present time, in prospect of being associated with Him in the glad time when the benefits of His ransom sacrifice will bless all who will receive them in the Millennial day.

Truly in deed as we departed we realised the truth of the Apostle's statement that we have received "all things that pertain unto life and godliness," (2 Pet. 1:3 1 , and we rejoiced to know that the sacrifice that secured these blessings for us, will in due time be appreciated by the world also (1 John 2:2) with resultant "life indeed."

Merino, Vic.

On the 22nd of April at Merino four of us solemnly celebrated the Memorial of our Lord's death with an address, lovely hymns and prayer, and we read for our Scripture Memorial study the 22nd chapter of Luke and the 13th chapter of John. We renewed our loving reverence and obedience to follow our Master, even if need be "without the camp, bearing His reproach."

Adelaide

Once again it was our privilege to meet together to observe the Memorial of our Saviour's death. Our hearts are filled with grateful thanks and appreciation as we consider the great goodness: of God as manifested in the giving of His only begotten Son to be our Saviour.

We are glad to think also of the wideness of God's love and mercy, and to know that Christ's sacrifice will be the means of releasing all the children of Adam from the bondage of sin and death, in due time; and will restore the willing and obedient into the glorious liberty of the sons of God.

We thank God for the light He has given us, and for the privilege of sharing with Christ in His sufferings at the present time. We pray that we may have the grace of God which will enable us to patiently endure, as we endeavour to humble ourselves under the mighty hand of God. "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift."

Gawler, S.A.

On the 22nd of April a few friends at Gawler assembled to celebrate once again the anniversary of the death of our Redeemer who humbled Himself, even to the shameful death of the cross, and thus proved Himself to be the worthy one, in virtue of which He is now the ruler of both the dead and the living.

This simple but effective Memorial also reminds us again of our own death with the Lord by consecration; for us the test will also be the same, namely, faithfulness unto death.

We were reminded by the use of the emblems that all footstep followers of the Lord share with Him in sacrificial death, and the promise is to such--Ye shall drink the new wine in the Kingdom." Our desire is to live up to our privileges in Christ for the days ahead.

Sydney

The Sydney Ecclesia assembled to commemorate the Memorial of our dear Redeemer's sacrificial death on Thursday 22nd of April. There were fifteen present, with two dear members absent through illness. After the opening hymn and prayer and welcoming the friends an outline was given of the origin and perpetuation of the typical, Passover until it became the antitypical Passover introduced by our Lord.

The significance of the symbols and what they mean to us were explained, and the brethren were exhorted to maintain and strengthen their unity in the Body of Christ by striving earnestly to walk in His footsteps of self-sacrifice. An explanation as to who may partake was given, also an exhortation to self-examination before partaking of the symbols. Then followed the blessing of the bread and the wine and the partaking of the elements. The whole was concluded by singing the hymn "When I survey the wondrous cross."

It was heartening to see the old familiar faces again of brethren, who, though not gathering with us all the year, never fail to put in an appearance at the Memorial. It was evident that all who attended received a rich spiritual blessing and went away much strengthened to continue their pilgrimage here on earth.

Canberra

In Canberra we again met together to remember our Lord's death at the appropriate time on the 22nd of April. Our numbers were small, but the spirit of the Master was in our midst and each one received a blessing; the solemnity of the occasion being impressed upon us all.

The Scripture account was read from Matthew's Gospel, and a talk was given based on the text "Christ our passover is sacrificed for us, therefore let us keep the feast." Type and antitype were shown regarding the passover, as well as the privilege we have of being sharers of His cup, and being broken together with Him. How solemn is this occasion! How we long to "drink the cup anew in the kingdom." By the signs of the times that glorious day is not far distant now; we rejoice, not only for ourselves, but also because the deliverance of the "groaning creation" draws nigh.

Glenbrook, N.S.W.

Our little Class at Glenbrook celebrated the Memorial on Thursday evening, 22nd April, when seven were present. We had a most solemn, impressive and blessed season with the Lord, remembering in prayer all dear brethren of like precious faith, known and unknown. What a privilege on such a solemn occasion to realise that we are all drawn together by the invisible bands of God's great and mighty love.

We opened the service with hymn 122 (166 in B.S.H.), then read an account of the original institution of the Memorial from the Scriptures, also pointing out an account of type and antitype, and after each partaking of the solemn emblems we closed the service with singing hymn 277 (366 in B.S.H.), all realising the deep significance of the last verse.

"Take my love, my God; I pour

At Thy feet its treasure store;

Take myself—I wish to be

Ever, only, all for Thee."

May God's richest blessings rest upon all the dear Israel of God through all eternity is our earnest prayer.

Nth. Queensland

"This do in remembrance of Me," was duly observed this evening by a little party of six in one of the homes. We have not missed the Memorial since celebrating with the Brothers five years ago. We tried to get them out to join, us this year, but they were unable to come. They have "remembered" also. We believe that observing the Memorial at the appropriate time each year is very impressive, much more so than other dates could be. May God lead and sustain all who earnestly seek the Saviour.

Perth

Once again we assembled to keep the Memorial in accordance with our Saviour's request that we keep it in remembrance of Him. Great men of the world like some stately monument erected in memory of them; our Saviour was the greatest Man this world has ever known, and He left to His memory a simple little feast, that would be appreciated only by a few followers.

How our hearts were filled with love and praise, and yet sorrow and sympathy as the officiating Brother gave us a panoramic view of the last hours of our Lord's life. And as we reviewed Israel gather round their passover lamb, we too were gathered round our Passover Lamb—Jesus, the pure, spotless, Lamb of God—"Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast . . . with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth."

The Israelites ate their lamb with bitter herbs: this gave them a greater appetite for the lamb. How this represents the Christian passing through bitter trials and experiences, fleeing to the Master—to feed more and more on His merit and His loving kindness, and by so doing the bitterness is taken away from our trials, and instead we can rejoice with great joy in that we are counted worthy to suffer with Him now and later on, if faithful, we may drink anew with Him in the Kingdom.

The emblems were then passed and as it is customary on this occasion we sang a hymn and dispersed quietly and solemnly.

N. W. Coast. Tasmania

Once again the little class assembled in that “large upper room” which this year was kindly made available by Brother and his family.

There were but five in attendance and the vacant chairs were noted as the years roll by. Those present comprised two Brothers and three Sisters.

In a short address those present were reminded that the word “remembrance” carried the meaning of “to remember again” and not to be reminded of something that had been forgotten. We were also reminded that the Bread which came down from heaven is not to be partaken of just once each year, but is something upon which we must feed continually, otherwise we will have no life in us

Dear Brethren—Warm and sincere Greetings in the Lord. Having just read the February issue of “Peoples Paper,”

I am prompted to write to you that you may know with what interest we have noted the report of the Melbourne Convention held during the Christmas and New Year season under the heading “Convention News.”

We were specially interested by the comment which reads as follows:—“It is felt that where Conventions of the brethren are held overseas and no Bible studies are provided there is a loss to the assemblies which cannot be made up by other sessions.” It gave us much pleasure to read that remark from our brethren on the other side of the world, for it has been our experience that a Bible study is one of the most helpful and stimulating sessions which can be included in a Convention programme.

Our own Ecclesia has for several years past included at least one Bible study in all the Conventions arranged and we have found it to be most profitable to all and especially have our visiting brethren from other parts of the country appreciated the opportunity of joining with us in a mutual study of an appropriate portion of God’s Word. You will therefore understand how encouraging it was to learn that you dear ones, so far away, can also testify to the help to be derived in this way.

We noted also another practice which we have found to be greatly appreciated, viz., the remembrance of absent friends and the sending out of a general message to our brethren everywhere. Surely indeed the spirit of the Lord is the influence which directs the minds and hearts of God’s people, so far apart. This is an evidence of the oneness and unity which belongs to the Body members of Christ who are being directed by the one Head.

Do we not long for the Convention of all the “firstborn ones” when we shall be gathered together in the presence of our Lord to praise our God for all His faithfulness toward us and to render grateful thanks for His keeping power. What a grand Testimony Meeting that will be when each one of that 144,000 shall speak one with another of all the goodness of God through many and varied experiences.

Dear brethren, we assure you of our prayers that you may be found among those who shall be accounted worthy to “reign with Christ” in that Kingdom soon to be established. On this side of the world, the clouds are once again lowering. Even now, apart from the actual horrors of military warfare, conditions are worse than they were during the war. However, our experiences in the past have given us a calm conviction, that our God will continue to keep us; that His everlasting arms will uphold us and that “He who has begun the good work in us will finish it.” We ask a remembrance in your prayers, that come what may our faith may remain firm and steadfast even to the end. How we thank our Father for the understanding of His great Divine Plan and for the vision of the future which He has revealed to us.

Hold fast dear ones and let us all “lift up our heads, for our deliverance is at hand.” With sincere Christian love;

Your brother by Divine favour.

Victoria.

Dear Christian Friends—For some considerable time there has been the regular delivery of “Peoples Paper” and the month’s Dialogues. It may interest you to know that as I was looking through back numbers I came across a chapter under the heading “Made Perfect Through Suffering.” just recently I was notified that I would be called upon to give a Consecration address at a Christian Endeavour gathering. This title applied to me and although my discourse is along different lines I feel sure that it will leave the same impression as did the interpretation in your valuable periodical.

With so much competition today from literature published in an endeavour to satisfy the longings of men, I am sure that your contributions will hold their own with ether spiritual refreshing editions. May God richly bless and guide all your undertakings that many who have followed the trend of the world will be attracted by the invitations extended through your contributions of service and Christian witness. Yours in Christian service.

Dear Frank and Ernest—Would you kindly renew my subscription to the “Peoples Paper” also kindly send me a copy of “Hope Beyond the Grave,” also the leaflet from the previous Sunday’s talk. You will find enclosed a postal note for 10/- to cover cost and postage; if there is anything over use it as you think fit, if not enough please let me know. Thanking you in anticipation. I remain, Yours faithfully.

P.S. I am enjoying “The Manner of Christ’s Return” in the “Peoples Paper.”

N. S. Wales.

Dear Sirs—Greetings in our Saviour’s name. Thank you for your address on 2KY this Sunday morning; it has been an inspiration and a means of enlightenment to me. Would you mind forwarding to the above address a copy of your discussion. Yours sincerely in Christ.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I have listened to your lectures for some time now and I would like to have your leaflet on “The Day of Judgment” and “The End of the World.” You have been very helpful in helping me to understand the true meaning of the Bible. I realise I have a lot yet to learn and I hope you’ll be able to help me. Thanking you in anticipation. Yours sincerely.

Tasmania.

Dear Brethren—It is with deep interest that I listen to your Biblical Dialogue of a Sunday morning. I would be very pleased with a copy of that booklet “Some of the Parables” and also any copies of your discussions.

I would be grateful if you could let me have Scriptural references and explanations on the Second coming of Christ, and I, would like the answer to this question—Is Christ coming in the clouds of heaven (not to be seen by every eye) for His own, the Church, the Bride of Christ, before the period of tribulation? Do the Jews go through the tribulation? What of those Jews who now know Jesus Christ as Saviour and Redeemer. I do trust that you will help me in this way. May God abundantly bless your work for Him. I am yours in and through the precious blood of Christ.

(A detailed explanation of Christ’s second coming is given in the series of articles now appearing in “Peoples Paper”; these are supplied free to all desiring same, and it is expected that these articles will also be printed in booklet form shortly. The Jewish subject is well presented in the booklet “Chosen People,” copies of which are available.— B.B. Institute.)

(Convention Address)

“I count all things hut loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord.” Phil. 3:8.

THE account of Paul’s experiences on the way to Damascus is given three times in the book of Acts, so it must have been important. We have three versions of the same thing. Firstly Luke gives us the account, then Paul himself tells it to the Jews, then later on to King Agrippa.

We have no new message ‘to give, but have a few questions to ask, just as Saul had a few questions knocking at his brain. The answer to those questions is going to be consoling, or is going to be worrying: It is a retrospective view of this way that we are going to examine, and a few lines are appropriate to it

“It is good to remember the way He hath led us,
To view once again both the track and the road—
To rest on the fact that unfailing He fed us,
A faithful and loving, compassionate God.

“It is good to remember that He Himself brought us
Through all of Life’s trying road up to this day—
Forgave us our sins and our blunders, and taught us
To cleave unto Him and make Him our stay.”

The Apostle never ceased giving praise to God for His leadings, and expressed wonder that such a man as he should see the light which struck him down on the way to Damascus.

There is a great similarity between Paul’s day and our day; similar issues seem to be alive and very vital to our interests—and not only our interests, but those of honest people everywhere:— those in positions of authority, the Jews to whom Paul was preaching, King Agrippa, and especially the followers of Christ. This has been a great problem all through the age, but it was particularly striking at that time. It began, really, with John the Baptist, this great question mark that each one will have to answer. It will throb away and each will have to answer, and give an account, as it were—“What think ye of Christ?”

John the Baptist came preaching repentance, and baptizing, and pointing out the Messiah, and his own experiences became more and more strenuous until finally he was beheaded. But he was pleased, as it were, to take the place of the friend of the Bridegroom, and direct his disciples into the Bridegroom’s arms. He willingly gave up his disciples to follow the Lamb of God, so that they might become the Bride of Christ.

Now Jesus really took up this great question in His preaching and ministrations as He journeyed throughout the coasts of that country, for it was particularly, shall we say, vital to His interests. Jesus himself said to His disciples, “Whom say men that I am?" That was the big question of that day. They said, "Some say you are John the Baptist, or Elijah, or Jeremiah, or one of the Prophets." But not the Messiah. He was not very concerned about that—"But whom say ye that I am?" The same question was put to two different sets of people. "Whom say ye that I am?" Peter gave the answer that He was the Christ, the Son of the Living God, and the Lord said that flesh and blood had not revealed this to him, but the Father. That confirms, as it were, what Paul says in this passage we have under discussion, the light that struck him down was not natural light. He did not receive it from men's hands or ministrations, but it was a direct intervention on the part of God.

It is the same direct question that hits at the understanding of all creatures at some time, and we are particularly favoured to be able to give it some consideration. "What think ye of Christ?"

We have other illustrations. Nicodemus was an honest man, well-intentioned; he came to the Lord and asked certain questions. He addressed Him as Rabbi, and acknowledged that Christ could not do these things unless He were the Son of God. But Nicodemus could not exactly leave the respectability of the order of that day and follow Him; yet we see the good intentions of Nicodemus. The Lord gave him the answers to his problems. We do not know how he finished up eventually, but we have reason to believe that Nicodemus saw much of that which our Lord tried to instruct him that night.

Then there was the Ethiopian. "Does this refer to Christ, or to some other man?" At the end of that Age the same question was on all lips. It all centred around the words, "What think ye of Christ?" That is the big thing today. It is knocking at the hearts of all people everywhere. It is knocking two ways, either condemning the error or elevating the truth.

That was at the first advent. It is so much like a fairy story—Once upon a time there was a wicked man named Saul. But we know it is true, because the same thing has happened to us. If we are going to be of assistance to anyone, or everyone, we want to help them along this Damascus road. The point of which we want to enquire is, What part of that road are you on? Are you still going to Damascus, or are you on the "after" part? Are you still, as it were, the persecutor, or are you now the persecuted? There are two camps today. Which are you in?

We have to decide this thing sooner or later. It is best to be on the right road, though it may bring much persecution and troubles. But it is going to be worth it, friends. We are to have a joy and peace that nothing can buy, and better still, nothing will take away. There is a message about it too, just like Paul's on helping the brethren. There were not many, just companies like ourselves. The people he was persecuting were people like ourselves, who wanted to gather on the Sabbath; they often went out to a stream, where prayer was wont to be made. They were little companies seeking to please the Lord. They were querying about their own conduct and efficiency as God's ministers, and desiring to improve in those respects and not misrepresent God himself. The Apostle John said, "We have the assurance that if we love the brethren we have passed from death to life." But God has chosen certain people—no-one can do this without it is God-given. So the men Saul would stone today he lays down his life for tomorrow.

Now we would like to draw your attention to the persecuted and the persecutors. You might say that you would never be like Saul. No. But there were many men behind Saul, behind the scenes, giving him that authority, that impetus and encouragement to persecute in this way. He had been encouraged in this nefarious conduct of stamping out the Christians. But there was one peculiar thing about Saul; he was honest; he was sincere. Honest men may be tricked for a time, but they watch their actions, they have their eye on the road, and ask themselves, "Is this right?"

So Saul heard the voice saying to him, "-Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" and he answered, "Who art thou, Lord?" "Jesus of Nazareth." Saul was persecuting the Lord himself. Not exactly in a personal way, but we remember Jesus said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it to one of the least of these ye have done it to me." It is given to us to consider these things, sometimes possibly before we are worthy of Them.

Have you considered the bindings, how everyone is being bound today in something? That body of Scribes and Pharisees who were doing the binding into bundles in that far-off day, thought they had in Saul a pretty good vessel for their purpose. And what a terrible thing it was he did! He tells us himself that he "spoiled the Lord's church." Many had good, peaceful aspirations, nothing but love in their hearts, and he spoiled them. He says he was the chiefest of sinners. Friends, we too, must hammer it out once more. What side are we on? Persecuted? Persecutors?

Now you say, I was not like Saul, I did not do those terrible things. Did we give some little support and direction?

It is the same thing. Perhaps somebody else was doing the persecuting. And do you know what it amounts to? Roughness and smoothness. Are you making the road smooth or rougher for someone? You must answer the question yourself, the same as I have to. If you can say in all sincerity that you desire that it should be smoother, and that you have a good conscience, you have passed Damascus. If you cannot, you still can hear the voice. "Lord, what hast thou for me to do?" "It will be told you what to do," You do not need me to tell you. That little voice will tell you what to do. It is the answer to that great question.

What a similarity there is between those days and this! There are not many of us. "What think ye of Christ?" It is the problem of the age, and of the day. As it was in the end of that age, so in this. It has to be answered. There is no running away from it. It begins with individuals, it comes into companies, it goes to nations and then it becomes an international question. We want our affairs, our loves, hopes and joys not to be confined to just you and me, but to all. Shall we begin with those in our own town? We can then extend to those of other towns in our own land. The love of Christ will abound more and more. If we can do that, we will reach others of other lands, and we will not be ashamed of them as brethren.

The Lord did not say, You are not worthy to be my disciple. No. Him whom the Father draws I will in no wise cast out. It is for us, too. Him whom the Father draws in this company, it is not for us to question.

Now friends, we have a job before us of smoothing out the road or making it rougher. What are you going to do?

Are you on the way to Damascus, or after?

As we go about our business we can see these questions hammered, we won't say in so many words, but in so many principles, in so many ways of conduct. We know we come short, but that is not our intention, is not our desire. We want to grasp the opportunities that arise through the various circumstances of ministering, where we can, in whatever way is possible, to the Lord's people, irrespective of who they are and of who it offends. We are not to persecute anybody. Stephen was persecuted, then Paul.

This question, after the Church is gone, will be for the benefit of humanity. Then they will be delivered from the corruption of selfishness, pride, hatred, strife and envying etc., as the question of "What think ye of Christ" is faced and answered as it should be. They cannot solve the problem today. It needs faithfulness and staunchness on our part to see that we carry out our ministry. We cannot do much, yet we can inspire one another and direct one another's thoughts to the Word and to the Throne of Grace. We are all pleased to receive this grace. We know our failures. But we are not too pleased when our brethren exhibit the same failings. We might speak a little ill of them, and condemn them. But if we were in the same position, we might be a hundred times worse. So it is not for us to stand over our brethren in any way at all.

We will be able to assist one another. You will be surprised, when you think of it.' I have discovered myself how far a little thing can go, just a word of comfort and cheer in the right way and spoken in truth and sincerity. You do not need to travel, you have all the problems right with you, and you will find everywhere the same sort of people as we have here, with the same difficulties and problems, and the same answers are applicable to them.

Don't forget. Persecuted? or Persecutors? Well, God has done His work, let us do ours!

''PEOPLES PAPER AND HERALD OF CHRIST'S KINGDOM.

(Monthly) 4/- (80 cents) per annum, post paid,

Published by the Berean Bible Institute, 19 Ermington Place, Kew, E4, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia.

While it is our intention that these columns be used for teachings strictly in accord with the Lord's Word, we cannot accept responsibility for every expression used, either in the correspondence or in the sermons reported.

A Cross (x) on the wrapper indicates that the Subscription to "Peoples Paper" is overdue.

General Report Berean Bible Institute

IN presenting another report briefly covering the work of the Berean Bible Institute and including the Balance Sheet of the General Tract Fund for the twelve months to the end of April last, we again wish to express much thankfulness to the Lord for His favours and guidance manifest upon the efforts of all dear friends who have co-operated in this service of the truth throughout another year. It is most encouraging and due appreciation is expressed to many of our friends who render such willing assistance in the work carried on from the Institute, and as all is undertaken voluntarily no doubt it is accepted of the Lord as done unto Himself.

Our monthly publication "Peoples Paper and Herald of Christ's Kingdom" continues to provide a regular contact with our brethren and friends over a wide area, and appreciative remarks from readers give evidence that the messages from its pages provide spiritual food and encouragement to many in the Christian way, by the Lord's grace. We are grateful to our brethren who contribute to the columns of "Peoples Paper" by the addresses given at Conventions etc., and are always ready to consider articles submitted by friends from time to time. Since the notification given in March and April issues of the increase in subscription rates to "Peoples Paper" from 3/- to 4/- per year, made necessary by the extra cost of production, even greater increases in costs are in evidence, and those friends who obtain new subscribers or forward subscriptions for others are assisting greatly the publication of the "Paper." While the deficiency to cover the cost of "Peoples Paper" made up by the General Tract Fund over the year past was no greater than in former times, yet in the months ahead the full increase in costs will apply for each issue. However, as numbers of the "Paper" are distributed free each month to those who apply for literature, it is felt that the extra cost above the subscriptions is well used in the service of the Lord.

Free tracts and Kingdom Cards have been supplied in some quantities to various friends who are alert to the opportunities of witnessing for the truth, and the work with the Consolation Cards has been encouraging over the year past again, as many bereaved have been helped with the literature as a result of receiving these cards through the post. Other friends who can use the tracts or cards to advantage should apply for these.

Public lectures have been continued throughout the year and some new friends have been assisted by these meetings to a clearer and fuller appreciation of the truth. The messages at these public meetings have been arranged to provide encouragement in the narrow way for the brethren as well as enlightenment and help for those coming to a knowledge and appreciation of the plan of redemption. Where-ever possible gatherings of this kind should surely be continued by those with talent and opportunities for service in this way.

Quantities of books and booklets are continually going out to various parts of the harvest field, and it is hoped to produce further supplies in the months ahead of some which have been out of print of late, A new edition of "Poems of Dawn" and "The Ten Camels" will receive attention as early as possible, and it is hoped to provide again the valuable work "The Bible Teachings on the Covenants etc.," before the end of this year. It is expected that the booklet on "The Manner of Christ's Return" comprising the articles on this subject which have appeared in "Peoples Paper" will be printed in a few weeks; further reference to this will be found in this issue. Good supplies of the very helpful booklet "Plan of God—in Brief" are on hand, and this is a most suitable work for general distribution. We shall be glad to hear from friends able to devote some time to colporteur work with the literature.

From the General Tract Fund below the assistance to the general work and the expenses: met are shown. The voluntary contributions indicate the willing sacrifices on the part of many of the brethren by which under the Lord's providence, the work is carried on. All expenses have been covered throughout the year past and the small balance is carried forward into the new term.

Looking forward to the days ahead it is with confidence and trust in the Lord as we seek to fulfil our privileges and opportunities in the service of His truth. World conditions more than ever impress the fact that "the night is far spent and the day is at hand," and the momentous happenings should but stimulate the faith and zeal of God's people to perform, all His good pleasure, both as respects their own welfare and the encouragement of other members in Christ. Once again it is requested that the dear friends everywhere remember in prayer the work being carried on, that God's blessing and oversight may be in evidence and His guidance realised in all things, to His praise. The words of the faithful Apostle in Heb. 6:10, 11, surely apply as truly today to the Lord's people as when written—"For God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labour of love, which ye have showed toward His name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister. And we desire that every one of you do show the same diligence to the full assurance of hope unto the end."

The Radio Work.

WITNESSING to the truths of God's word by means of the radio continues to be an effectual means: of reaching those people who are sincerely desirous of knowing of the wonderful plan of salvation through Christ, and this feature of the work carried on from the Institute has been blessed by God also throughout another year, for which gratitude is again gladly expressed to the Lord of the Harvest.

There has been no change in radio stations over the year past, and 3GL Geelong (Vic.) and 2KY Sydney continue to give good service and are reaching listeners over a considerable area. The friends in Perth have also continued with the same witness through 6KY for the benefit of those who may be found with ears to hear in that locality.

It is most encouraging to find that quite a number of radio listeners are now rejoicing in the full knowledge and appreciation of the truth. The advantage of offering the printed copies of each broadcast after the sessions has been well demonstrated again over the year just completed, as considerable numbers have been supplied to appreciative listeners, together with other literature. Quantities of the printed Dialogues are also mailed each month with the "Peoples Paper" to many of our friends, and these copies are used as tracts for distribution where good may be done.

The radio cards for advertising the broadcasts have been used by a number of workers throughout the year and this is an effective means of reaching those who have a desire for spiritual things. Friends who can use these cards in the areas where the broadcasts are heard are advised to apply for supplies which are made available from the Radio Fund. Some advertising in papers has been undertaken also, and we are glad of the co-operation shown in this respect by those who make use of papers in their own localities.

The financial assistance to enable this witness work to continue has been very well maintained by the voluntary donations received, and in this respect it is realised also that much sacrifice is indicated in the good amount listed for this branch of the truth service. After meeting all expenses the credit of 1 70/6/2 is carried over into the new term.

It will be appreciated if our brethren will join in prayer for this witness of the truth, that in these last days the Lord's blessing may also attend the message of His truth in this form, that still others may hear and appreciate the joyful sound and be brought to the Lord in accordance with His good will. "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold, not thine hand: for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good." (Eccles. 11 :6.) .

The Manner of Christ's Return

(Part 8. Continued from May Issue.)

SCOFFING FORETOLD.

HE Apostle Peter describes how some of the unfaithful servants and hypocrites will scoff during the presence of the Lord, even as they scoffed in they days of Noah. (2 Pet. 3:3, 4, 10,12.) Notice that the Apostle wrote to the Church, and that the scoffers he describes are in the nominal church and professedly interested in the Lord's work and plan, and believers, therefore, that He will come some time. The scoffing described is on the very subject here noticed, and such as we hear and shall hear from professed Christians, whenever the subject of the Lord's presence and harvest work, etc., is presented. Christians generally, until they investigate the subject, have such ideas of literal manifestations of fire, trumpets, voices, etc., and of seeing the Lord descending through the air, a shining body of flesh, that when they hear of His invisible presence, without taking time to investigate a subject upon which they feel so sure, busied with worldly plans, and intoxicated with the spirit of the world, they will dismiss the matter quickly as unworthy of investigation.

It is to this class of professed Christians that the Apostle refers, saying, "In the last days [in the closing years of the Gospel age—in in the "harvest" shall come scoffers walking after their own, desires [plans, theories, etc., , asking, Where is the promise of his presence 1 parousia ? for ever since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as at present from the beginning of creation." When referred to our Lord's statement (Mat. 24:37-39; Luke 17:26) that in His days, in the days of His presence, things would indeed continue as before; and that, as in Noah's day, men would be eating, drinking, marrying, planting and building; and that, as then the world know not of His presence, and read not the signs of the speedy and great changes just at hand, they are too busy to consider the testimony carefully, and only continue to scoff.

Ah! says Peter, they forget the great change which occurred in the days of Noah; and then, under the symbol of fire, he describes the overwhelming flood of trouble which shall shortly overtake the whole world, utterly overthrowing all civil and ecclesiastical rule [the heavens] and melting the entire social fabric [the earth [—producing anarchy and social chaos until the new heavens [ruling powers—the Kingdom of God] shall be fully established, as well as a new earth [society organized on a new and better basis, of love, equality and righteousness].

In verse 10 he assures us that "the Day of the Lord will arrive [Greek, heko] as a thief" (Old Manuscripts omit here the words, "in the night.") [unobservedly, quietly: it will be present, while some are scoffing and smiting those fellow- servants who declare the truth] . The Apostle then exhorts the saints to separateness from the world; that they be not swallowed up by politics, money-getting, etc., but that they set their affections on higher things. He says, Seeing that in God's plan present earthly conditions are only temporary and will soon give place to the better order, what manner of persons ought we to be, in respect of holy conduct and piety?—"looking for the PRESENCE [parousia] of the Day of God"—watching for the evidences (signs) to prove that it has come.

And, thanks be to God, His provision is so abundant that all those of piety, who are looking for that day, will know of it before the full bursting forth of the fire of wrath. Through Paul, He assures us that none of the children of the light will be left in darkness, that that day should come upon them unawares. (1 Thes. 5:4.) Hence, though we are already in the day of the Lord's presence, and in the beginning of the great fire of trouble, we see that it is even as shown us in symbol (Rev. 7:1, 2)—the storm is held in check until the faithful servants of God are "sealed in their foreheads:" i.e., until such are given an intellectual appreciation of the time, presence, etc., which will not only comfort them,, and shield them, but also be a mark, seal or evidence of their son-ship, as indicated by our Lord when He promised that the holy Spirit should show to the faithful "things to come."—John 16:13.

Some take Peter's statement literally, that "the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved and pass away with a great noise;" and also the Revelator's description of the same events, by a very similar symbol, "The heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together." It would seem, however, that one glance upward at the myriad gems of night shining through millions of miles of space, with nothing between to roll away, or to take fire, should 'be argument enough in one moment to convince such that they had erred in supposing these statements to be literal—should convince them that their expectation of a literal fulfilment is absurd in the extreme.

So, then, God veiled from mankind under figures of trumpets, voices, fire, etc., information (which was not for the worldly to know, but only for the "little flock" of consecrated saints) regarding the harvest, the Lord's presence, His spiritual kingdom etc.; and yet He arranged them so that, in due time, they would speak clearly and emphatically to the class for whom He intended the information. As at the first advent, so to a similar consecrated class it may now be said, in the time of the second advent—"Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God; but unto them that are without, all these things are done in parables"—in figures and dark sayings—in order that, even though having the Bible before them, others than the consecrated may not really see and understand.—Mark 4:11, 12.

The world is not ignorant of the unprecedented events and circumstances of the present time, and their increasing noteworthiness with every passing year; but not perceiving the grand outcome, these only fill their minds with dark forebodings of evil. As foretold, they are in fear, looking forward to those things that are coming on earth; for already the powers of the heaven (the present ruling powers) are being shaken.

That the Lord must be present, and exercise His great power so as to dash the nations to pieces as a potter's vessel, is clearly indicated; for it is "in the days of these kings" that the God of heaven shall set up His Kingdom. And IT shall break in pieces and consume all these. (Dan. 2:44.) And in harmony with this, we see all about us evidence of the smiting, shaking and overturning of the present powers, preparatory to the establishment of the kingdom "which cannot be moved"—the strong government.

In these days of our Lord's presence, He has been verifying His promise to those in the proper attitude of watchfulness—"Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching: Verily, I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them." (Luke 12:37.)

Even so, He has opened unto us the Scriptures, showing us truth concerning His present glorious nature, the object, manner and time of His coming, and the character of His manifestations to the household of faith and to the world.

He has drawn our attention to the prophecies which definitely locate us on the stream of time, and has shown us the order of His plan of operations in this harvest time. He has shown us, first of all, that it is a harvest of the saints. a time for their full ripening, and for their separation from the tares; and secondly, that it is a time for the world to reap its whirlwind harvest—for the reaping of the vine of the earth, and the treading of its fruitage in the winepress of the wrath of Almighty God.

But the reader must not expect to have passages of Scripture pointed out in which these matters are plainly written. On the contrary, he must bear in mind that all these things have been hidden by the Lord, in such manner that they could not be understood or appreciated until the due time had come, and then only by His earnest, faithful children, who esteem truth as more precious than rubies, and who are willing to seek it as men search for silver. Truth, like silver, must be not only mined, but also refined, separated from dross, before its value can be appreciated. While many may prefer to take a statement without the trouble of verifying it from the Scriptures, this will not be the case with the real truth-seeker. He must, so far as possible, make every point, argument and proof his own, direct from God's Word, by tracing all the connections, and thus convincing himself of the truthfulness of the account presented.

Though the Lord provides it, and the servants bring forth the "meat in due season for the household," yet each, to be strengthened thereby, must eat for himself.

Correspondence.

U.S.A.

Dear Brethren—Today, I borrowed a copy of “The Bible Teachings” published by you; I was very happy to know of its existence and of the wonderful teachings inscribed.

Although born of truth parents it was not until recently that I realised the wonderful opportunity and blessing bestowed upon us by our Lord to know of His wonderful plan of salvation to redeem mankind from Adamic sin.

I would very much like to receive a copy of my own and if additional copies are available I know the brethren would be very happy to have them to read and study. . . . Your book “Foregleams of the Golden Age” also I would like to have. I’d best put it this way, dear brethren; in whatever way you can help, no matter what it be, I would greatly appreciate any information on books for Bible students. The “Dawn” has the volumes and some leaflet literature, but books such as the previously mentioned are not printed; reasons probably are financial.

Thanking you one and all, I pray blessings to you and all the Lord’s obedient and self-sacrificing servants. Sincerely Yours.

P.S. Kindly remember us here in your prayers--at this time of great trouble our faith must be made steadfast to our Lord’s will.

(It is hoped to produce the book “The Bible Teachings on the Covenants, etc.” this year, notice of which will be given in “P. Paper.”—B.B. Institute.)

The following quotation is from an English friend:— I got my little batch of “Peoples Papers” last week and have enjoyed that first article “Have Faith in God.” It is indeed “a word in season,” and all from the Word of God, so simply given and yet so comprehensive and finishing with one of Francis Ridley Havergal’s beautiful little poems. It is a real joy to me to pass these “Peoples Papers” on, but I feel I would like to contribute to them but do not know how to do so.

Germany.

Dear Brethren in our Lord Jesus Christ—Don’t be so very much astonished to receive this letter from so far away. We here in Germany were so long time cut off from all, that we are so happy now for the possibility to correspond again with other countries.

We receive papers from America and feel so happy to experience the bond of love and the unity of His spirit that combines our Lord’s people all over the world. It’s so refreshing for us to receive “Manna,” the food for the spirit; you really can’t imagine what fun it was for us when the first paper came . . . We have been missing such “meat in due season” all that long bad time; we are really made happy.

I am only very young in the truth; I consecrated last year, and feel happy since as I did never before, and this happiness and satisfaction increases the more I understand the glorious plan of our great Father since I began to understand that He is love . . . It would do me so much good to hear from you; you would make me especially glad as there are no friends near me, dealing with me in the same hope and longing for that unity of the spirit and love we all are longing for as children of our great Father and brethren of our Elder Brother, Jesus Christ, whom we all love and whom we try to follow through this “time of trouble.”

Do you have own papers over there? . . . Have you anything good to read for us; we are in want of good papers as we can’t get any here interesting us. Night is becoming darker all over the world; time will not be far when all true saints who stayed true till the end shall be with our Lord and Master. O happiness, it is so wonderful what will await all who prove true unto death that _ sometimes I can’t grasp all, and yet we are told “the half was never told.”

I beg you all, brethren of Melbourne, to pray for me that our Lord might strengthen me, that I might grow in love and all what’s necessary to reach our high goal, that also I might be able to stand in those darker days we feel to be near. Do me the love to answer, I am eagerly looking forward to your letter. Are there many of us? Have you great classes? I would like to ask you so much and there would be so much to tell you about that bad war time and many other things.

I love you all who follow our Lord bearing their crosses and longing to come home into that house our Father is now preparing for all who earnestly follow our Master. My hearty greetings with warmest Christian love; Your young sister in the truth.

Dear Frank and Ernest, or whom it may concern—I just wish to thank you good people for posting me some literature. I phoned asking for a certain booklet, but you not only sent it but quite a few “Peoples Papers” for which I thank you and enjoyed very much. Enclosed is P.N. for 5/- and I would be glad if you could send me one monthly. The last you sent was this month’s (May’s). Thanking you in anticipation and may God bless your good work. I am, Yours faithfully.

Dear Sirs—I was very interested in your message given over the air last Sunday, and as there is still doubt in my mind concerning the state of the dead, due to many conflicting beliefs, would like to read the booklet “Hope Beyond the Grave.”

When possible I always listen with interest to these discussions on the radio, as it is my earnest desire to know more and more of the truth revealed in God’s Word. Thanking you in the Name of the Lord. Yours in Christ.

Dear Frank and Ernest, Dear Friends—We listen with very great pleasure to your interesting discussions on the Bible. We would like the booklet on the second coming of the Master; also a copy of today’s Dialogue. Thanking you; God bless you both.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I would like to have a copy of your talk given last Sunday morning on “Christ’s Second Presence.” I enjoy very much your discussions on the Bible; they are very helpful; God bless you in your good work.

Dear Brother—Warm Christian Greetings. Your letter came duly to hand also May “P.P.” and the accounts of the Memorial observances from various centres are very nice and helpful; truly the oneness of the holy spirit is manifested in the accounts.

I am enclosing a 10/- note to pay for the “P.P.” to be sent to the two enclosed addresses. These friends are anxious to become subscribers, having lately taken great interest in the precious truth; in fact we have started a little class at one of the homes. They are very earnest and anxious to know more of the deep things of God’s loving plan for the blessing of all mankind, and we have given them several Chart Talks on the Divine Plan. In fact at one of the meetings there were 14 present, the majority being C. of E. members who do not seem satisfied with the food they are getting and are taking note of the trend of world events.

As regards the proposed booklet on the “Manner of Christ’s Return” I will be pleased to have several copies; the 21- over cost of “PPs” keep towards same when ready. In conclusion may God’s blessing rest upon you all. Your Brother in Christ.

Dear Christian Friend—I have very much pleasure in enclosing you my overdue sub. for this year’s “P.P.” and a like amount for my next year’s subscription. The messages contained in the “P.P.” are truly very helpful, especially to such as myself in isolation. I must say some of the recent articles are very helpful, notably “The Manner of Christ’s Return.” If you have any fresh Frank and Ernest leaflets from time to time to spare I will be very pleased to read them and pass them on as occasion offers. These too to my mind are becoming particularly instructive. With kindest Christian regards; Your sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I am greatly interested in your discussions over 2KY on Sunday mornings and would be pleased to receive a copy of them from the “Coming of Christ” to the discussion given to-day on the Lord’s reign on earth with His people. Thanking you; I remain, Yours faithfully.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Christian Friends—My subscription is nearly due for “Peoples Paper.” I am enclosing a postal note for 5/- which is small enough. The last “P.P.” and Dialogues arrived a few days ago; thank you very much for sending them. I always look forward to their arrival as they are a means of comfort and enlightenment to me. Yours sincerely.

Queensland.

Dear Sir—Some months ago an old friend lent me some books and some old “Peoples Papers” and as I have a Bible I have been reading it quite a bit in connection with the books lent me, and I have become very interested in your church since that time.

I am enclosing postal note for 10/- which I hope will be sufficient for books—“Divine Plan of the Ages,” “Chosen People,” “Tabernacle Shadows,” and 2 “Daily Heavenly Manna.” If you have any leaflets that I could have to read I should be very much obliged as I rarely go to any church and do not even hear any wireless services. Trusting to receive parcel soon. I am, faithfully.

Tasmania.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sirs—I received your letter and papers a week or two ago and prior to that the Dialogues and booklets for which I wish to thank you; they were very helpful and instructive. Truly God’s plan of salvation for us, who least deserve it, is marvellous and wonderful.

I would be pleased if you could post to me the Frank and Ernest Dialogues from month to month and any booklets relative to these; if there is any cost I shall be pleased to forward it if you will let me know. Trusting to receive same shortly. I am, Yours in His glad service.

Lord, To Whom Shall We Go.

(Convention Address. John 6:64-68.)

MANY of you will be familiar with the circumstances leading up to these verses. Many of the disciples had been attaching themselves to the Lord for various reasons, and were seeking 'selfish gain from Him. Some of them were following just for the loaves and fishes. The Lord could read the hearts of all, and could see this. Some of the disciples were not sincere, but followed Him from wrong motives and a desire to get gain therefrom. Jesus knew that this was a very easy way to be filled, without any labour on their part.' Jesus knew that this was not the time when all men should be gathered unto Him. We know from our studies of the Scriptures that that work is to be accomplished in the near future, and that the present time is really for the selection of His joint-heirs. Jesus reminded them on another occasion that all men would in due time be gathered unto Him when He said, "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto myself." The time when He would die a sacrificial death would come. Not only that, but it was necessary for God to exalt Him to power and glory, in order to accomplish this great victory over sin and death. -

So many were attaching themselves to the Lord and this truth movement with wrong motives, yet the Lord knew that this was the time for the selection first of all of His Apostles, which He mentions here as "the twelve," and then, throughout the Gospel Age, His various representatives would be chosen that this work should be accomplished.

But now in John 6 the Lord utters some hard, mysterious sayings, for a definite purpose. Sometimes we forget that. Deliberately, it seems, He spoke in such language and with such force as to shake off some of His disciples. Hence we read such a statement as v. 53, where he says, "Truly, except ye eat the flesh of the son of Man and drink his blood, ye have no life in you.- Drinking blood was strictly forbidden, hence Jesus was emphatically urging upon His followers to drink of His blood, and that was altogether too much. They could not reconcile it with the Old Testament teachings. To them it was a hard saying; to them these words were quite sufficient to reject Him and His message. "Many of his disciples walked no more with him."

It seems that there is a similar condition now, at the end of this age. Wonderfully harmonious truths have been revealed in these latter days, and embraced for a time, and then certain words have been- sufficient to stumble some, and to them they are sufficient reasons to reject the message of present truth, and they walk no more with us. But Jesus in this present chapter reminds His disciples that the words He was speaking to them were not to be taken literally. That is often the fault with a good many people. They take things too literally. They cannot reconcile various portions of the Scriptures. It is stated in v. 22, "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." So they are not to be taken in a literal sense. Then He turns to the twelve and says, Will ye also go away? And we have the answer of the Apostle Peter, full of hope and confidence. "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life."

Now this was a time of crisis when decisions had to be made. . It comes to the disciples, perhaps more than once. It was the time of separation amongst the Lord's disciples. The record is, Many walked no more with Him. So some of these hard sayings became stumbling stones. Why? - What is the reason? One concludes, and probably it was the same all down through the age, that imperfect human understanding stumbles them. They cannot understand and appreciate from a human standpoint the things that are spoken. So many did not receive His message. Unpopular, unexpected truths, hard sayings, became stumbling blocks, and not understood.

These unpopular truths often rebound. Wrong religious views have contributed to this. The early disciples had very limited views of the Old Testament Scriptures, as we are shown. So today, limited religious views hinder many people from grasping these dispensational truths, unpopular truths, hard sayings, as it appears to them.

.But what joy, what enlightenment, is missed by not waiting! Some of these unpopular truths and hard sayings became a little clearer further on. Perhaps some of us have experienced this Ourselves. Truth for our day, the Lord's presence, the second advent, were hard or perplexing when the message of truth first came to us. But how glad we are now that we did not throw it out there and then! Actually, we believe that some of these hard sayings and unpopular truths and difficult doctrines become stepping stones to a more accurate knowledge of Divine things and Divine methods. No doubt the Apostle Peter found the sayings of our Lord very hard and difficult, especially regarding eating His flesh and drinking His blood. But afterwards he fully understood when he was enlightened by the holy spirit. And even after he had received that enlightenment he found some of the Apostle Paul's teachings hard to be understood. But he did not say, They must be wrong because I cannot understand them. It so often happens. Some people cannot understand some things, and they think nobody else can.

So it seems, brethren, that when we are confronted with a hard saying, a difficult doctrine, an unpopular truth, it pays to wait. The time will come when we may see things in a different light. We know that people can see them and rejoice in them. There must be something in them. It is good for us to remember Mary's experience. At our Lord's birth wonderful things were announced, and the record is that all wondered at those things which were spoken by the shepherds. But Mary kept these things and pondered them in her Heart. She wanted to see what was the meaning of them.

Take an Old Testament character, Daniel. He had received visions and dreams. He was much perplexed as to their meaning and the time of their fulfilment, and says, "As for me Daniel, my cogitations much troubled me, and my countenance changed in me: but I kept the matter in my heart." It is a good place to keep such things.

In view of this, if we have thought upon a perplexing subject many times without much enlightenment, it is best to rest it for a time, for a few weeks or a few months. Sometimes when we try to trace out a subject not too familiar, the more we think about it the more liable it is to confuse our minds, and in our endeavours perhaps we force a meaning on it and become more confused. That confusion goes on and confuses someone else. It is good to rest the matter for a while and then go back to it, and in the meantime we often find that various studies have a bearing upon what we were perplexed about. When we go back to it the mind is fresher, and we see it in a different light. Then we can compare Scripture with Scripture. As the Apostle Paul says, the things he spoke were not spoken by human wisdom, but were taught by the power of the spirit, comparing spiritual things with spiritual. So Jesus Himself unfolded spiritual things to spiritual persons.

In the Scriptures there is always more to follow. Yes, there is. But many would-be disciples at that first advent could not have these things revealed to them. Why? They took themselves out of the circle of enlightenment. That is the reason. "He that followeth after me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life," Jesus says. There is no one else to follow. As Peter says, "Lord, thou hast the words of eternal life." There is no other place to go.

Now at the second advent, there may be similar conditions to those of the first advent. Those who followed Him were all sincere. At the first advent all men were in expectation, but very few recognised Him as their Messiah and Lord. Multitudes followed Him and marvelled, but there were few who actually pondered these things in their hearts. There is need for quietness. "Come ye yourselves apart." Those who did were richly blessed. His words, though sometimes hard to be understood, nevertheless established them; and those words which they did recognise as truth, they recognised as absolute truth. As Peter says, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

Strong conviction is an anchor to the soul. This anchor stops the drift. While multitudes fell away and drifted on the popular current of fear and uncertainty, those with the anchor may be fast.

The question back there was asked; Is this indeed the Christ? Have any of the Scribes or Pharisees believed on Him? The same question might be asked today. Some ask, Where is the sign of presence? The question is put to all, "Who shall stand when he appeareth? For he is like a refiner's fire, and he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver." Another prophet said, "A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand."

Great truths, unpopular truths, will do the separating. They will do the refining, just as they did at the first advent. Many wonderful truths in these latter days have been brought to our attention. Some of these are regarded as hard sayings. Sometimes it is asked, Who can believe such teachings? But the Lord says, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see, and your ears, for they hear." The promise to those watching is that He would come forth and prepare a feast for them, and He has done so. There is a wonderful satisfaction and joy brought to us. Many can testify that it has satisfied their longings as nothing else can do. It has answered their questions. Separated them from worldly claims, hopes and conditions. They recognise it as the truth. These are the words of eternal life. This is the plan of God.

Yes, many attach themselves to the movement. But many of these do not receive the spirit of -the truth, just as they did not at the first advent. Many of them went back. To them, these harmonious truths became hard- sayings. Today, few remain, but the few who do remain still represent the truth. They have passed through the scourge of war and destruction and trial and anxiety. The Lord still has His representatives in these dark times. These testify to the sustaining grace of the Lord.

What was it that made these stand and triumph in their faith? They knew, like Peter did, that they had something; that these were the words of eternal life. The truth had satisfied them, had instructed them. It had forewarned them not to expect anything but trials and distress. It developed them. It gave them spiritual armour to protect them. "He that dwelleth in the secret _ place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty." "I will say of the Lord, He is my rock and my fortress; of whom shall I be afraid?" This, then, is their protection. There is no other protection from the stormy blast. It gives comfort in sorrow, peace of mind in distress and difficulty. It made these acceptable in Christ, gave them a superior wisdom to that of the world, and enabled them to make right decisions. It gave them an altogether different outlook on life. It enabled them to place correct values on all things. They voluntarily gave up all to become New Creatures, receiving a new life. It gave them a full assurance of faith. You have experienced these things, haven't you? These people knew that the things they had, embraced and set their hearts and lives upon were' absolutely true, because they had been forewarned of difficulties and dangers ahead, and how to meet them.

The Gospel Age has been an age-long ministry, with the permission, of suffering and evil. In due time there will be an opportunity to use present experiences to.. great advantage, during the times of restitution. In Ezekiel 16, the prophet is addressing Israel, speaking as a representative of the Lord, and he reminds them of their wilfulness, their sin, and their punishment and distress, and how they were more wicked than others of the surrounding nations at that time; nevertheless, speaking for the Lord, he said "I will establish unto them an everlasting covenant. They shall remember and be ashamed." That is, they shall remember their former experiences, and be ashamed. They will actually shut their mouths for shame, for humility, and the Lord will bless them.

That is probably true of all mankind. David, speaking for us and for all the race, says "Before I was afflicted I went astray, but now I have kept Thy Word. It is good for me to have been afflicted, for now I kept Thy statutes." So, after all, the afflictions we pass through are doing a good work, putting us, as it were, through the washing machine. Some say, It is not much good anyway, there is nothing to follow. We say then, what is the use of these experiences we are having? If everything ended in the grave it would not be much use, would it? But there is some use in it; we know there is.

What use is it for parents to raise a brilliant son or daughter, ready to take up duties in life, with -money and care and love expended on them, and just as their hopes are to be fulfilled, death intervenes. All that seems to be wasted.

But when this evil is finished, the other half is coming. God knows how to bring all to perfection. There is a wisdom in allowing all to pass through this woeful experience, and it will not be all lost in the grave. "Sighing and sorrow shall flee away."

The truth turned our perplexity into joy when we recognised that not in this age is the world to be turned to the Lord, but in the age to come. We were astonished to find that at the present time there is an extraordinary offer made to some, to be joint-heirs with Christ in the kingdom, to be joint-associates in that kingdom which is to bring about this uplift of mankind. They also will have the everlasting joy and companionship and honour which belong to the heir of Jehovah. They have this already by faith, and in no uncertain way did the truth declare, "All things are yours, for ye are Christ's, and Christ -is God's."

Yes, still more things are brought out of the storehouse. There is no rationing here. The wonderful philosophy of the ransom is also seen in a new light. The benefits of the ransom are guaranteed to all mankind. Paul says, in Romans,

"As sin has abounded unto many, so grace shall reign unto righteousness through eternal life." So notwithstanding the far-reaching effects of one, the far-reaching effects of the other shall undo all the past.

It is significant, too, that this merit of the ransom is first applied to the Church, and later passes on to the world. All men shall come to a knowledge of the truth because of that ransom. Present truth revealed to the consecrated tells us of the Covenants. Under the Abrahamic Covenant, Messiah is being developed, both Head and Body. The Law Covenant enabled the sincere amongst the Israelites to see and witness their own inability to keep the law because of their inherited sin. The New Covenant, based on better terms, with a better mediator, better sacrifices, will be made with natural Israel. It does not apply to this age, but in the age to come it is to be the instrument to restore and uplift the sin-cursed race to perfection and harmony with its Creator.

Present Truth also revealed to us the meaning of Israel's Tabernacle in the wilderness, and its sacrifices. These point to still greater sacrifices, more extensive work to be done through the Gospel Age and the Millennial Age. Present truth reveals to us, too, that we have come to the end of the age—that the present time is for the dissolution of the present era; which has existed for centuries. The time- has come when these arrangements must be broken down. Present truth reveals what we must expect. It reveals the subtle temptations, the snares and trials and general evil which would prevail and increase in momentum. The nations are angry. There is a rushing to and fro, and knowledge has increased. All this and much more is due, not to Christ's coming soon, which is the popular expectation, but to the fact of Christ's presence already. This is a very unpopular truth, and a hard saying to some.

Present truth announced, and this makes it different from any Other teaching, that the word “parousia” does not mean “coming,” but something “present.” The Lord said, “As it was in the days of Noah,”⁷—not while Noah was coming, but while Noah was there,—“so in like manner shall it be in the days of the Son of Man;” not when He is coming, but when He is present. This not only revealed the manner of the Lord’s return, but also the purpose of it—not to destroy all mankind, which is the popular notion, but rather to uplift mankind and bless and rule in righteousness. Assisting in this work will be His saints, those who’ are receiving their training now and are faithful unto death. “I will give them power over the nations.”

Who would give up such a wonderful prospect? Approaching, as we have done, to the very doors of these things,

“To whom shall we go?” Can anyone show us anything better? Some people think they can see something better. But when you come to the end of their book, so to speak, it is as if the last chapter is missing, and you ask, I wonder how it ended. But when we come to the last chapter, we find the mischief has been rectified. The characters live happily ever after. There is a wonderful romance in the Scriptures; beginning with the first pair, we trace their experiences right through and find, in the end, the whole family lives happily ever after.

Some people tell us that there is a better time coming, and others tell us that we must turn to God. After all, where did we -depart from God? Two people departed from God in the first instance. Others again say, Yes, Christ’s kingdom is to be established and a better time is coming, but when we come to analyse their teachings we find *hey leave nearly everyone out in the cold.. That’s no good. So we see there is only this, the truth, that has enabled us to receive and give comfort. We do not know of anything better. The Scriptures reveal to us the true God. The more we can appreciate the length and breadth-and height and depth of the love of God manifested in the sacrifice of His Son, we realize we cannot use any other words than those used by Peter—”Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou halt the words .of eternal life.”

Sacrifice of the Christ.

“Who needeth not daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifice, first for his own sins, and then for the people’s; for- this He did once, when He offered up Himself.”—Heb. 7:27.

IN studying the Book of Hebrews it is well to keep in memory that the Apostle’s thought was not to give a detailed explanation of the types of the law, but merely to prove to the Jews that they should look beyond the high priests, and the under-priests of the Aaronic order, for a greater High Priest of our Profession (order) , and a superior underpriesthood, “a royal priesthood.” In the text above quoted St. Paul is drawing attention to the fact that a repetition daily and yearly of the sacrifices of the law on a higher plane is not to -be expected, but rather that the One Priest (Christ, head and body), in the one antitypical Atonement Day, accomplishes the entire work which will usher in full forgiveness and reconciliation to all the people. This in type was done in the one Atonement Day, and the anti-type of that Atonement Day is not yet ended. It will close with the end of this Gospel Age. It will close when the last member of the body of Christ shall have suffered with the Lord, “Filling up that -which is behind of the afflictions of Christ.”-- -Col. 1:24.

The first offering of the Day of Atonement was the bullock, which typified the man, Jesus. It was because of this offering, and by -the act of consecration, that our Lord became the Anointed One—“The High Priest of our profession.” As the spirit begotten High Priest, our Lord for three and a half years offered up Himself, His manhood, in sacrifice. He finished that offering, typified by the bullock, at His death. Then, as shown in the type, He took the blood of the bullock and proceeded into the Most Holy, “there to appear in the presence of God for us”—the “household of faith.”

In the type the typical high priest, after offering the first sacrifice, and after applying its blood on behalf of himself and his house (the under-priests and the tribe of Levi) , laid his hands on the Lord’s goat and slew it, and did with it as with the bullock, except that its blood when taken into the Most Holy was differently applied — on behalf of the other eleven tribes, who represented all nations, peoples, kindreds and tongues of humanity.

These two offerings and their distinctly separate sprinklings of blood were both parts. of the one Atonement Day service—“this he did once.” Two deaths are distinctly shown, and two blood sprinklings, and on behalf of two different classes, but they were parts of the one sin atonement. Just so our Lord, during His earthly ministry, was dying daily, yet it was one sacrifice; so also when we fill up a share of His sufferings, dying daily, it is part of His sufferings and sacrifice, which He is still accomplishing in us once for all—this He does once, and will never repeat. All sacrificing of this sort will end with this -age—He will accept no further members of the body of Christ, no additional members to “the royal priesthood.”

As we have repeatedly shown, the first Atonement Day sacrifice was our Lord’s sacrifice of His own flesh, the man Jesus, and the second sacrifice was that of His members—those justified by His blood, and consecrated to His service even unto death. These accepted by the Lord are sacrificed by Him as parts or members of Himself; and their blood (death) is counted in a part of the blood of Christ —“dead with him.” This is the “mystery” hidden from previous ages and generations. The “fellowship of this mystery” was granted to the Jews and Gentiles of the “little flock” of the called and chosen and faithful.

Our Lord as the High Priest laid His hand upon the “Lord’s goat” at Pentecost. His power (hand) there came upon His followers, accepting their consecration, and bringing to them the trying experiences as His members which faithfully endured will, according to the Divine plan, bring them a share with Him in His Divine Nature and Kingdom. It is not the suffering of the Church that counts, but the sufferings of Christ. It is because we are counted in as members of Christ, “members in particular of the body of Christ,” that we are permitted to be His members on the spirit plane, and to share the glories and honours of our Head. “If we suffer with Him, we shall reign with Him. If we be dead with Him we shall live with Him.”

Thus the sufferings of Christ, while in one sense of the word ended at Calvary, in another sense of the word continue in His members; this is a “mystery” to many. The sufferings of Christ are still in process, and His faithful ones are still filling them up. St. Peter tells us that the prophets of old spake of the sufferings of Christ, and of the glories that should follow. The sufferings of Christ Jesus were followed by His personal glorification, demonstration of which was given at Pentecost; but the glory mentioned in this text has not yet been accomplished. It awaits the completion of the sufferings of Christ —the suffering of the members. “For if one member suffer, all the members suffer with it.” (1 Cor. 12:26). “When He shall appear in glory, we shall appear with Him.” We shall be glorified together if we suffer with Him as His members.

With the Jews there was a Day of Atonement every year, with Sits sacrifices repeated year by year continually. But with Christ there is but one anti-typical Atonement Day, and when its “better sacrifices” shall have been accomplished—when the great antitypical High Priest shall have finished the work of offering up Himself, including His members, thereafter there will be no more sufferings of Christ for anybody to fill up. The glory of Christ’s Kingdom will then be ushered in. The sins of the whole world will be blotted out so far as God is concerned, and the High Priest of our profession will be 3 Priest upon His throne (Head and members) after the order of Melchisedec.

Should Christians Observe the Jewish Sabbath.

This article had appeared in these columns some years ago, but the Sabbath question has exercised the minds of some of our friends of late and these thoughts are presented again.

WE are aware, of course, that in taking up this question we shall be dealing with a matter that some have adopted as an essential to salvation. We have respect for those who think they are bound to keep the Israelitish sabbath and conscientiously endeavour to do so. However, the fact that their conscience leads them to do this, is no proof that such is the Divine will for the followers of Christ during this Gospel age.

Conscience of course should be obeyed, but conscience is not a sure guide as to what is God's will. Conscience has led many people to do strange things, and very wicked things. No doubt, some of the priests of Israel thought they were obeying the Law when they crucified the Lord Jesus as a blasphemer. Paul persecuted the church in all good conscience, and our Lord foretold that some would think they were doing God service in killing others. It is necessary that our consciences be regulated by the Word of God; that must be our guide.

The question then is, do we find anything in the teachings of Christ and the apostles to lead us to think that the church should keep the Jewish sabbath? Why call it the Jewish sabbath? Some would assert that the sabbath was in existence from the beginning of man's creation. However, the Bible does not mention any instruction to any from Adam to Moses to observe any sabbath.

The first mention of a seventh day observance would seem to be in regard to the institution of the Passover and the deliverance of Israel out of Egypt. Then comes the fourth commandment, given to the nation of Israel as a "shadow," a "type," reminding them of the days of creation, those long periods of time in which God prepared this earth for human habitation, and also pointing forward to the great anti-typical sabbath, when the Divine purpose respecting humanity and the earthly home shall be completed, and all will be at rest in perfect life, perfect environment, under the Divine rule of righteousness and peace. .,

Our Seventh Day Adventist friends would have us believe that the great Creator did all His wonderful creative work in seven days of twenty-four hours each. However, neither scientific research, nor reason, nor Scripture support this small view; facts of nature contradict it. God takes time to accomplish His designs and works along the lines of His own ordered nature. The church of Christ is a new creation and it has been over nineteen centuries in course of creation.

The seventh day of Israel was evidently fixed at: the time of the deliverance from Egypt, when Moses; was told that that month should be the beginning of months to them. The lamb was slain on the 14th of this first month, Nisan, and Israel went out of Egypt on the first day of the next week and had to keep the whole of that week holy, with a holy convocation on the first and seventh days. Then came the Law Covenant, the ten Commandments being part of it.

This Covenant was made with Israel only. (Deut.. 29:1.) "He hath not dealt so with any nation; and as for His judgments, they have not known them." (Psa. 147:20.) "You only have I known (recognised) of all the families of the earth." (Amos 3:2.) God had special reasons for dealing only with Israel during that age, in harmony with His promise to Abraham. The Law demonstrated Divine justice and would reveal the Messiah, as He only could keep it. That nation might have passed on into the favour of the Gospel, and the church, the heavenly seed of Abraham, would have been exclusively from Israel. They failed to enter into the rest of faith, into the real sabbath, because 'of unbelief, and so the Gospel came to the Gentiles "to take out a people for God's name."

Jesus had come to Israel with a new offer of salvation. They had failed under the Law Covenant; it was a "yoke on them that they were unable to bear," and He came saying, "Come unto Me all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest . . . For My yoke is easy, and My burden is light." (Matt. 11:28-30.) Yes, "the law came by Moses but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ," (John 1:17.) Jesus came and kept the Law and then died under the Law that He "might redeem them that were under the Law." He opened a new and living way — the narrow way, the way of faith. (Gal. 3:9-14.) "And if by grace, then it is no more of works: otherwise grace is no more grace." (Rom. 11:6.) So Christ redeemed those that believe of the Jewish people from under the Law, so that they could be married to another, even become the Bride of Christ. (See Rom. 7:1-6; Col. 2 :14.)

"Then said he, Lo, I come to do Thy will, O God. He taketh away the first (the type) that he may establish the second (the reality or antitype). By the which will we are sanctified, through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all." The Law and the prophets were until John (the Baptist), since then the kingdom of heaven is preached. There was the great change of dispensation and Jesus indicated this in Matt. 5:27-48, in which He quoted what saith the Law and contrasts it with what. He says.

It took the apostles quite a time to realise the great change and a vision was necessary to reveal to Peter that Gentiles were to be acceptable as members in Christ; he was instructed to go and use the second key of the Kingdom and to open the door to the Gentiles, Cornelius being the first Gentile convert. Then Paul was appointed of the Lord to be the apostle to the Gentiles. However, the apostles were still clinging to the Jewish religion and ceremonies, as Christ had said to the two disciples on the way to Emmaus, "O simpletons and slow of heart to believe." The question arose as to what it was necessary for Gentile converts to observe, some thinking that they must observe the Law as well as believe in Christ. So a council of apostles and leading brethren was called at Jerusalem. James was the presiding elder at Jerusalem and evidently was chairman. We have the account and the decision reached in Acts 15:5-11. We have Peter's expression and then Paul and Barnabas speak and James as chairman sums it up. See verses 19-29. This was the decision of the Council and there is not a word about keeping any of the Law's commandments—no mention even about keeping the fourth commandment. Certain men are reproved in verse 24 for having troubled the Gentile Christians with words subverting their souls and saying that they must be circumcised and keep the Law—"to whom we gave no such commandment."

If it was essential that Christians should observe the Jewish Sabbath then the apostles would certainly have said so, but their decision was otherwise, that Gentiles were not to have the yoke which they could not bear, put, upon them; they were not to be troubled in the matter either of circumcision or keeping the Law. That ought to be sufficient to settle the question. There is, however, much more in the New Testament to make the matter plain. In fact, there is no ground whatever to support the Seventh Day Adventists' teaching on this subject.

In Col. 2:16-17 the apostle says, "Let no man judge you in meat, or drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath, which are a shadow (type) of things to come; but the body (the reality) is of Christ." As verse 14 states, Christ has blotted out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to His cross. Our S.D.A. friends ask us to believe that it was the ceremonial part of the Law Covenant only that was done away. Then the apostles should have said so at the council at Jerusalem and Paul should have said so in Col. 2:14, but instead he goes on to particularly mention holy days and the sabbath.

In 2 Cor. 3:7 Paul definitely speaks of the difference of ministration under the Law and that under Christ and particularly mentions the Law written on tables of stone as being the ministration that passed away.

Rev. 22:14 has been quoted as referring to the ten commandments given to Israel, but that is not so. The "words of Jesus" can be referred to— as the commandments of Jesus, also the apostles' instruction are referred to as commandments, as noted in Acts 15,— "to whom we gave no such commandment." The Greek word for commandment may mean instruction, prediction or exhortation. (Crudens Concordance.)

The Apostle in Heb. 7:11, 12 in mentioning that Jesus as the great Melchisedec Priest was not of the Levitical priesthood, for under it the people received the Law, asks what further need was there that another priest should rise after the order of Melchisedec and not after the order of Aaron? And states "For the priesthood being changed there is made of necessity a change of the Law." Then read verses 17-19 . . . "For there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before, for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof. For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did; by the which we drew nigh unto God."

In Heb. 3 Paul again contrasts the arrangement under Moses with that under Christ. Moses was head over a house of servants, to whom it was necessary to give the Law—thou shalt and thou shalt not—for as Jesus said, a servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth, but I have called you friends. (See also Gal. 3:9-14, 18-29; Gal. 4:1-11, 21-31; Gal. 5:1-4.)

How did it come about that the early Christians chose the first day of the week (which of course is every seventh day) to be their day for fellowship, instead of continuing the Jewish day? The S.D.A. friends assert that Constantine changed the day by edict. Constantine no doubt made it nationally legal, but the early Christians had practiced it ever since our Lord rose from the dead and made Himself known to the disciples on the first day of the week. During those six weeks of His invisible presence it was usually the first day of the week that He appeared to them. That did not make the first day of the week a sabbath under the Law in the sense of the Jewish sabbath, but it seemed to be and was evidently taken to indicate the Lord's will that the first day should be their day for special fellowship— emphasising the great change of dispensation and the passing away of the Law Covenant with Israel. The Law of commandments had been nailed to the cross.

This was evidently so understood by the apostles and disciples as is shown by an epistle written by Ignatius who lived in the days of the 'Apostle John and was martyred about 107 A.D. He wrote (See Milner's History, page 58) we still live according to Judaism we confess that we have not received grace, for the divine prophets, lived according to the Gospel of Jesus Christ. For this they were persecuted, being inspired by His grace to assure the disobedient that there is one God who has manifested Himself by Jesus Christ His Son, who is the eternal Word. If then they have cast off their old principles let them no longer observe the Jewish Sabbath but live according to the resurrection of the Lord, in whose resurrection from the dead our resurrection also is assured." That was what Ignatius wrote about 200 years before Constantine made the day nationally legal by edict.

Our first parents in Eden had no instructions to keep any seventh day sabbath or rest, for it was an eternal sabbath, a continual rest there, and each evening they might "hear the voice of the Lord God walking in the cool of the day."

The Jewish sabbath was given as a type of the restored rest that is to be for the whole creation (that is groaning and travailing in pain until now, waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God) , in the Seventh 1000 year day when Christ and these sons of God, now being chosen during this Gospel age, will reign to bless and restore all the willing and obedient and bring them into that eternal rest of harmonious reconciliation with God, the fellowship, the peace and joy of Eden restored.

These sons of God who are at present being chosen ,have the privilege of entering this sabbathrest even now, ahead of the world. (See Heb. 4:1-9.) “We who have believed do enter into rest . . . and there remaineth therefore a rest (sabbath) for the people of God.”

Pilgrim Way Ended.

Word has been received of Brother T. H. Moore of Glenbrook, N. S. Wales, finishing his earthly pilgrimage last month after many years of devotion to the Lord and His truth. The report is as follows:

“The passing beyond of our dear Brother Moore came as a great shock to us in Glenbrook. He had not been well for a few weeks and retired to rest as usual on 8th June; next morning on being called for breakfast it was found that he had died in his sleep, and praise God we believe that he is now forever with the Lord. But, dear Brother, we do miss him; you see, he lived with us for six years.

“How inspiring it is for us to realise that he is one of those blessed ones who die in the Lord from henceforth, (Rev. 14:15), and that our temporary loss is his great gain.

“We laid his body to rest in Penrith Cemetery on 10th June, pointing out to the friends and mourners at the graveside the glorious hopes which had animated and inspired his life during the time since he consecrated his life to the Lord.”

Faith the Basis of Peace.

If we would know the foundation and security of this abiding peace which is able to survive the heaviest storms of life, we have only to look to the teaching and example of the Lord and the Apostles. What was it that held them so firmly and gave them such rest of mind while they suffered? It was their faith--their faith in the Love, Power and Wisdom of God. They believed that what God had promised, He was able also to perform, and that His righteousness and benevolent plan could know no failure. (Isa. 46:9-11; 14:27.) On the assurance of God they rested. In Him their faith was anchored; and it mattered not how fiercely the storms raged or how they were tossed by the tempests of life while their anchor still held fast to the Throne of God.

In the midst of the Christian warfare let our hearts be cheered and our minds be stayed, not only with such assurances that .all the Divine purposes shall be accomplished, but also with such promises of personal favour as these:

“Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear Him, for He knoweth our frame; He remembereth that we are dust.”

“Can a woman forget_ her sucking child? Yea,’ they may, yet will I not forget thee. Behold I have engraven thee upon the palms of My hands.”

“The Father Himself loveth you.”

“It is the Father’s good pleasure to give you the Kingdom.” .

“Such as are upright in their way are His delight.”

“Delight thyself also in the Lord, and He shall give thee the desire of thine heart”—the peace, of God, even in the midst of storm and tempest.

I’ll Do My Very Best.

I may perform no deed of great renown,
No glorious acts to millions manifest ;
Yet in my little labours up and down
I’ll do my best.

I may not paint a perfect masterpiece,
Nor carve a statue by the world confused
A miracle of art ; yet will not cease
To do my best.

My name is not upon the rolls of fame,
‘Tis on the page of common life impressed;
But I’ll keep marking, marking just the same,
And do my very best.

And if I see some fellow-traveller rise
Far, far above me, still, with quiet breast,
I’ll keep on climbing, climbing toward the skies,
And do my very best.

Mine may not be the beautiful and grans,

But I must try to be so careful, lest
It fail to be what’s put into my hand—
My very best.

Peace Desired War Continues!

Can Christianity Save the World ?

THIS subject should surely exercise the minds of all thinking people, not only those who have become Christians, because it is becoming increasingly evident to all that if Christianity cannot save the world, then the destruction of this world, as constituted today, must be considered inevitable.

It is not hard to understand why mankind as a whole really desire peace, to be at- rest, unhindered and undisturbed, because man was, created in the image of God, the very God of peace. Turning to the first book of the Bible, just following the account of the creation of man, we read—"And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul. And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed. And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil. And a river went out of Eden to water the garden." (Gen. 2:7- 10.) Taking that from a natural standpoint, we can realize what fruitfulness would be produced by the living waters flowing out under those perfect conditions. We also like to think of that river in a symbolic sense, representing the life-giving power of God that would have followed His perfect race everywhere they went had they remained obedient. What a blessing this river would have meant to mankind had they remained near it, and near to the Creator, the God of peace!

But in this connection, turning to Isaiah 48:17, 18, we note from the prophet what happened. "Thus saith the Lord, thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel: I am the Lord thy God, which teacheth thee to profit, which leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldest go. O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments! then had thy peace-been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea."

Just to think of that, dear friends. Peace would have been as a river, flowing out to fill the hearts of all mankind and keep them a perfect, loving creation of God, in that condition in which they were created. "O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments! Then had thy peace been as a river."

Let us compare this situation from Eccles. 7:29—"Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions." Man was created in the image of God and provided with life-giving food, and the power and spirit of the Lord would have kept perfect His human creation. But as the wise man has found, though created upright, man has sought out many inventions, right from the beginning of disobedience.

Turning to Isaiah 59 we read in verses 1, 2, 8-15 —"Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear: but your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear . . . The way of peace they know not; and there is no judgment in their goings; they have made them crooked paths; whosoever goeth therein shall not know peace. Therefore is judgment far from us, neither doth justice overtake us; we wait for light, but behold obscurity; for brightness, but we walk in darkness. We grope for the wall like the blind, and we grope as if we had no eyes: we stumble at noonday as in the night; we are in desolate places as dead men. We roar all like bears, and mourn sore like doves; we look for judgment, but there is none; for salvation, but it is far off from us. For our transgressions are multiplied before thee, and our sins testify against us; for our transgressions are with us; and as for our iniquities, we know them; in transgressing and lying against the Lord, and departing away from our God, speaking oppression and revolt, conceiving and uttering from the heart words of falsehood. And judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off; for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter. Yea, truth faileth; and he that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey; and the Lord saw it and it displeased him that there was no judgment.” Here we have a description of conditions at that time in the earth. Surely, then, that peace which would have been as a river was not flowing at that time. Man has been the great loser, surely, down the centuries from that time, even though in his heart he has desired peace. “O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments! Then had thy peace been as a river.”

From the prophet Ezekiel we note from the 13th chapter, verses 1-3, 8-10 and 15 and 16—”And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel that prophesy, and say thou unto them that prophesy out of their own hearts, Hear ye the word of the Lord; thus saith the Lord God; Woe unto the foolish prophets, that follow their own spirit, and have seen nothing! . . . Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because ye have spoken vanity, and seen lies, therefore, behold, I am against you, saith the Lord God. And mine hand shall be upon the prophets; they shall not be in the assembly of my people, neither shall they be written in the writing of the house of Israel, neither shall they enter into the land of Israel; and ye shall know that I am the Lord God. Because, even because they have seduced my people, saying, Peace; and there was no peace; and one built up a wall, and, lo, others daubed it with untempered mortar . . . so will I break down the wall that ye have daubed with untempered mortar, and bring it down to the ground, so that the foundation thereof shall be discovered, and it shall fall, and ye shall be consumed in the midst thereof, and ye shall know that I am the Lord. Thus will I accomplish my wrath upon the wall, and upon them that have daubed it with untempered mortar, and will say unto you, The wall is no more, neither they that daubed it; to wit, the prophets of Israel which prophesy concerning Jerusalem, and which see visions of peace for her, and there is no peace, saith the Lord God.”

We know from prophecies of this kind the continuing desire for peace. Here we have the false prophets proclaiming peace in Jerusalem, and there was no peace. The whole time the desire was to imply that peace was just ahead. But it was the false prophets who were proclaiming this message. There was no peace in Israel, because they had hearkened not to the commandments of the Lord. Had they done so, their peace would have been as a river of life.

Then when the Prince of Peace came to Jerusalem, and the people were so incapable of grasping the favours and blessings He was ready to bestow, we read in Luke 19:41, 42 the message which He had for the people He came to save. This was the Lord, who had been serving Israel for 3½ years from Jordan, and now he comes to view the position, and what does He find? “And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it, saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! But now are they hid from thine eyes.” If they had only known what the prospect was before them, that this was the real Saviour with them—if they had only known, what peace they could have had from this very One who was the Prince of Peace! We have a similar expression according to Matthew —”O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!” What a tragedy it was, then, for Israel. “O that thou hadst hearkened unto my commandments! Then had thy peace been as a river.” But He said to them, “Your house is left unto you desolate.”

But now, what of the time since our Lord’s first advent? What have the greatest desires and workings for peace produced? Is there any improvement over the past ages? We know the history of the Gospel Age to some extent, and we remember that the Lord, in the early verses of Matthew 24, gives us a detailed account of what would happen, and amongst those words He said, “Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; there shall be wars and rumours of wars.” This, we all realize, has been greatly the history of the Gospel Age, and we are intimately acquainted with world happenings over the past two world wars.

We must draw attention to the notable efforts of peace that have been carried forth in our own times. We call to mind, during the 1914-1918 war, the notable efforts of men such as Woodrow Wilson of America, who sent his mission to Europe to try and still the conflict at that time. Such men, of course, will have their reward, whatever the Lord sees good for them; their object surely was to try and still the raging war conditions at that time. Then there was the League of Nations. Think of that great organization. It was truly great from the human standpoint, yet it failed to preserve the peace of humanity. After the efforts of twenty years, it passed away. There is the great Peace Palace as a monument to man’s effort—notable indeed, but failure occurs. Peace desired—war continues.

In Isaiah 33:7, 8 we have a statement which may apply in respect of such happenings as we saw in that great League of Nations—”Behold, their valient ones shall cry without; the ambassadors of peace shall weep bitterly. The highways lit waste, the wayfaring man ceaseth; he hath broken the covenant, he hath despised the cities, he regardeth no man.” Yes, that actually took place, and the ambassadors of peace did weep bitterly. When the League of Nations was just finishing its course, it is said that the leaders of that organization literally wept when they had to leave the Peace Palace and depart, with their good designs unfulfilled.

Then we think of the United Nations organization of our own day. Many notable efforts, no doubt, were put into that organization, but we can see where it is leading. Peace is desired, and the proclamation comes from the prophets, “Peace, Peace,” when there is no peace. Before the recent conflict, a leading statesman made the proclamation —”We have saved peace for our times.” War was held back from nine to twelve months, but the inevitable did occur.

We know what happened when peace was proclaimed—first peace in Europe, and there were great celebrations. Then peace in the Pacific, and there were further celebrations. They were well meant. It was a measure of relief from the tension the desire for peace shown over and over again. Now we see the great United Nations Organization cannot accomplish that which it would. It is pathetic as we review these scenes. It almost breaks the hearts of men who are honest and sincere, because they know not the plan of God. They are seeking to do something with good intention in their own strength, and as they feel, for the good of humanity.

In this connection a newspaper report published about seven months ago is very significant as we review the prophets of the Bible, and what we have been witnessing over the past 25-30 years. It is a report from London:

“A group of eminent people, including Peers and members of the House of Commons, issued a statement stressing the seriousness of the atomic war threat following failure of the Big Four conference.

“The statement points out how Communism, Fascism and Nazism resemble each other and views with concern the growing strength of communism.

“All attempts to control atomic energy have been frustrated by the uncompromising attitude of the Soviet Union. Unless strict international control of atomic energy is established, in the very near future we face a desperate world situation.

“If the peoples of America and Britain have to choose between being engulfed by Communism and a new war, we believe they would choose a war. We think that the Soviet should be told that a policy of wishing to have the fruits of war without a war itself will eventually land them in a war they do not desire,” the statement added.

The statement suggested a final attempt be made on the highest level for Russian participation in the atomic control scheme; that Mr. Attlee and President Truman tell M. Stalin that it is in the interests of the Soviet to avert an atomic war. If this appeal fails, the statement continues, freedom-loving Powers with Britain and America should act together to develop a preponderance of defensive atomic strength that no Power dare challenge.

That statement, of course, does not come from the person in the street, but from those in high places, and it gives us an indication of the terrible conditions existing in the world, and yet, peace is desired.

Now the important question is this—Can Christianity save the world?

Let us go back again to the time of the Founder of Christianity, of whom it is said, “Never man spoke as this man.” Let us refer to an incident recorded in Mark 4:36-41. This is very interesting, because it really shows something of this One who walked the earth, and of whom men took notice.—”And when they had sent away the multitude, they took him even as he was in the ship. And there were also with him other little ships. And there arose a great storm of wind, and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full. And he was in the hinder part of the ship, asleep on a pillow; and they awake him, and say unto him, Master, carest thou not that we perish? And he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm. And he said unto them, Why are ye so fearful? How is it that ye have no faith? And they feared exceedingly, and said to one another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?”

There is another record of much interest found in John 11:33-37. This is an incident at the death of Lazarus.—”When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping which came with her, he groaned in the spirit, and was troubled, and said, Where have ye laid him? And they said unto him, Lord, come and see. Jesus wept. Then said the Jews, Behold how he loved him! And some of them said, Could not this man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have caused that even this man should not have died?”

Those two incidents show the power of Christ, the perfect man on earth. “What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?” “Could not this man also have caused that even this man should not have died?” And we ask ourselves, Could not this Man also have given peace to the world at that time? If He had the power to command the waves to be still, could not He also have commanded mankind to be still, and to be at peace?

Now there is a surprising statement, perhaps, for some, found in Matt. 10:34-36. These are the words of our Lord, and He says, “Think not that I am come to send peace on earth; I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. And a man’s foes shall be they of his own household.” Comparing this with other passages of the Lord’s Word, we must come to the conclusion that Jesus did not come to still the raging conditions on the earth. Remember on another occasion He said, “My kingdom is not of this world,” or this age. “If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight.” No, His kingdom was not of this dispensation, the Gospel Age—from our Lord’s birth to the second advent—showing that He was not presenting Himself to Israel as the Prince of Peace. No doubt He had the power. What could He have done, had He set Himself up as the ruler of Israel! What blessings He could have conveyed to Israel, to mankind, to the whole world! To think He could have healed their diseases, raised their dead, cured all the sicknesses in the countryside. And would that have meant peace? Supposing, for instance, we had conditions existing here that really meant a measure of peace and happiness—if people were not sick, if, we had full and plenty everywhere; and yet people were growing old, and passing away naturally, as we call it. Would that really mean peace? Would it be a peaceful condition if we were losing our loved ones under any conditions, even though there were no wars or strife? These conditions would have obtained in Israel if Jesus had set Himself up as a King and distributed His blessings abroad at that time. If He could still the waves, He could have hushed mankind, but they would have been a dying race. “Dying thou shalt die” was the penalty, and it would have affected them even though the Lord was there.

We see, then, from the Scriptures, dear friends, that is why Jesus did not try to ‘set up peaceful conditions for mankind at that ‘time. He knew there could be no real peace in the earth until the time when no one would lose his life. That is the only condition of real peace and happiness. So we find that Jesus came, the Just for the unjust, to give Himself a ransom for all. He came to pay the penalty, that in God’s plan there may be a time when real peace can be established. Not a makeshift peace that would endure for a while and then fade away. So, while He could have done many great things, He knew that in God’s plan He was going to do the greatest thing, and the only thing that could really bring peace to mankind.

But someone says, It is nineteen hundred years since Christ died, and what conditions have we had since that time? Matthew 24 tells us there would be wars and rumours of wars, and that is exactly what we have had. Cannot Christianity save the world today, then? What has Christianity been doing, for this nineteen hundred years?

There is a prophecy in Malachi 4:5, 6 that will assist here. This prophecy speaks of the antitype of Elijah. We know Elijah was a faithful prophet of the Lord, and he was caught up in a chariot of fire. He was a type, fulfilled in the Lord and the Lord’s people. This prophecy is undoubtedly referring to a time when this antitype of Elijah would come to the earth and accomplish a measure of work, but if the real feature of the work as mentioned should not be accomplished, then the Lord would smite the earth with a curse. “Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord; and he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse.”

We take it, then, the thought is that the preaching of the Elijah class goes on in all the earth, and it has a measure of effect upon this and that and the other one. But does it turn all to a childlike condition? Does it unite people together? Does it soften their hearts and bring them to a teachable condition? If not, the last part of the verse must be fulfilled—”lest I come and smite the earth with a curse.” God’s work has been accomplished, but not the uniting and turning of all people to a childlike condition, that they may be united as one great family, and be softened in heart and be ready to hear the Lord’s Word. This has not been so, and the Lord, knowing the end from the beginning, prophesied through Malachi of this matter, and the words “lest I come and smite the earth with a curse” must go into effect.

Only a few were saved in our Lord’s day. The Lord, the greatest one of all, did not turn the hearts of Israel to a childlike condition. He did not turn them to the heart condition of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. What He did was to find a little band who would be faithful to Him. In Luke 19 the Lord prophesied in respect of Israel as a whole.—”The days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench round about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, and shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation.” By these words, we see they were not equal to the situation, they were not ready for the great Prince of Peace. Therefore, they must be smitten with a curse, and that took place at the end of the Jewish age. In A.D. 70 Jerusalem was laid low. Then began the Christian age, following right down to our own day, and we find the same conditions obtaining. The effect of the preaching of the Elijah class has been that only the few have been softened and brought to a teachable condition, and the desire to be the Lord’s people indeed. “Lest I come and smite the earth with a curse” must have its fulfilment at the end of this Gospel Age also.

Of much interest in this connection is some verses in Jeremiah 30:4-7. We find that this refers to much that is occurring now in the Holy Land. As we have them there, we will find that those signs will indicate what is to be throughout the whole world eventually, in this smiting time. “And these are the words that the Lord spake concerning Israel and concerning Judah. For thus saith the Lord; We have heard a voice of trembling, of fear, and not of peace.

Ask ye now, and see whether a man doth travail with child? Wherefore do I see every man with his hands on his loins, as a woman in travail, and all faces are turned into paleness? Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it; it is even the time of Jacob’s trouble; but he shall be saved out of it.”

We believe this has reference to the final trouble upon Israel, which would really indicate that God’s hand is for them, in saving them as a natural people. This is the great day of Jacob’s trouble. “Alas, it is a great day.” Yes, and it will be a great sign to humanity, because there the Lord’s hand will be so manifest in the deliverance of Israel, that it will be an overwhelming witness that God is really dealing with this people. It is mentioned here to show that that is the final smiting in respect of Israel. God is permitting it, and it can be said that in God’s plan He will do it, because He knows the end from the beginning. It means deliverance for Israel, and we see now these very conditions beginning to come to pass. The division of Palestine has been agreed upon by the United Nations seeking to further the influx of the Jews to their own land. It is going to gather them together, and God will demonstrate to the world and to Israel, of course, in particular at that time that He is really their God, and He is going to save them out of that trouble. They are chastened, then saved.

But what about the world at large? Is that also to have this smiting experience? We believe so, and Isa. 24:1-6 helps in regard to this matter. "Behold, the Lord maketh the earth empty, and maketh it waste, and turneth it upside down, and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof. And it shall be, as with the people, so with the priest; as with the servant, so with his master; as with the maid, so with her mistress; as with the buyer, so with the seller; as with the lender, so with the borrower; as with the taker of usury, so with the giver of usury to him. The land shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled: for the Lord hath spoken this word. The earth mourneth and fadeth away, the world languisheth and fadeth away, the haughty people of the earth do languish. The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant. Therefore hath the curse devoured the earth, and they that dwell therein are desolate: therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned and few men left." We notice these counterparts which show the general levelling which we have seen going on for some years, and which will continue to go on for some time yet. "As with the people, so with the priest; as with the servant, so with his master," and so on. During the recent war the nobles and authorities in various countries were reduced to exactly the same condition as the peasants. They had to tramp along the roads as refugees with the least of humanity. Surely that is what the Lord wants, prior to the setting up of His kingdom. "The high places shall be brought low and the valleys shall be exalted," in due time.

Then reading from v. 17 of this chapter, "Fear, and the pit, and the snare, are upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth.

And it shall come to pass, that he who fleeth from the noise of the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit shall be taken in the snare; for the windows from on high are open, and the foundations of the earth do shake. The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly. The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage; and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall, and not rise again. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall punish the host of the high ones that are on high, and the kings of the earth upon the earth. And they shall be gathered together, as prisoners are gathered in the pit, and shall be shut up in the prison, and after many days shall they be visited." If that is not descriptive of what we have seen taking place in some countries, and what is yet to take place in all countries, then our thinking is not sound. There could be nothing plainer to show that this present order as we have it is going to be dissolved. It is going to be completely levelled down so that humanity will be really humbled. "Lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." How the words from Isaiah come to mind, "O that thou hadst hearkened unto my commandments! For then my peace would have been as a river."

Now let us read Ezek. 7:25-27—"Destruction cometh; and they shall seek peace, and there shall be none. Mischief shall come upon mischief, and rumour shall be upon rumour; then shall they seek a vision of the prophet; but the law shall perish from the priest, and counsel from the ancients. The king shall mourn, and the prince shall be clothed with desolation, and the hands of the people of the land shall be troubled; I will do unto them after their way, and according to their deserts will I judge them; and they shall know that I am the Lord." "According to their deserts." Well, dear friends, the point is that the Lord really wants to impress upon mankind to what conditions their own doings have brought them. The Lord does not take pleasure in this chastening time, we can be sure, but He is a wise God, and He permits man to bring it upon himself. He permits one section of humanity to bring these things upon another. So it is that the various clashings of forces and powers will bring about what the prophet is telling us. War continues, even though peace is desired on every side, because it is a peace desired at their own price, the selfish price; each one for himself.

PEOPLES PAPER AND HERALD OF CHRIST'S KINGDOM.

Two Resurrections.

ONE of our readers has recently queried a statement which appeared in last month's "Peoples Paper" as follows—"I want to draw your attention to a portion in the 'Peoples Paper' this month. It is in 'Pilgrim Way Ended' and reads, 'We believe that he is now forever with the Lord.' I thought that your belief was that when a person died and was buried they remained in the grave until the resurrection."

This query shows alertness regarding this important matter. However, most of our friends will understand the difference in the Scriptural explanation respecting the two resurrections — the First Resurrection to spiritual inheritance in which the Lord's consecrated people only have part during this harvest period of the Gospel Age; and the second or general resurrection to earthly inheritance for all mankind which takes place during the Millennial Age, after the setting up of Christ's Kingdom.

The Apostle Paul in 1 Thes. 4:14-18 explains the operation of the First Resurrection, showing that those saints who had died and "slept in Jesus" (were unconscious in death) prior to the harvest of the Gospel Age would be raised first when the period of the First Resurrection began—"the dead in Christ shall rise first." And verse 17 shows that when the saints who live during the time of the First Resurrection finish their course in death they are "caught up together with them (with those already raised first) to meet the Lord in the air." The same Apostle makes this matter very clear in 1 Cor. 15:51, 52 when he says, "Behold, I show you a mystery, we shall not all sleep (in death, awaiting the resurrection morning) but we shall be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, etc." It is very evident that St. Paul is not discussing the resurrection of mankind in general, but only the saints, the "we" class, and it is equally clear that while the followers of Christ throughout the Gospel Age did "sleep in Jesus" (See 2 Tim. 4 :7, 8) until the First Resurrection began, yet there was to be no "sleeping" in death by the saints finishing their earthly course during the period when "Christ the firstfruits" are gathered into the heavenly garner.

Students of the Scriptures generally are agreed that we have been living in the last days or harvest of the Gospel Age for some time, therefore, it can be said that "the dead (saints) in Christ have been raised first" and each member of the Lord's people now finishing their earthly course do not need to sleep in death, but "are changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye" — "Sown in corruption, raised in incorruption; sown in dishonour, raised in glory; sown in weakness, raised in power; sown a natural body, raised a spiritual body." (1 Cor. 15:52, 42-44. See also Rev. 14:13- 16.)

It is true, however, that mankind in general who have died throughout human history are still unconscious in the death condition—"The wages of sin is death," and "the dead know not anything." (Rom. 6:23; Eccles. 9:5.) They still await the general resurrection to earthly life which will not begin until the great Armageddon time of trouble is over and the new conditions are operating in the earth under the power of Christ's Millennial Kingdom. That will be the time when "all in the graves (death condition) shall hear His (Christ's) voice and shall come forth . . . they that have done evil unto the resurrection of judgment." (John 5 :28, 29, Revised Version.) "When Thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." (Isa. 26 :9; See also Acts 17:31.)

Sydney Members' Pilgrimage Ended.

The Sydney friends have suffered the loss of two dear elderly Sisters in the persons of Sister Thompson of Hurst- vine and Sister Walder of Banksia, both finishing their earthly course on the same day last month. Sincere sympathy is extended to the relatives and brethren who will miss them both very much. A short report is as follows

"Our dear Sister Thompson came into the truth about 1911,' and was a most devoted Christian, caring for the members of her household right up to the time of her passing. We all loved our dear Sister who was devoted to the truth and attended the meetings whenever possible, giving a testimony on every appropriate occasion. Her life was one of true sacrifice without complaint of any kind. Our dear Sister Thompson is another of the Lord's children who is now with our dear Lord, 'changed in the twinkling of an eye.'

"Our dear Sister Walder was a consecrated child of God who loved the truth since about 1933, and always gave a beautiful testimony when at the testimony meetings, and was the means of bringing her husband into the truth.

All who came in contact with our dear Sister could not but love her; she was a beautiful character, having the qualifications desired by a child of God, and is now with the dear Master—Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. Yea, says the spirit, they rest from their labours and their works do follow them.' "

The Rest of the Way.

“Thou hast been my help.”—Psa. 63:7.

“I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me.”—Psa. 23:4.

Oh, fathomless mercy! Oh, infinite grace!
With humble thanksgiving the road we retrace:
Thou never hast failed us, our strength and our stay;
To whom should we turn for the rest of the way?

Through dangers, through darkness, by day and by night,
Thou ever hast guided, and guided us right.
In Thee we have trusted, and peacefully lay
Our hand into Thine for the rest of the way.

Thy cross is our refuge; Thy blood all our plea;
None other we want, Lord Jesus, but Thee.
We fear not the shadows at close of the day,
For Thou wilt go with us the REST of the WAY.

Note of Warning.

Would our friends generally be on guard against deception by strangers seeking monetary assistance by plausible misrepresentation. It should be understood that advice will be sent direct from this office to our friends giving information in the case of strangers passing their way. A recent case of deception in another State makes this warning necessary.

Correspondence.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sir—I am enclosing 10/-postal note for renewal of subscription for the “Peoples Paper.” Please keep remainder for your good work. As one reads the Bible there are parts which puzzle me, such as 1 Peter 3:19. Could you kindly explain same. I received the “Peoples Paper” last time but very much missed the Frank and Ernest Talks. I would also like to receive a copy of “The Voice.” Yours sincerely.

(An article on 1 Pet. 3:19—“How Jesus Preached to the Spirits in Prison”—is available in a back issue of “Peoples Paper,” and is supplied free to enquirers.—B.B. Institute.)

Dear Friends—You have been sending me the “Peoples Paper” also leaflets of Frank and Ernest Biblical Dialogues, but this month you did not enclose the leaflets and I missed them very much. I have saved all you sent me and pass them on to anyone who seems interested. They are indeed tidings of great joy.

I am enclosing 10/- postal note for “Peoples Paper” and also Dialogues when you have them to spare. Your explanations of the Bible have made me very happy. Yours gratefully.

(It is hoped to be able to supply the copies of the Dialogues to all requesting same with “Peoples Paper.” B.B. Institute.)

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Your frank and earnest talks over the air of a Sunday morning have attracted my interest ever since I happened upon it many months ago. I have not always been able to listen and give you the attention warranted, so am writing to you asking you to let me have your views on some of the many wonderful things happening at this moment and to come. Yours sincerely.

Dear Sirs—This morning I heard the Dialogue on the subject of “Hell.” Could I have a copy of same; I did not hear on the air if there was a charge. If there is I would be pleased to send the cost on; herewith enclosed is stamp for postage. I find your talks very helpful on some passages in the Bible and thanking you for same. Yours sincerely.

Dear Sir—Upon reading the booklet “Do the Dead Know Anything?”, which by the way was very interesting indeed, I see that you are also offering post free “The High Calling of God,” “Distress of Nations,” “A Blessed Hope for Suffering Humanity,” “Why Do the Nations War?” and “Refrain Thy Voice from Weeping.” I would indeed be pleased and grateful if you could send me these. I listen in to the broadcast over here from 6KY Sunday mornings, Frank and Ernest, who sent me the booklet "Do the Dead Know Anything?" I remain, Yours faithfully.

Dear Sirs—I should be grateful if you could forward me a series of back numbers of your very popular Frank and Ernest Dialogues. I much appreciate the half dozen copies of various ones I have at present.

There is one question I am most desirous of asking. I understand from your various literature (and from Biblical support of same) that there are three types of people who will emerge from the tribulations yet to come. (1) The elect, or the Church. (2) The posterity of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob—who are to dwell on the earth as separate from the first named. (3) The sinner—who is yet to learn righteousness during the Millennial Age. So far, so good. But I also learn (from the parable of the Ten Virgins) that the Elect will be composed of two types, the "wise" and the "foolish." Now, what I want to know is, if the wise are called to the feast with the Bridegroom and the foolish are left behind, what is their position. In the first place they are (as virgins) the "church" type, and yet in the second place they are not the "Abraham" type. I was wondering if you could give me some indication (from your literature, or from direct Biblical reference), just what becomes of this class. Enclosed please accept a small donation towards expenses. Yours faithfully.

(Revelation 7 explains very clearly both the Church or "sealed" overcomers who reign with Christ "in His throne" (Rev. 3:21), and the Great Multitude which, while unworthy to be of the Bride, wash, their robes and thus overcoming serve God "before the throne" in the spiritual kingdom. The booklet "Tabernacle Shadows" explains this subject very clearly and in detail.—B.B. Institute.)

Dear Mr. I had intended dropping you a line some time ago, ever Since I saw in the "P.P." that your Institute was going to print "The Manner of Christ's Return" in booklet form. I thought those articles were splendid and it will be good to have a copy in a booklet. I would like to order four copies and as you will no doubt be announcing the price and when they will be ready in the "P.P.," I will keep my eyes open and forward cost then.

I thought the main article in July "P.P." very good indeed; so like my own experience when first hearing and reading of these great truths. I am pleased to say that I have seen much more light during this last two or three months and it all seems so marvellous, this great plan of God. I have been having quite a lively time in discussion with some of my friends on these matters, and not being as far forward as I would like in my knowledge of these truths, they do manage to cause me some doubt at times, but I have got such a picture of the Truth in my mind that nothing will really shake me off now.

It is hard to understand how people can be so blind to the significance of world affairs today. Some will not read any books pointing out these things and of course miss much that would otherwise astound them. I could write quite a long letter but will reserve some questions I would like to ask re certain Bible passages to a later date. Possibly I may come across their true meaning with study in the meantime. I hope and pray that you are able to carry on this great work. Yours sincerely.

Dear Sirs—Some time ago I wrote to you for books and am writing to let you know that I received same safely, and am now writing for the Diaglott edition of New Testament. I also receive "Peoples Paper" safely.

Since reading the books early this year and since receiving the books you have so promptly forwarded, I feel very anxious to attend Bible Class and hear things discussed, which I have to think for myself, and I would like to know many things I do not understand properly.

I hope to go to Melbourne to work in the warm weather, and am hoping to learn more then and get baptized.

I have read the Bible, and also have attended church now and then, and I never thought it possible to ever have any rational interpretation of the Bible. I naturally thought one died and either went to heaven, or hell, after judgment day which I imagined would be after the great war between good and evil was won. I wondered at times if God would win because of the way everything is in the world, and even thought if evolution were possible. I did not really think so, because I do a little art work, and I know that everything is perfectly designed and that there must be a designer.

I almost turned Roman Catholic, because most people I work with are Catholic, and I considered their religion and could see that at least they have faith in something and go to their church whereas most protestants are heathen and only go to church to be married. I have always gone to Church of England and one year when I was in hospital at Easter the C. of E. minister came to visit his little flock and he came and spoke to only two of us, and gave us each a little Easter card, while the outsiders did not have any notice taken of them and which I have never forgotten. So I was wondering about it all when I read your books and many things I never dreamed of became very clear to me. I have always been afraid to die, because at church or Sunday school one only thinks of oneself as going to heaven and playing a harp and singing forever, or else going to hell forever and suffering without being able to die again.

There is no one here to learn from, except by reading, and I would like to attend the Bible Classes and learn more, and if I can, I would like to be baptized later on. My Catholic friends want me to see a priest and be one of them.

When I try to tell them anything they say, St. Peter was the first pope, and their church has been since the beginning, and that they don't allow divorce and that others want them to change their Bible, and it seems useless to explain anything. I would like to talk to people who have ideas like the Berean Bible Students . . . Would you please send me "Peoples Papers" monthly with the change as I am enclosing £1, and thanking you for the ones which you have so kindly sent me. I am, faithfully.

(Literature explaining from the Scriptures the true position of the Roman Catholic system will be gladly supplied on application.—B.B. Institute.)

Beheaded for the Witness of Jesus and the Word of God.

(Rev. 20:4.) (Convention Address.)

WHEN young and first reading this Scripture in Rev. 20:4, it appeared to be a dreadful thing to realise all this slaughter which seemed to be going on amongst those who were loyal to our Lord, and perhaps that thought may have arisen in the minds of many. But we find it is not quite as we thought, when we look into this text closer.

When we read of the souls of men we do not mean the body. The word “beheaded” here is not the same in the Greek as the one used respecting John the Baptist when he was beheaded. Here it is one indicating to appear to be cut off at the tip, not necessarily to be killed in the sense of being decapitated, as was John.

The question arises, just what is man? And how does this beheading take place? We find that man, as the Psalmist tells us, was created a little lower than the angels, that he was endowed with certain qualities which gave him dominion over the works of God's hands. That is, the works of God's hands in respect of this planet—certainly not in respect of other spheres. The great difference between a man and the lower creation is that he has that ability to have dominion over them, and to use the creation God has given him for his benefit; not only as respects the animal creation, but in other directions as well, vegetables and minerals. The mineral is a dominion that man has only just recently scratched to any great depth, and great blessings would accrue to the race if these things were used always to the best advantage. But unfortunately we find that selfishness has gained such a great hold upon mankind that he uses these God-given gifts to his own selfish advantage, and the result, as we see it today, is utter destruction in the earth, the whole of society being undermined and cast down. However, we rejoice in the promise that it will not always be that way; that these gifts God has given will be for the benefit of all, mankind, and the selfishness we see existing today will be overcome with the spirit of God, which is, of course, the spirit of love. A desire, then, to do good to one and all, and to have dominion over the works of God's hands instead of over fellow men, will eventually be found in the whole human race.

The difference, then, between the animal kingdom, the goat and dog and monkey and so on, and the human race, is that the latter is able to exercise that dominion, whereas the lower creation has not that ability. The difference in the mechanism of the body is also very great—so much so that the lower creation is not able to be as self-assertive as mankind. This self-assertiveness has been developed in recent years, and with an increase of knowledge man has been able to gain control over the works of God's hands to a greater extent than formerly.

It is this particular quality of self-assertiveness that has to do with the beheading mentioned in our text. We have noticed that it is something which is God-given. It is right that man in his ordinary human state should exercise his self-assertiveness, but in the right direction, for the good of all and for the use of what God has given in the spirit of love. So we realize there is some good in that quality, and it is only under certain circumstances it should not be used.

When we come to the time of consecration, it is our wills that we give to God. We do not any longer assert ourselves. That particular quality is one that is submerged in the will of God, and we must realize from that day onwards that it is not our own will that should be done, but the will of our Father in heaven. We realize, as we read the account of our Lord's ministry, the entire manner in which He submitted Himself to the will of God, not only in the small things of life but in the whole of His ministry, and we read that finally He submitted Himself even to the death of the cross, a most ignominious death. He learned obedience by the things which he suffered throughout His lifetime, particularly through His ministry, because of the opposition which He received from those who sat in Moses' seat, whom one would naturally think were most in harmony with God and were serving God as they should. When our Lord came He humbled Himself completely, and was obedient even unto the death of the cross. Obedience, then, we find, is something of very great importance when we are thinking of the self-assertiveness of a Christian.

If we are to be obedient we must take into consideration a power, a will that is of very much greater moment than our own will. We will need to take particular care as to what is said and what we do. Without the watchfulness on our part we would not be very pleasing to the One to whom we owe allegiance, the One to whom we vowed that we would do His will. It is for us to have God's will foremost in our minds, and the more this is so the more help we receive to understand what should be our walk in life, and we will certainly be acceptable in His sight if we do our best.

We remember in respect of our Lord's devotion to His Father, it was as the Father gave commandment that He did these things. We read, particularly in John's Gospel, that all through His life He came not to do His own will but the will of His Father in heaven. His love for the Father was such that He did whatever was the Father's will for Him, no matter what the consequences may have been and no matter how hard the road. We realize as we read the account of His experiences in the Garden of Gethsemane that that way was not easy by any means; especially when He said, "Father, if it be Thy will, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless not as I will, but as Thou wilt."

There is a passage in Philippians 2:5-8,—“Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who, being in the form of God, thought not by robbery to be equal with God; but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men.” “Let this mind be in you, as was also in Christ Jesus;— one of entire devotion to the Father. The devotion we have seen in Him, should be in all His followers. His work was one of preaching the Kingdom of Heaven, of offering Himself as the Redeemer of mankind, the work that the Father had given Him particularly to do. Our work is not to offer ourselves as redeemers, but we have the opportunity of walking in His steps in sacrifice, of laying down all that we have, which is represented of course in our wills: and if we lay down everything in that way we will be acceptable with the Father and have the opportunity of assisting our Lord in the blessing of mankind in the Kingdom.

If we have this same mind within us, we do as our Lord said. We live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. That is, in all the things we do in life we take into consideration God's Word and what it teaches us. “This is the will of God, even your sanctification.” That, surely, is a work that will take us quite a long while to do, in fact we will not get through the work of sanctification, if we were to depend upon ourselves, during the whole of our lifetime. We need to be renewed in our minds constantly, because of the limitation of this human vessel. It is weak and imperfect. We need constant refreshment with the precious promises God has given us respecting the joy that is before us, that we may take hold upon these, and they will be a help to us in keeping our wills subject to the will of God in Christ, keeping us walking in the footsteps of our Lord in the way of sacrifice. We remember the great commandment He gave us,—“A new commandment give I unto you, that ye love one another as I have loved you.” That is the will of God concerning us, to love one another as our Lord loved us. He loved His own even unto death, and His followers, who walk in His steps, will indeed do the same thing.

There are many, no doubt, we feel we can love, those who we realize are walking very close to the Master. We find in them a spirit that really draws us to them; we see the spirit of love in them. It is very easy for us to sacrifice ourselves on their behalf. But there are others, too, who are not so fully developed, who need the watchfulness and care of the more developed followers of Christ. Just as our Lord said to the Apostle Peter, Feed my lambs, as well as Feed my sheep. So we realize it is the immature and those who are fallen by the way, who need the succour and assistance that the other brethren in Christ are able to give them. If we live only to the Lord then we will certainly be able to help those who are weak. James tells us that if we restore one who is sick we save a soul from death, and cover a multitude of sins.

In doing the will of God from day to day there are many things that would seem to crop up to hinder us. Little duties that we have to do seem to crowd out any thought of doing the will of God. But this should not be so. If we are engaged in any work at all, the thought should constantly be before us that whatsoever we do should be done to the honour and glory of God. This is the will of God concerning us, and if we are doing our ordinary daily toil then God is interested in the way we do it, the motives that actuate us. Are we doing these things for the love of men, or just because God has put us in that way and we need to do them to earn a living and we think no more about them? Or do we do these little daily works with the thought of doing them in the spirit that would please our Heavenly Father, according to His will? Are we angry or fretful in some things that we do? Have we the disposition of the Master, rather, that we cast all our care upon Him? Whether we succeed in this or that is for Him to decide, and the result, if we are dependent entirely upon Him, will be the best for us in the long run.

In keeping our own wills submerged and doing with our might what our hands find to do in the Master's spirit, in the way God directs, we receive a blessing and develop the character which will help us to make our calling and election sure. This is a most important point for us to remember. We must keep our wills, our minds, subject to the will of God in Christ, not walking in our own righteousness but in that of our Lord. If we daily endeavour to do these things it will help us to be pleasing and acceptable in the sight of our Father in heaven. So we would be beheaded, then, for the Word of God. That is, it is not our wills that we are to follow, but God's will revealed in His Word.

There is, then, the other part of our text, which says we are beheaded for the witness of Jesus. He said, "This gospel of the Kingdom must be preached in all the world for a witness." It is the work that He gave His followers to do, and as we have His spirit we should be ever ready to be beheaded for the witness of Jesus, not walking in our own righteousness, not being highminded or puffed up with our own importance, but spreading the message in God's way, in humbleness of heart, in lowliness before Him like our Lord.

We remember the passage in Isa. 61:1-3 that our Lord quoted, "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the brokenhearted; .. to comfort all that mourn; to appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness." It is surely a great part of our development to have the sympathetic spirit operating within us. Our Lord was a comforter to those with whom He came into contact; in all their troubles and trials He was ready to succour and help them, and that is the spirit we should have if we walk in His steps. The Good Tidings are indeed a wonderful comfort to the groaning creation, so let us pass along the message to every hearing ear.

So with this thought, dear friends, may we all keep our hearts and minds subject to the will of God in Christ, that we may be beheaded as He was, not living in our own righteousness, not doing our own wills. We would not expect our Heavenly Father to exalt us to such a great and high station to be with our Lord and Head in the Kingdom, unless we were entirely in harmony with the will of the great Creator. So we see the need to keep ourselves humble and lowly before Him, and endeavour to take heed to His Word, that we may do His will.

Manner of Christ's Return.

APPRECIATION by our readers of the proposal to publish in booklet form all the articles on the above subject which have appeared in the "Peoples Paper" over past months is most encouraging. There is no claim of originality for the views expressed in these articles; indeed, the understanding of this important subject, as presented from the Scriptures, has been held by the Lord's people for well over half a century, and of course dates back to the days of the Lord and the Apostles.

This booklet, containing 64 pages, is now ready and a good number of orders have already been filled. There can be no doubt that the careful reading and study of the very helpful matter will prove a great blessing and comfort to our friends and readers generally, as it is a most timely exposition of world events today. Further, it is a booklet that will be truly enjoyed again by the most advanced of the brethren, as well as being of great instruction and encouragement to those friends more recently coming to a knowledge and appreciation of the truths of God's Word. It will be found that the liberal use of Scripture quotations throughout the booklet make it a real Bible study as the reader verifies the expressions with the Bible itself.

Further orders for this booklet will be filled immediately, and should any readers desire copies forwarded direct to friends this will be gladly done on receiving names and addresses. The price for single copies is 9d. each, or 6 copies for 4/-, post paid.

Peace Desired—War Continues.

Can Christianity Save the World?

“It Isn’t Peace, Only a Truce.”

LONDON, Sunday, August 16th, 1948.—It is very, very serious. We are on a spot that could be the edge of the most ghastly of wars. One has it on the very highest military authority that a false step now, or an accident, could send us all hurtling into tragedy.

Whether the statesmen are capable of dragging us back from the brink is a question that nobody, least of all the statesmen themselves, can answer. And one uses the words of a very important person indeed when one says there is no peace, only a truce, and the period of truce may soon be running out. It is the German imbroglio, of course—but not only that.

It is also the powder-keg of the Middle East (where not only Jews and Arabs are facing one another) and the timebomb of the Far East. All these are parts of a pattern of ideological discord which can become, this year, or next, or five years hence, a military pattern.

The above report by Douglas Brass, published in the Melbourne press recently, brings to mind particularly the words of St. Paul in 1 Thes. 5:1-3. The Apostle Paul was a great theologian who at one time said, “I have not failed to declare the whole counsel of God.” He was a wonderful prophet and expounder of truth in his day, and prophesied of events really taking place in this our day. We are on the verge of the fulfilment of his words—But of the times and seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape.”

These words of Paul’s agree exactly with what we have seen from the prophets. “Peace and safety”—that is the cry we have heard, particularly over the last 30 years. In other words, all the preparations for war were supposed to be for peace; that has been the cry on every side. We see from the former report in the Press that they say, Let us have such a preponderance of atomic weapons that no one will dare oppose us. They are arming again for peace. Mankind in their efforts do not know which way to turn. “When they shall say, Peace and safety, sudden destruction cometh upon them.”

If we did not have the other side of God’s plan to balance this, the sad side of it, it would be a terrible state indeed. But the people of the world are at a great disadvantage; they see these terrible things coming to pass, but have no idea of the other side of God’s plan respecting what is to follow. The Scriptures, however, are most enlightening, as we shall see.

From Luke 21:24-26 we read what the Lord says in respect of Jerusalem following His first advent,—And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.” We know that has really been true. Jerusalem was trodden down until 1918—there was no opportunity for any to return and rebuild the waste, desert lands. But since 1918 we find the Lord’s favour has been returning to the Jews, and much progress has been made, even amidst the troubles of that land. This prophecy has had a fulfillment in respect of Israel, but note also that part which refers to the world in general.—”And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men’s hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken.” The sun, moon and stars are symbolic terms, and have reference to the Gospel light, the Mosaic law, and the leading lights in the religious firmament. “Distress of nations with perplexity” describes the world situation as clearly as language could make it. We see this in every land, with various sections of mankind striving one against another. “Men’s hearts failing them for fear—never has there been such fear on the part of serious-minded people; the greatest scientists are the ones who realise the possibilities for mankind if there should be another war under present conditions.

The point is, Why does not Christianity save the world? The world as our Lord found it at His first advent was not worthy of salvation, and the same conditions exist today. It is not worthy of being saved, for the Lord to merge it into His Kingdom. So He intends to allow humanity to remove this world order in the commotions, distresses and tumults of human passion. This is the means God will use to sweep this earth clean, that Christ’s Kingdom may have a new beginning. Christianity, then, was never intended to save the world as it exists today.

As with the financial, political and social elements, so with the religious. These all must pass away. An instance of the worldliness of the religious systems was well demonstrated in the First World War in U.S.A., in particular. America was neutral for a considerable time when the 1914-18 war was raging in Europe, and the ministers of religion at that time said America should on no account enter into the war, and the young men were exhorted to be at peace.

But directly America entered the war, the ministers of Christ, professedly so, turned with the nation and exhorted the young men to go to war-as though the Word of God would teach one thing under one condition, and the opposite under another condition!

Do we not see that the religious elements generally are not worthy of being saved? In other words, they are part and parcel of this world. This is what St. Peter tells us in 2 Pet. 3:10—"The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up." It is amazing that we should get so much information in one verse of Scripture. It is really telling us that all the elements that go to make up this present order of society are going to be swept away; "burned with fervent heat"—that is, be completely dissolved. The heavens—the religious elements—the Lord has cast off (Rev. 3:14-17) ; not only the great system of Rome, but all the other daughter systems must go, because it is the Lord's will that He have a new heavens and a new earth, as we shall see.

From verse 11 of 2 Pet. 3 we read—"Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and halting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat? Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." Does not this Scripture reveal that God's plan is just what we would expect of Him who created man to live in perfection on the earth, to live to His praise and not as man may choose for himself. "A new heavens and a new earth"—necessarily then, there must be the removing of the present social order on the earth, and the present ecclesiastical heavens.

These Scriptures are undoubtedly fulfilled at the close of this Gospel Age, the ending of the period since Christ's first advent, because this is the time when the gospel of Christ will complete its work of selecting from mankind in general a little band of faithful followers of Christ to comprise with Him the "new heavens." Just as at the end of the Jewish Age that dispensation passed away with a great time of trouble, when they knew not the time of their visitation, so at the end of this Gospel Age St. Peter tells us we should expect a "new heavens and a new earth." Then will be ushered in the Millennial Age, the reign of Christ, for the purpose of extending to Israel and mankind in general the blessings which God has promised throughout His Word. This transition period from one dispensation to the next will bring about the time of Jacob's trouble; it will be a most intense trouble, yet he shall be saved out of it. Possibly the trouble upon Israel which immediately precedes deliverance at the hands of the Lord may precede the trouble in other parts of the world. We cannot be sure how every feature may be accomplished, but it will likely work out that way; also the "heavens" may be dissolved before some of the earthly elements, because we have a picture in Revelation revealing that the great ones, merchantmen, etc., will behold Babylon (Christendom) falling, and see that in the overthrow of Babylon their commercial interests have gone down also. The fall of one means the fall of the other. (See Rev. 18 :9-19.)

We can rejoice, however, that beyond this time of breaking up of conditions in this world is the "new heavens and new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." That will be the end of this great epoch referred to by the Apostle as "this present evil world." It is an evil world because evil has predominated, not that there is no good in it. The evil conditions are testing those who will be really worthy to be associated with Christ in His heavenly Kingdom, and the remainder of mankind are getting their experiences to prepare them for the earthly kingdom. Then they will be able to appreciate the blessings God has for them throughout the thousand years of the age to come. The majority will be raised up to perfection and never again will desire to eat the sour grape, as is the case at the present time.

While it is very evident, then, that Christianity is not saving the world in general, yet Christianity has been and is saving a particular class. That is, the message of Christianity beginning with the life of Jesus—the "so great salvation which first began to be spoken by our Lord,"—has been the means of saving from the world a class that really desires to be saved, really desires to leave this present evil world. They are not at home here, but wish to live with their Lord. They are as Moses was, "seeing Him who is invisible." Their aspirations are not towards the earth at all, but they are using this present life, under the Lord's arrangements, to work out their own salvation. They are using their present time, talents, all they possess in that direction, with the great goal in view that they may be inheritors with their Lord and Head in His heavenly kingdom.

The Tabernacle which God gave to Israel when they were dwelling in the wilderness under Moses is a wonderful picture of how God really selects His people during this Gospel Age. This tabernacle arrangement was given that Israel might realise God's presence with them in a typical sense. They were instructed to set it up so that it could be transferred from place to place as they travelled. Once every year God gave them special sacrifices which would typically cleanse them for the year ahead, and the blood of the typical sacrifices was taken into the Most Holy and sprinkled on the Mercy Seat. Only the High Priest was allowed to enter the Most Holy with the blood of sprinkling and he represented our Lord Jesus. The slaying of the bullock represented our Lord's sacrifice on our behalf, and the sprinkling of the bullock's blood in the Most Holy pictured our Lord appearing in heaven for us. (Heb. 9:24.) Following the sacrifice of the bullock was the sacrifice of the Lord's goat, and exactly the same procedure was carried out with this goat as with the bullock. The Lord's goat no doubt pictured the saints of Christ, and as it's blood was also sprinkled in the Most Holy of the Tabernacle on the Mercy Seat, this showed that the Lord's people really walk in the footsteps of their Master and lay down their lives with Him.

Various sacrifices were conducted inside the white curtain which surrounded the Court of the Tabernacle. The Household of Faith was able to come inside this white curtain, and was pictured by the tribe of Levi, but the tribes of Israel generally were outside the tabernacle, picturing the world of mankind, outside God's particular care. From the tribe of Levi, within the Court of the tabernacle, was taken out the High Priest and his family, the under-priesthood. That pictured Jesus and His underpriests — those now being saved by the message of Christianity. Apart from the tribe of Levi, the remaining eleven tribes represented the world of mankind. As the eleven tribes were outside the white curtains of the tabernacle (which picture justification by faith) so the world is not yet being saved at this present time.

This is a wonderful picture. The priests were allowed to go into the Holy of the Tabernacle, and were able to appreciate the features there—the shewbread and golden candlestick—which represent the heavenly truths on which the antitypical priests now feast while they abide in the wilderness condition. These are the ones who really wish to know God and Jesus Christ whom He has sent. They wish to know the Lord not only in the sense that He is their Saviour, but also respecting all His wonderful purposes for them. As they look into God's Word they see each feature revealed, and they say, Why, if that is what God has planned, I also shall enter into this wonderful invitation; I, too, will be saved from the world, by His grace. So we have it in 2 Cor. 5:19—"God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself." God is reconciling the world by first of all taking out this special people; afterwards, in the Millennial Age, He will ultimately reconcile to Himself, through Christ, "whosoever will" of all mankind. (Rev. 22:17.)

Respecting the types and antitypes, the verses in Heb. 13:11-14 are enlightening,—“For the bodies of those beasts, whose blood is brought into the sanctuary by the high priest for sin, are burned without the camp. Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate. Let us go forth therefore unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach.” These verses explain a very significant point. The blood was taken to sprinkle on the mercy seat within the Most Holy and the incense burning at the same time ascended to the presence of the Lord in type; the choice parts of the animals were burned on the altar in the Court; and the baser portions of the animals, the hide, hoofs etc., were burned outside the camp of Israel. The three fires were burning at once and give us three aspects of how the sacrifice of Christ and His people is viewed by different classes. The sacrifice of Christ and His followers ascends as a sweet-smelling savour to God—it is precious to Him, as represented by the incense on the Golden Altar in the Holy, and the cloud of incense also in the Most Holy at the time of sprinkling the blood; likewise this sacrifice of Christ and His members is precious to all the saints who enter the antitypical Holy, the spirit-begotten state. , Out in the Court the sacrifice is appreciated by the Household of Faith from the standpoint of justification by faith; they can go as far as that, but they cannot appreciate the preciousness of the incense, because they have not presented their bodies a living sacrifice in full consecration. Then those out in the world, pictured by Israel in general where the hide and hoofs etc., were burned, regard the sacrifice as a stench in their nostrils, if they think of it at all; they have no time for Christ or His people, and count the sacrifice of small concern.

From these three standpoints we see the Lord's people are highly privileged. Just think of it! We need to meditate on the privilege of being invited to participate with Jesus in the highest of all positions. Christianity is saving this class now. We know there are other features, such as the witness of the truth generally, but the main thing God is doing at this time is finding these people who are really His, who really desire to be His, who will lay down their lives for their Master, as other members so readily did in the early Church. That is what each one must do who covenants to become a follower of Christ. This is a solemn undertaking, but when we see the great privilege of not only being united with Christ in His glorious kingdom, but of reigning over and uplifting whosoever will be obedient in the age to come, if we cannot grasp it and enter into it fully, it is because we are not balancing things as we should. If someone gave us X 1,000 we would say, we could do much with that. But if somebody granted us the opportunity of the kingdom, should we not value it much more? Things which are given us freely are oftentimes spurned. The water we drink and the air we breathe are the most precious natural things we have, and yet we consider them, perhaps, the least. But if we have to pay a high price for a thing, often it is appreciated more. So with the invitation to unite with Christ in His Kingdom, it is gained by faith and obedience while walking in the steps of sacrifice with Him. However, there are also joys in the present time for all the followers of the Master, as shown from Ps. 46:4,—“There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacles of the most High.”

As noted previously, had Israel only obeyed the commandments of the Lord, their peace would have been as a river, and this is the very thing the Lord's people now have. “There is a river, the streams whereof make glad the city of God.” This is the Holy City. Some of the members are still upon earth; some are still being found and gathered in to make up “the city of God.” It is a wonderful thought? And this river which flows out from God's Word, directed by His holy spirit, makes them glad indeed — “God is in the midst of her, and she shall not be moved; God shall help her at the dawning of her morning.” (Psa. 46:5.)

When the Church is complete, when all the members have been taken to be with Christ, the time will come for the blessings to flow out to “whosoever will” and that will be the time when the spirit will be poured out upon all flesh (Acts 2:17), not to invite them to the heavenly Kingdom, but to invite them to partake of the water of life, as we have it expressed in Zech. 14:8,—“Living waters shall flow out from Jerusalem.” Mankind will then be restored to earthly perfection, for “God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall ‘be no more death.’” (Rev. 21:4.) Dear friends, peace is desired now; peace will be fulfilled then. No more will loved ones pass away in death. Surely that will be the time when there will be real peace on earth and goodwill towards men. While -the Lord's people now have the peace of God in their hearts, passing all (human) understanding and keeping their hearts and minds in Christ Jesus, the world of mankind in the age to come, will receive that peace which passeth misunderstanding. They will be able to go up the Highway of Holiness easily and joyfully, because the way will be made so plain that a man, though a simpleton, will not err therein. (Isa. 35:8-10.)

May it be that we shall grasp our privileges now as never before. We still have the opportunity of partaking of this heavenly calling, of being saved by Christianity at this time. It is the greatest privilege that has ever been offered and we know that it cannot be offered much longer, because the time of disintegration is at hand. The time when "the Bride bath made herself ready," cannot be delayed, but when the marriage of the Lamb has taken place, then it will be that peace shall flow as a river, to cover the earth as the waters cover the deep. It will be complete and perfect through Christ, because He is going to provide all peace for His obedient earthly people for all time, just as He now grants "My peace" to His faithful followers who still walk in the narrow way by His grace and strength. May it be that the words of the Lord shall encourage all sincere Christians to rightly esteem the great privileges enjoyed in our days, that the opportunities for "so great salvation" may be fully used, to the Lord's praise and glory.

And sneer not at the weakness
Which made thy brother fall,

For the hand that lifts the fallen
God loves the best of all.

—May R. Smith,

I ask Thee for a thoughtful love,
Thro' constant watching wise,
To meet the glad with joyful smiles,
And wipe the weeping eyes;
A heart at leisure from itself,
To soothe and sympathise.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I was sorry to miss your broadcast last Sunday and would be glad to receive a copy and also the booklet about Hell. I was pleased to hear your broadcast today and would be glad to receive a copy and also the booklet you mentioned. I have read the booklet “The Plan of God—in Brief” and would be glad to receive six copies to send to my friends. Next to the Bible it is the best thing in print. Enclosed please find P.N. for 10/- to pay for the above. I should be glad to receive some more copies of “The Voice,” “Refrain Thy Voice from Weeping, and Thine Eyes from Tears.” May God bless you in your good work of spreading His Truth. With Christian love, in the hope of Israel. Yours in Him, even Jesus Christ.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sir—Many thanks for the Frank and Ernest Dialogues duly received, also for the copies of the “Peoples Paper,” and the cutting on The Great Company in reference to the wise and foolish virgins.

I should be glad to receive regular copies of the Dialogues if they are available from time to time, and would like to put in an order for the booklet “Manner of Christ’s Return” whenever you decide to publish it.

Your literature has been extremely helpful to me, and I wish to repeat how much I appreciate the thoroughness with which so many of the Biblical problems are explained and the incentive it produces to read and study the Scriptures. Please accept the enclosed 5/- donation with my prayers and best wishes. Yours very sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, E.4, Victoria, Sirs—Thank you for your excellent address over 2KY this morning. Yes, for both myself and friends I would appreciate a copy of your periodical booklet, also any other books you may have for reading. Your Lectures are greatly appreciated here. Faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, E.4, Victoria, Dear Sirs—I shall be most grateful to receive a copy of your booklet on the “Second Coming of Christ” and also the leaflet on “Hell.” You very kindly sent me a copy of “Chosen People” some time ago, and I have read same with much interest, and have found it very enlightening. Any other of your talks that you can spare I shall be most happy to receive. Wishing you every success in your efforts to get people to take a live interest in the Scriptures. Sincerely yours.

Dear Brother--I thank you for your kind letter ... The radio cards and “P.Ps.” for August have come to hand and thank you again ... Brother is very earnest and anxious to get an understanding of the truth. He left the J. Witnesses three years ago, disgusted with the way they were lording it over God’s people, preventing all Berean study. I would like him to read “The Desolations of the Sanctuary,” and wonder whether you still have a copy of that in stock. Brother tells me. he knows quite a number of former J.Ws., who are in the same condition as he is, studying privately to find the truth. He said he might bring some of them along; some of them have even gone back into the nominal churches. It is not a coincidence that a similar movement is going on today among the brethren in Germany. A recent letter from Bro. _ who is elder of the class in informs me that quite a number of former J.Ws. over there are joining up again with the Lord’s people, while others are going back into the nominal churches. Thus we see the importance of the Apostle’s warning, “Let no man take thy crown.”

Give my Christian love to all the brethren in Melbourne. Ever your loving Brother in Christ.

New Zealand.

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Friends—Just a note to ask you to keep me four copies of the new booklet “Manner of Christ’s Return.” I did enjoy the articles under the above title; I wished I could have them all together. I usually pass the “P.P.” on when I have finished reading it, so couldn’t keep the parts. It will be lovely to have the booklet; let me know the price, please. The June “P.P.” is most interesting. May God bless you in your good work. Thanking you, I remain. Yours sincerely.

U.S.A.

Dear Brethren—Warm Christian greetings in the name of our beloved Master.

It has been a long, long time since I have written you, and I know that my subscription to “Peoples Paper” has run out long, long ago, too; yet I have been receiving it every month and so glad that it has kept coming. So now I will try and make amends for my slackness.

I wish first to state how much I am enjoying the close reading of the current series of articles on “The Manner of Christ’s Return.” I am particularly impressed with the clear and lucid presentations of the subject given in the May issue (part 7), which is the last issue to hand. I am so pleased to note that you are proposing the collection of the entire series in booklet form. I am desirous of having 25 copies of the booklets. And while I am on the subject of “ordering,” I might as well mention the other books and booklets that I would like you to send me. I shall list them all as follows: 25 “Manner of Christ’s Return”; 3

“Foregleams of the Golden Age”; 3 “Beauty of Holiness”; 5 “Hell, Death, Spiritism”; 5 “Do the Dead Know Anything?”; 5 “The Greatest of These is Love”; 5 “Times of Refreshing and Christ’s Return”; 25 “The Offerings for Sin”; and 3 years’ subscription to “Peoples Paper.”

The thought just occurs to me that if you have a number of back issues of “Peoples Paper” on hand, and would enclose same, I would like to give one to each member of our class. We have an average of 15 in attendance.

Following the Lord’s leadings, I find myself being asked to lead the adult class in an undenominational Sunday School just organized by a fellow-worker of mine. And the thought comes to me that it would be a fine idea to introduce them, too, to the “Peoples Paper.” So if you can spare about 10 copies of the August issue (which will probably be the current issue when you receive this letter) I will follow through with this idea.

We have just had a very inspiring 3-day Convention, having the privilege of hearing discourses from some of the more prominent brethren of the country, including also two discourses by Bro. Pampling of .England. I mention this because I so often notice your announcements of Australian Conventions. I would have liked to hear that discourse, “If Christ Came to Adelaide, In which Church would He be Found?”

It gives me pleasure to note how well the radio work is succeeding in your country. As you know, we have many stations broadcasting the programs here; the Truth is certainly being given a wide witness, and we think quite an effective one. (I have a small part in keeping the programs going out over the air from one of the stations here.)

I always enjoy reading the “Correspondence” columns, also, in your paper. I liked in particular the one from England, appearing in the May issue, especially where the writer speaks of the Convention of the “first-born ones,” and says “What a grand Testimony Meeting that will be when each one of that 144,000 shall speak one with another of all the goodness of God through many and varied experiences.”

We of our Class, too, do always remember to petition our Heavenly Father for the spiritual welfare of all our brethren in other countries. May we all continue to “fight the good fight,” to “rejoice alway,” while “laying hold upon the hope that is set before us.” Your brother by His grace.

(Copies of back issues of “Peoples Papers” are gladly supplied for distribution wherever desired—B.B. Institute.)

Our Lord's Great Prophecy.

Matt. 24; Mark 13; Luke 21:5-36; 17:20-37.

OUR Lord uttered one of the most remarkable prophecies of Holy Writ respecting the "Time of the End"—the closing epoch of this Gospel age. It was uttered near the close of His earthly ministry, when He was endeavouring to prepare His disciples gradually for the new dispensation, which would be fully introduced after the tragedy of Calvary. He wished them to understand that they must not expect immediately the honours and glories of the Kingdom, which He had promised should be shared by His faithful. Before these glories and blessings, would come trials and sufferings. He, their master, the King, must be rejected of Israel and be crucified, in harmony with the prophetic declarations, then Israel would be given over to their enemies, and their holy city and costly temple be utterly destroyed: moreover, His disciples must not expect to be above their Master, exempt from the reproaches and sufferings that fell on Him; but that faithfulness to Him and His teachings would cause them to be hated of all men for His sake; but that finally, though after much tribulation, those faithful unto death would be rewarded when He would come again to receive them unto Himself and to a share of His glory.

Teaching along this line our Lord reserved until near the close of His ministry. At first the disciples were disposed to resent this, and to insist (as some do to-day) that the Lord's cause must conquer the world, as a result of their preaching; and Peter went so far as to express the dissent to our Lord, saying, "Be it far from thee, Lord, this [death and the scattering of thy people and the triumph of evil generally] shall not be unto thee." (Matt. 16:22; Mark 8:31, 32.) But our Lord severely rebuked Peter; and all of the disciples seem to have gradually settled down to a realization that the glories of the Kingdom were still remote, and that the Master must go away, and, leaving them, send 'the Comforter, the holy spirit, to guide and keep them until He would come again in the glory of the Father's Kingdom.

It was in this attitude of mind and with our Lord's latest expression with reference to the temple, still ringing in their ears, that the disciples sought from the Master definite information on these points which were not yet clear in their minds.

The Three Questions.

"And as Jesus sat upon the mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately saying, Tell us (1) When shall these things [The destruction of the Temple, etc.] be? and (2) What shall be the sign of thy presence* and (3) •of the end of the world [age]?"—Matt. 24.3.

*The Greek word pamusia, here used, invariably signifies presence, and not coming.—See Revised Version—margin; also the Emphatic Diaglott.

Undoubtedly the opportunity and the questions were of divine providence; for the prophecy was surely meant more for the instruction of God's people living in this "harvest" time, than for those who asked the questions. In studying this prophecy it is very necessary to keep in memory the questions to which it is the inspired answer. The prophecy is given with much similarity by three of the Evangelists, Matthew, Mark and Luke; but since Matthew's is the most complete and orderly, we follow its narrative in general, bringing forward any modifications noted in the other accounts.

Beware of False Christs.

“Take heed that no man deceive you. For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many.”—Matt. 24:4, 5.

Gamaliel mentions two of these false Christs in his speech referred to in Acts 5:36, 37; and history tells us of several others who deceived quite a few Jews. Most notable among these was Sabbathai Levi, of Smyrna, who announced himself A.D. 1648. Sabbathai Levi styled himself “The firstborn Son of God, the Messiah, the Saviour of Israel,” and promised a restoration of the kingdom and prosperity. Sabbathai, says the historian “prevailed therein [Smyrna] to such a degree that some of his followers prophesied and fell into strange ecstasies: four hundred men and women prophesied of his growing kingdom. The people acted for a time as those possessed by spirits; some fell into trances, foamed at the mouth, recounted their future prosperity, their visions of the Lion of Judah, and the triumphs of Sabbathai.” This was undoubtedly Satan’s counterfeit fulfilment of Joel’s prophecy (2 :29) —a counterfeit of the holy spirit witnessed also in religious revivals of more modern times. Altogether, there have probably been fifty or more false Christs, male and female, and many of them undoubtedly demented—possessed of evil spirits. But none of these, nor all of them together, can be said to have “deceived many.” Yet it is against the kind which “deceive many” that our Lord cautions us here, and again, later on in this prophecy, in which connection we will examine particularly the antichrists which have deceived many.

The History Of Eighteen Centuries Briefly Foretold.

Matt. 24 :6-13 ; Mark 13 :7-13 ; Luke 21 9-19.

“And ye shall hear of wars and rumours [threats, intrigues] of wars: see that ye be not troubled; for all of these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom : and there shall be famines and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places. All these are primary sorrows.”—Matt. 24:6-8.

Thus briefly did our Lord summarize secular history, and teach the disciples not to expect very soon His second coming and glorious Kingdom. And how aptly : surely the world’s history is just this,—an account of wars, intrigues, famines and pestilences little else. Our Lord separates the history of the true Church and states it with similar brevity, thus :—

“Then [during that same period, the Gospel Age] they shall deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations peoples for my name’s sake. And then [during that same period] many shall be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another. And many false prophets [teachers] shall rise and shall deceive many. And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold.”—Matt. 24 :9-13.

In the light of history would it be possible to portray the course of God’s true Church in fewer words? Surely not.

The likeness is perfect. “Whosoever will live godly shall suffer persecution,” is the Apostle’s declaration; and whoever has not shared it has every reason to doubt his relationship to God as a son. (Heb. 12:8.) And so with the Church as a whole, when not persecuted by the Ishmael and Esau class, it has been because there was so much of the spirit of the world or so much of “cold love” toward the Lord and His truth that they were not worthy of persecution. But judged by this same standard, and by our Lord’s prophecy, there have been some faithful unto death all the way down through this Gospel age,—a “little flock.”

The Gospel Witness, World-Wide.

Matt. 24 :14 ; Mark 13 :10.

“And this gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations. Then shall the end come.”

Here again our Lord clearly showed the disciples that the end of the age was much farther off than they had supposed; that the message of His Kingdom was to be good tidings, not to Israel only, but to all nations. But this did not imply that other nations would receive the gospel which Israel had rejected. Rather, we should expect just what we find, that as the god of this world blinded Israel, so he would blind the vast majorities of other nations, and hinder them from seeing in Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God—and he has. (1 Cor. 1 :24.) If only a remnant of Israel (specially instructed for centuries under the Law) was found worthy to be of the “royal priesthood,” what more could be reasonably expected of the heathen nations, long “without God and having no hope” ?

It is well that we carefully note our Lord’s words —that the gospel was not to be preached to the nations to convert the nations, but as a witness to the nations, and to call, and perfect, and gather out of all nations “the elect.” Later on “the elect,” as the Kingdom, will bless the nations, opening their deaf ears to the gospel, and their blinded eyes to the True Light.

This witness has already been given : the word of the Lord, the gospel of the Kingdom, has been published to every nation of earth. Each individual has not heard it; but that is not the statement of the prophecy. It was to be, and has been, a national proclamation. And the end has come! “The harvest is the end of the age,” our Lord explained Matt. 13:39) . Some have been disposed to query whether or not this prediction has yet been fulfilled, because the missionaries who have gone into heathen lands have very generally known little or nothing of the good tidings particularly specified by our Lord—"the good tidings of the Kingdom." But we answer, the printed gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John have gone to them brimming full of the Kingdom tidings, just as we have them.

Thus our Lord briefly summed up the eighteen centuries of trials and persecutions upon His Church, and the fruit of their labour in successfully witnessing to all nations, and hastened on to answer the important query respecting how the living would know of the time and the fact of His second presence. He ignored the question respecting when the stones of the temple would all be overthrown, lest they should associate that event with His second coming, and because He wished to so associate the trouble upon fleshly Israel in the overthrow of its polity with the trouble upon nominal spiritual Israel in the end of this age, as type and antitype.

It was with evident intention on God's part, though unknown to the Evangelists, that the record of our Lord's prophecy at this point is given piece meal—here a part and there another; here a reference to the typical trouble on typical Israel in the close of the typical harvest, there a reference to the similar though more general and greater trouble in the end of this age upon antitypical Israel—Christendom. Truly the prophets declared of our Lord that He opened His mouth in parables and dark sayings, and "without a parable spake he not unto them." Yet in harmony with the divine intention, the dark sayings and parables are now becoming luminous to all whose eyes are anointed with the true eye-salve.

The Trouble In The End Of The Jewish Age.

Luke's account of the trouble upon fleshly Israel which culminated in A.D. 70, is the clearest, so we introduce it here

"And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh. Then let them which 'are in Judea flee to the mountains; and let them which are in the midst of it depart out; and let not them that are in the countries enter thereinto. For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled. But woe to them that are with child and to them that give suck, in those days! for there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people. And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. —Luke 21:20-24.

This portion of our Lord's prophecy evidently related to events upon fleshly Israel ; and history tells us that it was accurately fulfilled in every particular in the troublous scenes wherewith the Jewish age and polity came to an end. "These be the days of vengeance upon this nation, that all things written in the law and the prophets concerning them might be fulfilled."

But our Lord's words quoted by Matthew and Mark differ from the foregoing, and evidently apply to the trouble upon spiritual Israel in the end of the Gospel age. Undoubtedly our Lord uttered both statements, but the Evangelists not knowing of the two harvests and two times of trouble, but considering them practically repetitions did not record both statements—the Lord so overruling, for the purpose of covering or hiding the facts respecting this harvest until His due time for revealing it.

The Trouble In The End Of The Gospel Age.

Matthew's and Mark's accounts here are almost identical. Matthew says:—

-When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the Prophet, stand in the holy place (whoso readeth let him understand) : then let them that be in Judea flee into the mountains: let him which is on the housetop not come down to take anything out of his house; neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes. And woe unto them that are with child, and to those that give suck in those days! But pray ye that your flight be not in winter, neither on the Sabbath day : for then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time ; no, nor ever shall be. And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened."—Mati.: 24:15-22; Mark 13:14-20.

Four points in this narrative show that its real application belongs to the trouble with which the Gospel age terminates. (1) The reference to the "desolating abomination" mentioned in Daniel's prophecy. (2) The statement that the trouble will be the most severe the world has ever known or will ever experience. (3) That unless the carnage was cut short there would be no flesh saved. (4) The context succeeding unquestionably describes events at the end of the Gospel age—events which could not be applied to the end or harvest of the Jewish age, and were not fulfilled there. Two of these points deserve special examination.

The prophet Daniel (9:27) did record that after Messiah would be "cut off" in the midst of the seventieth week of covenant favour, He, by establishing the antitypical sacrifices of atonement, would cause the sacrifices and oblations of the Law to cease: and that then, because abominations would prevail, He would pour destruction upon the desolate [rejected nation] , as God had previously decreed.

All this had its fulfilment in the destruction of fleshly Israel's polity. From the time our Lord said, "Your house is left unto you desolate"—"ye shall see me no more until that day when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of Jehovah," their religion became an abomination, an empty form, a mark of their repudiation of the one sacrifice for sins which God had provided; and resting under the curse they had invoked upon themselves (blindness—Matt. 27 :25) , their course toward destruction was rapid, as God had decreed and foretold.

But Daniel's prophecy has much to say about an Abomination that maketh Desolate in nominal spiritual Israel ; which was set up in power representatively in Papacy, and which has exercised a great and baneful influence of spiritual desolation in the spiritual house or temple of God, the Church of Christ. This abominable system of error was to continue until the cleansing of the sanctuary class; and beyond that it was to prosper greatly and lead many in nominal spiritual Israel to repudiate the ransom-sacrifice, given once for all; and the result of its overspreading influence would be the desolation of the rejected Christendom.— See Daniel 11:31; 12:11.

The great abomination of desolation whose foundation rests in the doctrine of the Mass (which substitutes human performances instead of the great sacrifice of Calvary, for the cleansing away of sin) is now being supplemented by theories of self-atonement, and these overspreading abominations are backed by such influence and sophistry as will deceive many,— "if it were possible the very elect," and be precursors of the destruction of Christendom.

Looking back we see in this another parallelism between the end of the Jewish harvest and the end of the Gospel harvest. Fleshly Israel's rejection of the true sacrifice for sins, and their retention of the typical sacrifices which were no longer acceptable to God, but abominations, was an important incident in connection with their national and ecclesiastical fall. So here, the rejection of the doctrine of the ransom and the acceptance of either masses or good works or penances instead, is abomination in God's sight and is an important incident in connection with the fall of Christendom, civil and ecclesiastical.

As already pointed out the abomination of desolation which defiled God's holy place or true temple, the Church, was the papal one, the cornerstone of which is the blasphemous doctrine of the Mass. The abomination, defilement and desolation are old; but so gross was the darkness of error during centuries past that few, if any, could see it. That the Mass was not seen to be the abomination, even by the Reformers, is evident: for although the Church of England in her Articles denies the power of the priests to create Christ out of bread and wine, to sacrifice Him afresh, yet we have no intimation that the enormity of this sinful practice was seen. And Luther, while full of denunciation for many of Papacy's sins and falsities, did not see the great abomination of desolation to be the Mass. On the contrary, on his return to his church after his stay at Wartburg castle, finding that the Mass, as well as images and candles, had been discontinued, as being without Scriptural authority, Luther re-established the Mass.

In this view of the matter there is great significance in our Lord's words—"When therefore ye see the abomination of the desolation having stood in the holy place, as foretold by Daniel the Prophet (reader consider) : Then let them which be in Judea flee to the mountains." Here we must remember the parallelism between the two harvests, the two times of trouble and the two flights; and must consider that Judea would represent Christendom of to-day.

The Greek word rendered "mountains" may with equal or greater propriety be rendered in the singular—mountain: and it is so rendered in a majority of instances in the Common Version. Indeed, to flee out of Judea (literal) to either a mountain or many mountains seems peculiar since Judea was in fact "a hill country," and Jerusalem is described as set in the top of the mountains. But to apply our Lord's words to the present time, and to His people in Christendom, who now, in the light of present truth, see the Abomination stand where it ought not—in the holy place—in the stead of the true sacrifice, is a very simple matter. They should at once flee from the influence of the abomination and from the system falsely styling itself Christ's (mountain) kingdom, to the true mountain or Kingdom, which at this time Christ has returned to set up in glory and power.

But to leave Christendom, repudiating her temples, her forms of godliness, her social enchantments, her flatteries and honours, and to brave her denunciations and anathemas and her various powers of boycott, and to flee to the Lord and the true Kingdom, repudiated, ignored and denied by the worldly-wise and worldly-good, is surely quite a flight, quite a journey; and few but the "saints" will even think of starting on it. The perils of the way are portrayed by our Lord in a manner that would seem overdrawn and contrary to His usual custom if applicable only to the physical sufferings of the believers who fled from Judea in the close of the Jewish harvest; but His words are manifestly appropriate to the spiritual flight and trials of this harvest time. In a word, this command to flee, and the description of its trials, can only be properly understood in connection with the command of Revelation (18:4) "Come out of her, my people, so that you may have no fellowship with her sins, and that you may not receive of her plagues."

Office of Advocate and Mediator Contrasted.

THE fact that the Church is "the Mystery of God" has become more clear within the last fifty years. We know that Christ and the Church are separate and distinct from the world in every particular. They are neither under the old Law Covenant nor under the New Law Covenant, but are a peculiar people, called, sanctified, developed, under a special Covenant by themselves, in which none of the world will ever participate. This the Scripture styles the Covenant of Sacrifice: "Gather My saints [holy ones] together unto Me [saith the Lord] ; those that have made a Covenant with Me by sacrifice." (Psalm 50:5.) This special class of saints, or holy ones, who make the Covenant of Sacrifice have as their Head the Lord Jesus Himself. When this company shall have completed their Covenant by Sacrifice, this present Age will end. Moses of the Law Covenant given to Israel represented specially the Law Covenant which will be given to the world through the antitype of Moses—The Christ. In other words, the Mediator of the Law Covenant was one man; but the Mediator of the New Law Covenant of the Millennial Age is the new Man, of which Jesus is the Head— and the Apostle declares that the members are made up of those elected both from Jews and Gentiles.

From the time of Jesus down, the Mediator of the New Covenant has been in process of selection, and the "better sacrifices," as the basis for the New Covenant have been in process of offering. During this Gospel Age Jesus has not exercised His office as Mediator for the world; and the world has no relationship with God, but still lies in the Wicked One. The Mediator Himself has been in process of development. As the Apostle declares, God raised up Jesus first and since has been raising up the Church, and soon will finish the raising up. It is this Mediator or Prophet of whom St. Peter speaks in Acts 3:22, 23. (See also 1 Timothy 2:5, 6.) No mediating can be done until the Mediator of "many members" has qualified for the office. His qualification consists of His sacrificing, according to His Covenant of Sacrifice. The Christ, Head and Body, are, therefore, the Mediator for the world in a prospective sense—in the same sense as Jesus, the Babe, could be spoken of as the Saviour and the King. He is only now becoming the King and has yet saved only a few of His people.

There is a wide distinction between the work of a mediator and the work of an advocate. The Great Mediator between God and man—The Christ of glory—will fill His mediatorial office for a thousand years and complete it only by the end of that time, when He will deliver over to the Father, fully reconciled, all who can be brought into harmony with the Divine arrangement. The work, of an advocate is different, and according to the Bible, relates only to the work which Jesus accomplishes on behalf of the Church during this Age. The Church will need no advocate in the future. The world has no advocate now. "We have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous." It is Jesus individually who is the Advocate for us—"the Church, His Body." He advocates our cause—first of all by imputing to us the merit of His sacrifice, thus making us presentable in the Father's presence and acceptable as sons of God. Because of this Advocacy, we have received the holy spirit and are New Creatures in Christ. As New Creatures we still need our Advocate, because we cannot do the things that we would—perfectly. We have imperfections of the flesh, which, as New Creatures, we cannot fully control. Hence we need a Throne of Grace and an Advocate through whom we may maintain our present relationship with the Father, and thus not be condemned with the world.

The Miracle Book.

The following article on The Bible received from one of our brethren and published years ago in these columns is repeated for the benefit of new readers. The writer is unknown, but many of the thoughts are really beautiful and inspiring.

I WANT to speak to you to-night on the Bible—a miracle of diversity in unity. The Bible is its own greatest evidence to its Divine origin and authority and we cannot consider these two great facts without being tremendously impressed with the fact of the diversity of Holy Scripture and the fact of its unity.

Thinking of the diversity of the Bible I would remind you that there is diversity of language. The Old Testament was written in Hebrew, and portion of it in Chaldean. The New Testament was written in Greek. There is a diversity of authorship. These Scriptures were not written by any one man, neither by a company of men collaborating with one another. Men with greatly diversified mental calibre and training and occupation were employed in writing the Bible. Moses was a shepherd, Joshua was a soldier. Samuel was a seer, David was a King, Solomon was a philosopher, Amos a herdsman, Daniel a statesman, Ezra a scribe, Matthew a taxgatherer, Luke a doctor, John a fisherman, Paul was a scholar. Men of such diverse temperaments and training were employed in the writing of these sacred Books. But there is a further diversity of place in which these Scriptures were produced. They have come to us from the desert of Sinai, from the wilderness of Judea, from the banks of Chebar, from the city of Zion, from the public prison of Rome, from the Isle of Patmos. There is no literary phenomenon in the world to be compared with it; not only so, but there is diversity of form. In Genesis there are stories, in Leviticus there is ritual, in Deuteronomy there is oratory, in Ruth there is romance, in Samuel and Kings there is national history, in Job there is drama, the Psalms are sacred hymns, in Proverbs we have ethics, in Ecclesiastics we have philosophy, in the Canticles we have a love song, in Joel and Habakkuk we have rhapsody, in Isaiah and Jeremiah we have prophecy, in the Gospels we have biography, in Acts we have church history, in the Epistles we have doctrines, in Revelation we have the Apocalypse. These and other literature have place in this great spiritual classic. But not only here have we diversity of language, of authorship, of place, of forms, and of writing, but also of subject matter. Is there any other book in the world to be compared with it from this standpoint? In the Bible we read of God, men, of angels and demons, of Jews and Gentiles, of Christians and pagans, of saints and sinners, of the church and the world, of peace and war, of friends and foes, of blessings and curses, of holiness and sin, of honour and shame, of faith and unbelief, of time and eternity, of life and death, of love and rage, of heaven and hades. These and countless other subjects are brought to our notice within the covers of this extraordinary volume.

But we are not impressed with any sense of incongruity. There is an eminent fitness in the revelation of these Tremendous Themes to one another. Nor were these writings produced at any one time; they do not belong to any one age; they have come to us as the growth of some 1,500 to 1,600 years. Is there any other book in the world that can be compared with this as to its diversity? Were the number of subjects treated or their equivalent brought together in any other book no publisher would take the risk of publishing it and no purchaser would ever buy it and yet the Bible is the most widely circulated book in all the world. Other books have a season, they have a run and then we hear of them no more. But this book lives on through the ages, and outlives all other literature and is the Queen of all literature. But I think our astonishment is infinitely greater when we come to realise that notwithstanding all this diversity the Bible is nevertheless A Sublime Unity. We take the fact of this unity, then its nature. There are laws that govern organic unity. There are two kinds of unity which we may speak of as mechanic and organic. Mechanic unity is the unity of a building and is lifeless. Organic unity is the unity of a body and is alive. Scripture in its unity is not mechanic, it is organic. What are these laws? I only know of three. First, each and every part is essential to the whole. A famous Hebrew scholar once heard a sermon and criticised it, and said that the sermon was twice too long, it should be cut in half, it does not matter which half. It is quite evident that sermon was not a unity. It cannot be said of the Bible that it is twice too long; that we could well do without one half and it does not matter which half. The Bible is a whole in order to the perfection of the body. Every member is necessary. It does not follow that every member is vital.

If you gave me the choice of having the top of my finger cut off or my heart taken out, I should not take long to decide, but when the top of my finger is cut off the body is no longer perfect. We are not going to claim that every part of Holy Scripture is of equal value, but we claim that every part is essential to the whole, and that it all originates in the will and revelation of God. The two Testaments are essential to one another. They brood over the mercy seat as the cherubim of gold did of old, each answering to the other. "The New is in the Old contained, the Old is in the New explained." Genesis and Revelation are essential to one another. Genesis is the book of commencement, Revelation the book of consummation. There can be nothing before the commencement, there can be nothing after the consummation and so Genesis anticipates Revelation and Revelation consummates Genesis. Each and every part is essential to the whole. The second law that governs organic unity is this, that each part is related to and corresponds with every other part, Genesis with Matthew, the two great beginnings. The books that introduce the two covenants, Leviticus and Hebrews—Leviticus giving all that is essential to Judaism and Hebrews all that is essential to Christianity. Exodus with Acts—Exodus telling of the nationalisation of the people of God and Acts of the beginning of the Christian Church and the first generation of her history. Joshua with Ephesians of the Inheritance of the heavenly people. Daniel the Old Testament Apocalypse with Revelation the New Testament Apocalypse, pointing beyond the rise and fall of the world's empires to the coming of Him who is King of kings and Lord of lords. Each other is related to every other part, corresponds with every other part.

There is an extraordinary illustration of such correspondence. You take the first three chapters of Genesis and the last three of Revelation and you will find that each of these three chapters of Genesis and last three of Revelation treats of the same subjects but in the reverse order. In Genesis we have the first Heaven and Earth, in Revelation 22 the last heaven and earth. In Genesis 2 we have husband and wife, in Revelation 21 the Lamb and the Bride. In Genesis 3 the sentence is pronounced upon Satan, and in Revelation 20, the sentence is executed. It is little wonder that the devil attempts to get us to believe that the one book is all myth and the other all mystery. We claim that where there is organic unity every part is pervaded with the spirit of life. Hebrews speaks of the Word of God being alive and Peter speaks of the Word of God which liveth and abideth for ever. The Word of God is not a dead letter. We can no more leave the Bible alone or leave it out of our reckoning than we can leave Christ alone. Christ does not derive His value from the Bible; the Bible derives its value from Christ. Only through the Bible can we get to Christ; our eternal knowledge of Christ comes through the Bible.

There can be no question as to the fact of organic unity in the Scripture. The nature of that unity—structural unity; the Bible is built up in an extraordinary way not to be accounted for by accident or chance and in both Testaments we find some sequence. For instance in the Old Testament from Genesis to Esther we have history and further back we cannot go. But begin that first verse of the first of Genesis and interest is aroused, we are led on through all these Books right to the sublime end in the Apocalypse of John. We are impressed as we read with the amazing diversity of which we have spoken. The thing unfolds and presents itself as a sublime story. All these stories are one story, all these revelation are one revelation, and all these records are one record. Across the whole of the Old Testament you may write the word expectation and across the whole of the New you may write the word realisation. In Genesis there are Origins, in the Revelation there are issues and all the way between from Exodus to Jude there are processes leading from those origins to those issues. The revelation of God to man has been made in history and everywhere in Holy Scripture there is historical continuity and sequence. There is historical unity everywhere in Scripture; there is further Prophetic Unity. Here there is opportunity for the wildest confusion and multiplied contradiction, as witness modern prophecies. But although there was not and could not have been any collusion among the writers of Holy Scripture there is no contradiction.

There are four great themes of prophecies—the Messiah, the Jews, the Gentiles, and the Church. Some treat of one and some of another and not a few touch upon them all. But there is an amazing harmony everywhere, there is no contradiction among the voices. In the Old Testament there are predictions, in the New there are fulfilments. In the Old we get types, in the New antitypes. The whole of the Old is leading up to the First Advent and much of the New is leading up to the Second Advent. There is prophetic unity as well as structural unity, and historical unity everywhere in Scripture. Let me remind you further that we have here doctrinal unity. Now, were men left to themselves how utterly impossible it would be to have synthesis of doctrine and harmony of teaching. But these many writers across the Ages were not left to themselves. It is a wonderful Book and if it is not inspired it is much more wonderful!

Everywhere in Scripture Jehovah is God. To take one doctrine, we are told in some quarters that Jehovah was the tribal Deity of the Hebrews placing Him much on a level with Ashboreth of the Old Testament and in the New declared that Jehovah was the God of all the earth, the creator of the universe and its sustainer. The Jehovah of the Hebrews is no tribal Deity, He is the God of all men. God so loved—not the Hebrews, nor the Church—but the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life.

Everywhere in Scripture man is a sinner. The Old Testament does not present man as half a beast on his way up to morality and the New as a man made like God; both Testaments agree in saying that man has sinned and come short of the Glory of God. There is perfect harmony of doctrine. Both Testaments teach that Christ is the One and only Redeemer and His Cross our only hope. Redemption in the Old Testament anticipated, is in the New accomplished and it is from the Acts to the Apocalypse applied. It is the One Great Theme which runs through all the Scriptures. It is the note that dominates in this Orchestra from start to finish.

We also have spiritual unity. Think of the level of thought in the Bible. Think of its range, of its vision. Think of the sublimity of its themes. Think of the loftiness of its ideals. Think of the power of its appeals. The horizons of the Bible are infinitudes and immensities. The current coin of this realm is Faith, Love and Hope. Think what the Bible has done for the individual. Think of the countless millions who, were they with us still would say, “this one thing I know—that whereas I was blind now I see.” No man ever came to say that by studying philosophy or science, but many have through an acquaintance with the Word of God. Think of what the Bible has done for society. Think what it has done for the Church of God throughout the world and in all ages and for national life especially for our own and for the whole wide world and where the Word of God goes it is accepted and believed. There is emancipation, there is deliverance from the degradation and from cruelty. The Bible has brought release and relief to men and women and safe guarding of children. It has turned the demons out of cruel hearts and made men sober and kind. If the Bible is to be judged by what it has accomplished then verily it is the Book of Books and the Word of God. It could have no other origin than God Himself. And if of Divine origin then it is of Divine authority. It does not need our apology or our special pleading. Give it a chance, it will demonstrate its own character and its own Power.

This is the staff upon which multitudes of Pilgrims have found their way to the shining home far away up among the delectable mountains. This is the star that has guided mariners on the storm tossed oceans through the ages. This is the weapon with which Christian soldiers have fought their battles to glorious victory. This is the compass that has guided men in darkness and distress. This is the Book on which your sainted mother and father laid down their heads as upon a pillow in the last moments of life and passed away crooning some Old Testament Psalm such as “The Lord is my Shepherd I shall not want” etc. This is the Book of all ages and they who build upon it are as eternal as God.

Darwin’s Mistake.

Three monkeys sat on a coconut tree
Discussing things as they’re said to be.
Said one to the others, “Now listen you two,
There’s a certain rumour that can’t be true,
That man descended from our noble race.

“The very idea is a big disgrace,
No monkey ever deserted his wife,
Starved her babies and ruined her life,
And you’ve never known a mother monk
To leave her babies with others to bunk,

Or pass them on from one to another
Till they scarcely know who is their mother.
“And another thing, you’ll never see
A monk build a fence round a coconut tree,
And let the coconuts go to waste,

Forbidding all other monks to taste.
Why, if I put a fence round the tree,
Starvation would force you to steal from me.”

The Sealed Ones and the Great Multitude.

“I heard the number of them that were sealed; and there were sealed an hundred and forty four thousand, of all the tribes of the children of Israel.” (Rev. 7:4.)

OUR Lord Jesus, before He came into the world, was the Son of God on the Heavenly plane, the Only Begotten of the Father—Jehovah’s only direct creation. (Col. 1:15 ; Rev. 3:14.) When in the flesh, He was still God’s well-loved Son. This is the One who when on earth as a man gave Himself in consecration to do the Father’s will, even at the cost of His own life, that He might purchase back from death the fallen human race. For this, the Father highly rewarded Him, by raising Him from the dead a Divine Being. Our Lord has had three natures, being now a partaker of the nature of Jehovah—the Divine. “Him bath God supremely exalted, and given Him a name above every name.”—Phil. 2:9-11.

This perfect obedience on the part of our Lord Jesus was the basis, then, on which God raised Him to His present high position. God might have let Him take at once His power as King of kings and Lord of lords, and begin His great work of blessing mankind. But God’s plan was different. In His purpose the Father not only foreknew the Lord Jesus for this work, but foreknew also that certain ones chosen from the human family would gladly become fellow-sufferers with Jesus that they might be fellow-sharers in His glory to follow. How could God arrange this? The answer is that they may have a part in this arrangement by marriage, by becoming united to Christ Jesus as His bride, His body, which is to be composed of 144,000 members.

How These Are Of The Tribes Of Israel.

St. John the Revelator tells about this 144,000 12,000 from each tribe of Israel. How does the Church, the Body of Christ, come to be of the twelve tribes of Israel? In this way: God laid out the entire programme of the Gospel Age on the Jewish basis. Provision was made for choosing the total number of the Bride class out of natural Israel—12,000 out of each of the twelve tribes. God foreknew, however, that fleshly Israel as a nation would not receive Jesus as Messiah, and that those who would receive Him would be only a small remnant from all the tribes. But the elect

Church was to number 144,000-12,000 from each tribe.

Of those of Fleshly Israel who came into the Gospel Church we do not know the proportion from each of the tribes. All twelve tribes were represented in Palestine when our Lord Jesus came, though chiefly Judah and Benjamin. During the Jewish Age harvest there were probably no more than about 25,000 gathered to the Lord from Palestine and adjacent countries—an average of a little over 2,000 from each tribe. So there was not nearly the required number. Therefore, after the close of the 70 symbolic weeks of favour (Dan. 9:24) promised to the Jews, God turned to the Gentiles, to fill up the number lacking from the various tribes. (Acts 13:46 ; see also Rom. 11:17-23, Gal. 3:29.) When we were received into Christ, the question was, Where would we be put? We do not know, however, where the Lord has put us; some will be in one tribe, and some in another, as God wills. But His decision will satisfy us.

Another Company—"A Great Multitude."

After we are told about these 144,000 from the twelve tribes, who are to be of the Very Elect, who are to stand with Christ on Mount Zion (Rev. 7:1-8; 14:1-5), and who only will be able to sing the song of Moses and the Lamb, mention is made of a much larger company. This Great Company say that they will never deny God's name or His cause. But they have not been living in harmony with their vows. Therefore they will not receive the reward coming to those who are ready to meet the Lord at any moment, those whose lamps are trimmed and burning.

This unfaithful class are the ones mentioned in the Revelation as having soiled their garments—those who have failed to keep "unspotted from the world." He says, "I looked, and behold a great multitude, whose number no man knows, of all nations and kindreds and people and tongues; and they stood before the Throne and 'before the Lamb.'" (Rev. 7:9-14.) These are the Spiritual Israelites who are not of the priestly family. As in Natural Israel the Levites were far more numerous than the priests, so in Spiritual Israel.

The angel said to St. John, "Who are these, and whence came they?" He replied, "Sir, thou knowest." So the angel said, "These are they who have come up out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." Nothing but the blood of Jesus will ever take away these sins. They must all be cleansed in "a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation". This class will have their portion with the hypocrites, because they have failed to live up to their covenant with God. They hesitate to step forward boldly and say, "I am striving to be a footstep follower of the Lord Jesus Christ."

But here is our opportunity to take a stand before the world and to lift up the banner of the Lord. Let the people know where you stand! If you say, "Of course I am religious, but I do not wish to be extreme," then your worldly acquaintances will say, "That is right. Don't be extreme; come in and have a game of 'cards!'" Such Christians get themselves into trouble at once.

Some of this class become so besmirched that they plunge into wilful, deliberate sin. This course would merit the Second Death, as far as we understand the Word of God. But others say, "I will never go deliberately into sin. I am no saint, I know; but I will never deny the Lord; I will never deny the principles of righteousness." There is considerable good character manifested here, even though that person is not living up to the covenant made with God. Such are still loyal at heart. Some of them have been weak through fear of loss of worldly favour, or have been hindered by the cares of this life. This is the class that will be in the second company, the Great Company.

How They Lost Their Crowns.

You ask, "How do they get into such a condition?" We answer, There are various ways. The following illustrates one of these: Suppose you as a child of God should get angry, should speak a bitter word. Afterwards you felt that this was something against you. You hastened to the Throne of Grace, and said, "O, Lord, forgive! Cleanse me from my iniquity, and I will never do this again!" Perhaps a day or two afterward you made the same mistake; and you felt, oh, so abashed! It was more difficult to go to the Mercy Seat the second time; but you went and said, "Lord. I am so ashamed, so sorry! I will try not to do this again!" But perhaps in a week, or perhaps in an hour or two, you had repeated the transgression. You were almost discouraged. You feared to go to the Lord. When you were preparing to retire at night, and the time had come for reviewing the events of the day, you said to yourself, "I cannot go to the Lord to-night, and own that I have failed again!"

You succeed in putting the matter off, but you are anxious. You try to get it out of your mind. The next morning you go about your duties, but you have not made the matter right with God. During the day something happens that causes you again to transgress. In distress you say, "I will not think about it. Everybody commits sins. There may be some who can overcome, but I cannot. There is no use to try." So it goes on, the trespasses accumulating. From time to time you offer prayer; but it is largely a formality. If this condition of things is not rectified by the proper steps, you will certainly lose your Crown and go into great tribulation.

All down the Gospel Age there have been some of this class; but the Revelator pictures those now living. "Judgment must begin at the House of God" (1 Pet. 4:17) and those slothful ones must answer for their unfaithfulness. But after their sore chastisement in the coming great trouble, they will realise that it has worked good to them, and will say, "Let us be glad and rejoice. Let us glorify God that we were finally delivered. We have not been faithful; we have allowed things to hold us back. But now the Marriage of the Lamb has taken place. Our robes have been cleansed, and we are invited to the Marriage Supper, even though we have missed being of the Bride class. What a pity that we did not yield ourselves up wholly to the Lord." See Rev. 19:6-9.

Not Many Wealthy, Great Or Wise Called.

God's faithful ones love to meet together and encourage one another in the good way. The association of the Lord's true people is like a bed of coals. One coal will not keep warm alone; but when many coals are brought together each warms the others. Therefore, the Apostle exhorts, "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together . . . and so much the more as ye see the Day approaching."—Heb. 10:25.

It is not money that draws us together. There is not a millionaire amongst the saints, so far as we know. Whoever wishes to get into a club of millionaires will not find it in the Church of Christ. The true Church are not as a rule wealthy, nor are they as a class the most learned, the most talented, the most refined, to be found. If these things are what you are seeking in the Church of Christ then you are looking in the wrong place. On the other hand, whoever is ashamed of the brethren of Christ is accounted as ashamed of Him.

We are not to be ashamed of the brethren of Christ or of His Truth. Our Lord says, "Whosoever shall be ashamed of Me and of My Word, of him shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when He shall come in His own glory and His Father's." (Luke 9:26.) In other words, He will not have him in the Bride class. That Great Company is represented as eventually getting the palms of victory and as serving God in His Temple. But so far as you and I are concerned, we are looking for something better—the Crown of Glory—immortality. The class that will receive this great exaltation with Christ is the class that "follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth."

"He Cometh Now To Reign."

In Psalm 45:3, 4, the Psalmist tells us of the majesty of our Lord Jesus when He comes to reign on earth. "Gird Thy Sword upon Thy Thigh, O most Mighty." Our Lord here girds on His sword, that with it He should smite the nations. During all these eighteen hundred years He has not until now girded on this sword. But now the time has arrived. The Great War was the beginning of the work of disintegration. In two World Wars we saw a general spirit of partisanship, even amongst professed Christian people. We who are members of the Bride of Christ are to forget that we are British or German or French, etc. We are to be rid of all bias and false expectations, and thus be better able to see God's view of the whole matter.

The Lord wishes to have a judicial class. We are preparing to be the judges of the world. "Know ye not that the saints are to judge the world?" (1 Cor. 6:2.) But we are not to attempt to be judges now.

Let us, then, as true disciples of Christ, help each other. Let us all be peacemakers and point others to the Kingdom of God's dear Son, which is soon to be inaugurated upon the ruins of the present evil order, and which will prove to be "the desire of all nations." Then wars and all other calamities will be made to cease forever; for nothing will be permitted to hurt or destroy in all God's holy kingdom :—Isa. 11:9.

Brethren Finish Pilgrim Way.

Early last month word was received of the passing of our dear elderly Brother H. Collis Brown of Tasmania, who had for many years walked in the steps of the Master in full appreciation of the truth. Sincere sympathy is extended to the relatives and members of the Lord's people in Tasmania who will miss such a faithful Christian very much. However, we rejoice that our dear Brother has entered into the heavenly Home after a life of devoted service to the Lord's cause.

The following expressions are from those who associated in fellowship with our dear Brother over many years past

"We are going to miss him very much, but by God's grace we shall go forth and worship God, leaning upon the staff which we made in yesteryears. We had a nice little service at the graveside which the dear Brother had previously arranged, and even though we sorrow not as do others, we could not but feel that it would have been nice if we could have all gone Home with him."

"We have lost our dear Brother and will miss him very much. To be changed in the twinkling of an eye; how lovely for him. He worked up to the last and died while having a bath on the Sunday morning. The rest of the journey will be lonely without him; he has been a dear Brother and has not spared himself at any time. What lovely memories he has left us; we love to think of the lovely times we have had together."

We have just recently learned of the passing beyond the veil of Brother D. Murray of Dundee, Scotland, who had been in constant touch and appreciated greatly the truth literature received over many years, and extend our sympathy to Sister Murray and to all the brethren of the Ecclesia at Dundee. One of our brethren knew Brother Murray personally and writes as follows:

"It was a privilege to stay in the home of Brother and Sister Murray while Sister Murray senior was still there some twenty years ago and that visit is still one of the sweet memories of that time.

"Brother will be greatly missed; he seemed to fill a large place, not on account of any public service such as speaking, but rather because of what is also important, a happy, helpful and encouraging influence to fellow pilgrims in the narrow way, and by letting his light shine that others seeing his good works might glorify God.

"In this time of 'distress of nations'—earth's dark night that is to precede the morning of a better day—one thinks of the words of Jesus prior to the trouble coming on Jerusalem, 'Weep not for me but for yourselves.' Those now passing away are no doubt saved from much trouble, and we do not sorrow as those without hope. We rejoice in the assured hope of the morning of joy. 'I shall be satisfied when I awake in His likeness.' 1 John 3:1, 2."

Dear Brethren. As the Committee of Arrangements for the 1948 General Convention of Bible Students, which was held in Chautauqua, Ohio, August 1-8, it affords us great pleasure to forward to you the following resolution which was unanimously adopted by the brethren assembled:

“To our dear brethren in Christ, our co-workers in Great Britain, France, Switzerland, Germany, Poland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Roumania, Hungary, Greece, India, Italy, Newfoundland and Australia:

“Greetings! We, your brethren assembled in General Convention at Chautauqua, Ohio, August 1-8, send you our Christian love in abundant measure. Though separated by the great span of the sea, we assure you that we share with you in like joy, in like trial; we share the same hope, we have the same truth; and as you show forth the praises of our Lord and King there, we do also here. May we therefore assure you of our constant prayers on your behalf, and may the God of all grace, who hath called you and us unto His eternal glory, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you in Christ.”

Yours in the one hope,

The 1948 General Convention Committee.

The following brief extracts from addresses given at the above Convention, quoted from “The Dawn”, will no doubt be appreciated by our readers:

“There are four Scriptural rules of conduct which, if used as a guide in our Christian lives, will help us to walk circumspectly.

Rule 1: Let us resolve to mind our own business—we are not to be busybodies in other people’s affairs. Rule 2: We should exercise great patience with others—especially the brethren. Rule 3: We should endeavour not to be ‘touchy’ and easily offended. Rule 4: God’s people should beware of pride and avoid it as a deadly plague.”

“Patience smoothes the way for every other grace. (Gal. 5:22.) If we are disturbed by all the ‘little noises’ of life we can have very little joy or peace.”

“The underlying principles of consecration are (1) enlightenment of the mind which leads to (2) control of the heart’s affections, leading (3) to the making of a covenant by sacrifice with the Lord which is of a permanent character.”

“The consecrated life is concerned not only with the mastery of self, but also with service for others.-

“Just claiming that what we are doing is in His name is not enough—we must be sure that we are doing God’s will. Avoid the spectacular. Do not lose your humility.”

“Speaking of Jesus’ visit in the home of Mary of Bethany, every home of consecrated people not only needs the visits of Jesus, but should see to it that He constantly abides there.”

“The successful Christian life is not one that is allowed to drift haphazardly along. We should not take the attitude that we will witness for the Lord if an opportunity happens to come our way, but should rather seek opportunities and make plans for laying down our lives in the service of the Lord and His truth and the brethren. ‘We should plan our work, and then work our plan.’ The faithful discharge of the obligations imposed by our consecration vows should be the constant and studied objective of life—‘My earliest thought I desire shall be, What shall I render unto the Lord?’ “

Peoples Paper Subscription 4/6 per annum.

Costs of producing the “Peoples Paper” have continued to increase since early in the year when the subscription was raised to 4/-, so it is found necessary to increase the subscription rate to 4/6 per annum. It is felt that all subscribers will understand that the further increase is unavoidable, especially as the General Tract Fund already makes up some deficiency in the publication of the monthly “Paper.” The new rate will apply from the 1st of this month.

Jesus' Blood and the Blood of the New Covenant.

THE Scriptures repeatedly mention the fact that we are justified by faith in His blood—in the blood of Jesus. They also speak of “the blood of the covenant wherewith we were sanctified.” (Heb. 10:29.) And again in Heb. 13:20, 21 we read, “Through the blood of the everlasting covenant make you perfect.” How shall we understand this? Do these Scriptures all refer to the same thing?

No, these Scriptures do not refer to the same thing. The first one relates to us as natural men, sinners, before we made our consecration to the Lord and became New Creatures. We, as members of the fallen race, were first justified by faith through the merit of Christ's blood. This justification lifted us from the plane of sin and death condemnation, to a standing of harmony with God. From this standpoint we were invited to become joint-sacrificers with Jesus Christ our Lord—sharers with Him in His great work for mankind, namely, the sealing of the New Covenant with His blood, and ultimately the blessing of the world during the Millennium under the conditions of that New Covenant. So, then, it was after we had been justified by faith in the blood of Jesus that we were sanctified, set apart, consecrated through or in connection With “the blood of the New Covenant” by our consecration to be dead with Christ, to be buried with Him by baptism into His sacrificial death—to drink of His cup of suffering, ignominy, shame, death—to partake of or share His blood—set apart or devoted to the serving of the New Covenant for Israel and the world. It was on account of our entering into this great engagement that the Heavenly Father sanctified us or set apart, separated us from the world by begetting us to a new nature through His holy spirit. “Ye are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.”—John 17:16.

The last text cited, “The blood of the everlasting Covenant make you perfect,- refers not to a perfecting of the flesh—not to anything which refers to us as natural men. It refers to us as new creatures who have been begotten of the holy spirit; because, after we were justified through faith in the blood of Jesus, we presented our bodies living sacrifices, holy and acceptable to God, and, under the Headship of Christ, to be associated with Him in His sacrifice for the sealing of the New Covenant and by and by to be associated with Him in the glorious work of establishing that New Covenant, after it shall have been sealed for the blessing of Israel and the world. It is through our obedience to our Sacrificial Vow to “be dead with Christ” as joint-sacrificers in connection with the sealing of the New Covenant that we may become members of His body. It is this sacrificing with Him which will make us perfect as new creatures and give us a share with our Lord in His glory, honour and immortality. Thus we see that justification by faith in the blood of Jesus is the first step, by which believers separate themselves from the world according to the will of God; and that participation with our Lord in His sacrifice is the second step of sanctification. There could be no such step of sanctification, no perfecting as new creatures of the “divine nature” had it not been that God granted us the privilege of sharing with our Lord in His sacrificial death, in His work of sealing the New Covenant with His blood.

The majority of Christians, of course, have gone no further than the first step of justification through faith in the blood of Jesus. Failing to go on, to “present their bodies living sacrifices” and to thus share with Christ in His sacrificial death, they are not privileged to understand “the mystery of God” (Rev. 10:7) , which is “Christ in you the hope of glory” (Col. 1:27)—your membership in the body of Christ, your share with Him in present sufferings and future glory.

When the disciples James and John said to the Master, “Lord, grant that we may sit, one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in thy kingdom,” they were already consecrated, in the sense of agreeing to take up the cross to follow after Jesus in the narrow way. But the Father had not yet accepted their consecration, and set them apart, and did not do so until Pentecost. Our Lord Jesus, therefore, addressed them not as New Creatures, but as justified men, when He answered their request. saying, “Ye know not what ye ask! Can ye drink of the cup that I drink of and be baptized with the baptism (into sacrificial death) that I am baptized with?”

Here we see that drinking of the cup—drinking and partaking of the blood of the New Covenant shed for us and for all for the remission of sins and being baptized with Christ's baptism into a sacrificial death — was a wholly different matter from justification by faith. They were already justified by faith, but could not sit on the throne unless they would be sanctified by participation in Christ's death.

Able Ministers Of The New Covenant.

In what sense was our Lord Jesus “the Messenger of the Covenant” and in what sense are we the “able ministers (or messengers) of the New Covenant” ?—Mal. 3:1; 2 Cor. 3:6.

Our Lord was the Messenger of the New Covenant by a divine promise. Israel was aware that their Law Covenant under its mediator Moses had not brought to them the long-expected blessings implied in the Abrahamic Covenant. God had promised that at a future time He would make a New Covenant with them (Jer. 31:31) , thus implying that they were right in not expecting much from the Law Covenant. Of course, a New Covenant would imply a new Mediator for that covenant.

This Moses himself had foretold, saying, “A prophet (teacher, mediator) shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren like unto me” (but greater) . (Acts 3:23 :) They understood that this great Prophet or Mediator would be Messiah, and they consequently longed for and delighted in the prospect of His coming.

This is the thought behind Malachi’s prophecy, “He shall come, even the Messenger of the Covenant, whom ye delight in.” Of course at that time our Lord had not yet become the messenger or servant of the Covenant, hence this was merely a prophecy respecting His future work. He became the Messenger or Servant of the New Covenant at Jordan, when He consecrated His all unto death as the ransom-price for the world (its application in due time).

He there began to serve the New Covenant by providing the price, the blood, which should ultimately seal the New Covenant or make it effective. The laying down of His life was not the sealing of the covenant, however, but merely a preparatory work. He there became the “surety” or guarantor that in due time the New Covenant would be sealed and made effective. In His sacrifice of Himself our Lord was serving a Covenant not yet sealed, but merely promised or guaranteed.

Similarly the Lord is now gathering His church, a “little flock,” to be members of the antitypical Prophet, Priest, King, Judge, Mediator between God and the world of mankind during the Millennium. These called, chosen, spirit- begotten ones, are “able ministers of the New Covenant,” after the same manner as their Lord—walking in His steps. They minister or serve the New Covenant as an attorney serves in drawing up an agreement or covenant. It will not be a covenant until sealed, but, while it is in process of preparation it is spoken of as a covenant, and, in writing the agreement, the attorney is serving that agreement by putting it into shape, arranging for its sealing, etc. So Christ and His members are able or qualified ministers or servants of the New Covenant which God has promised and in which the hope of Israel and the world is centered.

Therefore, Christ and the church now minister for or serve that New Covenant in various ways:

- 1 In gathering the members of the body of the great Mediator.
- 2 In learning and teaching to others the lessons necessary to qualify for the position.
- 3 In preparing the blood with which it is to be sealed—”His blood,” “Jesus’ blood,” appropriated first to the church and ultimately, after having served its purpose in the justification of the church, to be passed on for the blessing of the world through the sealing of the New Covenant with Israel.

Evening.

Another closing day,
Another setting sun:

What progress have I made?
What duty have I done?

Behold the record, Lord, and see
If I have tried to live for Thee,

And where I fail, O pardon me.
Have I in simple faith,

Before Thy gracious throne,
Lived only in Thy strength,

Or trusted in my own?
Behold the record, Lord, and see

If I have tried to live for Thee,
And where I fail, O pardon me.

Our Lord's Great Prophecy.

“Come Out Of Her, My People!”

“Let him which is on the housetop not come down to take anything out of his house: neither let him that is in the field return back to take his clothes.”—Matt. 24.17, 18.

THESE statements indicate the propriety of haste in flight out of “Babylon”, as soon as each sees the abomination of desolation. The Lord's word is, that all temporizing or parleying or human reasoning will be dangerous: no time must be lost in obeying as soon as He causes us to see the abomination of Babylon, and its relationship to all who have named His name. Alas! how many, failing to heed the Master's word, have suffered themselves to be bound hand and foot, so that now flight is almost impossible. But the Master says, “My sheep hear my voice and they follow me.”

There is another lesson in these verses: they show that some of the Lord's people are in one place or condition, and some in another. Some are in the “field”; that is, in the world outside all human organizations: these should not think it proper first to join the nominal churches; but using their liberty should flee from their position in the world, to become one with the Lord as members of His Kingdom—mountain.

Some of the Lord's people are in the houses or church systems of Babylon—but, as here intimated, they are generally house-top saints, who have a higher life and experience and faith than merely nominal church members. These in their flight are not to go down into the house (nominal church systems) to seek to carry with them their “stuff”;—their valuables in human estimation, such as titles, dignities, respect, commendations of good and regular standing, etc., but are to forsake all for Christ, and flee to the true Kingdom.

Difficulties Of The Flight.

“And woe unto them that are with child, and them that give suck in those days!”—Matt. 24:19.

There are spiritual “babes,” as well as fleshly babes, and bastards as well as sons. The Apostle Paul describes his interest in gospel work as that of a mother travailing with child. He says,—“O my little children, [because] of whom I travail in birth again, until Christ be formed in you.” (Gal. 4:19.) Similarly all faithful servants of Christ, all earnest labourers for souls, are such as are described in this text as being “with child”. Spiritual childbearing after the apostolic example is most honourable service, and engages the attention of some of God's most devoted children. But alas! as the desire of Abraham and Sarah to help fulfil God's promises led to an unauthorized method, and produced an Ishmael class, which, born after the flesh, persecuted the seed born legitimately, so is it with many of these who now are “with child”;—they are helping to produce illegitimate “children of God”. It should be remembered by all, however, that only legitimate means should be employed; all the children of God are begotten by the word and spirit of the truth, and not by human theory and spirit of the world.

False views of the divine plan (the supposition that all except the elect Church will be everlastingly tormented) have in some so stimulated their desires to bring forth “children” that they have resorted to various human devices for begetting them--overlooking the fact that all not “begotten of God”, all not begotten “by the word of truth”-- (not merely the letter of the Word, but “begotten of the spirit” of the truth), are spurious, and not reckoned as of God nor treated as sons. (Heb. 12:8.) As a consequence the Church nominal of to-day makes “a fair show in the flesh”—numerically, financially, intellectually—and has much of “the form of godliness” without its real spirit and power to control the heart. It is full of “babes”, some indeed babes in Christ, but many, many bastards, not sons of God; begotten of error instead of truth,—tares.” And the constant effort is to bring forth more even of the spurious progeny;—hoping thus to save them from eternal torment, the unjust sentence of a supposed merciless God.

Alas! how difficult it is for these dear children of God who are thus figuratively, in our Saviour's words, “with child”, to flee from the nominal church system with its multitudinous machinery for false and rapid begetting, which they have learned to glory in and to boast of. Yes, it will be difficult for these to leave all and flee to the Lord and His mountain (Kingdom). It will be difficult for them to believe that the Lord is really good and just and merciful, and that He has a gracious plan which makes full provision for every member of Adam's race—all redeemed by the great “ransom for all”.

The class which gives “suck” in these days also contains many noble, good, well-meaning children of God. It includes many ministers and Sunday School teachers,—whose religious work consists in giving out “milk”; not always the “pure milk of the Word”, however, for they generally dilute and adulterate it with tradition, philosophy and worldly-wisdom opiates, which keep their “babes” docile, sleepy, “good”; and hinder their growth in knowledge and grace, which they have come to consider dangerous.

Some few of these teachers do indeed endeavour to give the “pure milk of the Word” that their “babes” may grow thereby and learn to eat and assimilate the strong meat and come to manhood in Christ, but repeated experiments they declare prove to them that even the “pure milk of the Word” will not agree with the majority of their “babes”; and hence they consider it their duty to adulterate the milk lest their “babes” sicken and die. and they do not recognize that the majority of their “babes”, not being begotten of the spirit of the truth, never will be able to assimilate spiritual “milk”; because “the natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God, neither can he appreciate them, because they are of spiritual appreciation.” (1 Con 2:14, 12.) Neither do they see that this failure to discriminate is starving, stunting and poisoning the true spiritual “babes” under their care ;--who “for the time ought to be teachers”.—Heb. 5:12.

So many of this class as are true children of God will hear the call, “Come out of her my people”, and will also have great difficulty in this day. As they come to see present truth they will not only fear to give it to those under their care. but they will also fear to act upon it themselves, lest it separate them from their charges. They will fear to flee in this day; realizing that but few of their “babes” would be able or willing to join in the flight;—and indeed only the spiritual will be able to endure the ordeal. Some will pass the crisis in safety as “overcomers”; while others, fearful, will be left come through the great tribulation.

Flee Before The Winter Time.

“But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter (neither on the Sabbath day) ,—because then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. And except, those days be cut short there should no flesh be saved; but through [by] the elect those days shall be cut short.”—Matt. 24:20-22.

This gathering of the Church occurs in what is called a “harvest” time, at the close of a summer time of favour.

Our Lord explained (Matt. 13:30, 37-43) that in this harvest He would garner His wheat and burn the tares in a great time of trouble following. It is still the custom in country places to leave the burning off of refuse until the winter. We understand our Lord to mean, then, that we are to seek help and strength to escape from Babylon before the wintertime of her trouble comes upon her.

We are to remember that there are to be two classes of wheat saved in this harvest—contrary to nature though it be. (1) The “overcomers”, the faithful and promptly obedient who get out before “winter” and are “accounted worthy to escape all those things that shall come to pass”. (Luke 21:36.) (2) Those loyal, but not promptly obedient children of God, overcharged, with zeal not according to knowledge, and more or less contaminated with the spirit of the world. These will be helped out of Babylon when she is falling, and will flee in the winter-time, saying in the words of the Prophet, “The harvest is past, the Summer is ended [Winter has come], and we are not saved.” (Jer.8:20.) The Lord very graciously indicates, that all the truly loyal of these shall ultimately “come up out of great tribulation” and be before the throne (not in the throne with the “little flock” who inherit the Kingdom as joint-heirs with Christ) , having washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb. (Rev. 7:14, 15.) Let us pray, and labour accordingly, that we be through our flight before the “winter” of trouble comes.

We are to pray that our flight be not on the Sabbath day. What Sabbath day? Not the Seventh day of the week, nor the First day; for “new moons and Sabbaths” surely would prove no hindrance to Christians in any physical flight. (Col. 2:16.) The Sabbath meant is the great antitypical Sabbath --The Millennium, the Seventh-thousand-year Sabbath. This is the thousand years when the over-comers are to reign with Christ (Rev. 20:6) , hence, it would be too late to make flight on this Sabbath day, as it follows the “winter” time during which Babylon must fall as God has declared. No power can sustain her: and no one who realizes how imperfect is her work, and how good and gracious will be the work of the Lord after she is removed and the true Church glorified, could wish to hinder the Lord’s work for one moment.

The great tribulation of this “winter” time is to be unprecedented; and our Lord’s assurance is, that nothing to compare with it has or shall ever come upon the world. This positively identifies His language with the trouble at the close of this Gospel age of which the prophet says, “At that time shall Michael [Christ] stand up [assume control] . . . and there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation.” (Dan. 12:1.) It identifies it also with the period mentioned in Revelation (11:17, 18) when “the nations were angry and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead that they should be judged”. So great will this trouble be that without some intervening power to cut it short the entire race would eventually be exterminated. But God has prepared the intervening power—His Kingdom, Christ and His Church—”the elect”. The elect will intervene at the proper time and bring order out of earth’s confusion.

Our Lord's Great Prophecy.

The Darkening Of The Sun And Moon As Signs.

IMMEDIATELY after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken."—Matt. 24:29; Mark 13:24, 25.

The tribulation "of those days" should be clearly distinguished from the tribulation at the end of those days, in which this age and harvest will close: put this is not so clearly manifest, in the accounts by Matthew and Mark as when we compare Luke's record:—which seems to briefly summarize the events of the Gospel age, and, omitting the "tribulation of those days," refers only to the other tribulation with which the age will be closed. He says,—

"And they [Jews] shall fall by the edge of the sword and be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the Times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled. And there shall be signs in the sun and in the moon and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking forward to those things which are coming upon the earth."—Luke 21:24, 25.

The fact is that the entire Gospel age has been a period of tribulation referred to in Matt. 24:9-12, and now in verse 29. (1) The early Church was persecuted by civil Rome, while later, when Papal Rome got control, all who refused to approve her abominations were persecuted by her (Jezebel) directly, or indirectly by the civil powers to which she was wedded (Ahab). And they were given into her power, and she wore out the saints of the Most High for a time, times and a half time—1260 years—until A.D. 1799. And this long persecution, in which "many were purified and made white and tried," and in which the Mother of Harlots was "drunk with the blood of the saints and the martyrs of Jesus" (Rev. 17:6) ended practically in 1776 and actually in 1799 when the Pope and his authority were humiliated before the World.

Understanding clearly, then, that it is signs that will follow the tribulation "of those days" that our Lord refers to, we inquire respecting the very definitely described signs;—the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars. Are these signs to be regarded as literal or as symbolic? and have they yet been fulfilled?

We answer that they have had a literal fulfilment, and are now having a symbolic fulfilment much more momentous.

On 19th May, 1780 (still "in those days," the 1260 years of Papal power, but after that power had begun to wane and the brunt of the tribulation had passed) a phenomenal darkening of the sun occurred, for which scientists of that time and since have never been able to account. That this was no ordinary occurrence is sufficiently established by the following competent testimony:

The noted astronomer Herschel, says:—

"The dark day in Northern America was one of those wonderful phenomena of nature which will always be read of with interest, but which philosophy is at a loss to explain."

Webster's Dictionary, 1869 edition, under the head of Vocabulary of Noted Names, says:

“The dark day, 19th May, 1780—so called on account of a remarkable darkness on that day extending over all New England. In some places, persons could not see to read common print in the open-air for several hours together, Birds sang their evening songs, disappeared, and became silent; fowls went to roost; cattle sought the barn-yard; and candles were lighted in the houses. The obscuration began about ten o’clock in the morning, and continued till the middle of the next night, but with differences of degree of duration in different places.”

The Connecticut Legislature was in session that day and adjourned. The “Journal of the House” notes the matter as follows:

“A solemn gloom of unusual darkness before ten o’clock—a still darker cloud rolling under the sable curtain from the North and West before eleven o’clock,—excluded the light so that none could see to read or write in the House, even at either window, or distinguish persons at a short distance, or perceive any distinction of dress in the circle of attendants; wherefore, at eleven o’clock adjourned the House till two in the afternoon. Friday, 19th May, 1780.”

A minister of that time, and an eye-witness, Rev. Elam Potter, preaching on 28th May, nine days after it, is reported to have used the following language

“But specially I mention that wonderful darkness on the 19th of May, inst. Then, as in our text, the sun was darkened; such a darkness as was probably never known before since the crucifixion of our Lord. People left their work in the house and in the field; travellers stopped; schools broke up at eleven o’clock; people lighted candles at noon-day; and the fire shone as at night. Some people, I am told, were in dismay, and thought whether the day of judgment was not drawing on. A great part of the following night also was Singularly dark. The moon, though in the full, gave no light, as in our text.”

The darkening of the moon at its full the night following seems to have been little less remarkable than this darkening of the sun; a witness, Judge Tenney, of Exeter, N.H., is quoted as follows:

“The darkness of the following evening was probably as gross as has ever been observed since the Almighty first gave birth to light. I could not help conceiving at the time, that if every luminous body in the universe had been shrouded in impenetrable darkness, or struck out of existence, the darkness could not have been more complete. A sheet of white paper held within a few inches of the eye was equally invisible with the blackest velvet.”

This unaccountable day, except as a sign from the Lord, is reckoned to have extended over 320,000 square miles— an area about twenty-five times the size of Palestine, to which the signs of the first advent were limited. Indeed, the fact that these signs were chiefly confined to New England and Middle States need not surprise us, when we remember that the first movement amongst the “Virgins” (Matt. 25:1-5) was chiefly in the same locality. And that God should use the “land of liberty” for sending the message of these signs to the world, is no more wonderful than that He has been pleased to send from the same quarter many of the modern blessings and inventions and lessons, recognized by the whole world, and aptly emblemized by- the gift of the great French artist, Bartholdi, to New York harbour — the statue of “Liberty Enlightening the World.”

The Falling Stars.

Half a century passed before the next sign appeared, the falling of the stars from heaven, as when a fig tree casteth her unripe fruit when shaken of a mighty wind. Our Lord’s words found a fulfilment (though not their complete and only fulfilment, as we shall see later) in the wonderful meteoric showers of the early morning of. 13th November,

1833. Those inclined to quibble by urging that “the fixed stars did not fall” are reminded that our Lord said nothing about fixed stars falling, and that fixed stars could not fall: their falling would prove that they were not fixed. The Scriptures do not distinguish between stars and meteors as is commonly done in our day.

Shooting stars, and even meteoric showers are not uncommon every year, and some years more than others. it is computed that 400,000 small meteors fall to our earth annually. But these are nothing in comparison to the great shower of 13th November, 1833, in which millions on millions fell.

Professor Kirkwood, in his work entitled “Meteorology,” says,—”Until the close of last century they [meteoric showers] never attracted the attention of scientific men.”

Prof. D. Olmstead, LL.D., of Yale College, wrote:--

“Those who were so fortunate as to witness the exhibition of shooting stars on the morning of 13th November, 1833, probably saw the greatest display of celestial fireworks that has ever been seen since the creation of the world, or at least within the annals covered by the pages of history. . . . This is no longer to be regarded as a terrestrial, but a celestial phenomenon, and shooting stars are now to be no more viewed as casual productions of the upper regions of the atmosphere, but as visitants from other worlds, or from the planetary voids.”—New Haven “Press”.

We quote the following account from “The American Cyclopxdia,” Vol. XI, page 431 :—

“The year 1833 is memorable for the most magnificent display on record. This was on the night of 12th November, and was visible over all the United States and over a part of Mexico and the West India Islands. Together with the smaller shooting stars which fell like snowflakes and produced phosphorescent lines along their course, there were intermingled large fire-balls, which darted forth at intervals, describing in a few seconds an arc of 30 degrees or 40 degrees. These left behind luminous trains, which remained in view several minutes, and sometimes half an hour or more. One of them, seen in North Carolina, appeared of larger size and greater brilliancy than the moon. Some, of the luminous bodies were of irregular form, and remained stationary for a considerable time, emitting streams of light. At Niagara the exhibition was especially brilliant, and probably no spectacle so terribly grand and sublime was ever before beheld by man as that of the firmament descending in fiery torrents over the dark and roaring cataract. It was observed that the lines of all the meteors, if traced back, converged in one quarter of the heavens, which was Leonis Majoris ; and this point accompanied the stars in their apparent motion westward, instead of moving with the earth towards the East. The source whence the meteors came was thus shown to be independent of the earth’s relation, and exterior to our atmosphere.”

Prof. von Humboldt devotes fifteen pages of his work, “Personal Narrative,” to this phenomenon ; and declares that it was visible over an area of eleven million square miles.

The phenomenon was to a limited extent repeated in 1866, but the event of 1833 seems to have accomplished the purpose of the sign; and indeed, in connection with the preceding sign, it evidently had considerable to do with the first arousing of the Virgins to meet the Bridegroom, prophesied in the next chapter.—Matt. 25:1-5.

The Symbolic Fulfilments,

While these literal signs served their designed purpose in drawing general attention to the Time of the End, we believe that the symbolic fulfilments are no less striking and even more interesting to those whose mental and spiritual percepts are awakened so as to enable them to appreciate them.

The sun as a symbol represents the Gospel light, the truth—and thus Christ Jesus. The moon as a symbol represents the light of the Mosaic Law. As the moon is a reflection of the light of the sun, so the Law was the shadow or reflection beforehand of the Gospel. The stars as symbols represent the inspired teachers of the church—the apostles. The heavens, as already shown, represent the ecclesiastical powers of Christendom. A combination of these symbols is found in Revelation (12:1) where the “woman” symbolizing the early Church is represented as clothed with the sun, that is, resplendent in the full, clear light of the unclouded Gospel. The moon under her feet represents that the Law which supports her is nevertheless not the source of her light. The twelve stars about her head as a crown represent her divinely appointed and inspired teachers—the twelve apostles.

With this outline of the meaning of these symbols before our minds, let us examine afresh this feature of our Lord’s great prophecy of the signs which are to indicate the end of this age.

Wherever we look we can recognize the fact that while God’s consecrated people are being specially fed and enlightened at the present time, yet with the nominal church it is not so. Its sun is being darkened; its moon is being turned into blood; and its stars are falling. The centre of the gospel light has from the first been the cross of Christ, the ransom ; and however boldly Papacy set up the competitive sacrifice of the Mass, the saints of God have always held fast to this blessed centre of all God’s promises and of all His people’s hopes. They have held to it, even though its philosophy has been almost entirely hidden from their view.

True, there have been a few all along who, not understanding the ransom, and unable to harmonize it with other truths, and especially with their errors, rejected it. These, however, were rare exceptions to the rule. But since the latter part of last century the stumbling here has made great progress, until to-day only a small minority of the professed ministers of the cross recognize its value or preach it. On the contrary, much of the teaching now aims to disclaim and disprove that we were “bought with a price, even the precious blood of Christ,” and substitutes for this the theory of Evolution, claiming that Christ’s value to the sinner consists in His words and example merely.

Thus the sunlight of the gospel is daily becoming more and more obscure; and although this denial of the value of the precious blood as our redemption price has not so generally extended from the pulpit to the pew, yet, false doctrines long held sacred, together with reverence for leaders and learning, have made the way so easy that a large majority of all who get sufficiently awake to consider the subject fall an easy prey to this doctrine of Evolution, which denies the Scriptural doctrine of a primal fall and of a ransom from it. The Scriptures variously forewarn us of this great falling away, as well as of this darkening of the faith of the Church at this time; so that the Son of Man when He cometh will find the faith very scarce on the earth. (Luke 18 :8.) A psalm describing this period declares:—“A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee [the faithful saints, members of the body of Christ, whose elect members will now shortly be completed] .”—

Psalm 91:7.

As the sunlight of the ransom becomes obscured, so the moonlight of the Mosaic Law, which in its sacrifices foreshadowed the ransom, must of necessity become obscured also. It is no longer uncommon for public teachers to refer to the bloody sacrifices of Israel, required by their Law, as barbaric. Once, when they saw by the true light of the Word of God, they appreciated the Apostle's statement that Israel's sacrifices were foreshadowings of "better sacrifices" for sin; but now, refusing the antitype, the ransom, and denying original sin, and all need therefore of sacrifice for it—the typical sacrifices are repudiated also and esteemed barbaric. Thus the darkening of the gospel sunlight results in the darkening of the moonlight. "The moon shall be turned into blood." And Joel (2:10) adds that "the stars shall withdraw their shining," which signifies that when the gospel light is obscured, and the Law becomes to be regarded merely as a meaningless and barbaric ceremony of blood, then the teachings of the God-ordained twelve stars of the Church (the apostles) will also fade from view,—cease to be recognized guides or lights.

The Radio Work.

AT this time it is a pleasure again to present a brief report on the witness of the truth over the air for the past six months to the close of October, together with the Balance Sheet for this feature of the work, covering the same period of time.

It is with thankfulness to the Lord for the privilege of being able to sound forth in this manner the joyful message of His truth, which means so much to all who are walking in the Christian way, that responses have continued to come from many listeners over a wide area of Victoria, New South Wales and parts of Tasmania. Also in the Perth area there has been some response to the same witness there.

Looking back nearly six years since this branch of the work was commenced it gives great pleasure to realise that a goodly number from the hundreds of enquirers are now rejoicing in the truth very fully, by the Lord's grace. The majority found in this way had belonged to one or another of the present day churches, and the feature of the messages to appeal mostly has been the love and mercy of God's, plan for the salvation of all mankind in due time—as many as will accept salvation when they have the opportunity in Christ's Kingdom. This all-embracing message of the Gospel—"Good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people"—at once touches the hearts of all longing for such truth, and of course leads the fully sincere ones to grow both in grace and knowledge of the Lord, and to delight to enter into full consecration in hope of the heavenly Kingdom. In this way, there can be no doubt that the words of our Lord in Matt. 24:31 are having fulfilment in this corner of His harvest-field "And he shall send his angels (messengers) with a great trumpet (message of truth) and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other," (from the nominal church, to the Lord Himself). (Luke 17:34-37.)

The use of the radio cards for advertising the sessions over the air has been continued, and supplies of cards may be obtained by willing workers who can distribute where the broadcasts can be heard. The giving of some time in this way may be the means of bringing much blessing to others who have not yet been brought into contact with the truth message. Even where friends cannot manage the distribution on a regulated scale, they can carry a supply of cards for passing out as they come into conversation with people. Also every one who really loves the Lord and His truth may participate in this work in other ways as they have the talent; one way in which all may join is shown by the words of our Lord—"Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth labourers into His harvest." (Matt. 9:38.)

The Balance Sheet below shows how well the financial support for this work has continued, by the Lord's providence. The voluntary contributions represent sacrifices of much of this world's goods, but the blessings to many listeners of a spiritual kind, which money cannot buy, are very good dividends. Also the Lord counts all things done in the interest of His truth as unto Himself; thus, our dear friends are demonstrating how they would serve the Lord personally, had they the opportunity. The credit balance of £84/12/10 will enable this feature of the work to continue in the months ahead, and the guidance and blessing of the Lord is desired and sought that all may be done to His praise and glory.

In Heaven on Christmas Day.

Under the above heading a short article appeared in the Christmas "War Cry" of twelve months ago, and after referring to the heavenly host that would be interested in the birth of Christ, the following is stated:—"First of all, surely Eve, the mother of the human race, would rejoice to know that the Son of God had left His throne . . . She who had been instrumental in bringing sin into the bloodstream of the race, was most vitally concerned in the birth of Him who was to pay the price for it."

What guesswork is indicated by the above statement as to who would be in heaven at our Lord's first advent, or since for that matter. Our Lord's words in John 3:13 are sufficient to guard against such error—"No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man." Not only is it untrue that Eve was in heaven at the time of the birth of Christ, but all who lived prior to our Lord's day could not be invited to the heavenly inheritance, inasmuch as there was no heavenly way opened up until Christ rose from the dead. Eve, along with all mankind, is still in the death condition and will be resurrected to the earthly inheritance during the "times of restitution of all things." (Acts 3:20, 21.)

Question Box.

Question.—(a) Under what Covenant are the saints of the Gospel Age brought into the relationship of sons of God?

It is evident from Romans 12:1, and Psalm 50:5, that it is as individuals that the Lord makes a covenant with His people of this Gospel Age, and from Gal. 3:16, 17 we read—“Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to seeds, as of many; but as of one. And to thy seed, which is Christ.” This shows that Christ was the Seed intended of God (the spiritual part of the Seed) when He made the Covenant with Abraham. Then follows verse 17—“And this I say, that the Covenant, that was confirmed before of God (the Abrahamic Covenant), the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect.” This reveals that though the Law Covenant was provided long after the Abrahamic, when it had served its purpose up to our Lord’s first advent, and was no longer recognized of God, then the original Covenant (the Abrahamic) continued to operate. Thus it is very clear that the followers of Christ are developed under the Abrahamic (Sarah) Covenant and not the Law Covenant. As for the New Covenant it is not even mentioned by St. Paul in Galatians, showing that the New Covenant has nothing to do with the Lord’s people of this Gospel Age, but will commence to operate in the Millennial Age.

Also Gal. 4:22-26, 28, 31 is very instructive, showing that the Lord’s people of the Gospel Age were typified by Isaac who was the child of promise—“We brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise.” Heb. 6:13-19 explains the matter further.

(b) Have they needed a mediator at any time in being brought to such relationship?

In John 6:44 we have the plain statement—“No man can come to me (Jesus), except the Father which hath sent me draw him; and I will raise him up at the last day.” This clearly shows that God has no mediator operating when He draws some to Jesus. The usual thought with nominal Christians is that Jesus is the one to draw to the Father, but these words of Christ show the opposite to be the truth. God draws those in right heart condition to Jesus, that they may see Him to be their Saviour; on accepting Jesus in heart and mind as their Redeemer, they are justified by God (Rom. 8:33) through faith in the blood of Christ. Then they are invited to present their justified bodies a living sacrifice to God, through the merit of Christ. (Rom. 12:1) This, however, has no reference to a mediator. Rather the Lord’s people have Christ as their Advocate—this is quite different from the office of a mediator.

The meaning of the Advocate is that of consoler, one standing alongside to assist those who are not opposed to God but wish to serve Him faithfully.

The meaning of the mediator is that of a go-between for two opposing parties. So the world will need a mediator in the Kingdom Age when the New Covenant comes into operation, because they will be opposed to God until such time as they progress to perfection of human life.

Thus it is very clear that the Lord’s people of this Gospel Age need no mediator, but rather they “have an advocate (consoler) with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous.” (1 John 2:1). The text in Timothy which states “There is one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus,” refers to the general plan of salvation for mankind as a whole, without reference to the High Calling,—“God will have all men to be saved and to come to a knowledge of the truth”—this will be when “all men” of the world will need, will have the mediator to assist them.

So the Lord’s spiritual children are developed under the Abrahamic (Sarah) Covenant. and have no mediator, need no mediator, inasmuch as God approaches them and draws them to Jesus—as many as He sees are worthy of being drawn,—that they may have the opportunity of running for the High Calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Evil.

Keep clear of personalities in conversation. Talk of things, objects, thoughts. The smallest minds occupy themselves with persons. Do not needlessly report ill of others. As far as possible, dwell on the good side of human beings. There are family boards where a constant process of depreciating, assigning motives, and cutting up character goes forward. They are not pleasant places. One who is healthy does not wish to dine at a dissecting table. There is evil enough in man, God knows. But it is not the mission of every young man and woman to detail and report it all. Keep the atmosphere as pure as possible, and fragrant with gentleness and charity.—John Hall.

Communion with Our Master.

Oft when alone in prayer I kneel
Before my Father's throne;
I cannot tell Him all I feel,
Nor make my wishes known.

With heart subdued, and head -bowed low,
I lean upon His breast,
And while the tears unbidden flow,
My love for Him confess.

I have no boon to ask of Him,
Save that His will be done,
To make me holy, pure within —
An image of His Son.

But as He smiles and draws me near—
His spirit from above
Floods all my soul with peace so dear,
And fills my heart with love.

Though from my gaze He hides His face,
My soul, from self apart,
Hath found its happy resting place
Close to His loving heart.

Correspondence.

Dear Brother—Once again I feel I must write a few lines in appreciation of an article in the “Peoples Paper” of October and November issue. I refer to, “Our Lord’s Great Prophecy.” These articles have so far proved of great enlightenment to me and have provoked some very deep thought in my mind. I think they will eventually lead me to take steps with regard to my former church life that is going to take a lot of courage. Such thoughts have often come to my mind, but in the hurry and bustle of everyday life, I just did not seem to be able to find time for further study. Well, perhaps God has helped me in this direction, though in rather a strange way. I had to undergo an operation about a fortnight ago, and though I have made excellent progress, some time has to be put in bed . . . However, while lying here, I have taken the opportunity of studying out for myself many of the booklets, etc., I have obtained from you from time to time, and the more I read and study them the more convinced I become that they indeed give the true teachings of the Scriptures. I would like to get a more modern translation of the Bible or New Testament. . . . I notice you often refer to Emphatic Diaglott translation in the .”P.P.” Are you able to supply; if so, please let me know the cost.

I would like you to send me two copies of “God and Reason,” one of “Hope Beyond the Grave” and one of “Times of Refreshing and Christ’s Return.” I think the booklet “The Manner of Christ’s Return and Appearing” is certainly one every person seeking an explanation of present world affairs should read, yet it is amazing how many otherwise good Christians look with suspicion on any so-called new ideas of Bible understanding. The fact that so many refuse to alter fixed ideas shows the power of Satan over the human mind. Perhaps we are all afraid of the courage it takes to alter those ideas once they are proved false. One of the hardest things to-day I think is to convince believers in Christ that if they would understand the problems of the present day they must seek to understand Bible prophecy. The great majority are apparently convinced that the world will go on as at present for many years to come. I fear that many will lose their faith in God during the next few years if they go no further than that,

May God help us all to work out these things for ourselves by prayer and study, thus increasing our faith in His care and protection. I am enclosing £1 in payment for above booklets and the four copies I got some time ago of “Manner of Christ’s Return.” Please use the balance towards Radio Fund as I feel sure those Frank and Ernest Talks cannot but do good. With Christian love, Yours sincerely.

(The reprint of the articles on “Our Lord’s Great Prophecy” will be continued to complete the series, and may also be produced in booklet form next year if the call for such is sufficient.—B.B. Institute.)

Berean Bible Institute, Dear Sir—Many thanks for your letter and the copy of “Tabernacle Shadows”; the booklet “Manner of Christ’s Return” and copies of Dialogues and “Peoples Paper”—for all of which I am very grateful.

I cannot just express how much I appreciate the exposition of Biblical facts by the Berean Institute. . . . There is so much enlightenment thrown on Scriptural quotations which (to me at any rate) have throughout the years been just a mystery. In conjunction with Bible reading, these various references unearth facts and phases which open up wonderful avenues for the “seeker after truth.”

Whilst I appreciate the fact that without the churches of various denominations we would be at a “dead end” . . .

. . . yet I do say in all sincerity that there is much that we ought to know yet never hear from the pulpits regarding salvation in its correct setting—restitution, redemption, sacrifice, and God’s plan as a whole through the prophecies The gospel message is, to my mind, robbed of a tremendous lot of its power through a lack of the application and appreciation of sin and the consequences of sin right from the outset away back in Genesis. Many people are exhorted to be saved, but they do not seem to fully grasp what they are to be saved from. They are not taught the basic principles of spiritual laws and natural laws, and the entanglements involved in the breaking or the violating of those laws. Under those conditions one is more or less groping in the dark (as I have been myself, although ‘a member of the Baptist denomination).

One often hears the remark that the churches are lacking in enthusiastic members and it is a literal truth, but I, personally, think that this is because they follow a stereotyped programme as set down by theological courses at the training schools, rather than an individual study of the Scriptures—“Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.” The first Psalm also suggests this, and if we could, as a people, concentrate on Bible study, how much better off we would be in these days of “gross darkness which covers the people”?

Enclosed please accept a small donation per postal notes. If you have a spare copy of “Chosen People” and a copy of “Plan of God in Brief,” I should be glad to have them. Would also like to inquire what is the cost of the more comprehensive book “The Divine Plan of the Ages.” With all good wishes, I am, Sir, Yours faithfully.

(It is very clear from the Scriptures that the Lord has “spued out” the Laodicean church—the religious systems existing during the seventh (present) period in the history of the Gospel church on earth (Rev. 3:14-17)—and “the forms of godliness” explained by St. Paul in 2 Tim. 3:5 do not satisfy the Lord’s true people, who hear His call—”Come out of her (Babylon) My people,” (Rev. 18:4)—and respond, being gathered to Himself prior to “the heavens (church systems) passing away with a great noise.” (2 Pet. 3:10.) These find no “dead end” in leaving the denominations, but rather delight to assemble with other alert Christians, and find liberty, development and progress in grace and knowledge of the Lord as they walk in His steps in spirit and truth.—B.B. Institute.)””

To Frank and Ernest—We are always interested in your Biblical Dialogues each Sunday morning and request that you forward (as advertised over 3GL) last week’s Dialogue and to-day’s, and the booklets “Chosen People” and “Where are the Dead?”

You recently gave talks on the Sin in the Garden of Eden but I’ve forgotten the title; perhaps you’ll know to which I refer and forward same please. Thanking you in anticipation, Yours faithfully.

Dear Frank and Ernest—My wife and I are interested in your broadcasts and would welcome some literature concerning some of your recent Talks. We feel we would like to know more about Bible prophecy in relation to world events to day. I am, Yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Friends—I am forwarding £2 for “Peoples Paper” and the balance will do for broadcasting or whatever you need it for mostly. . . • We listen to the broadcasts every Sunday and think they are splendid and a very good way of spreading good tidings. I am, Yours sincerely.

Dear Brethren—Greetings in the precious Name of Jesus. I have been greatly interested in your Bible Talks of a Sunday morning heard over radio 2KY, so I am writing to ask if you would be good enough to send me copies of the booklets that you have spoken about during your addresses, also some copies of the lectures that have been given during the past few weeks.

Praying that God will bless your work and that the shed Blood of Calvary will wash and cleanse many a sin- burdened soul. I remain, Yours sincerely.

To Frank and Ernest—Having heard you over the air, I was greatly impressed by all I heard respecting the enlightenment of God’s Word, so I am writing for a copy of “The Day of Judgment” you mentioned and would be pleased to send any cost attached. Yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, Sirs—I take a keen interest in your Dialogues each Sunday a.m., and would like you to send me some literature, especially the “Book of the Parables” and any others you care to send as they are all interesting. Thanking you in anticipation.

To Frank and Ernest—According to your invitation, I am writing for a copy of your last Sunday’s Talk, and hope to able to tune in for more of your sessions. I found that it was so plainly composed that it did not burden either the speakers or listeners and I am sure it was of good profit, and will have been a real eye-opener to many. Yours faithfully.

P.S.—Please send two or three if you can; others are interested.

Volume XXXII. No. 2 MELBOURNE, 1st FEBRUARY, 1949 Price—Fourpence Halfpenny

God's Workmanship.

(Convention Address.)

"We are God's workmanship." (Eph. 2:10.)

"He worketh in you that which is well pleasing in His sight, through Jesus Christ." (Heb. 13:21.)

"Having begun a good work in you He will also finish it." (Phil. 1:6.)

THE thought in workmanship is to manufacture, to produce; for instance, Adam was the immediate workmanship of the hands of God, or, as stated in the text just quoted, the Church, the New Creation is especially the workmanship of God. What agencies He may employ to accomplish this is another consideration. Nevertheless, the Scriptures are very definite that all things originate from Him the Supreme Being.—"For of Him, and through Him, and to Him, are all things." (Rom. 11:36.)

Jesus said, "My Father worketh hitherto (or till now) and I work." (John 5:17.) Jesus, even before He was made flesh, was Jehovah's faithful workman. For God by Him created all things that were created.

The meaning of work is: to labour, wrought, or carry out operations; to produce effect by action and influence. The Lord's workings or operations are such as to subdue all things unto Himself, in His own time and way, and such as will not be subdued shall be destroyed by His power, through laws which He has established—the irresistible law of cause and effect. "He worketh all things after the counsel of His own will," and none can hinder or thwart His designs.

The Scriptures assure us that God has determined that He will perform all His good pleasure, and His pleasure is to glorify and exalt righteousness everywhere in His vast dominion. "For Zion's sake I will not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest, until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth." (Isa. 62:1.) He is zealous for righteousness—"Righteousness and judgment are the habitation of His throne."

In ages past it has been His good pleasure to create heaven and earth. The heavens declare His glory, and the earth exhibits His handiwork, in thousands of different ways and varieties—"Great and marvellous are Thy works Lord God Almighty." Take, for instance, the construction of the human eye alone, Dr. Harold Wilson states as follows: "It is estimated that the human eye is capable of distinguishing 100,000 different colours and hues, and twenty shades or tints of each hue, making a total of 2,000,000 colour sensations which may be discriminated. If we consider the infinite variations in colour of earth, of plants and their blossoms, of clouds, in fact of all natural objects, such an estimate as this hardly seems excessive."

The Psalmist often thought upon God's wonderful works. "I will meditate of all thy works, and talk of all thy doings." (Psa. 77:12.) And when we consider the numberless multitude of all the heavenly host, their orderly grouping in various constellations, their continual, yet never conflicting movements, their perfect harmony and benign influence, they surely do speak to us of the great power, majesty and wisdom of the Creator, inspiring us with awe, reverence and admiration. God's book of Nature can be read by the thoughtful in all nations, for all the shining heavenly hosts silently testify to the skill, goodness and glory of the Master Workman.

God originally provided for the happiness and comfort of the first human pair by planting a garden eastward in Eden. This being the work of the Creator we can imagine it being a perfect beauty spot, containing all things that could be appreciated by the five senses, for all His work is perfect. At this point sin was permitted to enter into the scheme of things, not to bring about the destruction of His benevolent designs but to exhibit to angels and men, now and in the future, a further development and display of His mighty works. "He works in a mysterious way His wonders to perform."

It is the special privilege of the Lord's people now to trace the meaning of many of the Lord's mysterious ways, for, says the Apostle Paul, "He has now made known unto us the mystery of His will, which He purposed in Christ." And we do receive much comfort, strength and joy, and attachment to the Lord becomes more vital when we turn our minds upon Him and what He has graciously revealed concerning His works and dealings on behalf of His ancient people who trusted in Him. "I will remember the works of the Lord; surely I will remember Thy wonders of old. I will meditate upon all Thy works, and talk of Thy doings." (Psa. 77:11, 12.)

It is encouraging and a stimulus to our spiritual life when we meditate upon God's wonders of old—the time and manner He has dealt with those who placed their trust in Him. There are all the Ancient Worthies placed before us for our consideration and how the Lord dealt with them; take Moses for instance. There is also the history of the chosen nation Israel and the demonstrations of His mighty power on their behalf, in their blessing, guidance and protection, as also in their punishment and corrections. At times He prospered them and punished nations who opposed them; at other times bringing their enemies against them as a flood, overwhelming them, leading them away captive, and then raising up individuals and nations to bring about their restoration again.

“See the mystic Weaver sitting
High in heaven—His loom below.
Up and down the treadles go.
Takes, for web, the world’s dark ages.
Takes, for woof, the kings and sages.
Takes the nobles and their pages,
Takes all stations and all stages.

Thrones are bobbins in His shuttle.
Armies make them scud and scuttle—
Web into the woof must flow:
Up and down the nations go!
At the Weaver’s will they go I
“Calmly see the mystic Weaver
Throw His shuttle to and fro;
‘Mid the noise and wild confusion,

Well the Weaver seems to know
What each motion, and commotion,
What each fusion, and confusion,
In the grand result will show !
Glorious wonder! What a Weaver!”

God’s workings on behalf of Joseph is another outstanding example for our encouragement. Many circumstances and people were involved in His works of old concerning Joseph, and yet the Lord could not show these wonders in His dealings with Joseph unless he had submitted in cheerful patience and faith to the experiences the Lord was supervising on his behalf. If anyone therefore desires the Lord’s assistance, such must co-operate with Him in the work or scheme the Lord is operating and arranging. The Apostle Paul gives us that thought when he says, “We are workers together with God.” Oft times, though, the greatest work He wants us to do at a certain time, is to do nothing, but wait—lie still—or stand still. On one occasion when the enemy was in hot pursuit of the nation of Israel, and Israel appeared to be trapped and barred by the sea before them, Moses calmed the agitated and distressed people, saying, “Stand still, and see the salvation of God.” God’s mighty works were seen, the sea receded and Israel went through to safety, but the Egyptians were engulfed in the waters and destroyed. St. Paul speaks to us also when he said, “Having done all, stand.”

We must be passive in God’s hand, manifested in patience, submission and endurance, and by this attitude under trial the Christian character is refined and strengthened; this in turn inspires hope. There is a beautiful hymn well worth considering here- “Lie still and let Him mould thee.

‘Oh Lord, I would obey;
Be Thou the skilful Potter and I the yielding clay.”

This lying still is another way of saying, “Submit your will to Mine, and let Me have My way with you.” Are we ready to respond, “Oh Lord, I would obey”?

The illustration is that of the clay and the potter. In some respects we are like the clay. We, as individuals, are just small fragments taken out of the mass. The skilful potter chooses the kind of clay for his particular purpose. It must be moistened, kneaded and prepared, so as to be in a proper, plastic condition to readily yield to the bending and moulding—it must yield to the hand of the skilful potter. Are we like the yielding clay? Are we lying still? Are we letting Him do His wonderful work—completing the final touches in order to produce the vessel fit for the Master’s use? Or are we rebellious, irritable, hard to control, wanting our own way? It is sad if this should be so; we could hardly sing with appreciation and understanding the chorus of this hymn, could we?—

“Bend me, oh, bend me to Thy will While in Thy hand I’m lying still.”

In this phase of our Christian life and experience our attitude toward our Creator must be that of lying still. This, of course, suggests submission of our will into His—co-operating ‘with Him in the circumstances in which He has placed us. If that is so, then we can thank God as Paul did when he recognised that the Roman Christians were yielding to the instructions. He says, “God be thanked that though ye were the slaves of sin. yet you obeyed from the heart that mould of instructions into which ye were delivered.” (Rom. 6:17, Diag.) There is only one mould of instructions into which all saints must be cast, namely, the revealed will of God. This alone can produce a New Creature.

The figure used here is not that of the potter and clay, although the same results are obtained. The figure here used seems to be taken from the art of casting of metals. The ore is crushed and heated and refined and while in a liquid form is poured into a prepared mould or casting, and when set and cooled and taken out of the mould, the desired pattern of the mould is impressed on the metal. By yielding ourselves to God in obedience to His will, we are being moulded and this produces upon us the character likeness of His beloved Son, as verse 4 of the hymn expresses it “Impress Thine image on me fulfil Thy blest design, Till others see upon me that beauteous face of Thine.”

That is our heart’s desire, is it not? Only by being cast into that perfect mould can we bear His image and likeness. We ask Him to fulfil His blessed design, and the Lord has a design for each life that is given over to Him without reserve. We are not in doubt as to what that design is, are we? But the operations which produce this are not the same upon each member of the Body of Christ; different characters need different treatment. “There are diversities of operations but it is the same God which worketh all in all,” says the Apostle Paul (1 Cor. 12:6), and this design will be completed. Paul confidently expressed himself to the Philippian Christians that the Lord having begun a good work in them would perfect it (Phil. 1:6.)

“Fulfil Thy blest design,” we sing, and yet so often we make our experiences harder than they need be, simply because we cannot “Lie still and let Him mould us.” We are impatient and because of self-interest the clay is marred upon the wheel and the lesson must be repeated.

There are some helpful lessons in Jer. 18:1-6. Although the lesson taught here was given to Jeremiah for his comfort and encouragement while speaking for the Lord as His prophet, and declaring to Israel the Word of the Lord in a message of threatening judgment to fall upon that nation and also their restoration again, yet, aside from this, we, as members of spiritual Israel, may draw helpful lessons for our encouragement from the lesson of the potter and the clay. We, like Jeremiah, must observe and consider the manner in which the potter formed the vessel. He took a lump of clay from the mass beside him, and after kneading it for some time to remove the air pockets, he placed it upon the wheel or disc which he worked with a treadle causing it to revolve horizontally, also using his fingers and instruments to fashion it. Gradually the lump begins to take shape, and when almost completed, suddenly, through a flaw in the clay, the vessel falls to pieces. “The vessel that he made was marred in the hands of the potter.” Naturally, one would think that the potter would cast this aside and select another lump of clay from the mass, but, no; the pieces are gathered up, pressed together and worked over, “and he made it again another vessel, as it seemed good to the potter.” At this point the message of God comes to us as it did to Jeremiah, “Cannot I do with you as this potter? Behold, as the clay is in the potter’s hand, so are ye in my hands, saith the Lord.”

One lesson for us to keep in mind is suggested by the thought that just as the human potter had before his mind the particular kind of vessel he purposed to make, so the Divine Potter has constantly in mind the kind of vessel He intends us to ‘be. The pattern is before Him—’conformed to the image of His Son’—and He is especially preparing these for future use. This means, then, that each vessel is especially the Lord’s workmanship and that He has a purpose for each one of us. Each of His people is important and precious to Him, and through Isaiah the Lord declares—“I have engraven thee upon the palms of my hand.” (Isa. 49:16.)

We may not know just what position we will occupy in the Body of Christ, but we know it will be glorious—joint-heirship with Jesus in His glory, honour and kingdom. Many are called to this high and honoured station, but few at last will stand finally approved. May we each here be found worthy.

Another important lesson suggested by the potter and the clay is in the use of the wheel. This may correspond to our daily round, the common task, which the Lord uses for our development. From the human standpoint many circumstances are commonplace, repetition and monotonous; because of this we are apt to become discontented, impatient, ill-tempered with our surroundings. This will cause restlessness, complaining, and if not overcome will end in disappointment and failure, and hindering the work of the Divine Potter, these may become stumbling stones to others—not vessels fit for the Master’s use.

Paul says, that every man wherein he is called should abide with God. (1 Cor. 7:20.) He reminds us, though, in this same connection, that if we can justly and honourably be made free from a condition not congenial to ourselves, we can take the liberty to free ourselves, but this of course is also placed before the Lord first, asking Him to work it out for our highest spiritual welfare. The circumstances and environments in which we are placed are evidently permitted by Him for a period to demonstrate our mistakes or weaknesses, or in order to produce within us certain qualities of character with which we will need to be equipped in order to meet successfully other experiences further along the way, as verse 3 of the hymn says “I need not fear to trust Thee, Thy love and skill are such, New lessons Thou wilt teach me while yielding to Thy touch.”

Most of the potter’s work upon the vessel is done with his fingers. This may suggest the communication of God’s power—His spirit upon the vessel. “A manifestation of the spirit is given to every one.” The wheel corresponds to the circumstances in which we are placed, so that God’s spirit within us, cooperating with the circumstances without, finally produces the vessel fit for the Master’s use in the Heavenly Temple. “Now he that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the spirit.” (2 Cor. 5:5.) We may be sure, therefore, that if God undertakes our discipline and fashioning, He will complete the end He has in view—our sanctification.

It seems that the potter gathered together the pieces of the broken vessel and made it over again another vessel, and there are some helpful thoughts in this. Perhaps the second vessel was not quite so fair or beautiful as the first, perhaps one of less honour. Nevertheless, it would be a good vessel and fit for some kind of use. We behold in this the patience of the potter and that he is not wasteful in the use of material, also we see his practical ability to make use of clay which seemed naturally unsuitable. “Cannot I do with you as this potter? saith the Lord. Behold, as the clay is in the potter’s hand, so are ye in mine hand, O house of Israel.” The same consideration may apply to us.

Who is there that is not conscious of having marred and resisted the touch of God’s moulding hand? Who is there that has not lamented opportunities of service and helpfulness which were lost through carelessness or stubbornness of will, hardness or selfishness of heart? Who is there who would not like to be made again as seems good to the Potter? Have we not sometimes felt like the prophet Isaiah of old,—“But now, O Lord, thou art our father; we are the clay, and thou our potter; and we all are the work of thy hand. Be not wroth very sore, O Lord, neither remember iniquity for ever.” (Isa. 64:8, 9.)

We have placed ourselves in the hands of the Divine Potter to be moulded and fashioned, but who does not feel that we have sometimes marred God’s plan of life for us? What might have been our joy, our peace, our fellowship, just for the want of lying still—content—in the Potter’s hands, allowing Him to work upon us. Perhaps service for others has been a failure, because of lack of submission or readiness to accept the providences the Lord has arranged for us. So the Lord has to bring us face to face with the results of our perverseness, so that we may humbly see ourselves as we are, just clay—that’s all, and there is plenty of that,—as individuals we are just a small fragment of it. But the skilful Potter wants us to be something more than just clay, doesn’t He? Do we desire that too? Or have we become disheartened or imagine the great prize is not for us. It might seem easy to others; they are being fashioned into vessels comely and useful, but this is not for me; chances came and were missed—better be flung amid the waste which is ever accumulating around the furnace of human life! Ah No! Not that! Listen —“He made it again another vessel.” “Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden.”

The Divine Potter can again take us up, and a seemingly useless product of clay may be made use of again—fashioned and moulded into a useful vessel to serve some place in the Divine Temple of the future. And for our encouragement we have recorded in the Scriptures characters who were made over again. There was one character associated with our Lord in His ministry, zealous, impetuous, confident of his own strength and loyalty to his Master, who, on one occasion directed and advised the Lord as to His experiences, but the Lord told him in no uncertain way that he was an adversary while in that frame of mind. Then, later, when the test of loyalty came he denied the Lord, denied that he had any association with Him. Poor Peter, just clay, wasn’t he? Yes, the knowledge of himself broke him up—he wept. But following the resurrection morning the Lord made Peter over again, didn’t He? “Simon Peter, lovest thou me more than these?” “Lord, thou knowest that I love thee,” was the response. This zealous disciple was indeed moulded and fashioned by experience and he became Peter the Rock, the Apostle of Pentecost.

There is another character, not so prominent as Peter, but at one time of good service to Paul and Barnabas. For some reason, evidently not a good reason, he deserted the Apostle in his preaching tours —"Mark went not with them to the work." Paul and Barnabas had a sharp contention because of him, but later we have Peter referring to him as his son (1 Pet. 5:13), and Paul refers to him again as a fellow labourer (Philemon 24), and as profitable to him in the ministry. (2 Tim. 4:11.) The Divine Potter made John Mark over again.

The waywardness or unfaithfulness of a disciple may give rise to sharp contention; perhaps this too has some use and bearing upon the fashioning of such a disciple for his ultimate good, his recovery. Be that as it may, one thing is certain, namely, that nothing is lost in humbling ourselves under the mighty hand of God; indeed, this is absolutely essential if the Lord is to undertake to remodel us again. -Let everyone who names the name of the Lord renounce all wickedness. Now in a great house there are not only vessels (articles) of gold and silver, but also others of wood and of earthenware; and some are for honourable, and others for common use. If therefore a man keeps himself clear of the latter, he will be for honourable use, consecrated, fit for the Master's service, and equipped for every good work." (2 Tim. 2:20, 21.)

We have been looking at this illustration of the potter and the clay which presents merely one angle of the Christian character, that of submission, patience, long suffering—passive qualities. But there must be more than these in a Christian character; there are other angles from which we must view other qualities necessary in the overcoming life—active qualities. For instance, we are urged to work out our salvation with fear and carefulness, for the perfected Church will be presented to the King in raiment of needlework which she has patiently worked into her robe. "Her clothing is inwrought with gold." (Psa. 45:6, R.V.)

For us to work out our salvation means of course "to effect by endeavour." The Lord expects us to be workers together with Him. Our work must be a work of faith; our labour, a labour of love; our patience, a patience of hope; our fruitfulness, every good work, effectually working toward all, especially toward the brethren and sisters in Christ. What we do, or do not unto them, we do, or do not unto our Lord. Where there is a cause there must be effect. Every member or part in the Body worketh effectually. What is that effect? Paul says, "The edifying of itself in love," and love is the most desirable quality; it is Godlikeness. This can be successfully fixed in our hearts only if we fulfil our part of being co-workers together with God. "For it is God who worketh in you both to will and to do." (Phil. 2:12, 13.)

When life draws to a close, when the moulding of the vessel is about complete, what then? What shape and beauty is there to be seen; are the lines of beauty more clearly defined? Has the vessel been fashioned, fired in the oven of experience? Has the Master given it the final touches of colour and beauty—the sweetness and purity of holiness?

A delicate vase
Of wonderful beauty and exquisite grace.
Was it once the vile clay? Ah yes! yet how strange
The Potter has wrought such a marvellous change."

Has experience and association with others done its work, and impressed and fashioned upon the vessel submission, full resignation to God's will, sweetness and ripeness of character, thoughtful consideration for others, self-sacrifice, in honour preferring others, working for their interests, for their advancement and happiness? If so, then we are, as Paul says, "A sweet fragrance of Christ in every place."

Within my hand I gently hold the Garden's Queen, a rose—
The softly-sighing summer wind about it faintly blows.
And wafts its wondrous fragrance out upon the evening air.
And as I gaze upon the rose, so perfect and so fair,
In memory's halls there wakes, the while, a legend, quaint and old,
How once upon a time, one day, a sage picked up. we're told,
A lump of common clay, so redolent with perfume rare,
He marvelled, and the question wondering asked,
"Whence dost thou bear Such fragrance, O, thou lump of clay?"

In tones of deep repose
There came the sweet reply, "I have been dwelling with the rose."
The while the legend stirs my soul, within my hand still lie
The petals of the rose, and from my heart of hearts I cry,
"Thou lovely Rose of Sharon, may I ever dwell with Thee,
So closely that the fragrance of Thy love shall cling to me.
Oh, fill me with the spirit of Thy sweet humility,
Then all shall see and know, dear Lord, that I have learned of Thee;
And let mine earthly pilgrimage, until, its blessed close,
Each day and hour bear witness, I've been dwelling with the Rose!" (G.W.S.)

Convention News.

Melbourne.

IT is with much gratitude to the Lord for His blessings upon the gatherings of the Annual Convention, held in Melbourne over the Christmas period, that this review is presented, giving a brief outline of the many helpful sessions throughout the four days of happy dwelling together in spiritual fellowship by the brethren from near and far.

It was a joy to the Melbourne friends to welcome brethren from three other States and parts of Victoria, and the participation of these visiting friends in the Bible Studies, Addresses and fellowship contributed much towards making the assemblies, really spiritual feasts of the truths of God's Wordy.

The Bible studies were particularly helpful, even though the time allotted did not allow full discussion on some points; however, the main features were well brought out in each of the Scriptural passages, and there was proof that upwards of fifty brethren can participate with great profit under the guidance of a capable chairman. At these studies there is the opportunity of manifesting the Christian quality of "preferring one another" in giving expression, while being alert to present thoughts briefly at the appropriate time, allows the best use of the time available. The passages examined were 1 Thes. 5:16-23; Rev. 3:713, and Rom. 8:14-23. (Psalm 102:15-22 was also studied on New Year's Day, while some of the visiting friends were still present.)

Addresses by the 'brethren were most profitable and a wide range of subjects were ably dealt with by each speaker from the Scriptures. The topics for the addresses were:—"Love is the Fulfilling of the Law"; "Christian Fellowship": "The Rock of Salvation"; "The Marriage of the Lamb"; "Despise Not, Faint Not"; "Working According to a Plan"; "God is Able"; "The Ministry of Healing"; "Behold a King shall Reign in Righteousness"; and "God's Workmanship." The last named address appears in this issue of "Peoples Paper" and others will be printed as space permits, and by this means some of the good things from this Convention will reach all our readers.

On the closing day of the gatherings a Baptism Service was held during the afternoon, and this was very encouraging and uplifting as all assembled witnessed four dear friends symbolise their consecration to God, to be dead with Christ, if so be that they may reign with Him. There is always great joy to the Lord's people to find other members coming into God's family by presenting their lives a living sacrifice, through the merit of Christ's sacrifice (Rom. 12:1) , and this occasion demonstrated the fact that God is still calling those of sincere heart condition who delight to walk in the Master's steps.—"If we be planted together in the likeness of His (Christ's) death, we shall be also in the likeness of His resurrection." (Rom. 6:5.)

At the three Fellowship Meetings opportunity for praise and testimony to God's goodness, and "Hymns we Love and Why" provided helpful sessions of a more informal type, and the time available was well used. A Question Meeting was also held at which some good questions were answered briefly by the friends in similar manner to the Bible studies.

The attendance at this Convention was good, and it was evident that all present received a rich blessing from the Giver of every good thing, which will no doubt be stimulating in the days ahead as we seek to call to mind the many encouraging lessons and exhortations, and thus be the better fitted for the Lord's service, both now and in the glorious time to come.

Messages of greeting were gladly received from Classes and friends over a wide area, and were much appreciated at the Convention, and thus was manifest the considerable number of brethren who were thinking of these gatherings and praying for the Lord's blessing to attend them. The Lord answered these prayers very fully, and the brethren in Convention offered prayers also on behalf of the Lord's people everywhere. The greetings from the Convention sent to the brethren in every place with Christian love, are found in Col. 3:1-4 and Psalm 100.

The closing Love Feast, during which the hymns "Blest be the tie" and "God be with you till we meet again" were sung, and prayer of thankfulness to our Heavenly Father, brought to conclusion one of the most profitable seasons of refreshing experienced by the Lord's people in Australia.

Perth, W.A.

The Convention held in Perth from Dec. 25th to 27th is now over, and while the attendance was small, the sweet spirit of the Master was in evidence—the smiling faces, the sincerity, the earnestness and zeal of all are hard to express in words.

Christmas Day, spent at Kalamunda, was doubly enhanced by the beauties of our surroundings. It was a foretaste of the garden of Eden, and our study on the Beatitudes was in keeping. Surely we were blessed. The word beatitude means "to make happy, to bless, supreme blessedness:" this was indeed the experience of all, and this blessedness continued throughout the Convention,

The discourses too were very helpful, by way of bringing to our minds the most important things in our Christian life, namely, love and zeal for the Lord, and the importance of making our calling and election sure. Our prayers are that the Lord's blessings—the inspirations, encouragements,—may continue with us and all His people, that thus the work of grace may abound more and more to the praise of God, and that these seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord may bring fresh love and joy and zeal.

Vie sincerely believe that the testimony of all would be, "It was good to be there." The Lord fulfilled His promise of opening the windows of heaven and poured us out a blessing, for which we thank Him. Together with our Christian love the greeting we send from this Convention to one and all is found in Hebrews 13:20, 21.

Our Lord's Great Prophecy.

(Part 4. Continued from December Issue.)

AS we have seen, God has recognised or appointed twelve apostolic stars for the Church. From these and the moon and the sun all the enlightenment of the Church was to proceed.* And from these the true light, which has blessed the true Church, has proceeded. But Papacy, assuming ecclesiastical lordship of earth, has placed or "ordained" various stars, lights, "authorities," "theologians," in her firmament; and the various Protestant denominations have done likewise, until the whole number is innumerable. But God, while providing helps, evangelists and teachers to His true Church, has not ordained them with the authority of lights or stars. On the contrary, all of His faithful followers are instructed to accept as light only those rays of truth seen to proceed from the sun and moon and twelve stars ordained for that purpose.

All the others of God's people are during this age to be burning and shining lamps, and are not to put their lamps under a bushel, but to so shine as to glorify their Father in heaven. The word star (Greek aster) is not used respecting any of the faithful (outside the apostles) in referring to them in this present life; but it is used with reference to those who depart from the truth, and become "heady," false teachers, "vainly puffed up," aspiring to be considered authorities in the same sense as the apostles, and who are styled "wandering stars," "false apostles."-2 Cor. 11:13; Rev. 2:2; Jude 13.

On the contrary, the Scriptures everywhere hold out the promise that the faithful, humble lamp-lightshiners of this present time shall by and by with Christ be the glorious and honoured seed of Abraham—"as the stars of heaven."

But not in the present "heavens" which shall shortly pass away with great commotion, will these shine;—no, but in the "new heavens"—the new ecclesiastical kingdom of the Millennial age. Of the same class, and of that same resurrection time, the Prophet Daniel (12:3) says. "They that be wise, shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars for ever and ever." The Apostle Paul also speaks of the Church's future glory in the first resurrection, saying that their glories will differ "as star differeth from star in glory."

Now if God ordained only twelve stars as lights for His Church, as represented in Revelation (12:1), is it not a great mistake for popes and bishops to regard themselves as successors of the apostles,—stars also? And is it not a fact that certain of the so-called "higher critics" regard themselves and are regarded by others as the equals or indeed the superiors of the apostles, as light-shiners, stars? And do not they and others show this, by preaching their own ideas, shining out their own light on various subjects, without [FOR an explanation of the symbols "SUN," "moon" etc., see December 1948 issue of "Peoples Paper," copies of which are obtainable.*] considering it necessary to consult or to give as proof the words of the inspired apostles? And if they quote or refer at all to the light of the true stars, the twelve apostles' teachings, is it not rather to have them confirm their views or light, rather than to show that the teaching is light from the apostolic stars? And indeed the light of these false stars, "wandering stars," is usually so opposed to that of the inspired twelve, that they can scarcely so much as find a suitable text from their writings.

In our Lord's prophecy these true star-lights are reckoned in as part of the gospel sunlight, darkened, withdrawn from shining; while the false stars, the worldly-wise, man-ordained lights of the present heavens are represented as making a great display in coming down to earthly conditions;—abandoning their once somewhat spiritual eminence, and in their teachings coming down to the level of earthly moralists and philosophers—to the Christian-citizenship- politics level.

The shaking of the symbolic ecclesiastical heavens mentioned in the same connection has somewhat to do with these lights of Christendom coming to a lower plane of public teaching. This shaking would signify just what we see on every hand—a shaking up of the creeds and dogmas of Christendom, which, because of their admixture of errors, produce confusion whenever referred to,—as, for, instance the doctrine of elect and non-elect infants; the doctrine of the eternal torment of all who are not saints, over-corners, etc.

As a consequence, many of the worldly-wise men who are starring before the public are already making every effort to distract attention from all such subjects. What other subjects can they find than either the true or the false doctrine of election; and the true or the false idea of God's provision for the future life of mankind? Not knowing of the true, divine plan of the ages, and not wishing to awaken controversy along the lines of hell and infant damnation, what can these star preachers preach, that will attract to them the attention of the world?

They can abandon spiritual themes entirely and descend to the plane of the natural man, to moral and political reform questions. They can go "slumming," and preach the anti-slum gospel. They can join in Christian-citizenship Crusades, etc. And these things will more and more engage these pulpit stars; while others will create sensations by outdoing the most celebrated Infidels in statements of what they do not believe; in making sport of the Bible record of an Adamic fall into sin, and the idea of being saved out of something which is a myth, according to their Evolutionary theory.

Who cannot see these signs fulfilling on every hand today! But the sun and moon and twelve stars are only partly obscured as yet; and comparatively few of the false stars have fallen from every pretence of gospel shining to the level of the comprehension of the masses to whom they shine.

Coincidentally, Luke (21:25, 26) adds other signs of this time: "Upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and the waves [the restless and lawless elements] roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth [society]: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken."

The roaring sea and waves symbolize the restless masses of humanity, curbed, but not fully restrained, by the laws and regulations of society. Every one has heard some of this "roaring" for the past forty years, with occasional stormy outbreaks dashing like tidal-waves against the earth [social order] and seeking to swallow it up. Restrained for a time, these waves are gathering weight and force; and, as prophetically shown, it is only a question of a few years until all the mountains [kingdoms] are "removed and carried into the midst of the sea," in anarchy. (Psalm 46: 1, 2.) Every newspaper, not under the control of wealth, voices the roar of the restless "sea" class; and the others, though unwillingly, must give the echo of the roaring as matters of news. This it is, that in a period of proclaimed peace, is causing "distress of nations with perplexity."

And it is as men begin to realize that the sea-roar and unrest is due largely to the wane of superstition and of ecclesiastical influence, and as they more and more see the powers of heaven [sectarian creeds and systems] shaken, that their hearts are failing them for fear,—in apprehension of the things coming upon the earth [society]; but the strenuous efforts now being made to re-establish and unify sectarian power and influence, will be in great measure successful only for a short time; for it will surely disintegrate completely.

Correspondence.

Dear Brother—Just a few lines trusting to find you and the other friends well. I am enclosing <£.2, to pay up for my “Peoples Papers” and Frank and Ernest work. Will you please send me 1,000 of the advertising cards as early as you can, and one of “Plan of God in Brief.” . . . That little book “The Mystery of Christ” I think is really wonderful, a beautiful explanation, and the articles in “P.P.” are excellent. With Christian love to all, Your Brother, by the grace of God.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs Mrs. and myself have been following your addresses on Sundays for some time and enjoy the lectures very much. Both of us are up in years and delight to hear the Word of God explained. Would you kindly forward a few of your books dealing with the coming of Christ; thanking you in advance, Yours sincerely.

Dear Sir—I received your literature on different subjects some time ago, and I now thank you for the same; could you send me those entitled “Where are the Dead?” and “What is the Soul?”

Thanking you and praying that your Talks on 3GL of Frank and Ernest will be a blessing to many. Yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I do not often get an opportunity to hear your session, but from what I have heard your interpretation of Scripture teachings seems more correct in my view than some that are put out by others. I would value a copy of this morning’s broadcast and also the book entitled “God and Reason.” I am, Yours sincerely.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I apologise for the delay in sending you this 2/- for the two copies of “Plan of God in Brief.” I have given them to those who are interested but do not know as yet what they think. I think it is a marvellous and condensed exposition of the plan, which is not generally set out as clearly by any of the churches, and will mean a great deal of light where people get confused. The accompanying paper—“Weep Not”—I found very helpful too; it contains the only kind of comfort any good to Christians bereaved of each other or their children; also it gives light on the tragedy of Bethlehem—the abuse of power in the wholesale murders, and the safety of those who were killed. I hope you will be much used of God and like Matthew your pen will provide food for millions of readers in this and the next age. Yours faithfully.

To Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Would you let me have a copy of the last two Sunday radio broadcasts at 8.15 a.m.? I would like to meditate with them. I listen every Sunday and have my breakfast in the room so I don’t miss your message each Sunday morning. We are certainly living in very stirring times, watching and waiting for our Lord’s return, who only can solve the world’s troubles. Thanking you in anticipation.

To Frank and Ernest—Enclosed please find p.n. for 5/- and many thanks for the splendid parcel of literature received. It has been most carefully read and passed on to others to read. Concerning the book mentioned in “Dawn” magazine, “The Conversion of Christendom,” where could we obtain a copy? Can you send us “The Answer to Seventh Day Adventism”? We tell all our friends to listen in to your Sunday morning broadcasts over 2KY. Thanking you again, Yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I would like a copy of your address and booklet “Plan of God,” if you would kindly send it to me. I listened in to your broadcast last Sunday from 2KY and was very interested. Would you please send a copy to my sister in the country as well, and oblige. Thanking you. Yours faithfully.

Dear Frank and Ernest—Please send me your booklet on “Hope Beyond the Grave.” Your talks on Sundays are very comforting and helps one to keep going and face the trials of this life. Would you take it as a signal of the end, the trouble in Palestine? Thanking you, Yours sincerely.

(The articles in “P. Paper” on “Our Lord’s Great Prophecy” will contain references to events in Palestine in the next issue or two.—B. B. Institute.)

Dear Frank and Ernest—As one of your many listeners I enjoy listening to your most helpful discussions. I am writing to ask if you would send me a copy of today’s Talk, also the booklet “God and Reason.” Thanks very much; Yours truly. Mrs.--, Tasmania.

I Wish Thee Gladness!

I wish thee gladness !—gladness, strong, uplifting;
A true, sweet gladness with each fresh-born day;

A gladness which, while land-marks all are shifting.
Remaineth firm: to ne'er be swept away.

I wish thee gladness!--gladness deep, abiding;
Which comes when eyes of faith behold the Lord.

The gladness of a prayerful heart-confiding,
And daily dwelling on God's precious Word.

I wish thee gladness!--quiet, but yet telling;
A gladness which will mark both tone and face;

A gentle gladness, fount-like, inward swelling,
And overflowing into streams of grace.

I wish thee gladness! Yes, through all life's sorrow;
The gladness which, supreme, o'er all can rise;

A gladness which, however dark life's morrow,
Doth have its springs beyond earth's clouded skies!

Christ Made Unto Us Sanctification.

(1 Cor. 1:30. Convention Address.)

WE notice that our text assures us that it is “of God” that we are in Christ Jesus. This also agrees with our Lord’s words in John 6:44, 45. The Heavenly Father is the Author of our salvation and He has appointed His Son, our blessed Lord, to be our Helper. (See 1 Cor. 8:6.)

Sanctification signifies a setting apart, or separating for a holy purpose. All who are sanctified, set apart, fully consecrated to God, must first be washed or justified. As the wisdom or knowledge of God came to us as a result of our Lord Jesus’ sacrifice on our behalf, and as justification then came through His merit when we accepted His atonement and turned from sin to righteousness, so also is our sanctification through Him. No man can sanctify himself in the sense of causing himself to be accepted and adopted into God’s family of the New Creation, begotten by His spirit. (John 1:13; Heb. 5:4.) As the merit of Christ was necessary to our justification, so His acceptance of us as members of His body, the royal priesthood, and His continued aid, are indispensable to the making of our calling and election sure. The Apostle condemns some for “not holding the head,” (Col. 2:19), and we perceive that such a recognition of Christ Jesus, as not only the Redeemer from sin but as the Head, representative, guide, instructor, and preserver of the body (the church) is essential to each member of it.

In order that we may be sanctified our Lord points out the necessity of our continuance under His care, saying repeatedly, “Abide in Me, . . . as the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in Me.” (John 15:4.) “If ye abide in Me, and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you.” (John 15:7.) The Apostle points out this same necessity for abiding in Christ; saying, “It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.” (Heb. 10:31.)

In Eph. 5:25, 26 we read, “Christ loved the church, and gave Himself for it; that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the Word.”

In the typical arrangements of the Law Covenant given to Israel, the priests were obliged to wash themselves and put on new, clean linen garments before consecration to their office and work as God’s typically set-apart, or sanctified priesthood. Their cleansing and new clothing represented justification—the appropriation of Christ’s righteousness instead of the filthy rags of their own unrighteousness, as members of the fallen race.

This shows that justification precedes consecration. The seal or mark of their consecration was a totally different one, and followed the cleansing ceremony, as consecration should in every case follow justification. The sign or mark of consecration or sanctification was the anointing with the holy oil, which symbolized the holy spirit.

The anointing oil or symbol of consecration was poured upon the head of the high priest only, but the under-priests were represented in the members of his body, even as Christ is the Head over the church which is His body, and altogether constitute the royal priesthood. So the holy spirit given without measure to our Lord and Head applies to us (His body) through Him. The Father gave the spirit to the Son only; all of the anointing oil was poured upon the Head. At Pentecost it ran down from the Head to the body, and has continued with the body ever since, and whoever comes into the “body” comes thereby under the consecration influence—the spirit of holiness, the spirit of God, the spirit of Christ, the spirit of the truth. (Acts 2:4.)

But in consecrating the typical priests the blood was not ignored. It was put upon all, upon the tip of the right ear, upon the thumb of the right hand and upon the great toe of the right foot, thus showing that the hearing of faith, the work of faith and the walk of faith must all be touched and made holy by an appreciation of the precious blood of atonement—the blood of Christ. (See Lev. 8:22-24.) We note that when Moses slew the “ram of consecration,” he took its blood and put it upon each of the priests (under-priests as well as high-priests) separately. This shows that our consecration is an individual work. Thus by our consecration we are enabled to have the “hearing of faith,” and to appreciate God’s promises as none but the consecrated can. Our hands are consecrated, so that whatsoever our hands find to do we do it with our might as unto the Lord. Our feet are consecrated, so that henceforth we “walk not as other Gentiles” but “walk in newness of life,” and even “as we received Christ, so walk in Him.”

The choice portions of the ram, its inwards and fat, represented our heart sentiments, our best powers. These were taken in the hands of the priests and “waved”—passed to and fro before the Lord—representing the fact that a consecrated offering is not given to the Lord for a moment, a day or a year, but that we consecrate to continually keep our affections and powers uplifted, never ceasing until accepted of Him as having finished our course. Also the seven days of consecration (Lev. 8:33, 35) showed that we are consecrated to God’s service, not for a part of our time only, but for all of it.

The antitypical consecrating of the antitypical priests is confined to the present (Gospel) age. It has progressed steadily since our Lord and Forerunner “offered up Himself” and will be complete before this age has fully ended.

The question arises—To what end or service are God’s people, the Royal Priesthood, consecrated or set apart?

Some may be inclined to answer—To live without sin, to practise the graces of the spirit, to wear plain clothing and in general to live a rather gloomy life now, hoping for greater liberty and pleasure hereafter.

We reply, This is the common but mistaken view. True, God’s people do seek to avoid sin, but that is not the object of their consecration. Before consecration, they learned the exceeding sinfulness and undesireableness of sin, and saw Christ Jesus as their sin-bearer and cleanser. Consequently, they had fled from sin before consecration. When consecrated they will still loathe and abhor sin, and that more and more as they grow in grace and in knowledge; but we repeat that to seek to live free from sin is not a proper definition of consecration or sanctification.

It is true also that all of the consecrated will seek to put on the graces of Christ’s spirit and example, but neither is this the object of our call to consecration under the Gospel high-calling. It is true, also, that our consecration will lead to plainness of dress, and bring upon us suffering for righteousness’ sake in this present evil world, but these are not the objects of our consecration. They are merely incidental results.

The object of God in calling out the Gospel church, and providing for the consecration or sanctification of its members, is a grand and worthy one; and when once clearly seen by the eye of faith it makes all the incidentals which it will cost, such as self-denials in dress, loss of friends and companionships, and even persecution for the truth’s sake, etc.. to be esteemed but light afflictions, not worthy to be compared to the glorious object of our consecration, which is that we may become “partakers of the divine nature,” and “joint-heirs with Christ,” and together with Him bless the world during its day of judgment—the Millennial Age.

God in His wisdom and foreknowledge knew that sin would enter this world and bring its blight--sorrow, pain and death. He foreknew that after their experience with sin, some of His creatures would be, not only willing, but anxious to forsake sin and return to His fellowship and love and the blessing of life everlasting. It was in view of this foreknowledge that God formed His plan for human salvation.

In that plan Christ Jesus our Lord had first place, first honour. As He was the beginning of the creation of God, so He was the chief of all God’s creatures thus far brought into being. But God purposed a new creation—the creation of a new order of beings different and higher than men, angels and archangels—higher than all others, and of His own divine essence or nature.

The worthiness of anyone accepted to that great honour should be recognised not only by God Himself, but by all of His intelligent creatures. Hence, God, who well knew the character of His first-begotten Son (our Lord Jesus), decided to prove or test His well-beloved Son in a manner that would prove to all of His intelligent creatures the worthiness of the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory and blessing.” (Rev. 5:12.)

But the exaltation of our Lord, who already was the chief of all creation, was even less remarkable than another feature of the divine plan, fore-ordained before the foundation of the world, (1 Pet. 1:2; Eph. 1:4); namely, that God would make to some of His human creatures (of the race sentenced as unworthy of any future life, but redeemed from that sentence by Christ’s sacrifice) an offer of joint-heirship and companionship with His beloved Son, in the order of the new creation (of the divine nature) of which He has made the worthy Lamb the Head and chief, next to Himself. (1 Cor. 15:27.)

This offer is not made to all of the redeemed race, but to many. “Many are called.” The called are only those who in this age are justified by faith in Christ’s atoning sacrifice. Unbelievers and scoffers are called to repentance and faith; but none are called to this high calling of participation in the divine nature (2 Pet. 1:4) until they have forsaken sin and laid hold upon Christ as their Redeemer.

If the worthiness of the Lamb was necessary to be shown, the worthiness of those whom He redeemed to be His joint-heirs (called also the Bride, the Lamb’s wife) would also need to be shown, proved, manifested before angels as well as before men, that God’s ways may be seen to be just and equitable.

It is for this reason that God calls upon those whom He does call, to consecrate themselves to Him not in dress or word merely, but in everything. It is not a consecration to preach merely, although all the consecrated will delight to use every opportunity in telling to others the good tidings of God’s love. It is not a consecration to temperance reform, social reform, political reform, or any other work of reform, although we may and should feel a deep interest in anything that would benefit the fallen race. But our devotion should be as that of a maid to her mistress, or of soldiers to their officers, or better yet, as that of a dutiful child toward a beloved parent—swift to hear, quick to obey, not planning or seeking our own wills, but the will of our Father in heaven. Just such an attitude is implied in the words sanctified or consecrated to God. It takes hold of the will, and therefore rules the entire being, except where uncontrollable obstacles hinder. And since our call and acceptance are based upon the ransom-sacrifice of Jesus Christ, which accepts a perfect will on the part of those trusting in the precious blood, and does not demand perfection of deeds, it follows that all of us, no matter how degraded by the fall, may be acceptable, to God in the Beloved and make our calling and election sure.

The trial of the justified and consecrated consists in the presenting to them of opportunities to serve God and His cause in this present time, when, because of sin abounding, whosoever will live godly and hold up the light will suffer persecution. Those whose consecration is complete and of the proper kind will rejoice in their privileges of serving God and His cause, and will count it all joy to be accounted worthy to suffer in such a cause, and thus to attest to God the sincerity of their love and of their consecration to Him. Such consecrated ones, pure in heart (in will or intention) realising the object of present trials, glory in tribulations brought upon them by faithfulness to Christ and His Word, realising that their experiences are similar to those of the Master, and that thus they have evidence that they are walking in the footsteps of Him who said, “Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you. Ye know that it hated Me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love its own. but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.” “Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.” (1 John 3:13; John 15:1 8, 19; Rev. 2:10.)

Furthermore, they glory in tribulations because they realise that the Lord will be near them while they endure faithfully, and that He will not permit them to be tempted above what they are able to bear, but will with every temptation provide some way of escape; because they realise the necessity of forming character, and that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience and experience hope—a hope that maketh not ashamed; and because they realise that all of these favourable results of tribulation follow, on account of a genuine consecration in which the love of God has been shed abroad in the heart, displacing the spirit of the world, the spirit of selfishness. (1 Cor. 10:13; Rom. 5:3-5.)

If any justified and consecrated child of God commit sin it will be, at most, only partially wilful—largely of weakness or deception. He may feel his shame and weep bitterly, as did Peter; but all such penitence would but prove that his sin was not of the wilful kind that would mark him as “of the devil”. No, so long as the seed of the truth, and of his consecration, remains in him, he cannot sin (wilfully) . But if any trespass under deception or weakness, and not wilfully, he has an Advocate with the Father—”Jesus Christ the righteous” one, whose merit is applicable for all unwillful errors of such as abide in Christ. If he confess his sin, God is faithful and just to forgive him—because Christ died. (1 John 1:7, 9; 2:1.) But if we should say that we have no sin, no imperfection, we deceive ourselves, make God a liar, and disown the Advocate whom God provided; for we are weak through the fall, and liable to deception and error at the hands of the world, the flesh, and the devil. (1 John 1:8, 1 O.)

Christ Made Unto Us Redemption.

The word redemption here is used in the sense of deliverance, salvation, as the outcome of the redemptive work— the result of a ransom, or corresponding price given. The thought contained in the word carries us down to the full end of the Church’s victory, the full-birth condition of the New Creation; although in our text it may very properly be applied also to the intermediate and incidental deliverances of the faithful all along the narrow way, culminating in salvation “to the uttermost” in the glory, honour, and immortality of the First Resurrection.

Our Lord, pointing us forward to the salvation to be brought unto us through the First Resurrection, says to some living at the end of the age, who discern certain signs of the times, “Lift up your heads; for your redemption (deliverance) draweth nigh.” (Luke 21:28.) The Apostle, speaking to the same class of New Creatures, exhorts them, saying, “Grieve not the holy spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption.” (Eph.

4:30.) In these texts we are referred not to the work of redemption accomplished in the sacrifice of our Lord, but to the results of that work as they shall be accomplished in the perfecting of the Church, which is His body, in the First Resurrection. In the same Epistle (Eph. 1:7) the Apostle declares, “We have redemption through His blood.” He here refers evidently to the blessings we enjoy in the present time through the merits of our Lord’s sacrifice, covering our blemishes, and working out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory by working in us to will and to do God’s good pleasure. The thought we would like to emphasize is that Christ is made unto us deliverance in the present time, giving us the victory in present conflicts, as He shall ultimately give us the complete victory by making us perfect in His own likeness.

This thought is still further brought out by the same writer, who assures us (Rom. 3:24) that God’s grace has justified us freely (and continues to maintain our justification while we abide in Christ) “through the redemption which is in Christ Jesus,” and which will reach its completion, so far as we are concerned, when we shall be made like Him, and we shall see Him as He is, and share His glory in the day of redemption (deliverance) . In the same Epistle (Rom. 8:23) the Apostle speaks again of the completion of our redemption or deliverance, and of how we must wait for it until God’s appointed time. After pointing us to the fact that “the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together . . . waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God” (the glorified New Creation), he adds, “And not only they, but we ourselves also (called and begotten to the New Creation) which have the first fruits of the spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption (son-ship) , to wit, the redemption (deliverance) of our body--the body of Christ, the Church. of which Jesus is the Head and we prospective members. This will be the end of the redemptive work with us; for although we share many blessings and advantages through the redemption in the meantime, we will not attain our redemption in full until then. (Rom. 8:20, 23.)

Concerning our present condition the share in the redemption which already is ours—our Lord declares, “He that believeth on Me bath everlasting life” (John 6:47) , and the Apostle also states, “He that hath the Son bath life.” (1 John 5:12.) We are not to understand this believing to be merely a mental assent to some facts connected with the divine plan of salvation, but a faith in the atonement sacrifice and conduct in accord with its opposition to sin—a living faith which manifests itself in obedience of heart. Likewise we are not to understand the meaning to be that believers have everlasting life in the full sense of the word—in the sense that it shall be theirs eventually, through a share in the First Resurrection. Rather we are to understand that consecrated believers are begotten to newness of life, have the new life begun in them in the sense that their wills are accepted of God as beginnings of the New Creatures which they shall be in the First Resurrection.

We are to understand these statements in full harmony with the Apostle’s declaration that “we are saved by hope”— by faith--reckonedly saved, not completely saved. Hence it is that we are to wait with patience for the completion of the good work which God has begun in us—to wait for “the grace (salvation) that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ,”—”when He shall come to be glorified in His saints.” (1 Pet. 1:13; 2 Thes. 1:10.)

The redemption (deliverance) which is in Christ Jesus—that which we enjoy now, as well as that which shall by and by be completed in us—is everywhere in Scripture identified with the sacrifice which our Lord made on our behalf. While His death constituted the price of our penalty, His resurrection was essential; for a dead Saviour could not aid the redeemed to get back to that which was lost. And our Lord’s own experiences in connection with the sacrifice, we are assured, qualify Him all the more for the great work of delivering the groaning creation purchased by His blood. The Apostle declares, “In that He Himself bath suffered being tempted, He is able to succour them that are tempted”— able to deliver them from temptation, which otherwise might overpower them. “He will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able, but will with the temptation provide a way of escape.” He may suffer us to stumble, but so long as we trust in Him He will not suffer us to be utterly cast down—to fall in the Second Death. (Heb. 2:18; 1 Cor. 10:13.)

Permitting us to stumble may be His means at times for teaching us valuable lessons respecting our own weaknesses and our need to look unto Him as our Shepherd as well as our Redeemer, and to feel our own weaknesses, that thereby we may become strong in the Lord and in the power of His might. He is held out before us as our High Priest, capable of being touched with a feeling of our infirmities, while possessing full power to succour us in the hour of temptation. He is specifically mentioned as having “compassion on the ignorant and on them that are out of the way,” and as being able to save “to the uttermost” those who approach the Father through His mediation and who continue to abide in Him in living faith, which implies obedience to the extent of ability. Thus we are to rejoice in our Redeemer as a present Saviour, Deliverer, as well as the by-and-by Deliverer from the tomb, by a resurrection;—the Finisher of our faith. (Heb. 2:17, 18; 4:15, 16; 5:2; 7:25, 26.)

They Reigned with Christ a Thousand Years

IT has been suggested that a short article in these columns on the reign of Christ and His church, in contrast with the harvest of the Gospel Age when the faithful members are gathered to the heavenly inheritance, would be of general benefit at this time. A short quotation from an able writer on the Scriptures is as follows:—"Messiah's Kingdom repeatedly referred to throughout the Old Testament was the centre of all Jewish hopes. But the fact that it will last a thousand years was not mentioned; it was merely Messiah's Day. The holy spirit by St. Peter first declared, a day with the Lord is as a thousand years.' St. Paul did not mention the thousand years, but merely proclaimed Messiah's Kingdom, and that He would, reign victoriously until He shall have put down all opposition to God's will. (1 Cor. 15:25.) It is in the book of Revelation that we have the clear statements that Messiah will reign for a thousand years; with His faithful Bride will reign with Him a 'Royal Priesthood'; that during that thousand years Satan will be bound and the whole world will be granted a judgment or trial, the result of which will be life-eternal or death-eternal."

The above statement that "Messiah will reign for a thousand years, and that His faithful Bride will reign with Him," is important and fully attested in such Scriptures as Revelation 20:4.. "And they (faithful overcomers) lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years"; in 2 Tim. 2:11, 12 and Rom. 8:17, "For if we be dead with Him, we shall also live with Him: If we suffer, we shall also reign with Him . . . If children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified together"; and also in Rev. 3:21, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in His throne."

It will be noted that the reference to the faithful Bride reigning with Christ points to the time when there really will be a Bride—at the close of the harvest of this Gospel Age when "the marriage of the Lamb is come, and His wife hath made herself ready" (See Rev. 19:6-8.) It seems very clear, then, that the reign of Christ could not commence until the full gathering in of the members of His Body, and this Home-gathering or harvest of the faithful church takes place during "the days of the Son of Man"—the days of His presence (Matt. 24:31, 37-42) *—and also described by the prophet as "the day of his preparation." (Nahum 2:3, 4.)

It is of much interest to students of God's Word to find that our Lord, by His own words and through the Apostles, clearly presented the truth that His second advent would be accomplished in progressive stages. The Greek word "parousia", meaning presence, is used in respect of the earliest stage of the second advent, while the words "epiphania", meaning bright shining or manifestation, and "apokalupsis", meaning revelation, uncovering, unveiling (as of a thing previously present but hidden) relate to the same advent later;—not that epiphania and apokalupsis relate to another or a third advent, but merely to a later feature of the second advent.

A full list of the Scriptures where the word "parousia" is found, is given in the booklet "The Manner of Christ's Return and Appearing", and the passages where the words "epiphania" and "apokalupsis" are used are also enlightening, especially in relation to the subject of the reign of Christ and His church.

The Greek word "epiphania", rendered "appearing" and "brightness" occurs in five Scriptures, and we quote as an example 2 Tim. charge thee, therefore, before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his 'appearing' and his kingdom." It will be noted that the "quick" (the saints—Eph. 2:1) , are judged at the "epiphania", while the "dead" (the world of mankind) are judged at the time of His Kingdom—following the exaltation of the Bride class, at which time "the saints shall judge the world" with Christ (1 Cor. 6:2) , reigning with Him in Kingdom power and glory.

Another passage in which the word "epiphania" is used is Tit. 2:13—"Looking for that blessed hope and the glorious 'appearing' of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." This shows that while the Apostle and the Lord's people generally earnestly desired the second advent of Christ, it is the epiphania stage of the Lord's presence that would complete their "blessed hope"—the union with Christ of the full number of the Bride of the Lamb. The three other passages in which "epiphania" appears are-1 Tim. 6:14, 15; 2 Tim. 4:8 and 2 Thes. 2:8.

The Greek word "apokalupsis", meaning uncovering or unveiling, is rendered revealed, revelation, appearing, coming and manifestation in various Scriptures. The name of the last book of the Bible is from the same root—Apocalypse or Revelation. As an example of the use of this word we quote Rom. 8:19—"For the earnest expectation of the creature (mankind) waiteth for the 'manifestation' (apokalupsis—revealing) of the sons of God (the Church)

." It will be the manifesting or revealing to the world of mankind that the sons of God, the Church, are exalted and reigning with Christ that will fulfil the earnest expectations or desires of all races, which at the present time they are unable to accomplish by their own imperfect and selfish governments. This manifestation of the "new heavens" (2 Pet. 3:13) cannot take place, of course, until the Bride of Christ is complete, and following the great levelling process which will thoroughly humble mankind, as expressed by the prophet—"For thus saith the Lord of hosts . . . I will shake all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come." (Haggai 2:6, 7.)

It would seem clearly established from God's Word that during the harvest of this Gospel Age. the gathering in of the firstfruits unto God (James 1:18) our Lord is still the sacrificing High Priest. while being present as the Chief Reaper of the harvest. (Rev. 14:13-16.) However, with the completion of the "fulness from the Gentiles" (Rom. 11:25) , and the passing of the present "heavens and earth" (2 Pet. 3:10) , the time will be due for the reign of Christ and His Church to commence—"and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years."

Our Lord's Great Prophecy.

(Part 5. Continued from February Issue.)

"And then [at that same time] shall appear the sign [evidence, proof] of the Son of Man," the proof or evidence of the second advent of the Son of Man.

WE should not lose sight of the fact that this entire prophecy is given in answer to certain questions, one of which was, "What shall be the sign of thy presence" at the second advent? Having in mind the fact that few recognized the Messiah at His first advent, and that they themselves had doubts and fears on the subject for a considerable time, they wished to know how they would be sure to recognize Him. At the first advent our Lord showed Himself, and was attested by signs—by His wonderful words and works, and by John the baptizer. What sign should they expect to indicate His second presence? was their pointed question.

Our Lord's answer assured them that His people would not be left without a suitable and sufficient sign; but of its character He said nothing. "Then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man." It will be sufficient for the faithful, watchful people of God, but is not intended for others. It was this class that saw and understood the signs or proofs of His first advent, while the masses of nominal Israel could not discern the signs of their times, and God did not wish that others should discern them; hence many of the wonderful words of life were spoken in parables and dark sayings, that seeing they might not see, and hearing they might not understand, being unworthy of the light then due to the faithful only. And so it will be in respect of the sign or evidence of the Lord's second presence. It will not be manifested to all mankind: it can be recognized only by Israelites indeed, and they must be honest—without guile.

The word sign (verse 30) is in the Greek "seemion" and has the significance of proof or evidence as illustrated in the following cases:

"And many other signs truly did Jesus."—John 20:30.

"The Lord . . . granted signs and wonders to be done by their [Paul's and Barnabas'] hands."—Acts 14:3.

"Tongues are for a sign . . . to them that believe not."—1 Cor. 14:22.

"Truly the signs of an apostle were wrought among you in all patience, in signs." etc.—2 Cor. 12:12.

Hence, "Ye shall see the sign of the Son of Man," does not signify that the Lord's disciples then living will see Him, but that they will have an indication or evidence of His presence at that time. The signs of our Lord's second presence will be found in harmony with, and corroborated by, the testimony of the prophets, as was the case at the first advent.—Luke 24:44-46.

"In Heaven:"—The sign or proof of His parousia will be given in heaven. Not in the heaven of the Father's presence and before the holy angels, but in the symbolic heaven, the ecclesiastical heaven, the same heaven which the preceding verse tells us shall be so terribly shaken as to shake out its stars. It is in this heaven—the professedly spiritual class—that the sign or evidence of our Lord's presence will first be apparent. Some will "see" the fulfilment of the prophetic declarations respecting this day of the second presence, in the marvellous unfolding of the divine plan of the ages, and will recognize it as one of the signs of His, presence. (Luke 12:37.) The judgment of Babylon, Christendom, social and ecclesiastical, is another sign that the, Judge has come, and is reckoning first of all with those to whom as stewards He committed His goods. (Matt. 25:19; Luke 19:15.) "Judgment must begin with the house of God;" and it means confusion and consternation among the Doctors and Chief Priests of the present time, as they attempt to reconcile their doctrines, practices and faiths, as it did to the Pharisees and Priests and Doctors of the Law at our Lord's first presence;—even though the presence was denied then, as now.

But at the first presence the humble Israelites indeed, whom God accounted worthy, were not confused, but enlightened, so that our Lord could say to them, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear: for Verily I say unto you, that many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them." (Matt:13:17.) So now in the second presence of the Son of Man, the opening up of the divine Word, the discernment of the divine plan showing as well the divine times and seasons, and the confusion upon "Babylon" are satisfactory proofs of the presence of the King.

"Then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven."—Matt. 24:30.

The tribes of earth will not see the sign or proof of the Lord's presence given only among the "heavens," the at least nominally spiritual—the churches—and appreciated only by the guileless of these. Nor will they ever see the Lord Himself by natural sight, for He is no longer flesh and to be seen of the fleshly.* Our Lord's words should be remembered,—“Yet a little while and the world seeth me no more.” (John 14:19.) And the Apostle's words to the Church are also to be kept in memory, —that we all must be “changed,” and made spirit beings like our Lord, before we can “see Him as He is.” (1 Cor.’ 15:51-53; 1 John 3:2.) The tribes of earth, on the contrary, will see the clouds of trouble and confusion incident to the shaking of the “heavens,” and realize it to be a storm which will shake the “earth” also (See Heb. 12:26, 27) , and at that time also there shall be a general mourning of all, incident to that great time of trouble; and eventually all mankind at the close of the storm shall discern, recognize the new King with the eyes of their understanding and shall mourn for sin, and that they ever in blindness rejected Him;—the Jew first.—See Zech. 12:10-12.

"And he shall send his angels with a great trumpet and he shall gather his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." (Sinaitic MS. omits "sound.")—Matt. 24:31.

This work will be in progress in the interim, the "harvest." The angels (messengers of the new King of earth) will do a separating work, not between the church and the world, but a separating work in the nominal church—among nominal professors, the present "heavens." This work is represented under various symbolic descriptions,—it is the gathering of the wheat from the tares into the barn (Matt. 13:30): it is the gathering of the good fish into baskets and the casting of the unsuitable fish caught in the gospel net back into the sea (Matt. 13:47-49); it is the gathering of His jewels (Mal. 3:17); it is the calling of "my people" out of Babylon (Rev. 18:4); it is the midnight cry to the virgins, which separates the wise from the foolish (Matt. 25:6); and in this prophecy it is the gathering of the "elect" from all the non-elect of Christendom, from the four winds — from every quarter.

We are not to expect spirit-angels to appear with wings and to fly through the air blowing a great trumpet, and here and there catching away some of the saints;—no more than we are to expect to become literal fish and to be put into literal baskets, or literal grains of wheat to be put into a literal barn. The angels or messengers used by our Lord in this harvest gathering will, we believe, be such messengers as He has used in His service throughout this age—earthly servants, begotten of His holy spirit—”new creatures in Christ Jesus.”

The “great trumpet” we understand to be the seventh trumpet,” as symbolic as the preceding six (Rev. 11:15-18) , none of which ever made any literal sound. It has been symbolically sounding since last century, and will continue to the end of the Millennium. With the beginning of this trumpet began the “harvest” and the reaping and separating, which must continue until the “elect,” the “wheat,” are all gathered out of the present heavens (ecclesiastical systems)’—unto the Lord. The “angels” (messengers) are those who carry the message of the Lord’s Word which produces the separation and gathers His elect to Himself.

It is the privilege of the faithful people of God who are now translated out of darkness into the marvellous light— who are permitted to see and hear, to be co-workers with their Lord as His angels—messengers or servants—in this as well as in all the other features of the work, throughout the age. By His grace such have plowed and sowed and harrowed and watered, and now the same class may also reap with the Chief Reaper.

Dear Brethren in Christ--The peace of our great God and Father and the love of our dear Master and Redeemer be with you always. •

Many, many thanks dear brethren for your kindness of giving me a subscription of your very good and welcome “Peoples Paper and Herald of Christ’s Kingdom.- “The Herald of Christ’s Kingdom” I have already read before the year 1933.

During the Nazi dominion we also were forbidden and persecuted and all our literature has been confiscated by the Gestapo robbers, “Manna Book,” old Towers before 1916, Bibles, the Six Volumes and Hymn Books etc.

We are here in Kiel about 30 brethren and are growing more and more. The most of them, also myself, were formerly Watch Tower, and know the truth how we got it from our dear Lord by our dear Brother Russell since the first world war, and was baptized in 1918.

The Lord has been always with us also in the now passed second world war; it was a horrible time. I myself and other brethren lost all possessions, habitation and furniture, etc., by bombs; 80% of all buildings here in Kiel are destroyed. I myself am dwelling, sleeping, cooking, etc., with my dear Sister in one room.

But in spite of all these trials we are in good hope in the Lord, because we have saved our faith (1 Pet. 1:5-7) , and we know that our Heavenly Father who has begun the good work in us, will also perform it.

It is winter here upon the north globe, but the Lord our God may give, that in our hearts it may be always summer, and the Sun of grace of our great God and Father may always shine into our hearts, that fruits of the spirit, love, kindness, meekness and all the other qualities may grow and ripen, in order to hear one day the very welcome word of the Lord—”Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord.”

This to bear in mind, I send you and all dear ones of your class and country hearty greetings. Your thankful Brother in Christ, Sister and all brethren of our class.

Germany.

Dear Brethren all, in the same precious hope.—It was some time ago already when we received your “Peoples Paper,” all issues from January to October 1948. We so heartily thank you for it; we enjoy your little “Paper” so much. Recently “The Mystery of Christ” arrived together with one issue of your “Paper.”

I had a very busy time, sometimes I really felt overburdened with all sorts of work. I now know that I often did works which need not be, worldly hasting and running often overwhelm us that we feel fastened to the earth, instead of feeling free like eagles.

Some months after I had written my first letter to your country I received some hearty letters from several brethren.

I am very happy now and I thank you with all my heart that you gave my name and address to the friends. It is so very, very helping and encouraging to exchange experiences and opinions with friends in far away countries; to recognize that all over the earth our Lord’s children are being prepared for future days, every one just as he specially needs the preparation. What for oneself not at least mean any difficulty to overcome, gives much trouble and pains to the friend. Oh yes, our Father knows what every one of His children needs and so He leads the events; He brings the good and the hard days for us that every one might prove his faith in the circumstances which surround him.

There is now a great activity to be seen in our destroyed towns. Ruins are being removed, houses grow up like mushrooms, dredges are busily at work to bring away all rubble to make people forget the days of war . . . Money is very short in Germany now, prices climbed high and pays did not follow; people need clothings and furniture and all sorts of things for the household, and with their money they just reach to buy their food and the most necessary things .

. . Germany must distinctly feel that it lost a war. All houses which were not destroyed by bombs will now become taxed; their owners must supply a good part of the money which those shall receive that lost all they had. I thought this would perhaps interest you . .

We like to direct our eyes to Palestine; the State of Israel often takes our interest—fulfilled prophecy. Aren’t we very blessed and favoured that we can recognise all these things; we have much reason to be thankful and to serve our Lord with joy. I think that it is very late on the clock of the world and that we must more earnestly than ever before strive to become ready and Christlike in heart and mind. What is the good of all knowledge and wisdom when our inner heart did not hold step with it, when we are lacking love and kindness.

I heard of many different opinions among the brethren . . . we and the brethren near us (we are only few that are of the same faith) are convinced that our Lord is already present, breaking down the old world order; better said: sending this breakdown and teaching His faithful ones that they will have sufficient oil for the days in the dark to come . . .

My dear mother and I so heartily greet you in the love which combines all our Father's children. We remember yours before His throne of grace; may He constantly bless your work and service. We again thank you for your love towards us. I shall from time to time come to you on the pen and paper way. Lovingly your Sister.

Dear Brother—For the past week I have been teaching a young man at work, and he told me his mother and father were Seventh Day Adventists. This gave me the opportunity to point out to him where they were trying to do the impossible; that we were now under Grace, and that Christ, by keeping the Law, showed to the Jews how far short of perfection they were. As the Law was perfect, it took a perfect man to keep it, and Christ was the only man who was able to keep it. I pointed out to him that in trying to keep the sabbath they were putting themselves under the Law, and how Christ by His sacrifice done away with the Law by nailing it to His cross, and it was only a "schoolmaster" to bring them to Christ[^], who had broken down the middle wall of partition. I quoted that passage of Scripture which states—"Let no man judge you in meat, or in drink . . . or of the sabbath days." (Col. 2:16.) Having the 6th Volume with me at the time I read a portion of it dealing with the Law and he was rather surprised and asked me if I could get him a 6th Volume. I told him I could and would write straight away to Melbourne for it, and he would have it in about a fortnight's time. So if you could send me a 6th Volume in small edition I will be obliged and will send you a money order covering cost of same.

Well, dear Brother, I trust you are well and that the Lord will richly bless you and strengthen you. Give our love to all the dear ones in Melbourne and we are still in the race and looking unto Jesus who is the Author and Finisher of our faith. Yours in His service.

Volume XXXII. No. 4 MELBOURNE, 1st APRIL, 1949 Price— Fourpence Halfpenny

Memorial of Christ's Death.

JESUS was a Jew, and was, therefore, obligated to every feature of the Mosaic Law. He came not to destroy the Law, but to fulfil it. This subject points us to the fulfilment of one feature of the Law—the Passover—not that it is already entirely fulfilled, but that the antitype has been in process of fulfilment for over nineteen centuries, during which time the Church of the First-born remains covered by the blood.

To appreciate this matter, we must have clearly in mind the type:—Approximately 3500 years ago God delivered the people of Israel from the despotic power of Pharaoh, King of Egypt. Time after time Pharaoh had refused to let the people go, preferring to hold them as chattels, slaves. Time after time God had sent plagues upon Egypt as chastisements. Under the influence of each plague Pharaoh repented, and through Moses entreated God for mercy for himself and the people for relief from the plague. Nevertheless, every manifestation of Divine mercy tended only to harden his heart, until finally the tenth plague, the severest of all, was necessary. That plague consisted in the execution of the death sentence against all the first-born of Egypt. But the Israelites in Egypt were exempt from its provisions under certain conditions. Each family was required to have its own lamb, not a bone of which was to be broken. Its blood was sprinkled on the door-posts of the house, and the family, assembled within, partook of its flesh, with unleavened bread and bitter herbs, pilgrim-like, with staff in hand, ready for departure out of Egypt in the morning.

Israel's First-borns Passed Over.

When that night the Divine sentence slew all of Egypt's first-borns, the first-borns of Israel were passed over or spared; hence the name Passover. And this ceremony, as a reminder of the great blessing of the Lord upon Israel, was commended to be observed yearly as a memorial of God's goodness, and because it typed, or illustrated, a still greater mercy and blessing yet to come.

A little later on those spared first-borns were exchanged for one of the tribes—Levi. Thereafter the Levites were the passed-over first-borns, and were specially devoted to God and His service.

The Antitypical Fulfilment.

Those experiences of the Israelites and their firstborn ones were very real, and properly very interesting to them; but they are still more interesting to Christians, who themselves are antitypes now being passed over. By Christians we do not mean all who merely make profession, nor all who attend Church, however regularly. We mean merely the saintly few who are now being called and being tested as to faithfulness to the Lord, and by faith being passed over—from death unto life. These are Scripturally styled "The Church of the first-born, whose names are written in heaven" (Heb. 12:23). As the deliverance of the nation of Israel from Egypt took place after the sparing or passing over of the first-born, so, correspondingly, the Divine blessing will come upon the world of mankind directly after the completion of "the Church of the first-born"—directly after their passing from, death unto life, by the power of the First Resurrection. If there is a first-born class, it implies that there will be an after-born class. Thus - the Scriptures everywhere distinctly teach that the present call, trial, testing, proving and final rewarding of the Church will not be the end of Divine mercy toward humanity, but, on the contrary, will be only its beginning; for since the saintly are spoken of as the "Church of the first-born," or, as the Apostle declares, "the first-fruits unto God of His creatures" we are assured thereby that after-fruits are equally part of the Divine Programme.

Amongst the Levites were several divisions, representing different ranks and grades of the Church of Christ. But the principal division or section of the Levites was the priestly family of Aaron, just as there is a special class amongst the antitypical Levites, the faithful few, known in the Scriptures as the Royal Priesthood.

The Antitypical Lamb and His Blood.

In Jesus' day the time had come for the fulfilment of the antitype of the Passover. Jesus Himself was to be the Passover Lamb. By faith the merit of His sacrifice, His blood, was to be sprinkled upon the door-posts of His people's hearts, and His flesh, the merit of His earthly perfection, was to be eaten or appropriated by them in their minds. With it they were to eat the unleavened bread of the Divine promises, and bitter herbs of trials and adversities, and withal they were to drink wine, the blood of the grape, symbolically implying their participation with the Lamb in ignominy and sufferings.

The Lamb of God, Jesus, the antitypical Passover Lamb, was slain over nineteen centuries ago on the exact anniversary of the killing of the typical lamb. The sacrifice of Jesus needs not to be repeated, for by faith we all sprinkle this same blood today, and in our hearts feed upon the merit of the same earthly sacrifice, and have plenty of bitter herbs of persecution, and drink of the blood—share the Master's spirit and its reward of suffering for righteousness' sake.

Not many have appreciated these privileges during all these nineteen centuries—in all but a “little flock.” Nor are there many who envy them their present experiences; nor are there many who appreciate how great will be their reward and blessings in the life to come. Then, instead of suffering with Christ, they shall reign with Him in glory, honour, and immortality.

“This Do in Remembrance of Me”.

Jesus, about to begin the fulfilment of this type by dying as the antitypical Passover Lamb (Christ our Passover is slain for us.—1 Cor. 5:7), instituted for His followers an annual remembrance, which, in their minds, would take the place of the type, and continually remind them of the great Antitype. Instead of the literal flesh of the lamb, our Master used bread, and instead of the blood, the fruit of the vine, and instead of a further commemoration of 'the type, He directed that this be done in remembrance of the antitype—the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world,” and the passover coming to the Church of the first-born, as precedent to the great blessings for Israel and all the families of the earth.

Our Lord, as a Jew, was obligated to keep the typical Passover, eating of the literal lamb, etc., first; but subsequently, after that Passover supper, He instituted with the bread and fruit of the vine His substitutionary memorial of Himself, saying, “Take eat, this is my body. And He took the cup; and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them; and they all drank of it. And he said, . . . Verily I say unto you, ‘I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, until that day’ when I drink it new in the Kingdom of God”—until His second coming in power and great glory to receive the Church as His elect Bride and Joint-Heir in His kingdom, and to shower blessings richly upon Israel, and through Israel upon the whole world of mankind.

Judas, the Selfish Betrayer.

The hour for the betrayal was drawing near. The Master knew by some power unknown to us who would betray Him, etc. Breaking the matter to the twelve, He said, “One of you will betray me.” Each said, “Is it I?” Even Judas brazenly challenged the Master's knowledge of his deceitful course and said, “Is it I?” The answer was, “It is as you have said—you are the betrayer.” The Divine programme was carried out by the traitor, and the Scriptures were fulfilled, which declare that Jesus should be sold for thirty pieces of silver; but the coincidence marks the Divine fore-knowledge without implying that God in any manner instigated the traitorous conduct, hence the statement, “Woe unto that man by whom the Son of Man is betrayed.” From this standpoint we are to understand that there is no hope for Judas in a future life. His sorrow and anguish before his death were such as found no compensation in any happiness he had enjoyed in previous days.

In My Father's Kingdom.

In giving the disciples the bread which represented His flesh, and the cup which represented His blood, the Master pictorially offered them justification and sanctification, and, as St. Paul explained, He did more than this—He offered them a participation with Himself in the sufferings of the present and in the glories of the future (1 Cor. 10:16, 17; Matt. 26:29). The antitype of the cup in its higher sense will be the new joys of the kingdom which all the faithful in Christ will share with the great King of Glory, when He shall take unto Himself His great power and reign.

“Lord, I would keep Thy Holy feast,
Like Israel when His bondage ceased;
And safe beneath the sprinkled mark,
His every home became an ark.
Only the lamb which Israel slew

I need not to make bleed anew:
Because the blood which stained the Cross
Is mark of which there ne'er is loss.
I'd keep the feast with bread from heaven,
Free from all taint of earthly leaven:
Yet find some sad resemblance glide,
Which sets the bitter herbs beside.

I seek the feast with upgirt mind,
As for immediate work assigned;
And eat like one on passing stay,
Impatient to resume the way.
That sprinkled blood bath had the power
To hold me safe in judgment's hour;
But still for me a task remains,
To haste and flee from Egypt's plains.
With Thy refreshing viands fed,

I shrink not, Lord, wherever led;
And still with pilgrim's staff in hand,
Plod firmly tow'ards the promised land.” —Selected.

Training for Membership in the Kingdom

“Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow.” —Matt. 6:28.

IN THE Sermon on the Mount, the Master is teaching His disciples certain important lessons. He is not teaching the world, but those who had come to Him, especially desiring to be taught, desiring to be His disciples. He points out to them that if they would be His disciples, thenceforth their main object in life would be to seek to become members of the Kingdom of God. He Himself is to be the great King; and an elect, choice number from the world are to be associated with Him in that Kingdom. When this election is completed, that Kingdom will be established. Then the blessing of all the world will follow under that Kingdom, in harmony with the promise made to Abraham, “In thee and in thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.”

These, then, who aspire to be members of the Kingdom class should make this the chief aim and object of life:

“Seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness;” that is to say, the ‘righteousness necessary to attain a place in that Kingdom. And all things necessary are promised to be supplied to such aspirants and seekers. Our Lord did not promise rich clothing, fine houses; ease or luxury; nor could we suppose that these would be specially helpful.

Certain training is necessary for membership in the Kingdom. God, the great Husbandman in one picture, the great Overseer in another, would supervise the affairs of each member; and all things would be made to work together for their good. If they needed experience in trials, difficulties and privations, He would see to it that they got those experiences. If they were proud, they would get experiences that would humble them. If they were rude, they would have experiences that would make them polite. It is necessary for them to have these experiences; for if they did not learn at all, they would never get the inheritance to which they have become heirs.

Lessons in Every Experience of Life.

The Master took note of the fact that the majority of people are full of the cares of this present life—what they shall eat, what they shall drink, and wherewithal they shall be clothed. He saw that many of the poor were distressed, not knowing, perhaps, whence the next meal would come. If such were the Lord's people, they should exercise faith. If the Father permitted His children to be in these difficulties, He saw that there was some good lesson for them to learn. They were to seek to learn that lesson, and not to fret about their condition.

This did not mean that His followers were to be negligent, to care nothing about their appearance or about what they should eat. This is not the way to do; but while appreciating the beauties of nature, of dress, etc., they were to have faith in their Heavenly Father and to realize that the luxuries of life might not be the best for them. But they were to be content—knowing that all things would work out good to those who were rightly exercised.

This matter of taking anxious thought for food and clothing is not confined to the poor. Some of the middle class, as they rise to wealth, find themselves engrossed with the cares of this life, eating, drinking and dressing—saying to themselves, What shall I wear this time, or that time, etc.? Eating and drinking and dressing seem to be the engrossing thoughts of both rich and poor.

The Lord's people are to be content with such things as they have. They are to seek to provide things honest and decent. But honest and decent things are not extravagant things. The Lord's people are not to be inclined to use money in self-gratification. As they look about and see others of the Lord's children, they see that they must not take too many of these blessings for themselves, but that they should use their money with economy. They should use their money as a part of their stewardship, and know that they are to give an account of it.

We are to seek first of all the interests of the Kingdom. If the interests of the Kingdom need money, we would feel guilty if we should use the Lord's consecrated money in self-gratification. Presumably this is the reason that the Lord has left the interests of the Kingdom in a condition of semi-poverty—in order that His people may forward the interests of that Kingdom. Our God is very rich. All the gold and silver are His, and the cattle on a thousand hills; and if it was for the interests of the Kingdom class, He would forward them money in abundance. Things are left as they are, then, that we may practise economy, may have an opportunity of denying ourselves present blessings for the interests of the Kingdom.

Lessons Learned From The Lilies.

In this connection, our text comes in, illustrating the thought by the lily of the field. Indigenous to the soil, it has those things provided which are necessary for its development. The Lord did not choose a hot-house plant, dependent upon the horticulturist, but He chose a flower from the field. That flower grows under those conditions because the great Protector has arranged for its interest.

This does not mean for the plant to be idle; for if it were idle, it would die. The bulb is continually sending up nourishment to its stalks. It is not idle by any means. But does the plant do this by worrying? No. It merely uses the opportunities that come to it. It merely exercises its functions by the laws of its nature.

God makes provision for the lily in its native soil; and as it grows in its beauty, “even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.” So is it to be with God’s children. When the Father begets us as His children and we are placed under present conditions, we may be sure that He who so placed us made the necessary arrangements for us; that He is not unwise; that He has not put us in conditions that are unfavourable for us. They are all of Divine arrangement.

If we move ourselves out of these conditions, we may be responsible in some degree, but as long as we exercise no will of our own to take ourselves out of His providential care, we may be sure that all things will be overruled to work for good to us. If we then seek to adorn ourselves with all the graces of the holy spirit, and if we use the opportunities that are in our immediate grasp, we shall be using the means for our own development.

The lily has a right to use everything within its power for its own nourishment. So it is our right and our duty to use the means within our power for beautifying our characters and for our spiritual nourishment, knowing that He who began the good work in us is able to complete it unto the Day of Jesus Christ.

Devout Contemplation Of The Divine Character Helpful.

Our Lord calls attention to how such simple things in nature should be studied, be considered. The lessons to be learned in connection with all the affairs of life will be helpful to such as approach the study from the right standpoint of faith in the Creator, and a realization that He is necessarily the embodiment and representative of the very highest and very noblest qualities of which the human mind could conceive—perfect in Justice, perfect in Wisdom, perfect in Power, perfect in Love.

The heart that thus considers, makes progress, grows in grace, in knowledge, in love. The heart that fails to consider the little things, is hindered from a proper consideration of God and from a proper appreciation of His Plan, and thus from a proper appreciation of His Character.

A Soldier of the Cross.

WORD was received early last month that our dear Brother Voegelé of Digby, Victoria, finished his earthly course in the early hours of March 1st, having passed away peacefully in hospital where he had been taken two days previously.

Our dear Brother was truly a faithful and humble follower of the Master and rejoiced greatly in the truth for more than twenty years past. He will be greatly missed by the friends where he resided, and all the brethren who met him at the Melbourne and Adelaide Conventions over the years will feel a sadness at his passing, and yet will rejoice in his faithfulness and zeal, and to know that all trials and sufferings are ended and now he has entered into his reward.

“The addresses given by our Brother at the Conventions reflected the sweet and fragrant character developed by the spirit of the Lord. The trials and testings over the years had such a mellowing effect; our dear Brother was truly loved by all those of like precious faith. Of a deeply poetic mind, our Brother Voegelé was gifted with a memory for retaining and expressing the choice Scriptures and the helpful writings of Christians of all times. We feel sure that the helpful associations and the many pleasant memories of our dear Brother in Christ will greatly assist all fellow pilgrims who knew him to become more like the Master, as they think on these things.

The opportunity is taken to present below an address given by our dear Brother Voegelé at the Melbourne Convention some years ago. It is based on the words of Paul in Phil. 4:7—“And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds, through Christ Jesus,” and is, entitled—“Peace.”

PERHAPS we could read those lovely words in Numbers 6:24-26—“The Lord bless thee, and keep thee; the Lord make His face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee; the Lord lift up His countenance upon thee, and give thee peace.” No wonder they are such favourite verses with Bible students! It was the climax of the Jewish benediction.

We have Jesus presented to us in prophecy, as mentioned in Isaiah—“Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end.” Peace was the theme of the angels that announced our Saviour’s birth. It was the chosen salutation of all, “Peace be unto you.” “Peace be to this house.” It was Jesus’ dying legacy to His own. In thirteen Epistles Paul prays that those to whom he wrote might have peace. In 2 Thes. 3:16, he writes, “Now the Lord of peace Himself give you peace always by all means.”

There is perhaps a difference between the peace with God and the peace of God. In Rom. 5:1 Paul tells us,

“therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.” This is the peace of reconciled relations, because Jesus Christ having made peace by the blood of His sacrifice, the believer has only to accept it by faith as the definite work of his Redeemer. Peace is found first in justification, and is perfected by the believer’s daily and hourly obedience to the Divine will. Our text says, “God shall keep your hearts and minds in peace.” Isaiah says, “Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee.”

When I was looking over these beautiful texts of peace, especially the perfect peace of God, I felt the position that I have a task which I can never do myself. Not many months ago I experienced disappointment which I felt rather acutely. I blundered, and I failed someone who had depended upon me, and so failed the Lord. Was it the Lord’s will that I should have that experience, or had I failed? One night a comforting little Scripture came back to my memory—“Be of good courage, and He shall strengthen thine heart. Wait, I say, on the Lord.” The peace of God, the peace of Christ, who can estimate its value? And yet how easily we may injure our peace of mind as the Apostle says, doing the things we should not have done, and not doing the things we ought to have done.

I just thought I would give a few opinions and experiences of those whom I love to read about—how nicely they put their failures.

“It is not the thing you do.
But the thing you left undone,
Which gives you the bitter heartache
At the setting of the sun.
For we pass through life but once, and never more
Can we come back just the same way
To get more out of life, to undo the wrong,
Or speak love’s words we knew and did not say.”

The past can never be recalled. Regrets are futile: I can only give due honour to the Lord, whose compassion filled me; whose faithfulness reaches unto the clouds, ‘and whose mercy is as wide as the seas. Memory is a distinct aid to peace, which never changes. Let us forget the factious, irritating things that are in our daily lives. Let us remember more the gentle word that moved our heart when all the world seemed wrong.

Oh how lovely are the messengers that bring the Gospel of peace! Especially if they come to us when hope is gone and the heart is troubled. There is a little verse I would like to read, I think I have read it to you before

“All day long it looks so white and forlorn,
That love at night which springs new born,
Making Thy gracious plan a sacred shrine
Of memories and love divine.”

“So may I in fashion liken to this sweet flower
That when the evening shadows fall,
When fear and loss so many hearts appal,
Make of my life a gracious fragrant power
That other hearts so care-worn and oppressed
May find in me refreshment from a heart at peace with thee.”

“A heart at peace with thee.” There seems to be such a lovely Scripture for that in Malachi 2:4, 5—”And ye shall know that I have sent this commandment unto you, that my covenant might be with Levi, saith the Lord of Hosts. My covenant was with him of life and peace; and I gave them to him for the fear wherewith he feared me, and was afraid before my name.” What a lovely Bible character of peace to stay our mind upon! Can we live up to it? Surely the Lord does expect us also to walk with Him in peace. Levi was only human, only a man of like passions as we are, and it is the little things that count; surely we can be filled with peace, God means us to be.

There is a saying that the good we do to others always recurs on ourselves, and it is true in the matter of peace. For as we do good unto others so shall be done unto us, and as our Master says, “A cup of cold water given in the name of a disciple shall in no wise lose its reward.”

Frances Ridley Havergal said it was the little things she did in which God blessed her most, not her masterpieces of literature and music. I often think as I read her life how she could value these little texts—”He forgetteth not the cry of the humble,” and “He giveth grace unto the lowly.”

“Vessels it may be, not costly or gold-
Vessels it may be of quantity small—
Ready for service all simple and lowly,
Meet to be used for the Master above.”

This same writer had her battles and disappointments.
She knew the Christian walk in its every avenue.

Although amid stress and strain, it is favour, it is calm, it is peace. She writes:

“And now I trust Him for His grace Which meets so perfectly my place;
And peace through every trial flows,
Because I know that Jesus knows.”
Then there is another lovely poem I would like to read to you:

“The sun never sets in the land of delight, •
Where love’s glorious impress is given;
And brighter we shine as we walk in the light
On the pathway that leads up to heaven.

The burdens of earth-life are lighter today
As we lean on His life-giving Word
For the joy of the Lord is our strength on the way,

And His smile is our precious reward.
“Our praises ascend as sweet music to join,
Then mingle and swell round the throne,
From the fetters of earth to love all Divine,
That seals us forever His own.
We’re waiting to hear it, the summons to come,
To share in the glory prepared;

Whether waking, or sleeping, we'll reach to our Home,
With each broken tie healed and restored."

Dr. Matheson had a wonderful experience. As he writes in his own words—"One night I sat .unhappy and sad, suddenly these words came to my mind:

"O love that will not let me go,
I rest my weary soul on thee;
I give thee back the life I owe,
That in thine ocean depths its flow May richer, fuller be."

"I had the impression that the words were being dictated to me, and in a few moments the whole four verses were complete." They were never corrected. He was known in Scotland as the author of the matchless hymn.

There are some lovely words in Daniel 10:19"O man greatly beloved, fear not; peace be unto thee, be strong, yea, be strong." How exquisitely loving and gentle! God sends a messenger to his perplexed and bewildered child. He is the same yesterday, today and forever, and that peace is still available for you and as it was when those words were spoken for the strong-souled Daniel centuries ago. God means us to have His peace.

In our Lord's last long talk with His disciples, it is one of the gifts He gives to men. It has never left the earth. Remember we are in the school of Christ, and Satan, the adversary, would tempt us. The Lord tests us for love's sake. Unexpected trials may overtake any one of us—trials perhaps where the circumstances seem inexplicable and mysterious, but the Lord means His people to have His peace always. "The Lord will bless His people." "The Lord God will give strength unto His people, the Lord will bless His people with peace." "Though the hills be removed and the mountains be cast into the midst of the sea, yet my loving kindness will not depart from thee, nor the covenant of my peace be removed." What lovely Scriptures to draw us along!

Isaiah says, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee." The surface of the sea is agitated and driven by storms and tempest-tossed, but deep down there is a part of the sea that never stirs. I was reading something on that; it seemed to be such a wonderful illustration of the peace of God which passeth understanding. There is an eternal calm and he who has the peace of God enters into that eternal calm.

The peace of God is a peace of the mind, which rests upon a settled conviction. If I do not know the truth or do not believe it, it is impossible to have that deep peace, that tranquil hiding place where you will always find a place of the utmost assurance and rest. This peace is the rest of a heart which has found its home in God.

God never meant that we should find permanent rest for our hearts even in the love of human creatures, who may be gone tomorrow. It is a rest of the will which has fully resolved upon obedience to God. Just as the magnetic needle keeps moving from side to side of the compass until it settles toward the pole star, so does mind and heart and will until they are fixed on God.

Now I will just leave three Scriptures with you. "Blessed are they who hear the Word of God and keep. it." (Luke 11:28.) "Whoso hearkeneth unto me shall dwell safely, and shall be quiet from fear of evil." (Prov. 1:33.) "In the fear of the Lord i strong confidence: and His children shall have a place of refuge." (Prov. 14:26.)

"The joy of the Lord is our strength on the way
And His smile is our precious reward."

Our Lord's Great Prophecy.

(Part 6. Continued from March Issue.)

Proximity of the Kingdom of God.

“NOW learn a parable of the fig tree: When his branch is yet tender and putteth forth leaves ye know that summer* is nigh: SO likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it (the Kingdom of God—Luke 17:21) is near, even at the doors. Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled.” “Heaven and earth [the present ecclesiastical and social order] shall pass away: but my word shall not pass away.”—Matt. 24:32-35.

UNBELIEVERS have seized upon this passage claiming that it manifestly has not been fulfilled, and hence proves our Lord to have been a false prophet. They apply the prophecy wholly to the troubles connected with the fall of Israel's national polity in A.D. 70, and contemptuously remark that that generation and many more passed away without seeing the fulfilment of “all these things.” Our answer to this, of course, is that our Lord's prophecy is not understood,—that it referred only in part to the trouble upon Israel which culminated in A.D. 70.

But to meet the objection, certain Christian writers have been led to claim that the words “this generation” really meant, “this race,” the Jews, shall not pass away until all these predictions have been fulfilled.

But we must dissent from this interpretation for several reasons:—

(1) Although the words “generation” and “race” may be said to come from a common root or starting point, yet they are not the same and in Scriptural usage the two words are quite distinct.

Notice that in the New Testament when the word “generation” is used in the sense of race or posterity, it is always from the Greek “gennema” (as in Matt. 3:7; 12:34; 23:33; Luke 3:7) or from “genos” (as in 1 Pet. 2:9). But in the three different records of this prophecy our Lord is credited with using a wholly different Greek word (genea) which does not mean race, but has the same significance as our English word generation. Other uses of this Greek word (genea) prove that it is not used with the significance of race, but in reference to people living contemporaneously. We cite in proof,—Matt. 1:17; 11:16; 12:41; 23:36; Luke 11:50, 51; 16:8; Acts 13:36; Col. 1:26; Heb. 3:10.

(2) Our Lord could not have meant the Jewish race, and it would have been improper to have used a Greek word signifying race, because the Jewish race was not the subject of the apostles' inquiry nor of (* The Hebrews divided their year into two seasons, Summer and Winter, our Lord's prophecy in reply. Israel is barely referred to in the prophecy, and to have said, This race will not pass away until all be fulfilled, would have left the matter open to the question as to which or what race might be meant, for no particular race is indicated. It would, therefore, if the word meant race, be as proper to say that it meant the human race as to say that it referred to the Jewish race.

But understanding “genea” here, as elsewhere, to mean generation, and recognizing that our Lord's words were) a prophecy covering the entire Gospel age, we have no difficulty in understanding the statement to mean,—“This generation [which will witness the signs inquired for by the Apostles and just enumerated by our Lord—namely, the darkening of the sun and moon and the falling of the stars, etc.,] —this generation shall not pass away until all these things be fulfilled.”

A further important consideration is the correct understanding of the words, “till all these things be fulfilled.” The following statement on this point from “Bible Students Monthly,” of some years ago, is enlightening:—“It is generally understood that the word ‘fulfilled’ should have the same meaning as the words ‘accomplished’ or ‘completed.’ But the word used by our Lord does not mean ‘come to pass’ in the sense of being ended; but ‘come to pass’ in the sense of beginning to happen, or beginning to take place.

“One Greek scholar and writer says on this word that the Lord concludes this special prophecy of the tribulation by adding, ‘Verily I say unto you, this generation shall not pass till all these things begin to take place.’ He then explains that the Greek word ‘genetai’ used by our Lord here is a derivative of the Greek ‘ginomai,’ which has a wide variety of meanings, few of which are so definite as the thought in our word ‘fulfilled.’ He further says, The word is ‘genetai’ from ‘ginomai’ and means, to begin to be, to come to be; and is quite different from ‘pleroo’ which does mean, to fulfil.’ In Luke 21:32, which is the parallel passage, we have the former word ‘begin to be,’ while in verse 24, we have the latter word ‘fulfilled’ (referring to the Times of the Gentiles) . Professors Young and Strong, in their concordances verify this suggestion regarding ‘ginomai.’ Young shows it to be translated ‘be’ — (the verb ‘to be’) 249 times; ‘come to pass’ 82 times, and many other forms which show a present and not a past fulfilment. Strong says ‘ginomai’ (to cause to be; ‘to become’) is used with great latitude. He then gives a list of words which include ‘arise,’ ‘be assembled,’ ‘be,’ ‘brought to pass,’ ‘continue’ and many more indicative of a present happening. As an instance we may note a form of ‘genetai’ in John 13:2, which in our Authorised Version is translated ‘and supper being ended.’ It is quite clear from verses 26-28 that supper was not ended but was only just beginning. The Revised Version renders it and during supper.’ The Diaglott translates it ‘as supper was preparing . . . ‘ What our Lord really meant was, ‘This generation shall not pass till all these things begin to happen.’ - The sprouting of the fig tree was surely not a casual remark. The peculiar circumstances narrated of our Lord's curse upon a fig tree which bore no fruit, and which withered away directly (Matt. 21:19,20) , inclines us to believe that the fig tree in this prophecy is intended to signify the Jewish nation. If so, it is being signally fulfilled, especially. since 1918 and including recent events with the setting up of the Jewish State in Palestine.*

It is suggested that a “generation” might be reckoned as equivalent to a century (practically the present limit) or one hundred and twenty years, Moses' lifetime and the Scripture limit. (Gen. 6:3.) In any case it can be truly said that the generation observing the progress of the harvest work through some considerable part of the last century has also seen “all these things begin to happen,” namely, the great falling away in the systems of religion (the sun and the moon darkened, and the stars falling) , the false Christs and false teachings abroad in the world, the budding of the fig tree (the great progress made by the return of the Jews to Palestine) and the intense clouds of trouble that have encircled the world since 1914, and especially in the last few years.

The implication is that “this generation” need not necessarily see “all these things” accomplished or completed, but having seen them “begin to come to pass,” then their fulfilment is sure within a further reasonable period of time. The words of Luke 21:28 agree with this understanding of our text, as well as being one of the most encouraging and comforting messages from our Lord for His people living in the harvest of the age. “And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh.”

“But of that day and hour knoweth no man; no not the angels of heaven, nor the Son, but my Father only.” (Matt. 24:36, Sinaitic MS. Compare. Mark 13:32, 33.) “Take ye heed, watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is.”

To many these words seem to imply much more than they express: they think of them as though they put a lock upon and made useless all the prophecies of the Bible;—as though our Lord had said, “No man shall ever know,” whereas He merely said, “No man [now] knoweth,” referring only to the persons who heard Him—to whom the exact times and seasons were not due to be revealed. Who can doubt that the “angels of heaven” and “the Son” now know. fully and clearly, matters which have progressed so nearly to fulfilment? And if they are not now hindered from knowing by the statement of this verse, neither now are God’s saints hindered or restrained (* The fulfilment of prophecy in relation to the Jewish hopes is presented in the booklet “Chosen People” supplied at 1/3 post paid.) by this verse from seeking an understanding of all truth “written aforetime for our learning.” Our Lord delineated the course of events, and assured them that if they would watch and pray and thus continue faithful, they, at the proper time, would not be left in darkness, but would see and know.

God, through His Prophet Daniel, pointed out that at this time “the wise shall understand” the vision and prophecy, and merely that “none of the wicked shall understand.” (Dan. 12:9, 10.) To this the Apostle Paul adds his testimony, “Ye brethren are not in darkness that that day should come upon you as a thief,” although it shall come thus upon all the world. “Watch ye, therefore [that in due time ye may know] , and pray always that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass.”

Correspondence.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I would like to let you know how much I enjoy your Sunday morning broadcasts. I find them very interesting and helpful. Not always am I able to pick you up on my set however, and if it could be at all possible, I would appreciate the copies sent to me weekly. If Feb. 27th is still available could I have a copy, Enclosed is a 10/- note—a small donation towards your work. Thanking you, I remain, A friend in Him.

(Printed copies of the broadcasts are gladly supplied, upon request--B. B. Institute.)

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I was very pleased that you took for your subject this morning conditional immortality. I have been a firm believer in it for the last 40 years but it is a subject you can’t very well make much headway with, as the orthodox teaching of your immortal soul seems to be the most believed. However, I have been having a talk on the subject with a Baptist minister here who says he never had it brought to his notice before, but he would look into it. Now, I wonder if I could have a copy of this morning’s talk which I would like to put into his hand, and I will be so thankful to you. I am, Yours in the soon coming One.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I have pleasure in enclosing P.N. for .E1 in payment of “Peoples Paper” and donation towards your radio sessions which my wife and I appreciate very much. I should have sent this much sooner but have not been in good health for some time. I will be pleased if you can let me have a copy of “Hope Beyond the Grave.” I remain, Yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Please send me your book entitled “Hope Beyond the Grave.” I am a regular listener to your Sunday morning session and enjoy it very much. Wishing you every success in your good work. Yours faithfully.

Frank and Ernest, E.4, Vic., Dear Sir—I am interested in your session over station 2KY which I came across by the merest chance this morning. I would be very pleased to receive 3 copies of this morning’s scrip as two of my friends are also interested.

I would state that I love the Lord Jesus Christ as my Saviour and “hold fast the Risen Head.” Any other literature which you think may be of interest I would be interested to read. Yours in His love.

Christian Baptism.

IS it not significant that our Lord commenced the comparatively short period of His ministry on earth with the important ceremony of baptism, and right at the close of His sacrificial life He instituted an equally sacred and beautiful ceremony, the Memorial of His death. These two ceremonies pictured, in our Lord's case, the beginning and the ending of His covenant of death which He so willingly made with His Heavenly Father.

Referring to Luke 3:21-23 we read—"Now when all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that Jesus also being baptized, and 'praying, the heaven was opened, and the holy spirit descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him, and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased. And Jesus himself began to be about thirty years of age." This was the first opportunity to present Himself to His Heavenly Father, as a man was mature, under the Law, at thirty years of age. So our Lord immediately presented Himself to His Heavenly Father—"Lo, I come, in the volume of the Book it is written of me, to do Thy will, O my God."

Let us note verse 21 again, where it says, "when all the people were baptized". Does this mean that there were many people who preceded our Lord in this sacred symbol of water immersion? Perhaps Matt. 3:11 will help in this respect. This is a quotation from John the Baptist, where he says, "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance." This thought is emphasized in verses 1 and 2 of the same chapter—"In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and saying, Repent ye; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." He was speaking to God's chosen people, Israel.

How do we understand, then, our Lord coming to John for baptism of repentance? Reading from Matt. 3:13, "Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him. But John forbade him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now; for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered him."

John's words, "Comest thou to me?" are surely most significant. John was fully acquainted with his mission, that of calling Israel to repentance. Now he knew that Jesus, the sinless One, surely did not require any baptism that he could give. We realize his astonishment that the Lamb of God should come to him for immersion in the waters of baptism. But Jesus said, "Suffer it to be so now; for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness." It is rather significant that he uses the word "us" there. What did our Lord mean? He had consecrated His perfect human life to God. He came to this earth to redeem the human race, to taste death for every man. He chose to symbolize His baptism into death by immersion in water, which even John did not understand. "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

How did the symbolizing of Jesus' death baptism in the waters of Jordan fulfil all righteousness? We know, first of all, the "Israelites indeed" at our Lord's first advent were not baptized at all, because they had been baptized into Moses in the sea and in the cloud. They were therefore in heart harmony with God who gave them that wonderful arrangement through Moses, and when Christ came they could be transferred from Moses into Christ, and no further symbols were needed. These included the Apostles, except St. Paul, whose case is stated in Acts 22:16. It is interesting to note this point in regard to Paul, and these are the words Paul gives us as he reviews the occasion, prior to this time, when he was called to repentance by God. "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." Paul, then, is the one exception amongst the Apostles who took the baptism for remission of sins. He had gotten out from covenant relationship with God, and now John's baptism symbolizes his heart's condition in coming back. Not that John's baptism washed away sins, any more than Christian baptism can be of value apart from the reality. But John's baptism symbolized that heart condition of Israel when they had come back to God. Paul, therefore, took that baptism for remission of sins. Back in covenant relationship with God, he could be one of God's elect as he completely consecrated his life to the service of the Redeemer.

With the Gentile Christians, however, it was different. They had not been baptized into Moses, and our Lord Jesus, knowing that God's plan provided for a considerable number of Gentiles becoming members of His Body, set this example for these Gentile followers in particular. Yes, our Lord Jesus knew there would be ones and twos here and there in all nations who would gladly enter into the covenant of death, to walk in His steps, to be dead with Him if so be that they might live with Him. So He left them this symbol of water immersion as an example to be followed even to our own day.

Our minds also go to the words of Paul in Rom. 6:3-5—"As many as have been baptized into Christ's death." We notice the Apostle is saying nothing about water baptism at all. No, he is speaking here of the real heart consecration to God. "My son, give me thine heart." The Apostle is referring, then, to baptism into Christ's death. "If we have been planted in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection.”

Viewing again our Lord’s position at Jordan, we can realize it would have been much easier for Him to have entered into actual death then, instead of pouring out His soul for 31 years. It would also be easier for us if we, in making our consecration, could complete the sacrifice immediately. There would be no great trials to go through; but that is not God’s way. How helpful it is for us, to look back upon our Lord’s 3’ years of “dying daily”, His learning obedience by the things which He suffered, inasmuch as we must also learn full and complete obedience to the will of God during our consecrated sojourn on earth. How beautifully does Paul express this matter in 2 Cor. 4:10-11—”Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body. For we which live are always delivered unto death for Jesus’ sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh.”

Dear friends, this surely means following in the footsteps of Christ, working out our salvation with reverence and much carefulness. It means taking upon us, by the Lord’s grace and by His spirit, those characteristics that are exhibited in Christ Himself; “that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh.” Sometimes we are inclined to say it is impossible, we cannot do it. No, we cannot do it perfectly, but our calling is such that the Lord accepts the heart intention of each consecrated being. He accepts their heart’s desires, in spite of their shortcomings, which will continue to be in evidence to the end of their course. It is the heart’s devotion to the Lord which counts, and because of the merit of Christ’s sacrifice covering their imperfections, God is looking at each member of His consecrated people through Christ Jesus Himself. As they seek to put on desirable adornments of character, surely His life is becoming more and more manifest in them. We are so glad to see something of the likeness of the Master in each one of His dear people. In some it is more pronounced in one way; in others, in another way; but it must be the desire of each one to allow the Lord to work in them that more and more of the life of Christ will be manifest in their mortal flesh. Surely that means, just as it was with Jesus, learning obedience as they go through their sacrificial life. As they come in contact with various experiences, He works in them more and more of God’s good pleasure, and so they become copies of God’s dear Son. They are prepared for the glorious life beyond.

As we think over this matter, do we not see how reasonable it is? Could we expect God to take the members beyond the veil ill-equipped for the glorious work ahead? No, their hearts must be in such a condition of full submission, with a desire to bring their bodies into such alignment with the life of Christ that they will be ready to pass over and receive the new spirit body to work perfectly in that glorious kingdom. That is the reason why the Lord gives us the privilege of years in His service, to work out our own salvation by His grace, by allowing His spirit to dwell in us more and more and to accomplish His good will, that He may see in us the likeness of the Master at the end of the journey, and we may hear His “Well done, good and faithful servant.”

There is a message of great encouragement to us given by the Apostle John in his first epistle, chapter 5:3-4—”This is the love of God, that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not grievous. For whatsoever is begotten of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.” It is surely consoling to us to have that declaration that God’s commandments are not grievous or burdensome. God’s commandments are just what we would expect of a loving Heavenly Father, and those who really love Him and are looking up to Him and catching, as it were, the sight of His eye, are greatly blessed. “I will guide thee by mine eye.” That, surely, is the delight of all God’s children as they realize that His commandments are not grievous. “This is the victory that overcometh the world, even your faith.” Faith is very highly commended in the Scriptures, and if we have enough faith that He will work in us, transform us, that the life of Jesus will ultimately be manifest in us, His commandments are not grievous in the least. It is only when we feel, in our strugglings and strainings, that we have to accomplish the outworking ourselves, that we are apt to feel His commandments are grievous.

At such times we should remember our Lord’s words in Matt. 11:28, to those who were burdened, pressed down with the weight of the Law. “Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.” His commandments are not grievous. It depends upon how fully submissive we are, as to how we view the experiences through which we pass in our Christian life. Those words of our Master surely strike a very encouraging note within us. “Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden.” There is no one in this world who is not burdened to some extent. Under the Law, the Jews were burdened almost to utter despair. To-day the world is in great turmoil and distress. It is those only who are led of God to Jesus who can hear His words, and find rest in the midst of trouble.

That leads us to the point of justification by faith. We have our Lord’s further exhortation to us—”Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me.” We are associated with Him in this wonderful privilege of becoming sons of God, yoked together with our Lord; planted in the likeness ‘of His death, if so be we may share His likeness in the resurrection.

Dear friends, this surely is a solemn undertaking for us. The Christian way never becomes easy in the sense of relaxation, but it does become easy when one is completely yoked to the Lord; and it surely depends upon how fully yoked we are with Him in the narrow way of sacrifice as to how much rest and peace and contentment we really have as we are seeking to walk towards the heavenly city.

“My yoke is easy and my burden is light.” We need, surely, to keep this in mind continually. If we are feeling it is not so easy, maybe we are not doing our share in the yoke with our Lord. Christ gives us a beautiful picture here. In a natural way, animals are yoked together in pairs, and each must pull its share of the burden. So we, as individual Christians, are yoked together with our Lord, and He, being our great Advocate on high, is taking much the larger share of the yoke. But we must walk with Him in full submission to His will. When ‘we are doing that, we will surely find His yoke is easy and His burden is light. God’s people right down through the centuries have declared the joy and gladness they have had in the hardest experiences because they were yoked together with Christ our Lord.

So, dear friends, we do rejoice with all brethren who have made a full consecration to God, those who delight to become yoked together with their Master. What a privilege it is that we should have the opportunity—even we who were sinners—to become yoked with our dear Lord! We are insignificant beings, yet God looks down on us and draws us to Jesus, if haply we may respond, and give our whole beings to Him without fear of any kind. Henceforth, under the power of His spirit, we have the new life developed within us, until we are fitted and prepared for His heavenly kingdom.

We realize the solemnity of the engagement into which each one enters, and it is only right that it should be so realized. Our Lord would have each one to sit down and count the cost. It is quite a right thing to do. Having counted the cost, He would have each one enter joyfully, gladly. “I beseech you therefore, brethren by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.” (Rom. 12:1.) When we analyse the matter, there is nothing more reasonable, is there? To think that we have been offered the prize of joint-heirship with our Lord, just for a few years of full devotion to the One who bought us with His own precious blood! “Since my eyes were fixed on Jesus, I’ve lost sight of all beside.” We all have to admit that that has not always been the case with us. Our heart’s desire, though, is that it should be more and more so as the days go by. That would mean, surely, a prompting to holiness and godliness to the fullest extent. We can all bear testimony that the more fully we have our eyes fixed on Jesus, the happier is our state of mind.

We have the example of men of old, who though not begotten of the holy spirit were kept to the extent that they were not in the least perturbed, even by death itself. We have made a covenant of death, to die with Christ, in any way that God may see to be best for us. We will gladly follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth. We will be ready to defend His cause. We will be ready to go with Him all the way, and will not shrink from the battle at any time. God grant that this may be the desire of our hearts continually!

We rejoice that our brethren have taken this step in all sincerity, that they have indeed counted the cost. They say, therefore, Most gladly will we take up our cross and follow Christ, resting in the assurance that God's grace is sufficient for us. That is the most comforting thought we can have. God's grace is quite sufficient to enable each one of us to overcome our particular trials; in each case the necessary grace and strength will be supplied. We are over and over again assured on that point. "Therefore shall not we fear, though the earth be removed and the mountains carried into the midst of the sea. God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved; God shall help her, and that right early. There is a river, the stream whereof shall make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacles of the most High." That stream is flowing out from His Word. Gladness is the lot of the children of God even here in the land of their pilgrimage. They are content to go on in this way for as long as the Lord sees fit, always desiring that His will may be done, and lifting up their hearts as they see the fulfilment of prophecy in the world to-day, knowing that their redemption draws nigh.

We who have symbolized our consecration to God know that it really has a depth of meaning. It is a symbol of a complete burial into Christ's death, and the raising up to newness of life to walk in the steps of the Master by His grace and strength.

Let us then, dear brethren, take courage as we look unto Jesus and that glorious home, Zion, towards which our faces are set. Very soon, the law shall go out from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. So it is not a selfish thought that God is gathering this "little flock." It is such an all-embracing part of God's plan; He is preparing His elect, that they may be able to dispense the mercies of God to the whole of mankind in the age to come.

To think that God has given us this privilege—we need to continually keep it before our minds. By the mercies of God we can serve Him day by day, with an eye single to His glory, that the life of Jesus may ultimately be manifest in our mortal bodies. May this be to each one of us a comfort and consolation, and a resting in the Lord, having taken His yoke upon us, and learning of Him who is meek and lowly of heart. May each one have that rest which the world can neither give nor take away. "Ye now have sorrow," said the Lord to His disciples, "but I shall see you again, and your joy no man taketh from you." That is surely the case with all of God's dear, people.

Truly the wideness and grandeur of God's mercy give us such cause for rejoicing in being yoked together with Christ, suffering with Him now that we may be one with Him to all eternity.

"Thou hast said, O blessed Jesus,
'Take thy cross and follow me!'
'Tis because Thou wouldst have us
Reign for evermore with Thee.
Lord, I'll take it;

Help me so to follow Thee.
While this water now surveying,
Fitting emblem of the grave,
Thee I'd follow, humbly praying;
Life itself I would not save.
So I'll enter

As Thou enteredst Jordan's wave.
Solemn sign, which thus reminds me,
Saviour, of Thy love for me,
And the covenant which binds me
In its lasting bonds to Thee.
O! what pleasure

In this fellowship with Thee!
Though it rend some fond affection,
Though I suffer shame or loss,
Yet the fragrant, blest reflection—
I am now where Jesus was
Will revive me,
When I faint beneath the cross.

Fear Not.

Isaiah 43:1-7.

“Listen, for the Lord hath spoken!
‘Fear thou not,’ saith He!

When thou passest through the waters,
I will be with thee.

“Fear not, for I have redeemed thee;
All my sheep I know;

When thou passeth through the rivers,
They shall not overflow.

“Fear not; by thy name I called thee
Mine thy heart hath learned;

When thou walkest through the fire,
Thou shalt not be burned.

“Thou art mine! oh, therefore, fear not;
Mine forever now;

And the flame shall never kindle
On thy sealed brow.

“Thou art precious, therefore fear not;
Precious unto Me!

I have made thee for My glory,
I have loved thee.

Convention News from

Adelaide.

OUR praise and thankfulness go up to the Lord again for the good, spiritual feast which He set before us in the study of His Word and the helpful addresses, and fellowship of the brethren assembled in Convention during the Easter season.

During the four days, April 15th to 18th, our minds and hearts were refreshed as we were reminded through the prayers and praises, testimonies, studies and addresses of the loving kindness of our Lord. From the various expressions of the brethren it was evident that blessings and spiritual, help and encouragement had been received.

We were glad of the fellowship of friends from other States, also our country brethren who also contributed to the helpfulness of the meetings.

The highest attendance was about 42 on the Sunday evening which was devoted to a public address—"Is Death So Permanent? What does Easter Sunday Mean to You?" This was listened to with marked interest as the speaker outlined from Genesis to Revelation the state of the dead, and the glorious hope of the resurrection and restoration. The old, old story was also much appreciated by those who already had learned it.

The portions of Scripture selected for the studies were—John 17:1-11; Gal. 3:1-9; Col. 3:12-17 and Isa. 2:1-7.

We were also reminded from one aspect or another of the truth Of God's Word through the various addresses of the brethren which were as follows:—"God's Chastenings"; "An Unwritten Book and its Author"; "Wisdom", "The Fulness of Joy"; "Jesus Christ and Him Resurrected"; "Is Death So Permanent?"; "Fight the Good Fight of Faith"; and "Change".

The time allotted to fellowship, testimony and hymns of praise was also profitably spent, and throughout the Convention the spirit of order, reverence and love was very evident.

Messages of greeting from many friends were appreciated, revealing a spirit of love and the oneness of mind which the Lord desires among His people.

The greeting from the Convention was taken from Col. 3:15-17 and is sent with love to the brethren in other parts of this great land and overseas. This happy occasion then came to a close in singing the hymns "Blessed be the tie that binds" and "God be with you till we meet again".

Baptism Service.

IT is a great pleasure to receive a report of a Baptism Service conducted by our brethren in Sydney on the morning of Easter Sunday when three brethren symbolized their consecration to God. We rejoice with these dear members who had been waiting this opportunity to thus witness before the Lord and His people of their desire to walk in the steps of Christ—to share in His death, and also in His resurrection, by His grace. The report is as follows:

The Baptism ceremony was a greater success and blessing than ever we could have expected. The day was one of those fine, pleasant, sunny days such as seldom occurs at Easter time; and it was as if the Lord had reserved it specially for us.

The immersion was done at once in the sea, a Brother guided the brethren into the water one by one, and each was baptized backwards. During this performance we all stood on the beach near the water's edge as witnesses. Then, after the brethren had changed into their clothes we all stood around a table in the reserve and sang the hymn, —Take my life and may it be, Lord acceptable to Thee". Another Brother then gave a short address, we having decided that the lecture should be held when we were back at our meeting place. Then with a prayer this portion of the service was concluded.

In the afternoon the full discourse on Baptism was presented, showing how the immersion is a symbol, but an important one as it purports to show forth the transformation that has already taken place in our hearts, and which is that we are baptized with Christ into His death. When this discourse was finished the three brethren who had been immersed gave their testimonies along the line of the spiritual uplift and strengthening they had received in taking this step, which was followed by a testimony of a Brother as to the joy and blessing received in thus serving the brethren.

After tea we had another discourse also along the lines of baptism, the case of Philip and the eunuch being quoted, also our Lord's baptism into death which rounded off our day of worship and -rejoicing beautifully. We all felt refreshed and built up and thankful to God for so many mercies.

Memorial Observances

Melbourne.

THE brethren in Melbourne gladly gathered on the evening of April 12th to keep the Memorial of Christ's death on the anniversary of its institution by our Lord "the same night in which He was betrayed" and, according to the Jewish reckoning, the same day in which He finished His sacrifice on the Cross.

These yearly observances in solemn remembrance of Christ our Passover Lamb, held in conformity with our Lord's special request, have a most stimulating effect upon all true followers of our Master. The subject of the Memorial had been examined by the members on the two previous Sundays with much benefit, the explanation given in "The New Creation" being the very helpful guide for thoughts on the Scriptural understanding of this important matter.

During the service, prayers were offered up to God on behalf of all the members in Christ in every, place: the hymns 437, 345, 280, 2 and 414 were used from "B.S. Hymnal"; Scripture readings were from Matt. 26:17-53, John 18:1240 and John 19 1-30; also a helpful address refreshed our minds on both the primary and deeper significance of .the Memorial.

In partaking of the emblems each one realised fully the great favour in first of all being justified by faith in the sacrifice of Christ, and on that basis being privileged to participate in His sufferings by full consecration to God, "filling up that which is behind of the sufferings of Christ," in hope of participation in His resurrection, the first resurrection, to be associated with our Lord in the blessing of all mankind in the Kingdom now near at hand. At the conclusion of the hymn " 'Tis finished', so the Saviour cried," the brethren quietly left for their homes, in harmony with the procedure when this Memorial was instituted by our Lord—"And when they had sung an hymn, they went out into' the mount of Olives." (Matt. 26:30.)

Geelong, Vic.

On April 12th at 8 p.m., in .a quiet room provided by the Lord through the instrumentality of one of the brethren, a little band again met to accede to the request of our Lord to "do this in remembrance of Me".

A simple service during which the emblems were partaken of, consisted of hymns 437, 345 and 6 (B.S. Hymnal) , two readings from Scripture (Isa. 53, and Rom. 8:32-39) , and an address on "Remembrance".

Two Bible studies on previous Sundays from 1 Cor. 11:23-34 also helped to prepare our hearts and minds to grasp afresh the awful cost to our dear Lord in providing the ransom sacrifice for us and for all; and the privilege He extended to His disciples to fellowship in His sufferings for righteousness sake, in hope of participating later in the glory of the Kingdom as His joint-heirs.

Surely this rite again increased our desire to serve one another in mutual love as members of His body, thus fulfilling the commandment of Him whom we gathered to remember—"that ye love one another as I have loved you".

Birchip, Vic.

Once again the solemn Memorial season has passed and here in Birchip three of us, two Sisters and a Brother, were privileged to partake of the sacred feast. Our thoughts went back to the beginning of the Paschal ceremony as instituted and described in Exodus 12. By God's grace we can see that "Christ our Passover" is sacrificed for us—that Jesus, "the Lamb of God" was the antitype of the Passover lamb. (1 Cor. 5:7.)

We read Exodus 12 and Luke 22:7-20, and sang hymns 2, 259 and 166 in "B.S. Hymnal". We humbly thanked God for that soul-reviving feast and the privilege of sharing with others in solemn awe; we meditate on that scene in the upper room, and our hearts are filled with love and gratitude to God, our Father, and Jesus our Lord.

Adelaide.

About 25 brethren assembled here to keep the feast of the Passover. Having previously refreshed our minds concerning the significance of the loaf and the cup, which emblems represent our Lord's sacrifice for us, we realised what a great privilege and blessing have come to us because of His faithfulness unto death. It is the desire of each consecrated one to continue more earnestly to follow in His steps, willingly to suffer in doing the Father's will in the same spirit of submission and faith, so that in fellowship with Jesus there will be, unto the end, that communion— common participation in the breaking of the loaf and drinking the cup, as the Lord desired of His people.

Gawler, S.A.

Once again four consecrated brethren at Gawler met together in obedience to our Lord's dying wish that we remember Him. As we read a portion of the account of our Lord's suffering and trials we were impressed with the spirit of submission and faithfulness He manifested even while on the cross. By His willingness to be humbled we receive through faith the benefits of His ransom sacrifice, and invitation to share in His sufferings and death. Each one was again encouraged to press on in His steps.

Sydney,

We gathered together on the evening of April 12th, with 17 members in attendance, and we were a happy company as evidence of the drawing power of our Lord.

The ceremony began with the hymn "When I survey the wondrous Cross". After this the chairman opened with a few words of welcome to the brethren, recalling previous blessed Memorials and the loss of our dear brethren since passed beyond the veil. Then the address followed which first dealt with the typical Passover, showing how by it was foreshadowed the great Antitype in every particular. Before passing over to the part which the Church has in this great Antitype, attention was drawn to three significant cups-1. The cup of trembling for the world; 2. The cup of suffering and sacrifice for the Church; 3. The cup of joy which the Church will drink with the Lord in the Kingdom. It was shown that the cup of suffering and sacrifice was the most important at present, as it was a guarantee of life through the ransom, and that in participating in this cup our bodies must be broken, individually, and as the Church, the Body of Christ. It was also pointed out that the loaf represented Christ whose body was broken for our sake and for the whole world of mankind. It was further shown that our union with Him and with one another in the loaf obligated us to walk in His footsteps and fill up that which is behind of His sufferings, if we would reign with Him. After a few more words of exhortation to self-examination and cleansing of the spirit the Memorial Supper was solemnly partaken of. That concluded, we sang the hymn "And can I yet delay my little all to give", and the little gathering dispersed much edified and uplifted.

Canberra.

Once again it has been our privilege to meet together on this solemn occasion remembering our Lord's death. As the years go by the Memorial seems to be a milestone that is ever dear to us. Recounting the great love shown by our Lord to us, how having loved His own, He loved them to the end. Notwithstanding the pain and ignominy of that last day, He did not falter in pursuing the Father's plan to the uttermost, when He was able to say "It is finished."

Any who seriously "Consider Him who endured such contradiction of sinners against Himself" must respond with a desire and determination to follow in His steps and thus fill up that which remains of the sufferings of Christ, for the great Messiah is not yet complete. We are glad of the opportunity of thus being "co-labourers together with God". So it is with double appreciation that we remember the Lord's death till He come. Our numbers are small but the blessings received in thus "remembering" are great.

Glenbrook, N.S.W.

Once again the sacred season of the Memorial has passed. Four at Glenbrook partook of the sacred feast, some not being able to be present through sickness. Although we were only a small number we were reminded of the dear Lord's words that where two or three are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them.

We had a most solemn, impressive and blessed season with the Lord, remembering in our prayers all the dear brethren known and unknown. The finishing hymn 277 (366 "B.S. Hymnal") was sung with a deep reverential spirit—"Take my life and may it be, Lord acceptable to Thee."

Perth.

Once again the Lord's Memorial has come and gone, reminding us of the supreme sacrifice. Our minds had been well prepared, for one of our brethren had given us an address the second Sunday beforehand on "Israel's Passover Prefiguring Future Events," which was followed by a class study from 1 Cor. 11:23-32 on the Sunday preceding Passover.

We observed our Lord's death on April 12th. The chairman reminded us what it meant for Christ to die the sacrificial death as man's Ransom, and how by grace the Church is invited to follow in Christ's steps, and lay down their lives—"filling up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ," and have part in the sin offering.

After a graphic explanation of the symbols the 16 brethren present partook of the unleavened bread representing primarily Christ's body, but also including the Church "for we being many are one bread." Then followed the drinking of the cup representing our Lord's blood, His life poured out, and also our willingness to give our lives in sacrifice. After the friends had sung a hymn they quietly dispersed thanking God in their hearts for such a Saviour and realising too their own "covenant by sacrifice".

Penguin, Tas.

On the evening of April 12th four Sisters assembled at an appropriate home to partake of the emblems of the Memorial of Christ's death and to dedicate ourselves anew to "go forth to Him without the camp, bearing His reproach". We noted the difference in those sacrifices as they were viewed from within the walls of the Sanctuary and from "without the camp".

The following from one of our dear brethren in England, written in expectation of the Memorial, is especially appreciated at this time.

On April 12th we hope to celebrate the greatest event in this world's history, the anniversary of the death of our Lord Jesus, the Redeemer of Adam and his race from the death sentence.

"Christ, our passover, is sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast." We are not only privileged to enjoy the favours of our Lord's sacrifice, but more than this we are invited to share with our Master in the sacrifice and in its glorious reward. "If we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him."

"Christ died for our sins." The sacrificial death of the Saviour of the world which we commemorate was not appreciated in its day, and has not been appreciated since, except by a very few, in all "a little flock." The masses of mankind regarded Him not; His own nation rejected Him; they hated Him without a cause; they knew not the value of the work He performed on their behalf; they could see no purpose in His death. The world behaves to-day in much the same way as it did on the day of His crucifixion, but—"To us who believe he is precious."

"Christ loved the church and gave himself for it." "Love one another," said Jesus, "as I have loved you." How did Christ love His disciples? In His own words, He gave us the measure of His love for you and me—"As the Father loved me; so have I loved you." In Him is the fulness of the divine love revealed to us. His prayer for His disciples is a revelation of His inmost soul. It stamps His utter devotion to the will of His Father, and affords us a glimpse of His passionate love for the whole church. “Christ suffered for us leaving us an example that we should follow his steps.” “Who loved me and gave himself for me.” My joy abounds as I pen these precious words. After all, our salvation is a personal matter. We are begotten individually and as units are on probation for life or death eternal. Oh, what a favour is ours, to be identified with the Father and the Son in this grand project, the emancipation of the human race, so near at hand. Think then, much and often of the Great Author of the Atonement and His dear Son, our Redeemer. Say, as you meditate on His life—I too will be meek and patient and self-denying. I too, by the grace of God, will strive more and more to do the Father’s will.

“Thy way, not mine, O Lord,
However dark it be!
Lead me by ‘Thine own hand,
Choose out the path for me.
Smooth let it be or rough,
It will be still the best,
Winding or straight it leads Right onward to Thy rest.”

Pilgrims Finish the Earthly Way.

THERE is a measure of sadness in reporting the passing of two more of our brethren in recent weeks—elderly Bro. Thompson of Sydney, and Brother Burgess of Digby, Victoria—and yet there is rejoicing also that these dear members have finished the earthly pilgrimage, and entered into the joys of the Lord by His grace. Sincere sympathy is expressed to the relatives of our departed friends.

A report from Sydney by one who knew our Brother Thompson for many years is as follows:—“If there is a Brother who deserves the prize of immortality it is our dear Brother Thompson. Our Brother entered this race in the year 1912—just 37 years ago. The Brother who first got our Brother Thompson interested in this race was our dear Brother Walters. They used to meet two or three times a week at Brother Walters’ home and stay until the early hours of the morning talking on nothing else but the truth; these meetings took place at Weston, N.S.W, Later, in the year 1913, Brother Thompson made his home in Sydney and attended the meetings right up to the time of his sickness.

“Our dear Brother Thompson was loved by all who came in contact with him. He had a beautiful character, displaying those beautiful attributes of a true Christian. His favourite text which he was always Quoting was in 1 Pet. 1:3. 4. We at the Sydney Class have greatly missed our dear Brother’s fellowship. I can with confidence, knowing and meeting all these years with our dear. Brother, say he has received that great prize, the crown of life. (Rev. 2:10.) “

Brother Burgess of Digby was not known by many of the brethren but his interest in the truths of God’s Word extends back well over 30 years, and it is a pleasure to report that having made the truth his own, by the spirit of the Lord, he has remained firm in appreciation of all which he had learned, knowing of whom he had learned it. Over the years our dear Brother Burgess was associated in close fellowship with our dear Brother Voeg’e who predeceased Brother Burgess by only a fortnight.

One by one the Lord’s dear people are passing beyond the veil—“Sown in corruption, raised in in corruption; sown in dishonour, raised in glory; sown in weakness, raised in power.” “We shall not all sleep (in the death condition, awaiting the resurrection) but we shall all be changed, in a moment (the moment of death, now that the harvest of the age has come), in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump.

Volume XXXII. No. 6 MELBOURNE, JUNE, 1949 Price—Fourpence Halfpenny

Our Lord's Great Prophecy

(Part 7. Continued from April Issue.)

As In The Days Of Noah, "They Knew Not."

"But as the days of Noah were, SO shall also the presence [Greek pamusia] of the Son of Man be, FOR as in the days that were Before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and KNEW NOT, . . . SO shall also the presence of the Son of Man be."—Matt. 24:37-39.

THE real point of this illustration is overlooked by many who presuppose, without any authority in the Master's words, that the similarity here being pointed out is the wickedness of Noah's day and that of the day of Christ's presence. But while such a comparison might have been justifiable and proper, the fact remains that such comparison was not made, but avoided. The comparison made is similarity of ignorance. Only Noah and his family knew; the people KNEW NOT, but proceeded as usual,—marrying, planting, building, eating and drinking. Similarly, during the time of Christ's presence in the end of this age, and while the great time of trouble is impending, the only ones who will know of His presence or have a clear apprehension of what is coming, or why, or the outcome, will be the Lord's people. Others will "know not."

In Luke (17:26-29) the same lesson is taught; and both Noah's and Lot's neighbours are shown to have been ignorant of their impending troubles in the days of Noah, and in the days of Lot, as people here will be ignorant of the coming trouble in the days of the Son of Man—after He has come and is present. We see this clearly fulfilled about us today The world is fearful and perplexed; but it knows not of the presence of the Son of Man, and the "harvest" reckoning now in progress. Even though they may approximately surmise the trouble coming, they can not guess the blessing that is beyond it.

"Even thus shall it be when the Son of Man [already present] is revealed [made manifest—first to His watching "virgins", later in the trouble to all men]. In that day, he which shall be on the house-top, and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away: and he that is in the field let him likewise not return back. Remember Lot's wife! 'Whosoever shall seek to save his life [by compromises of conscience and staying in Babylon] shall lose it 'and whosoever shall lose his life [sacrifice the interests of the present life] shall preserve it.'—everlastingly.—Luke 17:30-33.

Thus does Luke's. Gospel apply these words (already considered, foregoing) to the close of the Gospel age—"the day when the Son of Man is revealed."

"Remember Lot's wife?" is our Lord's pointed warning. How slight would be the appropriateness of this injunction, if applied to those who fled from Judea in A.D. 70; but how intensely forceful it is as a caution to God's people here, in the close of the Gospel age. When we learn that Babylon is doomed, and hear the Lord's message, "Come out of her my people that ye be not partakers of her sins and that ye receive not of her plagues," it is indeed like the voice of the messengers who hastened Lot and his family out of Sodom, saying, "Stay not in all the plain, escape for thy life; escape to the mountain lest thou be consumed; look not behind thee."—Gen. 19:17.

The illustration is heightened when we remember that Christendom is "that great city [Babylon] which spiritually is called Sodom."—Rev. 17:18.

Lot's wife, after starting to flee as directed, "looked back"; coveting the things behind: and so with some now fleeing from Babylon to the mountain (Kingdom) of the Lord; they are more in sympathy with the things behind than with the things before. Only those will run the race to the finish who set their affections on the things above, and not on the things beneath. The perseverance of the saints springs from a full consecration of heart; all others will fail so to run as to obtain the great prize.

One Taken And Another Left.

"I tell you that in that night there shall be two in one bed; the one shall be taken and the other shall be left."—Luke 17:34,—omitted by Matthew.

The Lord, through the Prophet, informs us that though the Millennial morning draws near, a night also approaches. (Isa. 21:12.) It will be a night of trouble in the forepart of which the saints will be gathered out of Babylon. The "bed" here, in harmony with Isaiah's use of that word (Isa. 28:20), may be interpreted to symbolize human creeds which are long enough for "babes" in Christ, but too short for a developed "man" to stretch himself in it. This is true of the various "doctrines of men," substituted for but very different from the doctrines of God's Word whose lengths and breadths surpass human knowledge. For instance, the doctrine of Election, as taught by our Calvinist friends is a quite sufficient "bed" to rest many who are only “babes” in Christ, whose senses have never been much exercised; but as in the light of present day knowledge the babes get awake and grow in grace and knowledge, they will all surely find the old creed-bed too short for comfort; and as each attempts to wrap himself in the promises of God narrowed by an erroneous theology, he cannot satisfactorily cover himself: doubts creep in to chill him with fear that after all he is not certain that he and all his friends are of the “elect”; and by and by such developed Christians find it a relief to get ‘out of such a predicament; and to such God generally sends the light of present truth to guide them to a “large place” of true rest supplied with abundant coverings for all who seek to know and to do the Father’s will. Others however, the vast majority, remain quite satisfied and comfortable in their various little cribs, because they are “babes” and not “men” in Christian knowledge and experience. “One shall be taken and the other left.”

“Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left.”—Matt. 24:40.

“The field is the world,” our Lord explained; and in this discourse it represents a condition outside the nominal “house”—outside of Babylon. Thus we are taught that not all “come-outers” will be “gathered,” but that the “jewels” will be sought wherever they may be—the Lord knoweth them that are His,” and in this harvest gathering He is making up His jewels,—gathering His “elect,” to be joint-heirs in His Kingdom.

“Two shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken and the other left.”—Matt. 24:41; Luke 17:35.

A mill is a place where food is prepared; the ministers and theological schools do the grinding of the spiritual food for “Babylon,” and turn out very poor grist—not “clean provender.” The complaint is a growing one that the food supplied is largely husks and chaff, which will not sustain spiritual life and strength: and each grinder is obliged to prepare what is given him by his own denomination, and he cannot hold, his position and yet provide the “meat in due season,” “clean provender,” for the household of faith. Hence “present truth” gathers some of the grinders and leaves others—one is taken and another left. Those who are loyal to God and to His flock will be taken; all others will be left. While the world and the nominal church declare this to be a time of union and “confederacy,” God’ declares it to be a time of separating.—Isa 8:12.

Whither Gathered—The Attraction.

“And they [the disciples] answered and said unto him, Where, Lord? [Where will these be TAKEN?] And he said unto them, Wheresoever the body [the carcass, the food] is, thither will the eagles be gathered together.—Matt. 24:28; Luke 17:37.

The lesson is that in that day, when the Lord is gathering His “elect” from the four winds of heaven—from every quarter of the Church—He will attract them as eagles are attracted, by food, for which they have a keenness of vision and appetite; that in due time the Lord would provide the proper food, and His true people would recognize it and be gathered to it;—the ready and worthy taken and the others left.

The food of “present truth” now provided by our Lord, and the gathering of His saints by and to it, fits the description of this prophecy exactly. The present call is not out of one “mill” into another “mill”; nor out of one “bed” into another of about the same size. It is not the gathering by one man or many men, to him or to them, into a new denomination; but a gathering together unto Christ Himself, the true and only Master and Teacher.

Moreover, it is worthy of note that great human ability, oratory, etc., have been notably connected with other movements, but not with this present gathering to the Lord. Here the truth, the spiritual food which the Lord is supplying, is the whole attraction: human flourish and oratory find little room for exercise here; they are lacking but are not missed. The gathered and gathering ones come together because they “hunger and thirst after righteousness”: and they are finding the satisfying portion which the Lord Himself has provided; and each for himself is eating thereof.

Watch, If Ye Would Know.

“Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord cloth come. But understand this [the reason why the time is so secreted under symbols and parables], that if the householder had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up.”—Matt. 24:42, 43.

The “master of the house” or “householder” of the present dispensation is not our Lord, but our Adversary, the devil—the god of this world,” the prince of the power of the air, “the prince of this world,” who now ruleth in the children of disobedience, blinding the minds of all that believe not—whose eyes of understanding have not been anointed with the Lord’s eye-salve. (2 Cor. 4-4; Eph. 2-2; Rev. 3-18.) This adversary is a wily one, and very cunning; and whatever knowledge he has of the divine times and seasons and arrangements he is prompt to use in opposing the divine plan, as our Lord declares in the foregoing statement.

The Heavenly Father’s course toward Satan has been to let him take his own way, except where it would conflict with the divine plan, and so to overrule his evil devices as to use them for the furtherance of the divine plan.

Hence Satan, although he has long known the Bible, has understood but halt of it, for the same reason that man has not understood it; because written in parables, symbols and figures of speech. And now that these are due to be understood, the understanding of them is confined to such as have the guidance of the holy spirit, which, as our Lord promised, “shall guide you into all truth”, but which the world cannot receive. Satan does not possess the holy spirit and is not guided by it, and consequently much of the divine Word is foolishness unto him. But he has learned no doubt as the world to some extent has learned, that—”The Secret of the Lord is with them that fear him.” (Psa. 25:14.) We may presume therefore that his representatives, the fallen angels, are frequently present at the little Conferences and Bible studies, etc., of God’s truly consecrated people, to learn something of the divine plan.

In what way Satan would have managed his affairs differently if he had known sooner more about the divine plan, we can only surmise; but we have our Lord’s positive testimony that such knowledge on Satan’s part would have made necessary a different ending of the Gospel age, and a different opening of the Millennial age, than God had purposed and declared. But instead of knowing and setting his house in order, he was taken unawares by the Lord’s parousia and the “harvest” work in progress: so that with all his wiles and deceptions, all his simulations of the true light, etc., his “house,” present institutions, will suffer complete collapse. As he realizes this, he puts forth the most strenuous efforts to deceive;—even resorting through his deluded servants to miracles of physical healing, although he is the prince of disease, sickness and death. (Heb. 2:14.) But a house thus divided against itself is sure to fall: and great will be the fall of Babylon: it will fall as a great millstone cast into the sea.—Rev. 18:21.

“Therefore be ye also ready, for at such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh.”—Matt. 24:44.

Here “ye also,” believers, the Lord’s faithful, are mentioned in contrast with Satan and his household. The time of the Lord’s presence could not be known beforehand, even by the saints. Nor was the fact of the Lord’s presence recognized, until His knock through the word of the prophets and apostles, was recognized. Since that time there are abundant outward signs, evidences, of the presence of the Son of Man; and His devoted ones as they are gathered from the four winds of heaven, are taken into His banqueting house and caused to sit down to meat such as the world knoweth not of, and are served, first of all by the Master Himself, and incidentally by each other.—See Luke 12:3 7.

Dispensing Of Food To The Household.

Matt. 25:45-51; Luke 12-42-46.

“Who then is a faithful and prudent servant, whom his Master has placed over his household to give them food in due season. Happy that servant whom his Master, on coming, shall find thus employed! Indeed I say to you that he will appoint him over all his stores of provisions.”—Matt. 24:45-51; Luke 12:42-46.

The intimation here seems to be, that at the particular time indicated by the prophecy,—namely during the Lord’s presence, and at the time of the gathering of the elect—our Lord, the great Servant of His people, will dispense the meat in due season through His servants to the “household.” But the servant is merely a steward, and liable to be removed at any moment, should he fail to fully and duly acknowledge in every particular, the Master,—the great Servant of God, and His people,— “the Messenger of the Covenant,”—Christ.

Faithfulness on the part of said servants (both to the “Master” and to “fellow-servants” and “the household”) will be rewarded by their continuance as servants ;—so long as they serve faithfully, they may continue, and may serve the household of faith with things new and old,—meat in due season—to the end; bringing forth all the precious things of divine provision. But if anyone is unfaithful he will be deposed entirely and put into outer darkness, while presumably another would take the place, subject to the same conditions. We may be sure that whoever the Lord will use, as a truth-distributing agent, will be very bumble and unassuming, as well as very zealous for the Master’s glory; so that he would not think of claiming authorship or ownership of the truth, but would merely dispense it zealously as his Master’s gift, to his Master’s “servants” and “household.”

Any other spirit and course would surely work a change of servant. This is detailed by our Lord as follows:—”But if that servant shall [become] wicked, and [losing faith] say in his heart, My Master delays his coming; and shall smite his fellow-servants, and eat and drink with the intemperate [of their false doctrines] , the Master of that servant will be present in a day that he looketh not for, and in an hour that he is not aware of, and shall cut him off [from being his servant] and will appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth” -Matt. 24:48-51.

Our Lord was the greatest of all Prophets, and His prophecy likewise the most striking. Moses’ and Jeremiah’s and other prophecies deal chiefly with the rejection and regathering of fleshly Israel. Isaiah’s prophecies besides dealing with fleshly Israel show Jesus Christ the sufferer for our sins as also a light to the Gentiles, and ultimately the opening of all the blind eyes of humanity to “that true light.” Daniel foretells the coming and cutting off of Messiah, the Pentecostal anointing of the most holy, the history of Gentile powers to their end, and the establishment of Messiah’s Kingdom under the whole heaven. He also shows the persecuting power of the Papal little horn, its wearing out of the saints during the age, and the days of waiting for the Kingdom, etc. But no other prophet than our Lord has given us the needed details of this ‘harvest’ time, connecting these with the prominent events noted by the other prophets.

Our Lord’s prophecy, like those of the others, is veiled in symbolic and parabolic language, and for the same purpose;—that “none of the wicked should understand,” but the meek, honest and faithful of God’s people only,—in God’s due time and way.

“Unto you it is given to understand the mysteries of the Kingdom of God: but to others in parables [“dark sayings”]; that seeing they might not see, and hearing they might not understand.”—Luke 8:10.

PEOPLES PAPER AND HERALD OF CHRIST'S KINGDOM.
Berean Bible Institute General Report

ANOTHER year's work for the Berean Bible Institute has been completed with the close of April, and our desire is to express sincere thankfulness to our Heavenly Father for His blessings and guidance upon the efforts of all dear brethren who have so willingly co-operated in this service of the truth, in, this corner of the harvest field throughout another twelve months.

There is no claim of accomplishing "many wonderful works" in the Lord's name, for the efforts of God's people are mainly in the small ways of "holding forth the word of life" for the encouragement of fellow members in the Christian walk, as well as finding others who have ears to hear the joyful sound of the Gospel message—even as many as the Lord our God shall call." To this end our monthly "Peoples Paper and Herald of Christ's Kingdom" goes its way to our brethren and friends generally throughout this continent and across the seas, and it is encouraging to receive the reports of appreciation of the message of the "Paper," the following extract from England being typical:—"I do enjoy its quiet, simple way of ministering the truth to us who are seeking to know and to do His will."

At this time again appreciation is expressed to our brethren who contribute to the pages of "Peoples Paper" by means of the Convention addresses, etc. Friends having other helpful articles are asked to submit them, as in this way good messages of truth can be passed on to the "household of faith," by the Lord's overruling.

The greatly increased cost of producing the "Peoples Paper" necessitated an increase in the yearly subscription rate to 4/6 six months ago. While this increase is of assistance and additional subscriptions also help considerably, yet there is a substantial deficiency in meeting the full publishing cost which is made up from the General Tract Fund.

As considerable numbers of "Peoples Papers" are provided free for general witness work, it is felt that this expense on the General Fund is well used, though additional subscriptions to the "Paper" would make it more self-supporting. Samples of the "Peoples Paper" are gladly supplied free for distribution, and three months' issues are sent out free to all interested people, including all from the radio witness.

During the year quantities of books and booklets have been despatched over a wide area and supplies on hand are sufficient to meet the demands for some time to come. The booklet "The Manner of Christ's Return and Appearing" is proving a valuable piece of literature, and shortly it is expected that the articles on "Our Lord's Great Prophecy," the last of which appears in this issue, will be produced in booklet form. Having the important explanations of our Lord's prophecy pertaining to the harvest time assembled in handy form should prove helpful. Good supplies of "The Plan of God—in Brief": are also available; this booklet and the two above mentioned make a well balanced selection of literature for general use. A special offer of these three booklets will be announced later.

The tracts and Kingdom Cards have been used by various friends for witnessing to the Kingdom message, and these are especially good where other means, such as the radio witness, are not available. The same applies to the coupon advertisements in newspapers from which a number of good responses have been received in the past year. The Consolation Cards for use amongst the bereaved have again proved a means of help to those longing for the message of hope and comfort which is found only in the truths of the Scriptures. It is a privilege to be able to serve the Lord's cause and all friends willing and desiring to co-operate in any of this work should apply for supplies of tracts and cards which are provided free from the General Tract Fund.

Some public lectures have also been held over the year past and the most profitable are found to be those where the message for newcomers is combined with the spiritual truths of God's Word; by this means the brethren are encouraged as well as providing help for seekers after the truth. It is always appropriate to "preach the Word" publicly as well as privately and those Classes and friends who are active in this respect are no doubt blessed of the Lord as they seek to do all as unto Him.

Most of our readers will be aware that the work of the Institute is carried on by the voluntary contributions of all friends desiring to assist in this service of the truth, and the General Tract Fund indicates the good assistance received for the general work, by the Lord's providence. No doubt much sacrifice is represented in the contributions listed, by which all expenses for the year have been met and the small credit balance is in hand for the year ahead.

There is much cause for praise and gratitude to the Lord as we view the fulfilment of prophecy in these last days of the Gospel Age; however, possibly none of the Lord's people can fully estimate the privileges and favours enjoyed while the world at large is in darkness and ignorance of such stupendous events about to come to pass—the establishment of Christ's Kingdom with all the faithful overcomers assisting their Lord in the blessing of all the families of the earth. Such a prospect should surely encourage each one of the Lord's people to use fully all their talents in the service of Christ, assisting their fellow pilgrims and all who have ears to hear while the opportunities are still available in our midst. "He that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal; that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together." The prayers of our dear friends are requested that the Lord's blessing and guidance may be upon all the efforts of His people, to His praise.

The Radio Work.

The broadcasting of the truth message for another year has also been completed and it is with gratitude to the Lord for His blessings on this feature of service that this short review is presented at this time.

There is continued marked evidence of much good being done by the witness over the air through both stations 3GL Geelong (Victoria) and 2KY Sydney, the number of new responses being encouraging, and the benefits to others who have progressed in the truth since first hearing the sessions are cause for rejoicing and thankfulness to the Lord.

It has been found beneficial to continue the offer of printed copies of each broadcast, thus encouraging listeners to obtain these and meditate upon the truths heard, and other literature supplied increases the desire of those who are seeking for the satisfying message of Divine truth. Considerable numbers of the printed Dialogues are also posted out each month with the “Peoples Paper” and in this way the broadcast messages reach many more friends.

The advertising of the broadcasts by the distribution of radio cards has been continued, though more may be possible along this line by those friends able to give some time to this work. The cards are made available free from the Radio Fund to all willing to place these in the hands of people within range of the stations. The newspaper advertising has been on a reduced scale, though some of our friends are doing what is possible in this way. All friends desiring to assist with this witness over the air should apply for information.

Once again the financial support for this work is most encouraging; the voluntary sacrifices of earthly good things enables this witness to go on, and after meeting all expenses the credit balance has been increased to 197/8/- to commence the new year. It is requested that our brethren join in prayer also for God’s blessing upon this feature of His work, that His good will may be done in the hearts of all sincere people, “While it is day.”

The Marriage of the Lamb.

(Convention Address.)

“Let US be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him; for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife made herself ready.” (Rev. 19:7.)

THE Bible’ uses many similes, and as we search it from day to day, we are struck by that fact. Pictures are given of hills and mountains, illustrating to us types of governments; then seas, rivers, trees and men and women are used to picture other things, likewise sowing and reaping, the harvest time, feasts and so on; all these things are used to picture certain great things.

Our text draws attention to the beautiful picture of the marriage of the Lamb. The Lamb, of course, is another picture within this one, with which we are well acquainted—“the Lamb of: God that taketh away the sin of the world.” There are very interesting aspects to this picture. If we think of the beginning of our association with the Lamb of God, we look back to the time when we were without God and having no hope in the world. Then we realised the wonderful love that the Saviour has exercised toward us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us. We wish to draw attention particularly to that love. It was, while we were yet at enmity with God that the redemption was made, and at what cost! The Bible tells us that He loved His own right unto the end, and that is the extremity of the test of love. Surely we realise when we look at the position, that it was indeed a very great love that was shown toward those who were born in sin and shapen in iniquity.

When we consider the life of our Lord, the ministry that took up 3 1/2 years, we see the love that was shown towards those with whom He came in contact; the miracles He performed in relieving the suffering and comforting the sorrowing, even raising the dead. These things showed forth the glory of His kingdom to be set up at a future time. They were just miniature pictures of the great love that He would show to all mankind at a later date.

Surely a responsive chord was struck in the hearts of those who saw our Lord’s love during His ministry. So it is with those who are touched by that love now; they want to respond and have a similar love dwelling in their own hearts and minds. The question they ask is that which was asked in the days of old—“Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?” So we begin to feel after God and He draws us near to that wonderful Son of His, as we view the light that shone from Him at that time.

But that is not the full extent of the love shown by Christ. There was opened the great opportunity of being associated with our Lord in His coming Kingdom, the miracles He performed being but a small indication of what He would do in the future. God knew that much assistance would be required for the uplifting and blessing Of mankind, and He set aside a long period of time, now nearly 2,000 years past, in which to prepare and separate a class of people to be associated with Christ in the work of that glorious Kingdom. Seeing it is such a great exaltation to be with the Lord in that Kingdom and share His honour and glory, no wonder a long period was required. We cannot but be interested and inspired as we see the evidence about us of that day being now near at hand when the marriage of the Lamb will take place—when the Bride has made herself ready to meet her beloved Lord. Soon the remaining experiences associated with the preparation of the Bride will be fully accomplished.

There is a great love shown between the Lord and the Bride class from the time when we are engaged to our Lord; that is, we have fully given up our own wills to have the will of God done in us; we have consecrated our all, that we may follow in the steps of our Master. The more we keep in touch with our Lord and Head the greater will that love grow, because “Looking unto Jesus, like Him we would be.” If we keep close to the Master, He will be with us in every trial and temptation and provide a way of escape, and as He said to the Apostle Paul, “My grace is sufficient for thee, My strength is made perfect in weakness.” Our part is to rely entirely upon Him, having a love for Him greater than for anyone else, or even our own life; because of the love He has shown to us, our confidence in our Lord will naturally increase as the days go by.

It is necessary for us as Christians to make preparations for the time when the marriage of the Lamb will take place. There is much work to be done, because we do not want to have the filthy rags that we had while we were yet estranged from God. We want to have His spirit; we could not expect to be with the Heavenly Father in realms of glory unless we had the Father’s spirit, the spirit of our Lord, and in that respect our Father and our Lord are one. We remember the prayer that He made on our behalf, that we should also be one with them; that is, that we would have the same spirit governing our every action that governs the actions of the great Creator and His great Son.

We learn as we walk in His steps that “Love is the filling from one’s own

Another’s cup:

A daily laying down and taking up

A choosing of the stony path through each new day,

That other feet may tread with ease

A smoother way.”

We want, as is pictured to us in the Psalms, to commence that work of fine needlework, the putting on of those fruits and graces of the holy spirit pleasing to our Lord. We see this exemplified in Him, and we want to have the same character and disposition as He had, doing the same things and having His likeness implanted in our hearts.

-There is a great work to be done in this respect. It is not done just by reading the Bible from day to day. We must act upon our knowledge, and there is comforting assurance given us in the Scriptures, that if we do these things we shall never fail, but an abundant entrance shall be given to us in that great kingdom of our Lord and Saviour. Because of the promises and hope set before us, we are looking forward to the great day, and endeavour to do our best in putting the fine needlework on the robe that has been given us, to the end that we may have the same disposition as our Lord and be meet for the inheritance of the saints in light.

The Church experiences great jubilation because we are living in the days of the Lord’s presence now. We see the work that He is doing. Troublous times were foretold for the world preparatory to the complete overthrow of the kingdoms of this world and the power of Satan; and seeing these things being accomplished, we know that our Lord is at work. Soon we will undoubtedly see other great events taking place that will indicate we are drawing near to the end of the Narrow Way. No doubt we will rejoice even in the tribulation of those days, for we are assured that it will be through much tribulation that we shall enter the kingdom. Why should we be downcast, disheartened, because of these things?. The thought before us, that the consummation of our hope, the great marriage feast, is very near, will be a sustaining portion to all those who cast their care upon Him. It will not be long before all difficulties and trials will be past, and the world itself will have the benefits of the tribulation that the Church, the Bride, has been going through. That tribulation will have a refining effect upon them, just as, when gold and silver is refined in the fire, the dross is all burned away.

It is rather wonderful, when we come to think of it, that in the little time of our span of life we can be made ready for that great day. It is not that we will be made perfect in that time, but that our intentions will always be to be like our Lord. Our love for Him will be such that we can trust Him, no matter where we may be.

While the Bride is performing this necessary work, the Bridegroom has a work of which He had told us. He said that in His Father's house are many mansions, and that He was going to prepare a place for us. The Bible assures us that we will be well looked after, because our Lord has been making the necessary preparations and He will have everything ready for us, even to the spreading of the feast and the drinking of the new wine in the Kingdom, as He promised to the disciples.

There will be the bridesmaids also, the virgins her companions who follow her; and what a wonderful time it will be when they are all united at the wedding feast!

We have stated that the marriage of the Lamb is not very far distant. Many things have taken place to indicate this; many prophecies respecting the walk of the Church throughout this age have been already accomplished, and are now things of the past, and as we look upon them we realise that all things do not continue as they were. Large numbers of people seem to think things still carry on as they were, but surely they have not taken heed to the Master's words and been watchful. Those who do watch see many things taking place, one of the most important of recent times being the establishment of the government in Palestine by the Jews. Last year they set up a provisional government over Palestine, notwithstanding that apparently the world was against them, not only the Arab world, which was very considerable. But evidently God has been with them, and He will be with them to a much greater extent yet.

In their work of preparing Palestine before the time of Jacob's trouble there is much to be done; there are many more of that nation to be regathered, and undoubtedly the Church will see much of that work accomplished, although God has promised that the Bride will be saved out of the extreme trouble coming upon the world, which will be about the time of Jacob's trouble. Therefore it gives us great confidence to look into the prophecies and see how they are being fulfilled before our eyes. We realise the day is coming when everything will be at an end so far as the reign of sin and wickedness is concerned.

A harvest work has been going on now for many years with the bundling of the tares and the gathering together of the wheat class. That gathering seems to be almost accomplished, for to-day there are not many who have the hearing ear, the desire to come out from Babylon and consecrate fully to the Lord; they seem to be tied up with a form of Godliness and delight in those things in which God has said He has no pleasure.

Then, too, the rolling together of the scroll of the heavens is taking place in the World Council of Churches. Momentous things are passing before our eyes to-day, and they are well worthy of our notice.

How diligent and earnest we should be in our walk in life as we have these things before our minds. There is not too much time to complete our preparation—we feel that way at all events. It is many years since we first entered into this way, and even now there seem to be many things we would rather not see in our life, the weaknesses of the flesh that still crop up and are manifest possibly to other people much more than to us, because they see things from a different angle. Nevertheless, because of the opportunity of exercising unlimited faith and trust in God, we are counted as being righteous in His eyes, even as was Abraham. That is a wonderful thought, and helps us to overcome that downhearted feeling when we so often fall. As the Scriptures tell us, "A just man failed seven times, and riseth up again." It is only because of the promises and assurances given us that we are encouraged to press on and to walk more closely in the footsteps of our Lord and Head.

So, let us look forward to that time now near at hand, when this marriage of the Lamb will take place. Let us use every opportunity we have of making ourselves ready, and we are sure we will find it will be well worth while, because as the Apostle says, "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things God has in reservation for those who love Him" supremely.

"We see the marriage splendour
Within the open door ;
We know that those who enter
Are blest forevermore.
We see our King, more lovely
Than all the sons of men— •
We haste, because that door, once shut
Will never open again."

Dear Brethren—Loving Christian Greetings. I sent my subscription up to Brother and I had word back that he would see to it. Thanks very much for the booklet “The Mystery of Christ.” I did enjoy it and if you have them in stock I would like you to send me a dozen. . . I enjoy the “Peoples Paper” very much also; some of the articles are more outstanding than others. “The Lord’s Great Prophecy” has been good. How privileged we are to know these things. I remember all in prayer who are seeking to build up the household of faith, and I ask a remembrance in yours. May we all be kept faithful to the end of our journey here, is my earnest prayer. He is faithful that has promised; His Word faileth never; Praise His name. With thanks and Christian love, from your Sister by His grace.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I am a constant listener each Sunday morning, and I am sure many receive help and light on God’s Word as I do; you make everything so clear. I would like a copy of today’s broadcast, which was about the living talking with the dead. . If it would not be too much to ask I would like a few copies to give to friends, but will be thankful for one if no more to spare. Praying God’s blessing on your labour for Him, in spreading the light of the Gospel to the world. Yours in Christian fellowship.

Dear Frank and Ernest—After listening to your broadcast this morning I feel that by getting your script it may be as much a blessing to others of my friends as it has been to me, so I would be grateful if you would send it to me, also the small booklet as advertised. . . Hoping the Lord will further bless you in your wonderful radio work. I remain, Yours fraternally through Christ.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Would you kindly forward a copy of your Talk on Station 2KY yesterday please, also the •booklet “Hope Beyond the Grave” ? I have friends who are spiritualists and I want to show them the truth; I would really like two copies, one for my mother and myself. Please keep up the good work and thank you very much.

My Dear Friend—Many thanks for your letter, and for the copy of “Divine Plan of the Ages” which you forwarded to me. I think the book is a wonderful production. The copies of “Peoples Paper” and the Dialogues continue to come to hand each month. I much appreciate these helpful services, and am hoping, as time goes on and as a result of study, that I shall be enabled in turn to pass on the knowledge acquired to others. What a lot of wisdom in the higher things of life one misses by failing to study the Scriptures, and what a lot of mistaken ideas they nurse in their minds by just taking things for granted? . . . Enclosed please find a small donation towards the work. . . With all kind thoughts, Sincerely Yours.

My Dear Friends—I am writing to you to thank you for sending me the wonderful literature that I asked for; I can assure you that it will be a great benefit to me to help increase my knowledge of the Bible. There is no doubt that we are living in a world of trouble, chaos and fear. . . Enclosed you will find a postal note for 10/- for your radio work to help you to bring comfort and peace of mind to poor sinners, and may God spare you and give strength to carry on the good work that you are doing. I remain, Faithfully yours.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I would be pleased if you would send me a copy of last Sunday’s Dialogue, also “Plan of God in Brief.” I would also like you to forward the same literature to the address I will give below. . . I think that you are doing a good work and hope that you will be spared to carry on indefinitely. I would also like two copies of “The Manner of Christ’s Return,” one copy for myself and the other for the following address. Yours sincerely.

Despise Not, Faint Not.

(Convention Address.)

“My SON, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him.” (Heb. 12:5.)

AS seen from this verse and its context our topic is one that deals with chastisement or chastening. Probably we all know what these words mean, the general thought conveyed to our minds being—punishment for wrong doing, that which is administered with endeavour to cause one to desist from doing the same thing again. The dictionary meaning is simply “to correct”.

Apart from any spiritual application we generally connect the word only with childhood and youth. The proper training of children requires Much chastisement or correction by the parent or guardian, which if not administered, will have a detrimental effect upon the character in later life. Lack of proper correction in infancy and childhood almost invariably results in a spoiled child, and a spoiled child is propelled far along the road to becoming a wilful, undisciplined adult whom none can really respect.

The well known quotation from Proverbs 22:6; “Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it” is a great truth, for good training is never entirely lost. A tragedy of the modern world is the lack of correction given to children, and coupled with it, the apparent inability of parents and guardians, speaking in a general sense, to effectively administer proper correction. The reason for this is not very easy to define in a world that is so upside-down in every way, but if one might express an opinion it seems that parents in many instances are less inclined to accept responsibility for the proper training of children. There seems to be a very prevalent view, that in time past there was too much chastisement and correction of children; whether this debatable point be so or not, most will agree that children are no less wayward to-day, and blessed indeed are those children who have parents capable of training them in the way they should go and who effectively restrain them from wilful, disobedient ways.

Of course it must be conceded that no matter how wise and well-balanced the mind of a parent may be there are bound to be some occasions when the chastisements and corrections meted out to an offending child may carry some measure of injustice. We can no doubt all recall occasions in home life and in school experiences where a child received chastisement, while others who were equally and sometimes more guilty escaped scot free. This is mentioned because it helps us to draw comparisons with the absolutely just and proper chastisements God sends upon His spiritual children.

In dealing with children the form of chastisement or correction is important too, and wise indeed is the parent or teacher who studies the punishment meted out, with a view to obtaining the repentance of the child ‘with real benefit to its training, and not simply a haphazard punishment governed to large extent by the mood of the parent or teacher at the time.

Now let us look at some Scriptures and note that the Lord’s people are often spoken of as being chastened by God for their correction and ultimate benefit, even as children by wise parents. Deut. 8:5, 6—”Thou shalt also consider in thine heart, that, as a man chasteneth his son, so the Lord thy God chasteneth thee. Therefore thou shalt keep the commandments of the Lord thy God, to walk in his ways, and to fear him.” Psa. 94:12—”Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O Lord, and teachest him out of thy law.” 1 Cor. 11:32—”But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.” Heb. 12:5-8—”Ye have forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto you as unto children, My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him; for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye spurious, and not sons.” Prov. 3:11, 12—”My son, despise not the chastening of the Lord; neither be weary of his correction; for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth; even as a father the son in whom he delighteth.” In the last two we notice that the passage in Hebrews is based on the verses in Proverbs. “Despise not” means to “grow not weary” concerning chastening.

It seems good to impress that the word “chastening” here, carries no thought of purposeless affliction. With the use of a Bible Concordance we see that its meaning is variously given as—instruction, training, correction and discipline. Therefore, He who chastens does so with but one objective—to assist the chastened one.

From observation and experience we know that all chastening of children by earthly parents has not such noble desires. Many a time a child goes unchastened not because it did not deserve it or need it for future correction, but because the parent was in a place or mood where it suited to overlook the wrong doing. Another time a lesser offence might bring chastisement severer than warranted because the parent was out of sorts. So, as it says in Heb. 12:10, earthly parents chastened us after their own pleasure, as it seemed good to them. But nothing of this kind occurs when the Heavenly Father chastens us, His spiritual children—it is always with a view to our correction and profit.

We are told not to despise discipline of the Lord. The word rendered “despise” is used only this once in the New Testament. The concordance gives the meaning as “to care little for.” Another help says that literally it would read “Do not regard it as a small matter or a trivial thing.” The Diaglott rendering seems better still—“Slight not the discipline of the Lord, neither be discouraged when reproved by him.”

Children may treat lightly the chastening and reproof of parents. Their young minds may fail to discern why they should be corrected at all. Most of us are able to remember enough of our childhood to know that we became rebellious at what we then considered severe and unwarranted correction, though in later life most of us come to realise that such training must have had good effect in helping to break up some of the wilfulness born within us.

However, the meaning or reason for the chastening and correction the Lord administers to His spiritual children can be far more readily discerned—if we look for it with desire to understand. This seems to be what the Apostle is telling us. Do not slight, treat lightly, the experiences which the Lord allows you to meet; meditate well that you may profit thereby; seek humbly the grace sufficient that you might cultivate that which you see you lacked, or restrain that impetuosity that caused you to run before the Lord in word or conduct.

The second part of verse 5 tells us not to faint or become discouraged when we are rebuked of the Lord. Although the words “rebuke” and “chasten” are closely related it seems good to note the slight difference. By using a concordance exhaustively we find that the same word here rendered “rebuke” is also used as “reprove,” and “to tell one’s fault.” A wise parent will always reprove a child first by the spoken word; if the reproving word does not deter from the wayward course or wilful act, then the chastening hand or other disciplinary measure follows as a more forceful or painful reproof. How often a child will not heed the reproving word until the chastening hand falls. And does not our Heavenly Father use the same methods for our discipline. We have His Word to guide us, ever a reproof to our wayward tendencies if only we heeded it, but too often our self-will carries us on until the chastening hand falls.

There is a verse in Rev. 3:19—“As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten.” The reproof first of all; if that is not sufficient, the chastisement follows. Happy is the child of God to whom the reproof is sufficient.

We think of some Old Testament characters. We read of one in Numbers 22. Balaam, expressly forbidden of God concerning a suggested or proposed escapade, kept hankering after his own way until he was so severely rebuked that it nearly cost him his life. Others had somewhat similar experiences. Individuals and nations were warned of God regarding the course they were adopting, but the reproof was not sufficient, in many cases, and severer experiences were necessary.

In Isa. 26:16 we read—“Lord, in trouble have they visited thee, they poured out a prayer when thy chastening was upon them.” That is the means of bringing many people close to God, but the chastening experiences are often bitter. We read in Jer. 31:18, 19—“I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself thus: Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke; turn thou me, and I shall be turned; for thou art the Lord my God. Surely after that I was turned, I repented; and after that I was instructed, I smote upon my thigh; I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth.” What an apt illustration the prophet uses —“as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke.” The writer must have often watched what we never see in our day, a young bullock being broken in—the flick that coaxed, the harder lash that compelled obedience to its master; betimes the young, inexperienced animal resisted and jostled uneasily in the yoke; as resistance faded the yoke would rest easier, and later the animal’s work would be performed with comparative ease.

When disciplining comes often we may grow weary in two ways—weary of reproof to the point of rebellion, or we may become discouraged at our inability to overcome the defects in our character. Rebellious--Discouraged. How does the chastening of the Lord affect me? To some extent one condition may follow the other. Early in the Christian way the chastening hand is apt to stir up rebellious thoughts — much as a child with its parent. The child loves the parent, but its young mind fails to see why it should be so often restrained from doing what it likes. Not understanding the need of reproof and chastening the young mind rebels, but later in life it will realise the value of the corrections if it is rightly exercised thereby.

Christians are somewhat different in this respect that their minds are mature; thus they are able to reason better than a child, and should learn quickly the reason why they receive chastening experiences. We know that our loving Heavenly Father is perfect, and the knowledge of the absolute love, wisdom and justice tempered with mercy of Him with whom we have to do, should quickly, and must eventually, remove the rebellious aspect of the reaction to our training.

The discouragement aspect may not be so easy to overcome. Though it is chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith, who are called to be members of the Bride and joint-heirs with Jesus in the Kingdom, much has to be done ere each can hear the last “well done.” Our talents for service may seem meagre, but none are so much so, that they cannot be traded with and increased. Character development is an absolute necessity, as shown by the injunctions for the Lord’s people found in Eph. 4:1, 2, 22-24, 29, 31; 5:3-5; 6:10, 11. A Christian must ever exercise the greatest vigilance if he is to be finally numbered amongst the overcomers. The message emanating from the Gospels and Epistles is grow, cultivate, increase in all that is good—growing in grace and in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

Like seed sown in a field the healthiest and best growth occurs where the weeds are removed or kept down, so we have to root out the things we loved and cultivated as children of wrath, before the truth enlightened the darkness, so that the good and true things can grow unimpeded. (See Eph. 5:8-10.) We have to “work out our salvation with fear and trembling,” for it is God who desires it (Phil. 2:12, 13.)

The rooting out of the evil is a long, arduous task. It reminds one of thistle or burr cutting. If set the task of eradicating thistles from a badly infested area, no matter how carefully one works there is always a straggler or two left behind. At the end of a weary day it isn’t very gratifying to have the overseer come along and point them out with the reminder that one left here and there is sufficient to seed the whole area again. Worse still, if later we go out to the same field and find thistles that we had cut rearing their heads again. Thistles have taproots which go down deep and if the hoe does not go deep enough they often grow again very quickly. If we are going to keep the area free of thistles we just have to keep going over it. That just seems the way in the Christian life. Faint not when thou art rebuked by Him for the straggler thistles we overlooked, or for those we thought we had dispensed with forever but apparently we did not get right under the root. In Job 34:31, 32 we read, “That which I see not teach thou me.” The Psalmist said, ‘Who can understand his (own) errors? Cleanse thou me from secret (hidden) faults.’ (Psa. 19:12.) That is just what the Lord will do for us if we let Him.

The fine gold of a truly mellowed Christian character is all the Lord wants in His people. The dross He will refine away. It will leave us pretty small in the eyes of the world and in our own eyes also sometimes, for no chastening for the present (while it is being administered) seemeth to be joyous but grievous, but precious to the Lord at last are all who are rightly exercised thereby. We never could become what the good Father in heaven means us to be if He did not put us to many a sore trial and grief. Gold can only be purified from the dross by being put into the fire; rusty iron is made bright and smooth by the file; the most attractive lawns are those that are mown the oftenest.

We will not seem to accomplish very much in the way of works in this age. Our aim to assist and convert others from darkness to light will not have any great result now, and as Isaiah says, it will seem to us that we have brought forth wind, and not wrought any real deliverance in the earth. (Isa. 26:18.) But a very great work is being performed in us, and we must grow more and more like Jesus; have more and more of His mind and disposition, and when the fleshly body gives way to the new, spiritual body in the resurrection, we shall be truly like Him.

So the Psalmist in Psa. 17:15, after speaking of the natural man who often gains so much at the expense of others in this life, finishes the Psalm, "(But) as for me I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." So it should 'be with us.

By receiving the chastenings of the Lord we are apprised of the fact of our sonship in God's family, for without it we have no heritage therein. (Heb. 12:7, 8.) Keeping this thought in mind encourages us in the endeavour to make straight paths for our feet instead of letting our hands hang down and our walk halted as of one with feeble knees because of exhaustion. The chastening or reprimands we receive from the Lord should be instrumental in causing us to "ponder the paths of our feet" (Prov. 4:26, 27), that we might make them straight.

While the concordance renders the meaning of "straight" as upright, erect, the word seems to carry the thought also of "even," "smooth," "level," and the Diaglott uses the latter thought. We are reminded of John's answer to his questioners, "I am as the voice of one crying in the wilderness, make straight the way of the Lord. Every valley shall be filled and every mountain and hill shall be brought low." (Luke 3:3-5.) This suggests a levelling work which we know will be completed for all the world during the Kingdom. We seem justified therefore in adopting this thought for the word in the passage we are considering, which is directed to Christians. Make a level, plain path for your 'feet; remove the boulders and fill up the ditches that impede your progress—lest that which is lame be turned out of the way (hindered).

A thought is suggested that by diligence in removing the things displeasing to the Lord (shown to us by His discipline) we are helping to make the way clearer to others (other lame ones). Example is a very good thing, often the best preaching. Remember Paul's words, "Be ye followers of me even as I also follow Christ." What a number of stones the Apostle Paul removed out of the way for those who followed after. (See 1 Tim. 1:16.) We have many examples both in the Old and New Testaments of men and women who sought to walk in the way of the Lord open to them in their time. What a record of their hopes and fears, their victories and failures, and if we diligently keep them in mind by study we will surely be helped, for all these things have been recorded for our reproof, correction and instruction in righteousness. (2 Tim. 3:16.)

"Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith." The easily besetting sin does not seem to be any particular sin common to all Christians, but any sin; some have one, some another they realise to be a particularly besetting sin for them.* The R.V. rendering is "the sin that doth so closely cling to us." The Diaglott—"the close girdling sin."

Dear brethren in the narrow way, let us not faint but press right on, for as verse 4 says, "We have not yet shed blood in the battle." Let us run with patience the race that is set before us, for if we finally "overcome" the end will be glorious.

If I in Thy likeness, O Lord, may awake,
And shine a pure image of Thee,
Then I shall be satisfied when I can break
The fetters of flesh and be free.

(* Respecting the thought concerning the sin which doth so easily beset us (Heb. 12:1) , it has since been suggested that lack of faith is probably meant. Faith is so necessary to be exercised if we would be pleasing to God—lack of it undoubtedly displeases Him. By noting the previous chapter and the following verse we see how important is faith. To doubt or fear in the face of God's promises is a sin which ever besets His people. To lay aside lack of faith, together with every other weight, is the objective of all true Christians as they run with patience the way that leads to Christlikeness.)

Ban Imposed on Search for Ark.

“The Age’ Correspondent in London.

A BAN has been placed on the international search for Noah’s Ark, which was to have been made on Mount Ararat on the Russian-Turkish frontier. It has been imposed by the Turkish Government, it is believed, to avoid friction with Russia.

When the expedition was first announced, Moscow Radio commented: “Intelligence agents of the Anglo-American bloc are not using much imagination if they cannot find a better excuse for an expedition to territory adjacent to the Soviet border.”

The newspaper “Pravda” added: “The expedition is financed to spy on our territory.”

Three parties had planned to explore Mt. Ararat—five British, two Dutchmen and eight Americans. The leader of the British party, Mr. Egerton Sykes, who was a wartime diplomat in Turkey, is convinced he would have found traces of the Ark. Above the 14,000 feet snowline of the mountain he thinks that bitumen soaked timbers of the Ark would have had a good chance of surviving thousands of years.

The above news item appeared in the Melbourne press of 30th May last, and while many will feel disappointed that the present expedition has been hindered from making the search for the Ark, yet it would seem that God’s time is still future for proving the Bible record of the Flood in Noah’s day to the world generally.

Some years ago an account of the finding of Noah’s Ark appeared in these pages, and it is thought well to repeat it at this time for the benefit of many new readers. The account was found in a reprint from the U.S.A. periodical “Prophecy Monthly”, and is based on what occurred over thirty years ago. It is as follows:

The story itself is told by Vladimar Roskovitsky, a White Russian who was serving as an aviator in the Czar’s armies just before the Revolution. He was not a Christian at the time of the discovery, but was led by the proof of the truth of the Bible account of the Flood to become a Christian, and is now engaged selling Bibles.

His story is that he was stationed with a group of aviators at a lonely outpost about 25 miles northwest of Mt. Ararat. The day was blistering hot, as August days are apt to be in the semi-desert regions, and the men looked longingly at the snow-cap on Mt. Ararat. The Captain of the post appeared, and said that a super-charger had been installed in No.

7 plane, and Roskovitsky and his friend were ordered to take it up for a test at high altitude.

All the preparations were quickly made, and with an engine already hot from the sun, the aviators were soon in the air and circling the camp for altitude. At 14,000 feet they levelled off to become accustomed to the altitude.

An Amazing Sight.

Suddenly Roskovitsky was taken with an impulse to head for the snow-capped peak. He circled it a couple of times, and then took a long glide down the south side of the mountain, when suddenly he came upon a perfect jewel of a lake, blue as turquoise, and partly frozen over at the shaded end. As the men circled to get clearer views, the second man began to shout wildly and to point to the lower end of the lake. The pilot looked and nearly fainted.

To use his own words: “A submarine! No, it wasn’t, for it had stubby masts, but the top was rounded over with only a flat cat-walk about five feet across down the length of it. What a strange craft, built as though the designer had expected the waves to roll over the top most of the time, and had engineered it to wallow in the sea like a log, with those stubby masts carrying enough sail to keep it facing the waves.

“We flew down as close as safety permitted and took several circles around it. We were surprised, when we got close to it, at the immense size of the thing, for it was as long as a city block, and would compare very favourably in size with the modern battleships of today. It was grounded on the shore of the lake with about one-fourth under water. It had been partly dismantled on one side near the front, and on the other side there was a great doorway nearly twenty feet square. This seemed quite out of proportion, as even today ships seldom have doors half that large.

“After seeing all we could from the air, we broke all speed records back down to the airport. When we related our find the laughter was loud and long. Some accused us of getting drunk on too much oxygen, and there were many other remarks too numerous to relate.

Captain's Interest.

"The Captain, however, was serious. He asked several questions, and ended by saying, 'Take me up there; I want to look at it.'

"We made the trip without incident and returned to the airport.

" 'What do you make of it?' I asked, as we climbed out of the plane.

" 'Astounding,' he replied. Do you know what ship that is?' 'Of course not, sir.'

" 'Ever hear of Noah's Ark?'

" 'Yes, sir. But I don't understand what a legend of Noah's Ark has to do with our finding this strange thing fourteen thousand feet up on a mountain top.'

" 'This strange craft,' explained the Captain, Is Noah's Ark. It has been sitting up there for nearly five thousand years. Being frozen up for nine or ten months of the year, it couldn't rot, and has been in cold storage, as it were, all this time. You have made the most amazing discovery of the age.'

Russian Government's Expedition.

"When the Captain sent this report to the Russian Government, it aroused considerable interest, and the Czar sent two special companies of soldiers to climb the mountain. One group of fifty men attacked one side, and the other group of one hundred men attacked the big mountain the other side.

"Two weeks of hard work were required to chop out a trail along the cliffs of the lower part of the mountain, and it was nearly a month before the Ark was reached. Complete measurements were taken and plans drawn of it, as well as many photographs, all of which were sent to the Czar of Russia.

"A few days after this expedition sent its report to the Czar, the Government was overthrown, and godless Bolshevism took over, so that the records were never made public, and probably were destroyed in the zeal of the Bolsheviks to discredit all religion and belief in the truth of the Bible.

"We White . Russians of the air fleet escaped through Armenia, and four of us came to America, where we could be free to live according to the 'Good Old Book,' which we had seen for ourselves to be absolutely true, even to as fantastic-sounding a thing as a world flood."

The Lord's Great Prophecy.

The following article had been omitted from the series of articles appearing in the "Peoples Paper" under this heading, and this will be incorporated in the booklet, details of which will be announced shortly.

False Messiahs And False Teachers.

"If any man shall say unto you then, LO here is Messiah, or there, believe it not. FOR there shall arise false Messiahs, and false teachers, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that if it were possible they would deceive the very elect. Remember I have foretold you."—Matt. 24:23-25.

The deceivers here described certainly are not the fanatics who from time to, time have claimed to be Christ and have deceived but few possessed of any degree of common sense and judgment. We have already pointed out the Antichrist, the great deceiver, the Papacy, which for centuries sat in the spiritual temple, displaying himself as the only representative of Christ—His vicegerent,—concerning whom our Lord correctly foretold, that all the world would wonder respecting him, except those whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life. (Rev. 13:8.) Similarly, the Church of England is not merely a church or "body" but it has an earthly head in the civil sovereign, the King.

The Greek Catholic Church very similarly, though not so particularly, had for its head the Czar of Russia—who nevertheless exercised more power. If Papacy is anti-Christ, a pseudo or false Christ, are not the other false bodies with false heads also false Christs, or Anti-Christs — however many or few of God's true saints may be in them?

Various Protestant denominations, although they acknowledge no head except Christ, nevertheless practically make their Synods, Conferences and Councils into heads, from which they take their laws, usages, and confessions of faith, instead of the one only head of the one true Church.

For a large period and to a greater or less extent these systems of men have so counterfeited the genuine Messiah (head and body) as to partially deceive many. But now for a century past these deceptions are failing. Few Presbyterians, if any, now believe theirs the one true Church; neither do Methodists, Baptists, Lutherans, and others so think of their systems; and even Anglican, Greek and Roman Catholics are getting free from the delusion that theirs is the only Church, outside of which are none of the elect. But in the prophecy under consideration our Lord warns us of danger from false Christs "then" —that is now. In harmony with this we find in Revelation (13:14-18) a prophecy of a special combination of influence by which Protestant denominations will be unified and, though separate, yet be brought into co-operation with Papacy, in a manner that will give both increased powers, and deceive many into supposing that the new combination will be God's instrumentality for doing the work predicted of Messiah,—and that it is thus His representative.

"The Sun Of Righteousness Shall Arise."

"Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: or behold he is in the secret chamber; believe it not. For as the bright--shiner [the Sun] cometh out of the East and shineth even unto the West, so shall also the presence [Greek parousia] of the Son of Man be."—Matt. 24:26, 27.

That great delusions, "strong delusions" by Satan, are just before us, is witnessed not only by our Lord's words here, but also by the Apostle Paul (2 Thes. 2:10-12). Had it been foretold precisely what form these deceptions would take, this would have somewhat hindered their deceptive power. God permits these deceptions for the very purpose of separating the "overcomers" from all others, and merely guarantees us that the "elect" will be kept from falling. And yet it is quite possible that some of these trials, siftings and delusions, may come closest upon those possessing the largest degree of the light of present truth. How all-important it is that we "keep ourselves in the love of God"; that we have not only a knowledge of the truth which alone might merely puff up, but that additionally we have the spirit of Christ, which it should produce;—love to God and to each other and sympathy for all men; for "love buildeth up" character in likeness of our Lord.

The claim, "Behold he is in the secret chamber," is made by Spiritists;—that they can have face-to-face interviews with the Lord at some of their seances; and that all who are in sympathy with their views may have the same privilege, etc. What if the caution that, if it were possible, it would deceive the very elect, should be found to mean that the "very elect" will be subjected to the severest trials in this evil day? "Who shall be able to stand?" (Rev. 6:17.) The answer through the Prophet is, "He that hath clean hands [an honest life] and a pure heart [a conscience void of offence toward God and man]: . . . he shall ascend into the mountain [Kingdom] of the Lord . . . and stand in the holy place." —Psa. 24:3, 4.

But how shall God's people know assuredly that these manifestations are not genuine? He has instructed us that His day will come as a thief in the night, that He will be present unseen by the world superintending the harvest work— gathering His elect, etc. How do we know that He will not manifest Himself to His watching people, as so-called Christian Spiritualists claim, in the "secret apartments"—in their seances?

We know that He will not so manifest Himself to us, because— (1) His instructions are that we shall be "changed," made "like Him," and thus "see Him as He is"; and (2) He forewarned us against these deceptions which would propose to show Him to us in our unchanged or flesh condition saying, "If they shall say he is in a desert place or in secret apartments, believe, it not"; because in no such manner will He be manifested. On the contrary, "As the bright- shiner [the Sun] cometh out of the East [and can neither be confined to a solitary place nor to a private room] , but shineth [everywhere] even unto the [remote] West, so shall the presence of the Son of Man be."

Our Lord's revelation at His second presence will not be in a room, nor to a community in a wilderness or desert place; not even to one nation as at the first advent; but it will be a general world-wide manifestation: "The sun of righteousness shall arise with healing in his beams." It is the searching beam of truth from the great Sun of Righteousness that already causes so much confusion amongst men, by shining into the dark places and discovering error and corruption of every kind. Whatsoever doth make manifest is light. And it is the great Light of the world, Christ (and ultimately also His associated Church) that shall bless mankind by bringing to light all the hidden things of darkness; for nothing is hidden that shall not be made manifest. "The day shall declare it"; and there could be no day without the Sun shining from the East even unto the West. "This is the true light which 'lighteth [in due time] every man that cometh into' the world."

(We will examine Matt. 24:28, at the conclusion of verse 41, to make Matthew's account correspond with those of Mark and Luke.)

Faith, Not Sight.

“We walk by faith, not by sight.”-2 COR. 5:7.

This principle holds true in respect of all of God’s dealings with His people during the night of weeping preceding the glorious morning of joy, when they shall see as they are seen and know as they are known. Hence, to approach God’s Word and have a right understanding of it, implies:

(1) A heart condition of teachableness.

(2) A heart condition of faith in God, as the great Teacher who knows our limitations and who has promised to guide the willing and obedient into all Truth as it becomes “meat in due season.”

An expectation of Divine guidance in the understanding of the Scriptures, even as God has promised, and, expecting this, they may seek for it in prayer.

(3) An exercise of their reasoning faculties that, while expecting and seeking, and looking in the direction of their expectations, they may thereby approve or disapprove -what is presented to them.

(4) Great care that they do not neglect these favours of God. They should beware of headiness and highmindedness, lest, having enjoyed the light and the blessing, these should slip from them and leave them again in the outer darkness in which we see the whole world of mankind groping.

To continue in the light and truth and blessing necessitates character-development, for the privilege of the light of knowledge is God’s reward for purity of heart, of intention, of endeavour. So may we come into Christ and abide in Him and bring forth much fruit.

News Item. -LONDON,

June 7 (A.A.P.). — General Smuts said today that what was happening in Asia was creating the gravest situation the world had known for hundreds of years.

General Smuts said Asia contained two-thirds of the human race and was developing a new nationalism.

The situation was so big that no one could size it up.

For over a century the people of Asia were led by European men, capital, energy and organising power.

Europeans were now being sacked. What was happening in the West was in comparison very small.

He added: “We are living in a twilight world. I wish someone could tell me whether we are at the end or the beginning.

“There is sense of fear, anxiety and menace which did not exist after the first world war.

You are powerless, frightened and think something is coming. You have got to stand up to what seems to be the danger—the cold war and the underground movements which are sapping our spirit.”

The above remarks by General Smuts of South Africa, who is considered one of the leading statesmen of the world, are surely in fulfilment of the words of Christ—“Men’s hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth.” (Luke 21:26.)

Members Complete the Earthly Way.

IN recent weeks three more of our dear friends have completed the earthly way in the persons of Sister Kirsch of Birchip, Victoria; Sister Kennewell of Adelaide; and Sister R. Martin of Adelaide (recently of Perth) . Each of these dear Sisters had rejoiced in the truth for well over thirty years and their faithfulness to the Lord was clearly manifest to all who knew them; they have left behind blessed memories in the minds of the brethren and relatives. While sympathising with the bereaved loved ones, our hearts also rejoice that these dear members have finished the pilgrim way faithfully and entered into their rewards, by the Lord's grace,—’Finished the toil, the rest begun; the battle fought, the triumph won!’

The close of a truly sweet, Christian life on earth came to our dear Sister Kirsch on the morning of May 21st, after some years of frailty. It is many years since Sister Kirsch attended the Melbourne Class and Conventions but she corresponded regularly with us and a number of brethren, and also had personal fellowship with a few friends who visited the Birchip home, where the sweet influence of the Lord made such visits sacred and blessed occasions. It has been stated that our dear Sister was always very happy in the Lord and for some years had been a patient sufferer, never complaining. Sister Kirsch's own letters were always full of praise to the Lord; in one, written a few weeks previously, was the cheery statement concerning herself.—’My heart is very weak, but I have much to be thankful for; I have had the light of truth on my way, to cheer and comfort,—Then let our joys abound, and every tear be dry.’ . We shall get to the end of the way too, as God sees good.” It gave our dear Sister Kirsch much joy that other members of her family are also rejoicing in the truth, and this is a great comfort to them in parting with such a loved Christian mother whom we feel sure has heard our Lord's words—’Well done, good and faithful servant.”

On the morning of May 26th last, relatives of our dear Sister Kennewell found that she had passed away peacefully in her sleep, having been apparently well on retiring the previous evening. Well known and loved by the South Australian friends and visitors to the Adelaide Conventions, Sister Kennewell had for many years attended at the Gawler Class with her husband, the late Brother Kennewell, and members of her family. In more recent years our elderly Sister had resided in Adelaide and attended the Adelaide Class as regularly as possible, and rejoiced in the truth and fellowship with all the dear friends there. Of a quiet and retiring disposition, it has been stated that her love for the Lord and the truth with simple faith and self sacrifice was evident at all times. Two members of our dear Sister's family have also rejoiced in the truth for many years, and so “sorrow not as others who have no hope.”—’Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord.”

Our dear Sister Martin completed her earthly life on the morning of June 4th after a severe stroke three days previously. Well known and loved by the brethren in South Australia, Melbourne and latterly in Perth, our dear Sister spent most of her long Christian life in Adelaide, attending the Adelaide Class, having been for a short time in Melbourne and last year had moved with Brother R. Martin to Perth, W.A., where she attended the Class up to the Sunday prior to her death. It has been stated of our dear Sister that she was always so faithful, true and self-sacrificing, and in meeting her there was at once evident a homely, loveable disposition, the outcome of a life of service to the Lord and His people. While the loss of our dear Sister is mourned, there is comfort and rejoicing also in the assurance that “The Lord knoweth them that are His,” and that another dear member will be—’Forever with the Lord.”

The poem below by F. R. Havergal has been received with the intimation that it was liked by our dear late Sister. It is entitled—

’Just When Thou Wilt.’

Just when Thou wilt, O Master, call!
Or at the noon, or evening fall,
Or in the dark, or in the light,
Just when Thou wilt, it must be right.

Just when Thou wilt, O Saviour, come,
Take me to dwell in Thy bright home!
Or when the snows have crowned my head,
Or ere it bath one silver thread.

Just when Thou wilt, O Bridegroom, say,
’Rise up my love, and come away !’
Open to me Thy golden gate,
Just when Thou wilt, or soon, or late.

Just when Thou wilt—Thy time is best—
Thou shalt appoint my hour of rest,
Marked by the Sun of perfect love,
Shining unchangeably above.

Just when Thou wilt!—no choice for me!
Life is a gift to use for Thee;
Death is a hushed and glorious tryst,
With Thee, my King, my Saviour, Christ !

‘Tis sweet to know

When we are tired, and when the hand of pain
Lies on our hearts, and when we look in vain
For human comfort, that the Great Divine Still understands these cares of yours and mine, Not only understands, but day by day Lives with us, while we tread the earthly way, Bears with us all our weariness, and feels The shadow of the faintest cloud that steals Across our sunshine, even learns again The depths and bitterness of human, pain.

There is no sorrow that He will not share,
No cross, no burden for our hearts to bear
Without His help, no care of ours too small
To cast on Jesus, let us tell Him all,
Lay at His feet the story of our woes,
And in His sympathy find sweet repose.

He understands.

The King of Zion.

(Psalm 2: 1 - 12.)

IN considering this psalm it is well to remember that King David, its author, was a typical character, a type of Christ. Those of David's time and he himself, also, no doubt understood his words to refer to his own conflicts with surrounding nations, and their kings, and although some of the expressions are quite too strong to fit the typical king and kingdom, and could fit only their anti-types, this no doubt was considered poetic license. From a higher standpoint, however, guided by the holy spirit and the words of the apostles, the Gospel church can see in this psalm a prophecy of our Lord Christ Jesus at His first advent, and still further of the entire Christ (anointed) including the church which is the body of Christ, and their final exaltation in the Millennial Kingdom.

While the application of this prophecy, by some in the early church, to the time of the first advent, and the events connected with our Lord's crucifixion (Acts 4:25-27), is not corroborated by the testimony of any of the inspired apostles, it is not without justification in the circumstances they relate. But notwithstanding this partial application, the real fulfilment of the prophecy belongs to the time of the second advent, as do almost all the prophecies which relate to Christ's kingdom and glory. The object of His first advent was to give Himself a ransom for all, and thus legally to prepare the way for the selection of some of the redeemed, His church, to be His bride and joint-heir, and also to prepare the way for restoring the race (whosoever wills) to all that was lost in Adam. The second advent, and the kingdom of God then to be established, are to accomplish all that was made possible by the work of the first advent. The time for the fulfilment of this psalm in its fullest, completest sense is just at hand.

Verse 1: "Why do the nations rage and the peoples devise vain schemes?" This we understand to refer to the commotion and discontent already prevailing throughout the world and daily increasing. As a result of the dissatisfaction, how many are the vain and impracticable schemes and theories being devised for relief—especially in Communism and Socialism. But these cannot bring the relief needed and desired. God's remedy is the only one that will cure present social, political and financial ailments and sores.

Verse 2: "The kings of the earth entrench themselves, and the rulers (religious, financial and political) take counsel together against Jehovah and against His Anointed." Ah! yes; we can see this fulfilling on every hand. The kings of the earth, the heads of nations, are banded together against Socialistic influences; and they set or establish their power over the people by various combinations. The lesser rulers, the money-princes and religious-princes, are also busy; and Unions, Pacts and Syndicates are the order of the day, not only in financial, but also in religious matters.

But little do any of these imagine that they are preparing to resist the establishment of the kingdom of Jehovah in the hands of His Anointed Son. Nevertheless, this is just what they are doing. The time is at hand for the fall of present systems and for the establishment of God's long promised kingdom which will enforce His will on earth even as it is done in heaven. So far from knowing that they are setting themselves to oppose God's will, they are so blinded that they call their own poor tottering kingdoms God's kingdoms. But in vain do they worship Him in lip and form while their hearts are far from Him. His will is not in all their thoughts.

Verse 3: "Let us break their bands and cast away their cords from us." The translators of the Common Version got the impression that these words represented the sentiments of the kings and rulers; but not so: they are the expression of Jehovah and His Anointed, relative to the kings and rulers who have banded themselves together to oppose the execution of God's plan, because it includes the fall of their power. God will break all their bands—their combinations and unions of every sort—and will cast off their cords, by which they still attempt to claim God's favour, protection and Word as upholding their kingdoms, rights, authorities, etc. (See Isa. 8:9-13.)

Verses 4 and 5: "He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh (i.e.) the Lord shall have them (as well as their wonderful banding together) in derision. Then shall He speak unto them in His wrath and trouble them in His sore displeasure."

For about nineteen centuries the civilized world has heard the words of the Great King, instructing that all righteousness consists in loving God with all the heart, mind, being and strength, and in loving our neighbour as ourself; and that he that exalteth himself shall be abased, while he that humbleth himself shall be exalted. But His instructions have been unheeded except by the very few: pride and love of money and power have ruled. Now the time has come to speak the same truth in a different manner—so loudly and so forcibly that they will never be forgotten. And the great time of trouble just approaching, such as was not since there was a nation, will be merely the reiteration of the Lord's message, once given in tender tones, but unheeded.

Verse 6: "Yet (meanwhile) I (Jehovah) have established my King upon Zion, my holy mountain (kingdom)."

Thus briefly does God announce what His work will be in connection with the overthrow of human systems and governments. He will establish Christ's Millennial kingdom, and He shall take unto Himself His great power and reign—Rev. 11:17, 18.

Verses 7-9: Here, evidently, the speaker is our Lord Jesus. The words represent the lesson that He will first make plain to the world—that it is by the Father's divine decree that He takes possession. "I will make known the decree: Jehovah hath said unto me, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee." The fulfilment of this was when our Lord Jesus, as the man Christ at thirty years, consecrated Himself wholly to the will and plan of God, even unto death.

There the sacrifice was really made which was "finished" three and a half years after at Calvary; and there, too, He was begotten of the spirit to the divine nature, to which He was made a quickening spirit, by a resurrection to the perfection of the divine nature—"highly exalted."—Phil. 2:8-10.

Next comes the enthronement of the Son in His Millennial Kingdom. He at His first advent "bought us with His own precious blood," and consequently He has only to "ask" for that which He redeemed to get it. He would have asked for it at once, but for another feature of the plan—the selection first. from among the purchased race, of a bride and joint-heir in His Kingdom. This selection will be complete at His second advent, and then He will be ready to deal with the world, the nations, and then He will ask and receive from the Father all the power and authority necessary. "Ask of me, and I will give thee the nations for thine inheritance, and the earth to its uttermost parts for thy possession."

While the object of the kingdom will be to establish peace on earth and good will toward men, it will not be peacefully introduced, but this will mean the greatest revolution the world has ever seen. (Dan. 12:1; Matt. 24:21.) Kings and princes will hold on to power and advantage to the last, and as a result all will be dashed in pieces.

Verses:10-12: After telling of the fullness of the authority given to Him, and that it must be enforced, even though such a revolution be necessary to introduce it, the great King of Glory shows His willingness to be merciful, and points out that, if the trouble comes thus upon men, it will be because of their neglect to come into harmony with Him. But the kings and rulers of earth will not hear nor heed the exhortation, and this is clearly indicated in prophecy. They will not hear the voice of the anti-typical Elijah class--the church in the flesh—and hence the earth will be smitten with the great disaster so clearly foretold in Scripture.—Mal. 4:6.

These verses 8-12 are freely quoted and applied by the popes to their systems during the dark ages of Papacy's triumph—that was the counterfeit Antichrist's millennium.

"Blessed are all they that put their trust in Him (Christ) ." These words stand as an offset to the promise of great trouble and overthrow for such as oppose the new and rightful King of earth. It includes the church primarily—the real, the believing, the consecrated church. When men's hearts are failing them for fear of those things coming upon the earth--when the powers of the heavens (the nominal churches) shall be shaken, these are instructed to look up and lift up their heads, because their redemption draweth nigh. At the same time that destruction comes to the one class, redemption and glory come to the other. (Compare Isa. 35:4; 63:4.)

Yea, beloved, can not all we who see the sign (indication) of the presence of the Son of Man now say, "Happy are all they that put their trust in Him."

Heroes Of All Time Built Thereof.

"It takes great love to stir a human heart
To live beyond the others, and apart ;
A love that is not shallow—is not small;
Is not for one or two, but for them all.
Love that can wound love, for its highest need ;
Love that can leave love, though the heart may bleed;
Love that can lose love, family and friend,
Yet steadfastly live, loving to the end.
A love that asks no answer, that can live,
Moved by one burning, deathless force—to give!
Love, strength and courage; courage, strength and love—
The heroes of all time are built thereof."

The Parable of the Sower.

Matt. 13:1-9 and 18-23.

THE Evangelist, in this chapter, just seems to give us one of those beautiful little views of our Lord Jesus and His methods. There was the multitude of people waiting upon the Lord, not only to listen to the gracious words which ever proceeded from His lips and to see the wonderful works of mercy, but there was surely a holy influence in His presence. Even though His disciples could not understand, at the time, much that He said to them they knew that He had the words of eternal life, and that there was no one else to whom they could go. As the crowds pressed around the Master He came to where there was a boat. He stepped on to the ship and sat down; from that position He could talk to the people. No doubt He understood that in that congregation there were all kinds of hearers. Some were attracted only by curiosity, and the words of grace would not sink far into such hearts, others had inclinations to learn the way of life, but their hard hearts would not allow the sanctifying work of the truth to proceed. Others had good hearts, and while in the influence of those of like precious faith would be able to make good progress, but when the influences of the world and the flesh would come in contact with them they would be impeded; then there were those who hungered for truth and righteousness, who would stand all the trials of adverse influences, quickly enter into the joys of the truth and its service, prove faithful unto the end of the way, and "like the tree planted by the rivers of water that bringeth forth its fruit in its season," the work of sanctification would steadily proceed and the fruits of God's spirit be attained. ,

So our Lord just told this simple little story about the Sower, and thus illustrated how God would make the selection of "The little flock to whom He would give the Kingdom." The message of the kingdom which our Lord and the Apostles began to proclaim, and which would be continued by others all down the age, would be .the means of finding the class which would inherit the kingdom.

The "Seed" is the Word, and the "ground" represents the heart into which it may enter. There is nothing at all wrong with the "seed," all depends upon the nature of the "ground," or, in other words, the condition of the heart.

The message has gone into all nations; it has gone broadcast; most of it has been wasted, has produced no result, but yet there will have been found sufficient good ground by the end of the age to have produced the required number of "children of the kingdom," or those who will be "joint-heirs with Christ" when He shall set up His Rule of Righteousness, under which "all the families of the earth will be blessed." There is no difficulty at all regarding this parable, for the Lord Himself explained it to the disciples.

The Wayside.

As in the following parable, Satan is referred to as the great opposer of truth and Christian progress, so here the "seed" that falls on the wayside is caught away by the "wicked one." Those on whose ears the message falls fail to understand it because they never gave it proper consideration; their minds and hearts were evidently preoccupied with other things, and thus there was no fruitage. That, however, does not mean that all such people are to be forever lost, but they lose the great and wonderful opportunity of the heavenly calling.

The Stony Ground.

The stony ground represents another class. The Word seems to take root and springs forth; they make profession of being followers of Christ, but they do not develop the Christian graces. Evidently they are hard hearted and too selfish; the sacrifice of taking up the cross and denying themselves does not appeal to them at all, and they, therefore, do not go on to make consecration to God. They would be Christians if there were no trials, or if the way were not so narrow. The selfishness of their own nature crushes out what good desires they had, and they fail of the grace of God, or, as the Apostle has put it, "They receive the grace of God in vain." It is only "through much tribulation that we may enter the kingdom," and they are not prepared for that. They counted the cost and thought it too much, not realising the wonderfulness of the "high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

The Thorny Ground.

The thorny ground is quite different, the ground is good, for it can grow thorns abundantly. The thorns will hinder, but the ground can produce good Christian characters. The matter is to be decided as to whether the thorns are to be left to flourish, or whether they are to be uprooted and thus better growth of the "seed" be permitted. Both the "seed" and the thorns cannot well grow together. This represents how that many who receive the great invitation to be "children of the kingdom" gladly respond and give their hearts to the Lord in consecration to be "dead with Christ," that they may "live with Him," and yet many of the old ways and desires still cling to them; things of the world and its socialities, the flesh and its likes and longings are not thoroughly cast off and therefore are obstacles continually hindering progress in the Christian life. These are not those in gross sin or immoralities as some have supposed, they are believers who have started the Christian way and are seeking to walk righteously, but the things which they have determined to leave behind still make some appeal to them, and they are apt to excuse themselves for some indulgence of earthly good things. The Lord's words respecting them are, "He that receiveth seed among thorns is he that heareth the word, and the cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches choke the word and he becometh unfruitful.”

There are many noble characters represented in this class. It is their environment that holds them back. If they were freed from the spirit of the world and its ambitions, if they did not have the riches and ease of life, its wealth and influence and the many good things surrounding them, they would no doubt be very fruitful.

How many there are in this condition. As we look about us we see many Christian people who seem very earnest and are even busy in good works, preaching and teaching, etc., yet enjoying the honour of position, even the honour of men in respect of their good works. How many are there who while trying to be true Christians still ‘have great ambitions to be rich and have the honour of this world in being prominent even in good social works. How many are taken up with pride of home and with cares of this life, and thus they are unable to bring forth a full fruitage. We cannot give our time, strength and influence to worldly matters and at the same time “make our calling and election sure” to a place with Christ in His throne. “Whoever,” says Jesus, “would be My disciple, let him take up his cross. and follow Me. Where I am there shall My disciples be.”

The Good Ground.

“Herein is My Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit,” said the Master. We notice that the good ground varies in its productiveness—thirty, sixty and one hundred fold. The greater the fruitage the greater will be the Lord’s pleasure and the reward.

The good ground represents “Those who hear the Word, and understanding it, energise themselves to the bringing forth of the desired fruit.”

The parable shows that the responsibility of producing fruitage rests with each individual who receives the good Word of God. In other words, the knowledge of God, of His purpose, and His provision for salvation brings with it a responsibility which we cannot elude: If we, like Esau of old, have so little esteem for the Divine favour and blessing that we let it slip from us for a mess of pottage, or pleasure of earth, no doubt like Esau we shall be rejected, “for he found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears.” ”Hold fast that which thou hast that no man take thee crown.”

Those who inherit the kingdom will be those who “hear the word and understandeth it,” whose hearts are so loyal to the Lord that they gladly free themselves from all possible hindrances and, like the Apostle, determine “This one thing I do.”

It is not sufficient that we hear the Word and that we have good hearts, or mean well. We must be so attracted by the good message that we shall seek earnestly to understand it and become active in its interest. First we must have the work of sanctification proceeding in ourselves in the developing of the fruits of the spirit. Then, our own hearts having been so gladdened, and our minds having been so enlightened by the good news of God’s grace, we must let our light shine and proclaim the Divine message to others.

The different degrees of fruitfulness illustrate the earnestness and diligence in our desire to learn and to do God’s will and to be found working in line with His purpose and plan. The rewards in the kingdom will be proportionate, as “one star differeth from another in glory.” No one who has no fruitage can be acceptable for the kingdom; only those who have brought forth a good measure of increase will receive the “Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou unto the joys of thy Lord.”

“Keep striving, the winners are those who have striven,
And fought for the prize which no idler has won ;
To the hand of the steadfast alone it is given,
And before it is gained there is work to be done.”

An Unwritten Book-And Its Author.

(Convention Address.)

THE Prophet Job had one of his dearest wishes fulfilled when he said, “Oh that my words were now written! Oh that they were printed in a book; that they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock for ever!” All the Prophets have found representation in their respective books to perpetuate their ministries, lives or work. Multitudes of all kinds of peoples have benefited by the faithful accounts that have been preserved for us of the Ancient Worthies. Their lives have been open books for all to read. Moses, David, Isaiah, Jeremiah—and their companions—what a legacy have they left. Without their autobiographies how poor this world would have been through its long night of travail. We are very grateful to these great men for the accounts left for our consideration. Yet, strange as it may seem, the greatest Man of eternity did not write a book; He left His work for others to publish. But why? There must be some reason for this omission. Was He incapable of writing? Despite the seeming lack of schooling, He taught as with authority, and the “Jews marvelled, saying How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?” There is another record which tells of Him writing on the ground, but possibly the accusations that He could write of those Who would accuse others are quickly erased.

Every teacher has a burning desire to perpetuate his work, especially if he believes it to be of value to humanity, to record his findings in a book. Men will deprive themselves of many luxuries and even necessities that their books may be written. Indeed, we have profited to no mean extent because of this sacrifice. Science, music, literature, the arts, learning, civilization, colonization, all owe debts of gratitude to the books left by their various sponsors, so that others may take up their works where they left off. But the greatest Author, the Author of life, left not a line! Was His Cause less noble; were the events in His life less noteworthy than those of other men who have moved heaven and earth to record their doings? “Never man spake as this man.” “All marvelled at the gracious words that proceedeth out of his mouth.” Great men prefer to pen their own biographies. Yet Jesus left no such work, except as that He entrusted it to others (whose ability to do so must have been far inferior and less reliable than His). And so we have His biography entrusted to others, and we take it for granted when we read “the Gospel (of Jesus Christ) according to Matthew,” Mark, John, Luke, Paul, and others. We seldom ask ourselves the reason for this departure.

Let me propose a few reasons as to why this omission of Jesus to write a book. Firstly, I think He had our faith at heart, and, knowing human nature at its very best, how it loves to worship something material, something that can be touched and handled, He was careful to leave nothing behind of a tangible nature; no book, no home, no clothes, no grave (“Come see the place where the Lord lay . . . He is risen”), absolutely nothing that we could worship in His stead. His enemies, too, helped to destroy all trace of His career, for there is no cross preserved in some museum. Travellers to the East say that if all the wood purported to have originally formed His cross was joined it would make a tree far exceeding the mightiest Redwood in California. Let us note this omission of our Saviour and refrain from recreating little images. If He disdained to leave us anything tangible, respect His will and elevate nothing in which to pin our faith or be the seeming cause of our joy.

Secondly, He did not wish to formulate a creed, some code of doctrine to which all must assent. Apparently His Church has for a basis of fellowship much more than “I believe this and that, and thus and so”, and by signing along the dotted line one becomes a member. Or maybe it also entails more than the purchase of a journal that prints its code of beliefs on the cover. A knowledge of the Scriptures is invaluable; indeed, one could not endure long without the written Word, but a knowledge of the Scriptures is but a stepping stone to something better. You remember the story of the Good Samaritan? A priest passed by—he surely must have known the Scriptures; likewise the Levite. To them a knowledge of the Scriptures must have been imparted. They knew all the legalities, all the forms, all the ceremonies of accepted worship. Yet something was lacking. Because He did not want the same lack in His disciples I believe He left no record for us.

Thirdly, He did not want to leave behind merely a Code of Laws: You do this or you do that; you must not do this, you must not do that. Righteousness (self) would be quickly earned and how poor it would leave us. All the Laws that need to be written have all been penned some thousands of years ago, contained in the Law Covenant. Who could improve on them as a basis of justice for fellowship? Yet they made no provision for the frailty of the flesh; no provision for poor human nature. No, we can see clearly His design was not to perpetuate this unhappy condition.

I’m ever so glad He left no written code of laws, because had He done so I would not have been able to keep them.

He preferred to give us liberty. Without underrating or speaking lightly of sound doctrine and good laws, our faith must stand in something more valuable than these things merely for themselves. Best of all, He left us example; what power, inspiration, hope, faith we have as “we consider Him”.

With the absence of all tangible things there certainly is room for doubt. Thomas would not believe unless he handled and saw the risen Lord. Yet with the absence of all these material things some are indeed blessed, for theirs is to grow in faith. “Thomas, because thou hast seen me thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed.” The Christian religion of our Author and the sentiment of His unwritten book is a heart-to-heart one; “at one” with Him.

Without the shirking of any responsibility, we see then in His absence of leaving any personal writings for our perusal many excellent reasons. At the same time good lessons may be learned: who is indispensable? There is not one thing that we may pride ourselves on doing but there is someone who could do it better. Jesus could have written a book, yet He left it to others. Furthermore, the most valuable of His doctrines was at that time yet to be unfolded and He left it to another agency: “But the comforter, the holy spirit, which the Father will send in my name, it shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.” He left to others, things that He was well able to do, but one thing stands out that He did not entrust to another; indeed, it was not possible for Him to leave this one thing, for He chose the twelve that they might be with Him—His fellowship.

It may be that you are one privileged to write on His behalf, to publish “peace and good tidings of good”. A lazy Christian would welcome the opportunity of passing on to others certain little tasks; one who would shirk his responsibilities, likewise finds it easy to assign to others things that, should claim his personal attention. There is in the omission of Jesus to write a book, two lessons prominent for our consideration: not to think of ourselves more highly than we should, and think ourselves indispensable. God has often “buried His workmen and carried on the work”. Nor should we be so overzealous to the extent of depriving others of their privileges. Yet, there is something we all can and should do, just as Jesus has left us an example: our fellowship one with another we should be rigid to maintain. It is something that nobody but you can contribute; something that you cannot be too careful or overzealous about, “so much the more so as the day approaches”.

Do you want to be more like the Master? Can you write a book? He could have done so easily, and without doubt it would have been the best seller of all ages. Perhaps you would like to write a book and opportunity does not open its door; circumstances beyond your control prevent you publishing all that you would desire. Take consolation in the omission of Jesus to devote His time to such art. The principle holds good for not only the literary art; perhaps there are many things you would like to do, many noble, good, loving acts of kindness you would like to do and cannot. Be encouraged, what is lacking on your part through no fault of your own, will be ably forthcoming from another quarter to minister in your stead. If you can rejoice in the elevation or honour of another, the Master's spirit is absorbing your spirit. Do not fret yourself on the things that are beyond your accomplishment; remember there is one thing at least reserved for you to do, and he that is faithful in little is also faithful in much; your fellowship no one but you can give. A fellowship of spirit is an enrichment of mutual faith. And in that fellowship your hearts may well "indite a good matter and speak of things concerning the King- and should you be excluded from doing many things that you would like to see accomplished, your tongue can easily become "the pen of a ready writer". Jesus committed many things unto others: His unpublished +book was left to others; His very life He committed unto the Father's care, which must have been His most vital and crucial act of faith. He was able to do this tremendous thing because He was faithful in the small things that go to make up Life. Could we do better than consider and emulate our King?

Another Pilgrim Goes Home.

Word is to hand advising that our •dear Sister Burpee of South Australia has finished the pilgrim way recently. It was always a great pleasure to meet this elderly Sister at the Adelaide Conventions, and also to receive her cheery letters and note her devotion to the Lord and His truth. Sincere sympathy is extended to the family members in their bereavement, but we rejoice that our dear Sister's long pilgrim way is concluded, and she shall have entered into her reward with her Lord.

A report from Adelaide states:—Sister Burpee passed away on 14th July, just 20 years to the day since Brother Burpee finished his course. She passed away quietly and peacefully and we are glad to think upon her faithfulness and devotion to the Lord for so many years. Brother and Sister Burpee were amongst the first to receive the truth in South Australia; accepted present truth, rejoiced in it, and lived for it, from about 1906. Our dear Sister Burpee was a fine Christian character, loving, true and self-sacrificing; she knew too from experience what it meant to be separated unto Christ and testified of the truth and power of the Scriptures uncomplainingly, and leaves behind sweet memories. Always ready to come to the Bible Studies and fellowship whenever possible, last Easter Convention was the last time she was able to attend the fellowship of brethren. We think she has gained the reward of the faithful.

Correspondence.

Dear Fellow Travellers—I have been fortunate enough recently to have loaned to me some back numbers of “Dawn” and “Watchers of the Morning” and what joy and peace they have brought to my mind and heart after many years of starvation in the so-called churches. After I left the churches finally, because of utter starvation, I became a reader of the late Judge Rutherford’s literature and was eventually led to become a member of the fraternity known as Jehovah’s Witnesses, but after a period of five years or so, the leaders became so arrogant, political and money minded and lorded it so ruthlessly over the others, I became so sick at heart and so heavy in mind that I had to leave. I felt if I remained with them I would be condoning their unscriptural methods. For ten years I wandered in the wilderness, lonely beyond words, and starving for a true knowledge of God and His Son. In quite a simple way one day I was put in touch with Mr. and Mrs.— and they had all the Volumes and Reprints; all were at my service and what a happy day that was for me.

Now I feel I must have the “Watchers of the Morning” and “The Dawn” regularly, if you will be so kind as to make the necessary arrangements for me to have them. I would also like a copy of “The Ten Camels” for the children if that is obtainable. Could you oblige me in this matter please?

Hoping in my heart that you will be able to oblige me and trusting that at long last I have found the Lord’s true people, may I thank you all in all sincerity in anticipation. In the name of the Great Eternal and His wondrous Son.

(Subscriptions for both “The Dawn” and “Watchers of the Morning” from U.S.A., are attended to through this office. Further copies of “The Ten Camels” are expected to be ready later this year, and will be announced in “Peoples Paper.”—B.B. Institute.)

Dear Sir or Madam—It gives me great pleasure to write to you and thank you for the many favours you have bestowed on me in the past, and I hereby write to you to ask you to forward me a copy of the “Manna Book” which I always enjoy reading every day. I gave my book to a friend and I miss the daily reading very much. You might also forward me 3 copies of “The Mystery of Christ” as I have read the one you sent me and enjoyed the contents very much. It’s a great thing to know that sin is the enemy between God and man and that the Lord Jesus Christ gave His life a ransom for all, and that His shed blood cleanses us from all sin and reconciles us to God the Father. “The Manner of Christ’s Return and Appearing” is another booklet I would like very much.

I wish to thank you for the “Peoples Paper” which comes along regularly and which I enjoy, also the Talks that are broadcast every Sunday. Enclosed you will find 20/- to pay expenses; regarding “Peoples Paper” should I owe anything for that you, may take it, and anything over you can put it into General expenses. Thanking you in anticipation. May God bless you and keep you and make His face shine upon you, that you may be spared many years to carry on the good work you are doing for the extension of His Kingdom. I remain, yours in Christ.

Dear Christians—Being without a radio, I was ignorant of your existence until just recently a friend sent me a dozen of your Biblical Dialogues (Frank and Ernest) on such subjects as “Judgment Day,” “God’s Kingdom,” “Hell,” “Evolution,” “Angels,” etc.

I read those papers with much joy, love and gratitude to God and Jesus, for you teach that God is exceedingly merciful. Perhaps you would be interested to know a little about my previous fellowship with God. I was a member of the Church of England until a couple of years ago when I became acquainted with the Seventh Day Adventist faith. After reading many of the S.D.A. books, papers, etc., and after taking up their Bible Study Course, I almost joined the S.D.A. church. Yet, from my contact with some S.D.A. pastors and certain members of the church, I felt that they seemed to lack “humanity”—surely God must be far more merciful in His plan of salvation than the Seventh Day Adventists believe! ...

Now, I am convinced that you are preaching Truth, and so I am eager to read as much of your literature as possible. Could you please let me have a copy of each of the following free booklets and pamphlets? I should be very grateful— “When Christ is King,” “Times of Refreshing and Christ’s Return,” “Some of the Parables,” “Good News,” “Coming Back from Hell Soon,” “The Bible Teaching on Hell,” “Zionism in Prophecy,” “The Day of Judgment,” “Why Sorrow, Sin, Death and Evil Are Permitted,” and “God and Reason.”

Later on, I should like to send you a small donation of a few shillings, if acceptable to you. Meanwhile, with kind regards and best wishes, I remain, Yours sincerely.

Dear Sir—I write in answer to your letter some weeks ago when you kindly enclosed those Talks on “Christ’s Second Presence.” Many thanks for them, also for a copy of the booklet “Manner of Christ’s Return” which I have now read and found very interesting; so I would be obliged if you could send me 6 copies of same, so I enclose 5/- postal note for them. Also would be glad of more copies of the Dialogues on “Christ’s Second Presence”; I distribute them among my friends ... I am interested in your Geelong session and often “listen-in.” Wishing you every success, Yours very sincerely.

Dear Sir—I would be much obliged if you could send me Dialogue and Booklet “Chosen People.” I enjoy the Frank and Ernest discussions every Sunday morning and I find enlightenment in them. Long may they continue on the air. I remain, Yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Brothers—I was listening to your broadcast on Sunday and would be pleased to have a copy if you have one to spare, also any other literature. How do you manage finance? Yours sincerely.

(The expenses of broadcasting and the general work of the Institute are wholly carried on by voluntary contributions of friends desiring to assist in this work, under the Lord’s providence.—B.B. Institute.)

The following letter from Brother H. Poole, of Powell River, British Columbia, is recently to hand advising of the passing of Sister Poole, the author of “The Ten Camels,” “Son of the Highest” and other Bible stories. Sincere sympathy is extended to Brother Poole and family in their great loss, but we rejoice in Sister Poole’s faithful Christian life and the reward now received, by the Lord’s grace.

My Dear Brother Martin—Christian love and greetings in the name of Him who bought us with His own precious blood! Just a few lines to advise you that my dear wife—Sister L. K. Poole—was called Home very suddenly on the morning of May 23rd with a heart attack. She had not been well for some little time, but neither we nor our Doctor expected heart attack.

This has been a very sudden shock to all of us, as she was chatting and laughing with me just as I went out of the door. I was called back immediately by my daughter, but my darling was unconscious, and she went Home in my arms.

While we have aching hearts and miss our dear one very much—her beautiful, sunny character and loving spirit spread its influence wherever she went—nevertheless, we sorrow not as do others who have no hope, for we have the glorious hope, and we know that our dear one laid down the cross and received the Crown, for which she so faithfully ran the race, and has heard the Master’s “Well done!” We have travelled together along life’s journey 43 years, and rejoiced in the Truth nearly 30 years. She was a faithful, loving companion, and a true Sister in Christ.

Her last poem was written just a few weeks before she went Home, and is entitled “So Nearly Home.” I enclose you herewith a copy, as it seems to breathe a message of hope and encouragement to the remaining few feet members this side of the veil. Meantime, by His grace and favour, we are pressing on with renewed vigour and energy, praying to be found faithful and worthy of meeting her again in His presence. What though the way be lonely, and dark the shadows fall; I know where’er it leadeth my Father planned it all. God bless you each and all. Many thanks for the copy of your “Paper.” We both appreciated your little paper and thank you for it. Lovingly in Christ. Herbert Poole.

So Nearly Home.

So nearly Home! Lift up thine eyes and see
How thin the veil between thy Lord and thee.
Thru’ fading scenes of earth so dull and grey
A wondrous glory steals to light thy way,

While on thine eager spirit’s yearning ears
Falls faint, sweet music from celestial spheres.
So nearly Home ! Well may thy heart rejoice.
Soon thou shalt hear the gentle Saviour’s voice;

Soon feast thine eyes upon celestial scenes
And rest thy weary feet by crystal streams.
The Heavenly portals shall swing wide to greet thee
And hosts of loved ones gather there to meet thee.

So nearly Home!. Thy glad, free spirit strains
Against the weakening bars of fleshly chains.
It struggles to be free from all restraint
To try its new found wings. Earth’s scenes grow faint.

The ladder between Heaven and earth is growing
As—one by one—His chosen saints are going.
So nearly Home! Death’s veil is tinged with gold
And flushed with Heavenly colours manifold,

Like sunset glories over storm clouds spread.
Oh! weary child of God lift up thine head;
Rejoice for thy deliverance is near,
His sweet “Well done” awaits thy listening ear.

The Rich Man and Lazarus.

(Luke 16:19-31.)

IT would seem that few, if any, passages of Scripture have been more misunderstood than this parable, which, when taken in its connection, and when interpreted by comparing Scripture with Scripture, becomes a very graphic and historical picture concerning Israel and the turning of God's favour towards the Gentiles.

We must remember that up to the time of our Lord, and a little beyond, God had no dealings with other people than Israel—the Jewish nation. "Thee only have I known (recognised) of all the families of the earth," He declared by the prophet Amos 3:2. "He suffered other nations to walk in their own ways winking at their ignorance" (Acts 14:16; Acts 17:30).

A great change of dispensation came at the time of our Lord, and the Jews were, because of unbelief and their rejection of Christ, cast off from God's peculiar favour, and the godly from all nations have since been carried into Abraham's bosom, which signifies the place of God's favour.

Many of our Lord's parables had reference to the change which was then taking place. In the previous chapter we have the beautiful picture of the Prodigal Son. This was evidently illustrating the self-righteousness of the Pharisee towards the publicans and sinners, as was also the parable of the two men who went to the temple to pray. The one said, "I thank Thee that I am not as other men nor as this poor publican." The poor publican said, "God be merciful to me, a sinner."

Commencing the 16th of Luke we have the parable of the Unjust Steward, who was dismissed from his stewardship, which pictures the stewardship being taken from Israel, and would teach them how to be wise towards the Gentiles while they still had opportunity of acting graciously in respect of the Divine favours which were still in their possession. Then in verse 16 the clear statement is made: "The Law and the prophets were till John, since then the Kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it." Then comes verse 18, which, with the usual understanding of the following parable could have no connection whatever, but when we see the meaning of the Rich Man and Lazarus, this verse is quite relevant to the subject. "Whosoever putteth away his wife and marrieth another committeth adultery, and whosoever marrieth her that is put away committeth adultery." By reference to Rom. 7:1-6, the connection with the parable will be seen. They could not belong to the Law covenant and also be married to Christ. Then the Lord gave the parable illustrating the nation of Israel dying to God's favour—going out of Abraham's bosom and the godly among the Gentiles coming into Divine blessings and becoming heirs of the promise made to Abraham (Gal. 3:16 and 29). So we see that the Lord was not at all speaking about the wages of sin or the eternal punishment of the wicked, but He was foretelling the punishment which did come to Israel on account of their unbelief and rejection of Him who "came unto his own and his own knew him not."

The Rich Man.

How well this rich man illustrates that favoured nation who were so rich in Divine blessings and promises contained in the covenant with Abraham. "To whom pertaineth the adoption (to as many as received Him gave He the power to become sons of God—John 1:12), and the glory and the covenants, and the giving of the Law and the service of God and the promises" (Rom. 9:4).

Everything belonged to Israel. They were clothed in purple, a symbol of royalty (Deut. 8:6, 7), and in fine linen, a symbol of purity, holiness. "The Lord hath avouched thee this day to be His peculiar people, as He hath promised thee, and that thou shouldst keep His commandments, and to make thee high above all nations which He hath made, in praise and in name and in honour, and that thou mayest be a holy people unto the Lord thy God as He hath spoken." (Deut. 26:18 and 19; Deut. 28:9-13). They fared sumptuously every day, so God's rich blessing and providence were over them according to their obedience to the Law.

A Certain Beggar.

Just as Dives, the rich man, pictured the nation of Israel as represented in our Lord's day, so Lazarus, the poor beggar, represented the Gentiles without God and without hope, "without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world" (Ephes. 2:11, 12). The Lord had come to Israel only, He had told His disciples to go not into the way of the Gentiles nor into the cities of Samaria, for said He, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel." Then there came to Him the Syro-Phoenician woman and besought Him, "Lord, help me. But He answered, It is not meet to take the children's bread and cast it to the dogs"; and she answered, "Truth, Lord; yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their master's table." Then Jesus answered and said unto her, "O woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour." (Matt. 15:22-28; Matt. 10:5, 6).

What a beautiful exception the Master made in this case. Surely no one ever came in faith and simple trust to the Lord who went away empty. "He that cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out." However, the exception proves the rule. Israel was rich, the Gentiles were poor and called "dogs," outsiders.

Then came the great change. The beggar died and was carried by angels (messengers) into Abraham's bosom. That is to say that the godly among the Gentiles were no longer "beggars." There were no more "beggars" like Cornelius waiting until the full time of Israel's special favour should end. Cornelius was evidently the first "beggar," godly Gentile, who was carried into Abraham's bosom, received into Christ, and became "Abraham's seed" (Gal. 3:29).

Peter was the angel or messenger to bring Cornelius into the heavenly call of the Gospel Age.

The rich man also died, and was buried. Just so the Jewish nation died to the condition of Divine favour, or, as the Apostle puts it in Rom. 11:20— "Because of unbelief they were broken off," and verse 17—"For if some of the branches were broken off, and thou, being a wild olive tree (Gentiles) were grafted in among them, and with them, partakest of the root and fatness of the olive tree," (the Abrahamic promise); and verse 11 says distinctly "through their fall (through the rich man's death) salvation is come to the Gentiles." The rich man died to God's favour when Jesus declared their house desolate; it was not, however, until about A.D. 70, thirty-seven or thirty-eight years later, that he was buried. Then it was that Israel was scattered and buried as a nation, and in this buried condition has indeed been in torment all down the Gospel Age. Now the rich man becomes the "beggar," while Lazarus has become rich in heavenly blessings. So the rich man (Jewish nation) begs for some relief from the godly among the Gentiles. The reminder is given that the positions have just been reversed. "Thou in thy lifetime receivest thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things; now he is comforted and thou art tormented. And besides this, there is a great gulf fixed; so that they that would pass hence to you cannot." This seems to indicate the difficulty of reaching the Jew with the drop of water of truth. The Law prejudices form the great gulf; they cannot accept Christ and salvation by faith in the great ransom sacrifice.

The rich man was not wholly corrupt. He had allowed Lazarus to lay at his gate and receive the crumbs from his table, and again he now appeals for mercy for his brethren, and that some one might go to them from the dead and warn them lest they, too, come to the same condition of torment and trouble. This may refer to other Jews scattered abroad, while Dives may represent principally those in Jerusalem and the holy land. The answer shows that the rich man and his brethren were Israelites—"They have Moses and the prophets; if they hear not them, neither will they be persuaded though one rise from the dead."

The parable of the rich man and Lazarus is practically the same teaching as Romans 11. Peter (1 Peter 2:10), referring to the Lazarus class, says, "Which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God; which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy."

When it is seen just what the Lord's intention was in giving this parable, how much it is to be deplored that it should have been so misrepresented and used to support the most unreasonable doctrine of eternal torture. Yet when , we consider how craftily the doctrines of Hell and Purgatory were brought in during the dark ages, and that children were inoculated with the error from infancy, it can be seen how easy it would be, without giving much thought to the subject, to just take for granted that the Lord was speaking of the penalty of sin in regard to the world of mankind.

However, God is just, and also merciful, and neither quality would be operating in such a diabolical scheme for miraculously preserving alive anyone, let alone the great majority of the race, just so that they might groan in continual agony. God is wise, but such a purpose would be foolish. God is just, but one could not, in a short space of man's present existence and under such imperfect conditions, justly incur any such penalty.

God is love, and love could not consent to torture even a brute, and if a man becomes too vile to live, love will demand that he become "as though he had not been," "where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest." "The wages of sin is death." "All the wicked (the incorrigible when brought in touch with the knowledge of God's benevolent provision in Christ) will God destroy" (Rom. 6:23; Psalm 145:20).

When we get this matter of Eternal Torture cleared out of the way, it is possible to appreciate, as never before, the great Plan of Salvation and how the death of Jesus Christ redeemed us all from the curse and sentence of death. He paid the penalty—"The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all." The penalty suffered by our Redeemer was not eternal torment, but "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures."

Catholicism, Communism Parallel.

A news report through the Australian Associated Press from Washington, U.S.A., appeared under the above heading in the Melbourne “Herald” of 8th August, as follows:—

“The Roman Catholic Church was pursuing a striking parallel to Communism, the Rev. Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, Methodist Bishop of New York, said in a broadcast. Dr. Oxnam said: ‘Both Communism and the Roman Catholic Church are totalitarian. Both seek control of the minds of men everywhere; both practise excommunication, character assassination and economic reprisals.

“ ‘Neither Rome nor Moscow knows what tolerance means. Both demand blind and unthinking loyalty. Neither Moscow nor Rome believes in separation of Church and State; both interfere in the affairs of other States. Both seek to shackle the minds of those they control by telling them what they may read, what movies they may see, what newspapers they must take. Both Rome and Moscow have perfected the Hitler technique of repeating prevarications often enough and big enough to ensure their acceptance.’

“Dr. Oxnam said that the Roman Catholic Church had become so mixed up in politics in Europe, so weighted with land holdings, so allied with military and feudal reaction, that the common people were turning against it. The Vatican seems to be ready to summon the world to a holy war to salvage its power, property and prestige,’ he added.”

On 11th August, under the heading “Moscow v. Rome in East Europe,” the following also appeared in the Melbourne Press:—

“September will be a crucial month in the test between the ideologies of Rome and Moscow, says Reuter’s Prague correspondent. The big test will come on the Czech Government’s bill, to be introduced in September, which will vest complete control of all denominations, their property, appointments and finances in the State . . .

“In Warsaw the State attack on the Church is also being intensified. A new decree says that religious societies not legally recognised by the State will be forbidden and that religious sects which do not comply with the law within 90 days will be disbanded.”

It is very evident that the statements quoted above by Dr. Oxnam of New York are mainly true. For centuries the Roman Catholic Church has thrived on the ignorance of its adherents, as well as by threats of punishment for all who dared to disagree with its edicts. Just how much the true followers of Christ suffered from this wicked system throughout the “dark ages” is known only by the Lord Himself. However, from our Lord’s Revelation to St. John, much is indicated by His words of condemnation in the use of the terms “synagogue of Satan” and “that woman Jezebel.” (Rev. 2:13, 20.)

Our Lord had also predicted the time of the Great Reformation when the Papacy’s power was to be greatly reduced, for His time would arrive when the truths of His Word could be no longer hindered by such a masterpiece of Satan. In His message to Philadelphia, the 6th period of the Church’s history, which covered the Reformation, after declaring that He would open the truths of His Word and no one could shut them up, He declared to His faithful people,— “Behold, I will make them of the synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie: behold, I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee.” (Rev. 3:7- 10.) This will have its fulfilment in the Kingdom of Christ, when the persecuted saints who proved faithful unto death will reign with their Lord, and the popes and priests of the wicked system of Catholicism, raised from the dead, will be required to bend the knee to the Lord and His anointed through the earthly representatives, or suffer -the second death—destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of His power.

As the time draws near for the passing of Catholicism from the earth, “like a great millstone into the sea,” (Rev. 18:21) , along with all other systems of men, it is not surprising that the Lord has permitted such as Communism to come into power, to work out His designs. Neither is it surprising to find that the tactics used by Communists are similar to those used by the Papacy. If it were correct for the Papal system to dominate its adherents and persecute and slaughter those who differed with it over hundreds of years, should the same methods be denounced if they are used in Communism? However, it does not take great intelligence to decide which of the two systems commits the greater sin—Papacy with its persecution and slaughter of opposers in the name of the Lord, or Communism with its domination of adherents or opposers in the name of liberty.

It may be significant that the Lord used the simile “like a great millstone cast into the sea” in Revelation 18:21, to describe the passing forever from the earth of “that great city Babylon” which is comprised of “Mother” and “Daughter” systems of religion. The word “sea” is often used in the Bible to symbolize the restless masses of humanity (Luke 21:25; Psa. 46:2, 3; Isa. 57:20, 21) , and it would seem clearly indicated that the rising masses of mankind, perhaps directed under the impulse of Communism, will be the means of overthrowing Babylon, the centre of which is the Papal system.—“And the ten horns (the kings of the earth, the powers that formerly supported the Papacy) which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire.” (Rev. 17:16.)

While Dr. Oxnam of the Methodist Church of New York is able to determine the similarity between the Roman Catholic Church and Communism, it is apparent that as yet he is unable to detect the great errors held by his own church system. Methodism is one of a number of denominations which started following the Great Reformation, but which did not progress in the light of God’s Word, and so holds many of the gross errors of Papacy. These include:— The Immortality of the Soul; the Doctrine of the Trinity; Hell-fire; Infant Baptism; Misconception of the Second Advent and Times of Restitution, etc. All denominations adhering to these errors are marked as the “daughters” of the “Mother of Harlots” (Rev. 17:1-5) and as such shall be destroyed from the earth, thus liberating their members, so that in the Kingdom of Christ when the truths of the Lord are abroad in the earth, they may then learn righteousness.

Of course, all sincere Christians in the systems of Babylon today should feel prompted to investigate the truths of the Bible, and by so doing they should hear the Lord’s call—“Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.” (Rev. 18:1- 5.) Obedience to this admonition is essential for all who would please the Lord above all else, and desire to have His blessing and guidance into all truth.

It is not to be understood that Communism or Socialism, however well intended, could better the conditions in the world. The following quotation of some years ago explains this viewpoint.—“Our Socialist friends urge us to join with them, saying ‘We are tired of preaching about what God will do by and by; come and join us; be Socialists and do something now.’ We reply that we appreciate the fact that many Socialists are intelligent and that many of them are sincere; but in our opinion their wisdom is the wisdom of this world, which, from God's viewpoint, is foolishness. They are not able to bring about the great changes which they desire, and if they could bring them about, they would be unable to maintain those changes so long as sin and death reign in this world. What the world needs is what God has provided, a Saviour and a Great One, able to save to the uttermost—completely.

“We tell our Socialist friends that we know they will succeed beyond their expectations. Like Samson of old they will pull down the house not only upon others, but also upon themselves—There shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation,’ as our Lord Jesus foretold.—Matt. 24:21. We should follow the course directed by God's Word, and urge God's people everywhere to do the same—to wait upon the Lord to bring about the great change of dispensations which He has purposed and promised.”

The comforting thought for the followers of Christ is, that nothing can by any means interfere with their spiritual welfare, so long as they abide in Him, and allow His spirit to work in them to will and to do His good pleasure. And for the whole world of mankind the great shaking time shall ultimately bring about “the desire of all nations.” in the Kingdom of Christ. (Haggai 2:6, 7.)

Change.

(Convention Address.)

“But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, as by the spirit of the Lord.” (2 Cor. 3:18.)

ONE meaning of the word “change” is, to put one thing in place of another; for instance—“God shall change our vile body (or rather ‘the body of our humiliation’ is a better translation) , that it may be fashioned like unto His glorious body.” (Phil. 3:21.) “We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed.” (1 Cor. 15:51.) Another meaning is, a succession of one thing in place of another—a revolution.

The Scriptures speak of the dissolution of this present evil world—the heavens and earth—namely, the religious and social order shall pass away.—“They shall perish . . . they all shall wax old like a garment, and as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed.” (Heb. 1:11, 12.) A new religious and social order will take its place.

Do we not see the old order changing? We often hear the remark “This changing world,” don't we? Has this change come about suddenly or gradually? Comparing this present changing period with the past progress of mankind, the change has come suddenly.

It is only about 112 years ago (1837) since Samuel Morse applied for his first patent on the electric telegraph; now it is reported “New Radio wings” can speed 2,000 telegrams at once on a single circuit or beam. Thought is transmitted today by wire and wireless, radio, television, etc., and still there is more to come. These days it is considered almost impossible to conduct a business without a telephone; it is possible for men and women to converse with each other although separated by distances of thousands of miles. In 1930 television made its first appearance; it was announced in America recently that television sets will soon be available for all.

Only 150 years ago the first locomotive that would really travel and haul trucks was successfully built, but travel was slow. In those early days of invention the public did not take to these new contraptions very enthusiastically.

Some said that railroads were “inventions of the devil, to carry immortal souls down to hell.” Others said “they would not have their bodies hurled through the air at 25 miles an hour.” Now there are luxurious 80 mile-an-hour trains and motor cars. The prophet Nahum says—“The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways; they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings.” (Nahum 2:4.)

Not many years ago when I was a boy in a country school, there was great excitement one day; the teacher hustled us out of school quickly to see a motor car going past. Now they are so numerous, we have to hustle to get out of their way, or we will make headlines in the daily paper.

We now witness every day flying machines in the air, and this change in travel has come about very recently. Since the 1914-18 war aerial navigation has developed at an amazing pace; only 30 years from that date, the speed of jet planes has developed, it is reported, faster than sound. Earlier this year an American bomber flew around the world in four days, non-stop; it refueled while flying. Now, a plane is perfected which could fly around the world without refueling. Along with these inventions and many others, we must now add atomic energy with its amazing and endless possibilities. These are some of the things which are changing the world. Another one, perhaps the most important, and which probably has contributed most in breaking up the old world, the old order, is the printing press—education. Without this, progress along other lines would have been slow. It is now compulsory that all people must learn to read and write; nations not educated are backward and low in the scale of civilization. All this and much more has come upon us within about one century, while little progress was made in the nearly 6,000 years of past human history.

What is the meaning of it all ? What purpose will it serve? Why this sudden change? The Scriptures declare that it is the day of God's preparation. (Nahum 2:2, 3.) “At the time of the end many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.” (Dan. 12:4.) Preparation for what? Why this increase of knowledge? It is to bring in the new order—the glorious times of restitution, spoken of by all God’s holy prophets. It is the preparation for the uplift of mankind, mentally, morally and physically, after the great battle of Armageddon has humbled and prepared mankind to desire it. In Isaiah 2:3, 4 the prophet predicts this; from an internal impulse the people will then be eager to learn the ways of the Lord. They adopt a resolution—”Come ye, and let us go up . . . to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths . . . They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks.”

But what does this change mean to us who are Christians? The Lord Himself said—”When ye see these things begin to come to pass, then look up, lift up your heads, for your deliverance draweth nigh.” (Luke 21:28.) Yes, the change of the true, consecrated Church is very near, we think.

While the inventions, knowledge and discontent, implanted by human selfishness, increases in the world in preparation for a change of rulership, these things at the same time serve to encourage and strengthen the faith and hope of the Church of God. These things are signs that we have arrived at the end of this Age, and that soon every member is to be joined to the Lord of all glory and power—her Bridegroom—for whom she has waited long, and kept herself loyal and pure, and separate from the world—from all its pomp and outward show.

Since our consecration to God, as probationary members of His Church, we have experienced changes. First of all our position or standing in the sight of God has changed. Previously we were condemned in Adam and were the slaves of sin, but since hearing the Truth, the everlasting Gospel, and responding to that message through faith in Christ, a change of mind and desire has come about; we made the decision to carry out God’s will in our lives—we consecrated ourselves, all that we had we devoted to Him. God accepted this, and in response He has begotten us through the Word of Truth by His holy spirit.

We received a change of raiment; we needed it, for our own righteousness was as filthy rags, Our experience is fittingly stated in Zech. 3:4—”Take away the filthy garment . . . and I will clothe thee with a change of raiment.” “I will greatly rejoice in the Lord . . . for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with a robe of righteousness.” (Isa. 61:10.)

A further change and development was experienced—our minds gradually became renewed, we looked at every thing from a new standpoint. The mind or spirit of Christ gradually developed in us; because of this, the Lord recognized us as New Creatures—old things passed away, all things became new. We changed from death to life; we changed for the better and soon began to look for others who had also experienced this same change, and desired their company and fellowship. Yes, there have been thousands of persons who have testified to the fact that the Truth of God has completely transformed them, giving a new outlook upon life’s experiences—new prospects, new hopes, new aims, new desires, new ambitions and new friends.

Previous to this change we were disobedient, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and the natural mind. The Apostle Paul writing to the Corinthian Christians says—”Such were some of you; but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye’ are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the spirit of our God.” (1 Cor. 6:11.) And that describes our experience too, doesn’t it?

Our text states that we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, as by the spirit of the Lord. All the truly consecrated members of the Church are continually changed as they look into the Word of the Lord, as this reveals the glory of the Lord—the glorious perfection of the Divine character—and the more we look into it the greater is the desire to be transformed into the same character- likeness. Those who are not being thus changed are not of the class the Apostle addresses. • •

As we look into the Word of the Lord, as in a glass, the light is reflected back upon us, and haven’t we often seen this in others who have given over their lives to the Lord and have experienced the transforming influence of the Truth; we observe even a change in their countenance, as well as in character.

Our object in studying God’s Word to determine His character and plan should be to bring our own hearts and minds into closer fellowship with the Lord. Just as the light, and silent, yet powerful influence of the mighty sun breaks the icy bands of winter and promotes growth that has been dormant in the winter months, and, quickened by the warm rays of sunshine as spring comes, plant life looks at the sun, the whole face of the earth is changed from glory to glory, from one degree of beauty to another—first the germination, then the young shoot, the plant, the bud, then the unfolding of its colour and beauty in the face of the sun—so it is in the spiritual world. As we submit to, and allow His light to shine upon our hearts, and the warmth of His fellowship to bear upon us, there will surely be a similar transformation in us. And there is only one power that can do this—the power of God which emanates from his Word—as our text says, “We are changed from glory to glory, by the spirit of the Lord.”

So great is this power that it has led men and women to die cheerfully for the cause of God in every age of the world. Trials also we shall have; the storms of life rage around us. Tranquil, cheerful, peaceful surroundings we experience too, but this latter condition, if continued all through the Christian life, would not produce strong characters, or that full assurance of faith or perfect love and obedience which is of such value in the sight of God,— ”The ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price.” (1 Pet. 3:4.)

But some one will say, “Yes, I know we are to expect trials, troubles, vexing problems and sorrows, but could not I have these in some other form than I am experiencing them ?” But how do we know that the choice of our experiences would be the best and produce the desired results in our lives? Better leave it to the One to whom we have committed all other things. How do we know that changing our experiences and trials for another’s would demonstrate us as conquerors? There is a poem which illustrates this very well; it is entitled—”The Changed Cross.” In part it says:

It was a time of sadness, and my heart,
Although it knew and loved the better part,
Felt wearied with the conflict and the strife,
And all the needful discipline of life.
Doubting, and almost yielding to despair,
The thought arose—My cross I cannot bear.
Far heavier its weight must surely be
Than those of others which I daily see;
Oh! if I might another burden choose,
Methinks I should not fear my crown to lose.

Then the poem goes on at length, representing in a dream how the Master lead this disciple beneath a canopy of love, and there was revealed crosses of different sizes, large and small, and there invited the disciple to choose the cross desired.

And one there was most beauteous to behold—
A little one, with jewels set in gold:
Ah! this, methought, I can with comfort wear,
For it will be an easy one to bear.

And so the little cross I quickly took,
But all at once my frame beneath it shook;
The sparkling jewels, fair were they to see,
But far too heavy was their weight for me.

This may not be, I cried, and looked again,
To see if any here could ease my pain;
But one by one I passed them slowly by,
Till on a lovely one I cast mine eye;

Fair flowers around its sculptured form entwined,
And grace and beauty seemed in it combined;
Wondering, I gazed, and still I wondered more
To think so many should have passed it o'er.

But, oh! that form so beautiful to see
Soon made its hidden sorrows known to me;
Thorns lay beneath those flowers and colours fair:
Sorrowing, I said, "This cross I may not bear."

And so it was with each and all around—
Not one to suit my need could there be found;
Weeping, I laid each heavy burden down,
As my Guide gently said, "No cross, no crown !"

"Be not afraid," He said, "but trust in Me—
My perfect love shall now be shown to thee."
And there, in the prepared, appointed way—
Listening to hear and ready to obey—

A cross I quickly found of plainest form,
With only words of love inscribed thereon.
With thankfulness I raised it from the rest,
And joyfully acknowledged it the best—

The only one of all the many there
That I could feel was good for me to bear.
And while I thus my chosen one confessed,
I saw a heavenly brightness on it rest;

And as I bent, my burden to sustain,
I recognized mine own old cross again!
But, oh! how different did it seem to be,
Now I had learned its preciousness to see!

No longer could I unbelieving say,
Perhaps another is a better way.
Ah, no! henceforth mine own desire shall be
That He who knows me best should choose for me;

And so whate'er His love sees good to send,
I'll trust it's best, because He knows the end.

Do not refuse the employment which the hour brings you for one more ambitious.

—Emerson.

It Repented the Lord.

“And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. And it repented the Lord that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart. And the Lord said, I will destroy man whom I have created, from the face of the earth.: ’ (Gen. 6:5-7.)

THE question naturally arises, If God is omniscient, knowing the end from the beginning, how could He repent of His course in creating man?

The word repent means:—”To change the MIND, or, COURSE OF CONDUCT on account of regret or dissatisfaction with what has occurred.” —Webster. The question then is, Did God change His mind (plan) or His course of conduct? We claim, that knowing the end from the beginning, God’s mind could not change, hence it must signify change of conduct. That is, God changed His course of dealing with man because of man’s wickedness which grieved Him, but He did not need to change His mind or plans, because these plans had from the very first recognized the corrupting and degrading tendency of sin, and provided (in purpose or mind) the Lamb of God—”slain from before the foundation of the world,” as the redemption price.

It is difficult for our finite minds to comprehend this, because for us to change our course of action, usually means to change our minds or plans as well —because of our short-sightedness. To comprehend Omniscience and Omnipotence is as difficult as to comprehend eternity or the infinitude of space. But what no one can fully comprehend, we as God’s children, may at least apprehend by faith guided by His revelation to us. To those whose eyes are anointed with eyesalve (Rev. 3:18) , the prophetic statements of God’s Word, both in the Old and New Testament in their fulfillments, now discernible, give ample proof that God does know the end from the beginning; that He changes not from His original purpose. (Mal. 3:6; Isa. 14:27.) God’s plans were perfect before they began to be executed; hence all the changes of God’s course or conduct are working out the accomplishment of His original purpose which contemplated these very changes.

Those who recognize the gradual development of God’s original plan, can see clearly that the various changes in His course, or dealings, as displayed in the Jewish, Gospel and Millennial ages, do not at all indicate so many changes of His mind or plan, though they are doubtless so misunderstood by many. Is it asked, Why then is it so expressed as to give the impression that because God’s heart was grieved by reason of man’s wickedness, His mind as well as His action changed? We answer, This matter is stated in a manner suited to convey to the general reader as much as he is able to comprehend of God’s reasons for the change. God was very much grieved and displeased by man’s rapid progress in wickedness; that instead of loathing his sinful and fallen condition and looking to God for relief, he took pleasure in still further degrading himself; and God, according to His original purpose, changed the course of His dealings and ended that age by blotting out of existence, for a time, those who were so unworthy, that their gross depravity should not interfere in the further development of His plan.* Thus also when God sneaks of the sun’s rising and setting, it is not that He did not know that it is the earth’s instead of the sun’s motion that produces day and night, but because He addresses Himself to men according to their comprehension.

It was then and still is, impossible, for the fallen natural man to clearly appreciate and realise these matters; and God’s purpose seems to be to prove to man the Omniscience as well as the Justice and Love of his Creator, rather than to tell him of them.

*Under the strict discipline of the Millennium, those who then would not even attempt righteousness, will be compelled to conform to it and to taste of its advantages over sin and its results, so that if they will they may choose life and live.

Communism as Remedy for World's Ills.

THE following thoughts on the above subject THE written many years ago, but as they are of much interest and very timely to-day, the opportunity is taken to present them to our readers.

Communism proposes a social system in which there will be community of goods; in which all property shall be owned in common and operated in the general interest, and all profits from all labour be devoted to the general welfare—"to each according to his needs."

Some features of Communism we could commend, but as a whole it is quite impracticable. Such an arrangement would probably do very well for heaven, where all are perfect, pure and good, and where love reigns, but a moment's reflection should prove to any man of judgment and experience that in the present condition of men's hearts such a scheme is thoroughly impracticable. The tendency would be to make drones of all. We would soon have a competition as to who could do the least and the worst work; and society would soon lapse into barbarism and immorality, tending to the rapid extinction of the race.

But some fancy that Communism is taught in the Bible and that consequently it must be the true remedy—God's remedy. With many this is the strongest argument in its favour. The supposition that it was instituted by our Lord and the Apostles, and that it should have continued to be the rule and practice of Christians since, is very common. The following is presented in explanation.

"They Had All Things In Common."

"And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need. And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God, and having favour with all the people.—Acts 2:44-47.

Such was the spontaneous sentiment of the early Church: selfishness gave place to love and general interest. Blessed experience! And without doubt a similar sentiment, more or less clearly defined, comes to the hearts of all who are truly converted. When first we got a realising sense of God's love and salvation, when we gave ourselves completely to the Lord and realized His gifts to us, which pertain not only to the life that now is, but also to that which is to come—we felt an exuberance of joy, which found in every fellow-pilgrim toward the heavenly Canaan a brother or a sister in whom we trusted as related to the Lord and having His spirit; and we were disposed to deal with them all as we would with the Lord, and to share with them our all, as we would share all with our Redeemer. And in many instances it was by a rude shock that we were awakened to the fact that neither we nor others are perfect in the flesh; and that no matter how much of the Master's spirit His people now possess, they "have this treasure in earthen vessels" of human frailty and defection.

Then we learned, not only that the weaknesses of the flesh of other men had to be taken into account, but that our own weaknesses of the flesh needed constant guarding. We found that whilst all had shared Adam's fall, all had not fallen alike, or in exactly the same particulars. All have fallen from God's likeness and spirit of love, to Satan's likeness and spirit of selfishness; and as love has diversities of operations, so has selfishness. Consequently, selfishness working in one has wrought a desire for ease, sloth, indolence; in another it produced energy, labour for the pleasures of this life, self-gratification, etc.

Among those actively selfish some take self-gratification in amassing a fortune, and having it said, He is wealthy; others gratify their selfishness by seeking honour of men; others in dress, others in travel, others in debauchery and the lowest and meanest forms of selfishness.

Each one begotten to the new life in Christ, with its new spirit of love, finds a conflict begun, fightings within and without; for the new spirit wars with whatever form of selfishness or depravity formerly had control of us. The “new mind of Christ,” whose principles are justice and love, asserts itself; and reminds the will that it has assented to and covenanted to this change. The desires of the flesh (the selfish desires, whatever their bent) , aided by the outside influence of friends, argue and discuss the question, urging that no radical measures must be taken—that such a course would be foolish, insane, impossible. ‘The flesh insists that the old course cannot be changed, but will agree to slight modifications, and to do nothing so extreme as before.

The vast majority of God’s people seem to agree to this partnership, which is really still the reign of selfishness. But others insist that the spirit or mind of Christ shall have the control. The battle which ensues is a hard one (Gal. 5:16, 17); but the new will should conquer, and self with its own selfishness, or depraved desires, be reckoned dead.—Col. 2:20; 3:3; Rom. 6:2-8.

But does this end the battle forever? No;—
“Ne’er think the victory won,
Nor once at ease sit down;
Thine arduous task will not be done
Till thou hast gained thy crown.”

Ah, yes, we must renew the battle daily, and help divine implore and receive, that we may finish our course with joy. We must not only conquer self, but, as the Apostle did, we must keep our bodies under. (1 Cor. 9:27.) And this, our experience, that we must be constantly on the alert against the spirit of selfishness, and to support and promote in ourselves the spirit of love, is the experience of all who likewise have “put on Christ” and taken His will to be theirs. Hence the propriety of the Apostle’s remark, “Henceforth know we no man [in Christ] after the flesh.” We know those in Christ according to their new spirit, and not according to their fallen flesh. And if we see them fail sometimes, or always to some degree, and yet see evidences that the new mind is wrestling for the mastery, we are properly disposed to sympathise with them rather than to berate them for little failures; “remembering ourselves, lest we also be tempted [of our old selfish nature in violation of some of the requirements of the perfect law of love].”

Under “the present distress,” therefore, while each has all that he can do to keep his own body under and the spirit of love in control, sound judgment, as well as experience and the Bible, tells us that we would best not complicate matters by attempting communistic schemes; but each make as straight paths as possible for his own feet, that that which is lame in our fallen flesh be not turned entirely out of the way, but that it be healed.

(1) Sound judgment says that if the saints with divine help have a constant battle to keep selfishness subject to love, a promiscuous colony or community would certainly not succeed in ruling itself by a law utterly foreign to the spirit of the majority of its members. And it would be impossible to establish a communism of saints only, because we cannot read the hearts—only “the Lord knoweth them that are His.” And if such a colony of saints could be gotten together, and if it should prosper with all things in common, all sorts of evil persons would seek to get their possessions or to share them; and if successfully excluded they would say all manner of evil against them; and so, if it held together at all, the enterprise would not be a real success.

Some saints, as well as many of the world, are so fallen into selfish indolence that nothing but necessity will help them to be, “not slothful in business, but fervent in spirit, serving the Lord.” And many others are so selfishly ambitious that they need bufferings of failure and adversity to mellow them and enable them to sympathise with others, or even to bring them to deal justly with others. For both these classes “community” would merely serve to hinder the learning of the proper and needed lessons.

Such communities, if left to the rule of the majority, would sink to the level of the majority; for the progressive, active minority, finding that nothing could be gained by energy and thrift over carelessness and sloth, would also grow careless and indolent. If governed by organisers of strong will, as Life Trustees and Managers, on a paternal principle, the result would be more favourable financially; but the masses, deprived of personal responsibility, would degenerate into mere tools and slaves of the Trustees.

To sound judgment it therefore appears that the method of individualism, with its liberty and responsibility, is the best one for the development of intelligent beings; even though it may work hardships many times to all, and sometimes to many.

Sound judgment can see that if the Millennial Kingdom were established on the earth, with the divine rulers then promised, backed by unerring wisdom and full power to use it, laying “judgment to the line and righteousness to the plummet,” and ruling not by consent of majorities, but by righteous judgment, as “with a rod of iron”—then communism could succeed; probably it would be the very best condition, and if so it will be the method chosen by the King of kings. But for that we wait; and not having the power or the wisdom to use such theocratic power, the spirit of a sound mind simply bides the Lord’s time, praying meanwhile, “Thy Kingdom come, they will be done on earth as it is in heaven.” And after Christ’s Kingdom shall have brought all the willing back to God and righteousness, and shall have destroyed all the unwilling, then, with Love the rule of earth as it is of heaven, we may suppose that men will share earth’s mercies in common, as do the angels the bounties of heaven.

(2) Experience proves the failure of communistic methods in the present time. There have been several such communities; and the result has always been failure. The Oneida community of New York is one whose failure has long been recognised. Another, the Harmony Society of Pennsylvania, soon disappointed the hopes of its founders, for so much discord prevailed that it divided. The branch known as Economites located near Pittsburg, Pa., flourished for a while, after a fashion, but is now quite withered; and possession of its property is now being disputed in the Society and in the courts of law.

Other communistic societies are starting now, which will be far less successful than these because the times are different; independence is greater, respect and reverence are less, majorities will rule, and without superhuman leaders are sure to fail. Wise worldly leaders are looking out for themselves, while wise Christians are busy in other channels—obeying the Lord’s command, “Go thou and preach the Gospel.”

(3) The Bible does not teach Communism, but does teach loving, considerate Individualism, except in the sense of family communism—each family acting as a unit, of which the father is the head and the wife with him, his fellow- heir of the grace of life, his partner in every joy and benefit as well as in every adversity and sorrow.

True, God permitted a communistic arrangement in the primitive Church, referred to in this article; but this may have been for the purpose of illustrating to us the unwisdom of the method; and lest some, thinking of the scheme now, should conclude that the apostles did not command and organise communities, because they lacked the wisdom to devise and carry out such methods; for not a word can be quoted from our Lord or the apostles advocating the communistic principles; but much can be quoted to the contrary.

True, the Apostle Peter (and probably other apostles) knew of, and co-operated in, that first communistic arrangement, even if he did not teach the system. It has been inferred, too, that the death of Ananias and Sapphira was an indication that the giving of all the goods of the believers was compulsory; but not so: their sin was that of lying, as Peter declared in reviewing the case. While they had the land there was no harm in keeping it if they got it honestly; and even after they had sold it no harm was done: the wrong was in misrepresenting that the sum of money turned in was their all, when it was not their all. They were attempting to cheat others by getting a share of their ails without giving their own all.

As a matter of fact, the Christian Community at Jerusalem was a failure. “There arose a murmuring”—“because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration.” Although under the Apostolic inspection the Church was pure, free from “tares,” and all had the treasure of the new spirit or “mind of Christ,” yet evidently that treasure was only in warped and twisted earthen vessels which could not get along well together.

The apostles soon found that the management of the community would greatly interfere with their real work—the preaching of the gospel. So they abandoned those things to others. The Apostle Paul and others travelled from city to city preaching Christ and Him crucified; but, so far as the record shows, they never mentioned communism and never organised a community; and yet St. Paul declares, “I have not shunned to declare unto you the whole counsel of God.” This proves that Communism is no part of the gospel, nor of the counsel of God for this age.

On the contrary, the Apostle Paul exhorted and instructed the Church to do things which it would be wholly impossible to do as members of a communistic society—to each “provide for his own”; to “lay by on the first day of the week” money for the Lord’s service, according as the Lord had prospered them; that servants should obey their masters, rendering the service with a double good will if the master were also a brother in Christ; and how masters should treat their servants, as those who must themselves give an account to the great Master, Christ. —1 Tim. 5:8; 6:1; 1 Cor. 16:2; Eph. 6:5-9.

Our Lord Jesus not only did not establish a Community while He lived, but He never taught that such should be established. On the contrary, in His parables He taught,—that all have not the same number of pounds or talents given them, but each is a steward and should individually (not collectively, as a commune) manage his own affairs. and render his own account. (Matt. 25:14-28; Luke 19:12-24. See also James 4:13, 15.) When dying, our Lord commended His mother to the care of His disciple John, and the record of John (19:27) is, “And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home.” John, therefore, had a home, so had Martha, Mary and Lazarus. Had our Lord formed a Community, He would doubtless have commended His mother to it instead of to John.

Moreover, the forming of a Commune of believers is opposed to the purpose and methods of the Gospel age. The object of this age is to witness Christ to the world, and thus to “take out a people for His name”; and to this end each believer is exhorted to be a burning and a shining light before men—the world in general—and not before and to each other merely. Hence, after permitting the first Christian Community to be established, to show that the failure to establish Communities generally was not an oversight, the Lord broke it up, and scattered the believers everywhere, to preach the gospel to every creature. We read,—“And at that time there was a great persecution against the Church which was at Jerusalem; and they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the apostles,” and they went everywhere preaching the gospel.—Acts 8:1, 4; 11:19.

It is still the work of God’s people to shine as lights in the midst of the world, and not to shut themselves up in convents and cloisters or as communities. The promises of Paradise will not be realised by joining such communities. The desire to join such “confederacies” is but a part of the general spirit of our day, against which we are forewarned. (Isa. 8:12.) “Trust in the Lord, and wait patiently for him.” “Watch ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things, and to stand before the Son of Man.” —Luke 21:36.

The Ten Virgins.

Matthew 25:1-13.

“Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour when the SON of Man cometh.”

It was probably on the last Sunday of His earthly career that our Lord foretold the destruction of Jerusalem, the scattering of His followers, a long period of wars and rumours of wars, etc., and finally His second coming, as recorded in Matthew, chapter 25. This information was most appropriate to the Apostles at that time, for their expectations had run in a different direction. They had thought of the Lord being exalted as the Messiah, and that Jerusalem would be the seat of His empire: It was given in answer to their questions—“When shall these things be”, and “What shall be the sign of Thy presence.”* Jesus, in His great prophecy of Matt. 24, had explained these matters, and indicated that His second coming would be in strenuous times, when, if it were possible, the very elect would be deceived—in which, as it was in the days of Noah, so it would then be in the days of the Son of Man, that the people would be eating and drinking, planting and building, marrying and giving in marriage, and be unaware of the coming trouble with which the present Age would pass away preparatory to the beginning of the new Age—His kingdom. To impress the matter upon their minds, He gave the parable of the Ten Virgins—five were wise and five were foolish. The parable then clearly relates to the end of the Gospel Age, as is indicated by its opening statement: “Then shall the Kingdom of Heaven be likened unto ten virgins who took their lamps and went forth to meet the Bridegroom.” It has not been applicable all the way down the Age, but to the particular time when the Bridegroom should come.

Throughout the Scriptures the Church is represented as a Bride in preparation for her marriage. The Bridegroom is uniformly the Lord Jesus, to whom belongs the entire inheritance, and the opportunity granted to the Lord’s followers in the present time is that of becoming His Bride and joint heirs (Rom. 8:17). They have no status or relationship to the King eternal except as they obtain it by union with the King’s Son. The type of this in the Old Testament is a very beautiful one; Abraham typified the Heavenly Father, very rich; Isaac typified our Lord Jesus, the seed of promise, the heir of all; Abraham’s servant sent to call a wife for Isaac beautifully typified the holy spirit, which during this Gospel Age has been selecting the Church of which the Apostle says: “I have espoused you as a chaste virgin unto one husband, which is Christ” (2 Cor. 11:2).

Throughout this Age the Church, under the guidance and protection of the holy spirit, has been approaching the Father’s house of many mansions, the heavenly home promised. If we rightly understand the matter, we are now approaching the end of the journey. Soon the Bride, like Rebecca, will alight from the camel and pass under the veil and will be received by the heavenly Bridegroom. It is in harmony with this thought that the Apostle assures us that the Church will share in the covenant made with Abraham—“If ye be Christ’s, then are ye Abraham’s seed and heirs according to the promise” (Gal. 3:16, 29) .

Several of our Lord’s parables related to this marriage of the King’s Son, and His last message to the Church tells us of how ultimately the Bride, the Lamb’s wife, shall shine forth, resplendent in the kingdom. She is symbolised by the New Jerusalem. The announcement of Rev. 19:7-9 reads: “Let us be glad and rejoice and give honour to Him; for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and His wife hath made herself ready. . . . Blessed are they which are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb.”

John the Baptist, as a prophet, referred to this relationship between Christ and the Church, saying, “He that hath the Bride is the Bridegroom; but the friend of the Bridegroom, when he heareth His voice rejoiceth greatly. This my joy is fulfilled.” John realised that he was not a member of the Bride class. He recognised Jesus as the Bridegroom, and was glad to be honoured of God as the servant of the Bridegroom to give the introduction. Our Lord referred to John, saying that there had been none greater. John will surely occupy an honourable position in the future, yet it is stated that “the least (in the Bride company) in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he,” for these are to be joint-heirs in the spiritual kingdom, partakers of the glory, honour, immortality, while John and the faithful of past ages will be upon the earthly plane as representatives and princes of the kingdom among men (Matt. 11:11; Heb. 11:39, 40; Psalms 45:16) .

Two Classes Of Virgins.

Having the parable located before our minds as relating to the Second Advent, we note the fact that it refers to virgins—pure ones. The parable does not refer to the world at all. Both the wise and the foolish virgins represent Christians—the kingdom of heaven class—consecrated believers, believers who have heard the Gospel of the kingdom, who are expecting the King at His second advent, and who have lamps, and who get from their lamps light, information, and instruction.

These two classes of pure ones, separate from the world, informed respecting the Bridegroom’s coming and kingdom, represent the two classes of the consecrated the “Little Flock” and the “Great Company,” the “more than conquerors” and those who come “through great tribulation and ultimately become conquerors” (Rom. 8:37; Rev. 7:14) . These are the same two classes that are represented in the Tabernacle type by the two goats, one of which became the Lord’s goat for sacrifice, and the other the scapegoat, only that in the Tabernacle type the goats represent the two classes all the way down through the Gospel Age, while the two classes in the parable under consideration represent the Church only at the end of the Age.

Evidently the Lord's object in giving the parable was twofold; first to give a salutary lesson to the Apostles and the entire Church of the Gospel Age on the necessity for alertness, watching and praying, anticipating and preparing for the coming King and His kingdom that they might be constantly ready for a share therein. Second, the parable was specially intended for us living in this time to let us see that it would not be sufficient to be hoping and praying for the kingdom and in a general way expecting the Bridegroom, but that we must be so alert and so full of enthusiasm for the event that it would lead us to make the wisest possible preparation for it, that we might not be disappointed at the final moment.

Second Adventists In The Parable.

True to the picture, a movement took place amongst the Lord's people of all denominations in the last century which culminated in what was known as the Second Advent movement. The virgins, the pure ones amongst Christians all over the world, were aroused with the thought that the coming of the Bridegroom was near, and a general lamp trimming, and a general investigation of the Bible, especially on that subject, resulted. True to the parable, the expectation of those dear people was unfulfilled—"The Bridegroom tarried," and while He tarried they all slumbered and slept. The lamps were measurably neglected, and a general stupor fell upon this class. But by and by came the midnight announcement, "Behold the Bridegroom!" This cry has been going forth for the past seventy years, and in response to it the wise virgin class all over the world has been awakening to a fresh examination of the Divine word. Among those who hear the announcement are some who insist that it is a false alarm; they have become so drowsy, so overcharged with the cares of this life, so comfortably nestled, that although they love the Bridegroom and desire above all things to be ready to receive Him, they are unprepared, refuse to investigate, and merely murmur to themselves, "Yes, we love the Bridegroom; we will surely be ready to receive Him, we have long been waiting for Him, but not yet, not yet. Soul, take thine ease—no one knows anything about the matter; those announcing the Bridegroom are surely in error."

As time goes on more virgins awaken, and as they do so the investigation begins, the trimming of their lamps. Then it is discovered that some who thought they were ready to enter into the joys of their Lord find that they are deficient in the all-important oil, which represents the holy spirit, and from which alone comes their enlightenment. The delay of the Bridegroom thus serves as a test to the virgins who are invited to go in with Him to the marriage. The delay serves to prove who are wise and who are foolish.

A certain amount of oil, a certain amount of consecration and of the holy spirit was necessary to be counted in with the virgins at any stage; but a larger measure is necessary now in the actual presence of the Bridegroom—more truth, more light is now due and must be possessed by those who would go into the wedding.

The virgins merely represent the Lord's people in general, so that those now living had nothing to do with the movement of the last century. However, the general spirit must be the same, love for the Bridegroom, expectancy of His presence and a desire above all things to be prepared to enter in with Him. Who, then, may we ask, has a sufficiency of oil, of light, of the holy spirit, from which this illumination proceeds to be able to be in the procession of virgins who will go in with the Bridegroom? This is an important question to every Christian. How necessary that we see to it that we have our lamps trimmed and burning and also a good supply of oil, the holy spirit, in our vessels—our hearts. If we have, there will be the fruit to be seen—meekness, patience, gentleness, long suffering, brotherly kindness and love. Depend upon it, that unless we have a good supply of God's holy spirit thus evidenced our lamps will go out.

"Give Us Of Your Oil."

To illustrate this holy spirit, this spirit of consecration which all of the wise virgins must have in full measure in order to maintain their light and their place in the Bridegroom's favour, and to gain an entrance into the marriage, the Lord, in the parable, represents the foolish virgins as asking the wise ones for some of their oil, and then shows the impossibility of its being thus obtained from one another.

The fruits and graces of the holy spirit cannot be obtained by the asking—they must be bought in the market of experience; they are of gradual growth, and cost painstaking care of words and thoughts and doings. It is because these fruits of the spirit are so difficult of attainment and cost such a price of self-sacrifice of worldly interests that they are valuable in the Lord's sight. None can get too much of this holy spirit, none can secure an over-supply for his own use so that he might supply others from his abundance.

The Bridegroom has in advance made abundant provision by which all who are invited may be properly equipped, not only with robes and lamps, but also with oil. If any are careless in the procurement of the oil, they thus indicate their unfitness to enter in with the Bridegroom. This seems to be the very essence of the teaching of the parable.

Those who hope to enter the kingdom and share its glories must make proper preparation in advance. If they wait until the moment for the door to close, however willing they may be, however anxious, they will not be prepared. The preparation requires time, patience and care.

We meet continually those who give evidence of being true Christians, “virgins,” pure of heart, of intention, who are considerably interested in the Heavenly Bridegroom and in the gathering at the marriage supper, but who have little light upon these interesting subjects. They sometimes say to us, “Give us of your light; tell us how you know these things, why you feel so sure about them; while others are doubtless asleep, we are awake enough, but our lamps give no light.” We answer that it is not possible to give them faith in these things by proxy, that there is only one way to obtain the light, and that is by patient, diligent study of God’s Word, under the guidance of His holy spirit.

Patient perseverance in well-doing, in Scriptural study in calculating the fruits of God’s spirit, are necessary in order to have this oil in proper proportion. Many express regret, for they are so overcharged with the cares of this life, the deceitfulness of riches or family pride, or what not, that they have not the time to give to their spiritual development. We wish that they could enjoy with us the blessings of a good supply of oil and the clear light of our lamps as they are now shining. We can only tell them how and where the oil may be obtained. We must go on with our personal preparation and hasten to hold up our lights in salutation of the Bridegroom, with expressions of joy in respect of His presence and the prospect of entering with Him into the marriage.

And The Door Was Shut.

Soon it would seem that the First Resurrection --will be completed, the last member will be changed. Then the door will be shut, and no more will be permitted to enter. Thank God that this does not indicate such a dreadful condition as many Christian people have thought. It does not mean the close of the door of hope, and that all outside, the foolish virgins as well as the world, will go down to hopeless despair. It does mean, however, the close of the great and grand opportunity of the Gospel Age. It signifies the completion of the kingdom class—the Bride class, the close of the narrow way, to glory, honour and immortality and joint-heirship with Christ. The foolish virgins go and buy the precious oil and get their lamps trimmed and burning, but too late for the marriage, too late to be of the Bride —the Lamb’s wife. In the parable it is represented that when they knock the Bridegroom will say, “I do not recognise you as being members in my Bride class; you must not come in.” Instead of entering into the joys of the Lord, they will be permitted, for a time at least, to have their portion in the great time of trouble which will then prevail throughout the world; weeping and gnashing of teeth, sorrow, disappointment, chagrin, will be the portion not only of the foolish virgins, but of all the families of the earth in that time. We are glad to know that the great day of trouble will prepare the world of mankind for the glorious conditions of the kingdom which will then shortly be ushered in. “The Sun of Righteousness will arise with healing in its beams,” and many people shall go and say, “Come, let us go up to the mountain of the Lord’s house; He will teach us of His ways, and we will walk in His paths. For the law shall go forth from Mount Zion (the glorified kingdom, the heavenly kingdom) , and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem (from the earthly representatives of the heavenly kingdom)” (Mal. 4:2; Isa. 2:3) .

How inconsistent the thought that the folly of these virgins should not only exclude them from the kingdom blessings, but that even after they get the oil of the holy spirit later on they should be consigned to an eternity of torture or loss! How unreasonable, how inconsistent! On the contrary, how much in harmony with the Divine character and programme is this parable, as we have endeavoured to picture its fulfilment. We can sympathise with the foolish virgins, while we cannot commend them. We can look forward to the time when they as the “great company” of Revelation 7 shall wash their robes and make them white in the blood of the Lamb, and be ushered into the presence of the Lord and the Bride, and become as represented in Psalm 45—the virgins, the Bride’s companions and colabourers in the kingdom work—servants before the throne. They might have been, had they been more filled with love and zeal, members of the Bride class, in the throne.

“Neither The Day Nor The Hour.”

Our Lord concludes the parable with the words, “Watch, therefore, for ye know not the day nor the hour.” The Revised Version omits from verse 13 the words, “wherein the Son of Man cometh” because these are not found in any of the old Greek MSS. The thought, however, is practically the same—watch, for ye know neither the day nor the hour in which this parable will be fulfilled. The watching, no doubt, has been beneficial to the Lord’s people all through the Gospel Age, and is still more profitable to the wise virgin class of the present day, because it explained to these their circumstances, conditions, etc. All of the wise virgin class should be in the attitude commanded in this parable; they should have a knowledge of the fact that the Bridegroom is coming; they should have lamps and a full supply of oil. Those living in this ready condition should be neither alarmed nor surprised at the message when they hear it, as it is now going forth, “Behold the Bridegroom is present.” We are living in the “parousia” (presence) of the Son of Man—the wise virgins are already falling into line in the procession and entering into the marriage. The full number will soon be complete and the door will be shut. All in this watching attitude of heart, with the full measure of the spirit of the Lord in their hearts, will be quickly attracted by the intimation that the Bridegroom is present. Those trimming their lamps, examining the Scriptures, will quickly discern the truthfulness of the announcement and speedily prepare and take their places with the wise virgins. The announcement, the truth upon this subject is indeed a testing, proving which of the professed virgins of the Lord have the oil in their vessels—the right spirit of humility, patience, love, devotion, interest in the things of the Bridegroom. Such only will be permitted to enter.

In view of this it is evident that our work in the present time is not only to proclaim the Bridegroom's presence, but to assist those who have the oil in their vessels, to trim their lamps—to arouse those who are drowsy or still asleep and who need to have the announcement, "Behold the Bridegroom," brought kindly and patiently to their attention, that they may secure the oil and have their lamps trimmed and burning ere it be too late.

Let us praise God for the blessings and mercies already ours and go on faithfully rejoicing in the light of our lamps and in the anticipation of the glorious nuptial feast and the later glorious work with the Bridegroom of blessing all the families of the earth. He that hath this knowledge will by it be separated more and more from the world and its spirit, and be gradually more and more transformed from glory to glory into the likeness of the Bridegroom.

Our lamps are trimmed and burning,
Our robes are white and clean,
We've tarried for the Bridegroom,
And now we'll enter in.

We know we've nothing worthy
That we can call our own
The light, the oil, the robes we wear
Are all from Him alone.

Brethren Finish the Pilgrim Way.

Word was received some weeks ago of the passing of Sister Hare, of Mona Vale, New South Wales. Our dear Sister had appreciated the truth for many years now, and rejoiced in it very much; she had not much personal fellowship with the brethren, and in recent times had been unwell, being confined to her home. The Brother sending the information writes:—"Our dear Sister Hare died on Monday, 22nd August. In a few words at the graveside (agreed to by the minister) I reminded the listeners what a humble Christian Sister Hare had been, how earnestly she had always sought the Truth, how she was our Sister in Christ, for whom we had prayed and whom we would always keep present in our minds until we would see her again in glory. We felt, I said, that there was a record written in heaven in her favour." The sudden passing of Sister Boyd of Geelong, Victoria, on the night of August 26th came as a shock to the Geelong friends and others who knew her. For over three years our Sister had attended the Class in Geelong regularly, having been associated some years previously with church work as a visiting Sister in the Geelong area. It was a pleasure to note how the clearer understanding of the truths of the Bible were appreciated to some good extent by Sister Boyd, in the closing years of her earthly way. While she is much missed at the Bible Class in Geelong, we are glad to know that the Lord knows those who are His, and will grant the reward accordingly.

Reports received recently give information of the passing of two of our New Zealand brethren, in the persons of Brother Moncur and Brother Straw, both of the South Island.

Brother Moncur, who finished the earthly way on July 16th, lived in isolation, though in past years had close fellowship with our late Brother Nairn of Christchurch, whenever possible. The daughter of our late dear Brother Nairn, writing to a Brother in Australia, states:—"I like to think that now they are together again and their sufferings all over. . . . He (Brother Moncur) was one in a hundred and he and father were like Brothers in every sense."

It was always a pleasure to receive correspondence here in Melbourne from Brother Straw. Some years ago he paid us a visit on his way to New Zealand and it was good indeed to meet one who loved the Lord and His truth so fully. The following is received respecting our late Brother:--"Our dear Brother Straw passed away suddenly on August 17th. He had not been well for some time with heart trouble. . . . I shall miss our dear Brother, for we were the only ones in Timaru in the truth, and used to have a study together, but while we mourn for those who have gone from us, we have the comfort and rejoicing to know they are forever with the Lord."

Correspondence.

Dear Christians—Your recent letter was again most helpful, and the booklets and papers which came last week were exceedingly welcome and interesting, especially, of course, the “Everlasting Gospel.”

I find delight and joy in reading everything you have sent me, and it is a rich experience to read such simple, sweet and beautiful words which tell of such simple, sweet and beautiful truths. Each of your booklets seems like a piece of pure-sounding, clear music, and the lovely choice of words used to express God’s true teachings, as interpreted by you (the Berean Bible Students) appeals to me very much.

I am enclosing a postal note for £ 1, as a donation towards your good work, and hope to be able to send you some further small contributions, later on.

Re-reading some of your booklets, I noticed that there are several free pamphlets, etc., which I should very much like to read, but which I did not mention when writing to you last month. If these are still available, I would appreciate them—”God’s Hand in the Affairs of Men,” “The End of the World,” “God’s Remedy,” “God’s Restitution Project,” “The Father, Son and Holy Spirit,” “Divine Intervention Near,” and “Distress of Nations.”

Also, do you stock any of the free “Kingdom Cards” ? If so, I would welcome some to distribute. Thanking you once more; I remain.

Kingdom Cards are gladly supplied free to all able to distribute. These are especially good for use where the Radio Cards would not be appropriate.—B.B. Institute.)

Dear Frank and Ernest—Please accept thanks for the book “Tabernacle Shadows.” I am glad to have all the information it contains, which is all to the glory of our God and our Lord Jesus

I am writing tonight for a friend who heard part of your broadcast on Sunday, September 4th, and who asked me to write for a copy of it. While writing for her I am also enclosing P/N for 2 / -, which is very little, but helps in the postage. I pass on the “P.P.” and it is passed on again, enriching the hearts of people who know their God, and so the good seed is sown—broadcast.

Thank you too for your letter the family of God sure know each other, and thank you for your good wishes. Yours very sincerely.

P.S.—The article on “Catholicism-Communism” will clear the minds of many as to what to do about the R.C. Both are evil, but I believe the R.C. with its everlasting emphasis on hell is the most disastrous, to children especially.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—Enclosed please find Postal Notes to the value of 1 2, being a small donation towards the work, through which we are continuing to receive help and encouragement.

Thanking you in anticipation, and for the “Peoples Paper” and other literature received. Yours in Him.

Dear Christian Friends—We are regular listeners to your message each Sunday and invite others to listen-in. Your message given today, 18th September: we would like copy of same, and if a couple to spare we would love to pass them on.

Have you any good answer we could give to a 7th Day Adventist that calls on us and of course accuses us of not keeping the 7th day as the sabbath ? . . . The last time here she asked for a Bible and opened to Epistle to John (1 John 2:3, 4), much as to say we are supposed to keep all commandments, and if not the 4th, are “liars and truth not in him.” We say we keep the Lord’s Day, first day of week, Sunday, when our Lord rose triumphant from the grave; we understand all commandments except the 4th are in New Testament. A short note on this from you would be appreciated.

With God’s blessing on your valuable session each Sunday. Your sincere Christian Friends.

(It is very misleading to conclude that wherever our Lord or the Apostles mention the word “commandments” in the New Testament that it refers to the commandments of the Law given by God to Moses for Israel. There is not one Scripture in the New Testament exhorting the followers • of Christ to keep the Jewish Sabbath rather, the consecrated Christian is to keep every day unto the Lord. Much of St. Paul’s Epistle to the Galatians was written to combat the wrong idea of the necessity to keep the Law Covenant. In contrast with the spiritual truths of the Gospel, Paul describes the works of the Law as “beggarly elements,” and then goes on to say—“Ye observe days (Jewish sabbaths)

, and months, and times, and years. I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain.” (Gal. 4:9-11.)

See also the Apostle’s comparison between the servant class under the Law, and the class of sons under Christ in Heb. 3:1-6.

Dead Unto Sin.

“FOR in that He died, He died unto sin once; hut in that He liveth, He liveth unto God. Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to he dead indeed unto sin, hut alive unto God through Jesus Christ OUR Lord.”—Rom. 6:10, H.

SIN is the root of all the trouble through which humanity has passed during its entire downward course from the days of Eden until now. Sin, in brief, is disobedience to the law of God, the Creator, who, by virtue of being the Lifegiver, has a just right to demand obedience. It was through one man's disobedience that sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and death has passed upon all because all have sinned. (Rom. 5:12.) “But,” explains the Apostle, “God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.” (Rom. 5:8.) And so, in the divine economy it works out that while “the wages of sin is death,” yet there is hope of escape from death because “the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord.”—Rom. 6:23.

Marvellous gift, indeed, is this “gift of God” through which eternal life is obtained. It is a gift that was prompted by love, which should be the motive behind every gift. John tells us that “God so loved . . . that He gave” this wondrous gift of His Son, and Paul explains that the Father “commendeth His love to us” in providing that while we were yet sinners His Son should die for us. And this gift was all sufficient to effect a release from sin and death. In order, however, to be thus effective, it must be accepted. It is not the Father's intention to force this gift of His love upon anyone. It is only to “whosoever believeth in Him (Jesus)” that the assurance is given that they shall “not perish, but have everlasting life.”—John 3:16.

Now just as belief in, and acceptance of, this unspeakable gift of God is essential in order to participate in the lifegiving blessings accruing therefrom, so it seemingly should follow that those who do from the heart believe, and with their lips make confession of their belief, would not need to die. The fact and philosophy of this is very simple—“The wages of sin is death,” and we are witnesses of the very literal manner in which the disobedient world of mankind have been receiving their wages—all are going down into the tomb. But since Jesus came into the world to die for sinners, thousands upon thousands have sincerely believed on Him, yet not a single one of these has escaped going down into the tomb. How, then, it is true, that the “gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord”? —Rom. 6:23.

Those who hold the view that the death of Jesus was for the purpose of opening up a way for believers to go to heaven when they die, thus escaping the otherwise sure fate of an eternity of torture in hell, are not, of course, faced with any particular problem along this line. To them, death as we know it, is the inevitable gateway to heaven; and consequently, they never think of the ransoming work of Jesus as affecting, one way or another, the present material life of human beings. From their standpoint, it is the “immortal soul” which they suppose is possessed by every human being, that is involved in the Christian philosophy of life and death. True, to have their philosophy work out right, even then, it is necessary to think of death as meaning separation from God in a place of punishment, and life as dwelling with God in a place of happiness.

But to those who have learned that the Bible does not teach the inherent immortality of the soul theory, and who know that death, which is the wages of sin, is the absence of life; and that ever since Jesus died to give us life, believers, as well as unbelievers, have continued to die, Paul's statement of Romans 6:23—“The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord”—calls for an explanation. If the gift of God was, as the Scriptures so clearly teach, for the purpose of setting aside the sentence of death that came upon the world of mankind through disobedience of Adam, then why should not believers in that gift be released from the necessity of dying?

“Dead Unto Sin.”

The Scriptural answer to this question is contained in the words of our text—“Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin.” There is a vast difference between these words and those of Romans 5:12, where we are told that sin entered into the world and “death by sin.” The whole world of mankind is dying “by sin”; that is, they are paying the wages of sin, which is death. There is nothing “reckoned” about this. It is all very real, very literal — every graveyard testifies grimly to the full measure with which the wages of sin are meted out. No, non-believers do not need to reckon themselves as dying, they are dying.

But Paul’s words to the consecrated believers speak of a death that is reckoned. What does he mean? The key to the apostle’s meaning is in the word “likewise”—“likewise, reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin.” To what does the “likewise” apply? This he has just told us; that is, he has explained that you are also dying unto sin. The thought clearly is that just as Jesus actually “died unto sin” we are to “reckon” that we also “die unto sin”; that is we are to consider that we die the same kind of a death that Jesus died.

This, evidently, is the Apostle’s explanation of what he means earlier in the chapter where he speaks of our being “planted together in the likeness of His death,” and of being “baptized into His death.” This, in other words, is the “likeness” of His death, namely, that Jesus died “unto sin,” so are we to “reckon” ourselves as dying “unto sin.”

The question then arises, How did Jesus die “unto sin”? He could not die unto sin in Himself, because He was “holy, harmless, and separate from sinners.” (Heb. 7:25.) Jesus’ death “unto sin” therefore, must have been, and was, a death calculated to affect the result of sin in the lives of others. Indeed, this is exactly what the Apostle explains, saying, that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us. He likewise died for the whole world of sinners, that they might have an opportunity of being made free from sin and its wages, and live.

Sacrificial Death.

Jesus’ death, therefore, was a sacrificial death. He did not die because He Himself was a sinner and condemned to die. Rather, He died voluntarily, that others who were condemned to die, might live. He took upon Himself the wages of sin that belonged to others. It was thus that Jesus died “unto sin.” Because the life Jesus thus sacrificially offered up on behalf of others was a perfect life, hence an uncondemned life, it became the “propitiation (satisfaction) for our sins, and not for ours only, but for the sins of the whole world.”—1 John 2:2.

Yes, the sacrifice of Jesus was full satisfaction for our sins, and for the sins of the whole world; yet, at the same time, even though we accept this gift, we apparently continue to die even as when we were yet sinners. The reason? Paul explains it. “Likewise, reckon ye yourselves also to be dead indeed into sin.” Yes, “likewise” — just like Jesus — we now are to die a sacrificial death, we are to be “planted together in the likeness of His death.”

Having accepted the provision of life through Christ, there is no more legal necessity that we should die; but like Jesus, we offer ourselves for death, to be “dead unto sin” on behalf of others.

This, in a word, explains why not a single consecrated believer since Pentecost has ever enjoyed the restitution blessings purchased by the death of Jesus. The “times of restitution” belong to the Millennial age, and the Gospel age has been an age of sacrifice, an age during which consecrated believers in Christ have been participating in sacrificial death with Him, and thus sharing with Him in the great offering by which the blessings of health and life will be dispensed to the dying world of mankind when the due time comes.

More Needed Than Propitiation.

When the apostle thus explains that the death of consecrated believers is an offering “unto sin” he does not wish us to understand that by our death we, in any way, assist in the payment of the penalty for sin. The Scriptures make it very clear that Jesus alone did this. Yes, He is the “propitiation” or satisfactory payment, as we have seen, not only for our sins, but also for the sins of the whole world. This is a fundamental teaching of the Scriptures which must be maintained as the basis of a proper understanding of the manner in which we share in the sacrificial work of Christ.

But in the divine programme whereby a sin-cursed and dying world is finally to be reconciled to God, it is seen that in order for full reconciliation to be effected something more than propitiation for sin is required. If we think of the ransom as the purchase price, then there remains, as it were, the delivery of the goods, which, in this case, would include all that is implied in the actual restoration to perfect life of the billions who have died since the days of Eden. In the divine programme, the church takes part in this great work of reconciliation and restoration, upon the condition of voluntarily dying as Jesus died—a sacrificial death.

The fact that more is needed for the reconciliation of the world than propitiation for sin is apparent by the fact that had the plan of God ceased to operate at the moment Jesus died, not a single one of Adam's children would have ever received life through His death. The fact that not one throughout the centuries that have followed His death has received restitution blessings is evidence that a further necessary preparatory work is still going on.

A simple illustration might be that of a patient afflicted with a malignant growth or tumor, such as cancer. Nothing will save the patient's life but the removal of the cancer; and, in the hospital where the sufferer lies, there is only one person who is able to remove the cancer, and that is the specialist and surgeon whose skill is now depended upon to save this patient's life. Now the patient cannot live unless the cause of death is removed; and there is only one, the surgeon, who can remove the cause of death. But, if nothing more were done for the patient than to remove the cancer, death still would claim its victim.

Imagine, if you can, a surgeon removing a cancer from a chloroformed and half dead patient, and then walking out of the operating room, and bidding his assistants to walk out with him, expecting that, with nothing further being done, there will be a glorious recovery of health. This, of course, is unthinkable. The assistant surgeons, nurses, cooks, housekeepers, and all others who have to do with the management and care of the hospital, have a share in helping to restore the patient to health; but not a single one of them, nor all of them together, could have saved the patient's life until the cause of death had been removed. Only the surgeon could do that. But with the cancer removed the co-operative work of the hospital staff begins. Under the supervision of the surgeon, the patient is carefully removed from the operating room to a comfortable bed; watched over, and cared for, during the long period of convalescence; and if all goes well, a full recovery is the final result.

The Cancer of Sin.

It is sin that has dealt a death blow to humanity, because God, in His wisdom and justice, has decreed that no one who disobeys His law can continue to live. Our illustration does not, of course, fit in every detail, but we can properly think of Jesus as the great Surgeon who, alone, had the ability to render sin powerless as a death-dealing agency to those who accept Him as their Redeemer. He, alone, is the propitiation for sin. He pays the penalty for sin, hence divine justice does not demand the death penalty of those who accept this provision. But the full restoration of mankind to perfection and everlasting life requires more than the satisfaction of the demands of justice accomplished by the ransom. The cancer, shall we say, is removed, but the patient is still prostrate and helpless, and needs to be nursed back to health.

It is in this further work of removing the effects of sin, and to thereby restore the willing and obedient of mankind to life, that the church is invited to share. It is all a part of the work of reconciliation, a sharing in the divine plan to remove sin and its result—death—from the earth. For this reason the sacrificial work of the church is Scripturally styled a dying “unto sin”—a sin-offering. It is not an offering to propitiate for sin, but an offering which is related to the work of removing the sin and its results for which propitiation has already been made by the blood of Christ.

It is in this sense that the church is said to be “planted together in the likeness of His death.” It is the manner of dying that is the same, not the result of the dying. Both die sacrificially, “unto sin.” The death of Jesus provides payment of the penalty of sin, the death of the church has to do with the great work of eliminating the results of sin, hence the result of the church's sacrificial death is dependent upon the previous result of the sacrificial death of Jesus; and related to it as effect to cause.

Workers Together With Christ.

Another apostolic manner of expressing this same vital truth pertaining to the sacrificial work of the Christ is that of 2 Corinthians 5:18-21, and 6:1. We quote: “And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation; to wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation. Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God. For He hath made Him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we may be made the righteousness of God in Him. We then, as workers together with Him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain.”

How plainly the Apostle thus sets forth the manner in which the church shares in the great work of reconciling a lost world! It is all of God he explains. That is, it is the divine plan or method made possible by Him through the gift of His own dear Son. This gift, first of all, reconciles us to Himself, and then He makes us ministers of reconciliation. The philosophy of this, Paul explains, is that God was in Christ, that is, working through Him, reconciling the world to Himself—that is the great objective of the whole plan. The reason that it is a workable arrangement is because the ransomed believers do not have their trespasses imputed unto them. As long as sin is imputed, death must continue.

But the ransom sets aside the just condemnation for sin in order to give the dying one a chance to recover.

One of the first things necessary beyond the ransom itself, is a knowledge of the ransom. This truth is spoken of by Paul as the “word of reconciliation.” Equipped with the “word of reconciliation” we become ambassadors of Christ. The author of Scripture Studies explained that the church’s part in the sacrificial work of Christ has to do with the manner in which the merit of the ransom is made available for the blessing of the world; and that is exactly what the Apostle is telling us in this 5th chapter of 2nd Corinthians.

God is working through Christ to reconcile the world, and has made us the ambassadors of Christ to convey to the world the vital information concerning the basis upon which reconciliation to God is possible—the “word of reconciliation” which, through the church, will be “testified to all in due time.” Now this, the Apostle explains, means that we are “workers together with Him (Christ)” in the great programme whereby sin is destroyed and sinners restored to harmony with God and to life everlasting. No wonder the Apostle admonishes us not to receive this “grace of God in vain.” What grace it is, indeed! To think that members of the fallen race, sinners even as all the others, could be laid hold upon by God, justified through the blood of Christ, and used together with that sinless One in the recovery of our fellow men.

Sacrifice Required.

The actual work of reconciling the world as a whole, and of restoring mankind to health and life, will be during the thousand years of Christ’s reign, the Millennium; but in order for the church to live and reign with Christ and share in that great future work, she must now suffer and die with Him. The present result of the sacrifice and suffering of each consecrated believer is the building up of the church itself in preparation for the great future work of dispensing blessings to the world, hence the Apostle speaks of “filling up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ . . . for His body’s sake, which is the church.”—Col. 1:27.

It should be remembered, however, that the church is being prepared to administer blessings to the world of mankind, hence, whatever sacrifices are now being made on behalf of the church, are being made, also, for the world. We are commanded to lay down our lives for the brethren, and when we obey this command, we are also laying down our lives for the world because the brethren are being trained to serve the world. Our sacrificial death with Christ is Scripturally referred to as a “baptism” into His death, and Paul declares that this baptism is on behalf of the dead world.—1 Cor. 15:29.

The Church Sacrifices.

To reiterate a thought already presented, those who accept the sacrificial work of Christ, should, from the standpoint of mere justice, have no further occasion for suffering and death. Receiving the gift of God, they should live, and not die. We have seen, however, that the time for such a programme has not yet come, and that God is now merely preparing the channel through which the life-giving blessings purchased by Jesus will flow out to the dying world during the next age. It is for this reason, then, that the only condition upon which any can now receive the benefit of Jesus’ sacrifice is that they, in turn, die with Him, their sacrifice being made “acceptable” through the merit of His atoning work. Thus the Apostle admonishes, “I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.”—Rom. 12:1.

Anyone who is accustomed to thinking of the Christian life merely in terms of what we receive from Him, will be surprised to note how much the Scriptures say about our sacrifice. In Philippians 2:17, the Apostle speaks of being “offered upon the sacrifice and service of your faith”; that is, the sacrifice necessary to build up the body members in the most holy faith. Philippian brethren had made sacrifices to help Paul, and this he refers to as an “odour of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well-pleasing to God.” (Phil. 4:18.) The “odour of a sweet smell” is an illusion to the incense offering on the golden altar in the holy of the tabernacle. In Ephesians 5:2, Paul uses a similar expression concerning the sacrifice of Christ. Thus does the Apostle identify the sacrifice of the church with that of Christ as being represented in the sacrificial services of the typical tabernacle.

In 1 Peter 2:5, the Apostle explains that the church is indeed a priesthood of God, constituted such for the very purpose of offering sacrifice. The word “spiritual” in this text is not found in some of the older manuscripts, and is probably not a part of the original text. If it is authentic it would merely mean that Peter is contrasting the sacrifice of animals during the Jewish age, with the church’s present sacrifice of time, strength, talents, and all, in the great service of reconciliation. Such might properly be referred to as a spiritual sacrifice in contrast with the literal slaying of animals. The important lesson in the text is that the church, even as the priesthood of old, is appointed for the work of sacrifice.

Not only is the term sacrifice itself thus Scripturally applied to the present ministry of the church, but many other like-meaning expressions are also employed by the inspired writers of the Bible to convey to our minds the full significance of the Christian life. We are admonished to deny ourselves, to take up our cross, to be crucified with Christ, to suffer with Him, to die with Him, to follow in His footsteps, to be killed all the day long, to be counted as sheep for the slaughter, to go to Him without the camp, to follow the Lamb, to lay down our lives, to give rather than to receive, etc.

While none of these expressions, either directly or remotely, imply propitiation for sin by the sacrifice of the church, they all indicate that the church does offer herself in sacrifice, that she dies with Christ; and it is the great Apostle Paul himself who, in our text, declares that this offering, this death, is “unto sin,” showing that, in the economy of God,

He uses it as a part of the divine programme to destroy sin and its effect, death. In Romans 6:6, this is referred to as a destruction of the “body of sin.” According to Romans 12:1, the individual bodies of consecrated believers are not “destroyed” but offered in sacrifice, and not looked upon by God as sinful, but “holy and acceptable.”

The individual bodies of all mankind are being destroyed by sin quite apart from any association with Christ, such as being “crucified” with Him. This “body of sin,” therefore, the destruction of which depends upon our being crucified with Christ, is evidently the great mass of sin operating throughout the whole world, alienating mankind from God, causing all the suffering and death we see around us on every hand. Jesus died in order that this body of sin might be destroyed, and we are “crucified with Him,” also, in order that it might be destroyed.

Bodies Dead Because Of Sin.

We should always note the distinction between the “body of sin,” and our own individual bodies. In Romans 8:10, our individual bodies are referred to, and concerning them the apostle writes: “And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin.” What profound truth is here expressed! Actually, as we know, the bodies of all mankind are dying because of sin, being condemned to death through Adam. What then does the Apostle mean by saying, “If Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin”? Seemingly, he should have said that “if Christ be in you the body is alive,” should he not?

Indeed, the Apostle does speak of our mortal bodies being “quickened,” or made alive (Rom. 8:11); but in verse 10, he evidently is referring to the sacrifice of our bodies, even as in chapter 12:1, where he admonishes us to present our bodies a living sacrifice. First they must be presented in sacrifice—a living one contrasted with the dead ones of the Law dispensation—and then they are “quickened,” or made alive through Christ. It is this work of sacrifice, this dying “unto sin,” that makes our bodies “dead because of sin.” But it is only because of the fact that Christ is dwelling in us, and we are in Christ, as members of His body, that this acceptable sacrificial work is possible.

Shall We Continue In Sin?

The casual reader of the first 13 verses of the 6th chapter of Romans might easily conclude that Paul is merely admonishing the Christian to a resolute course of opposition to sin in his own body; and this, indeed, is the premise of the lesson. But it is in presenting the strongest argument he could think of as to why we should fight sin in our own bodies that the Apostle reveals the profound truth concerning our participation in the sacrificial work of Christ, our being “planted together in the likeness of His death.”

In the 5th chapter, the Apostle stresses the fact of the legal right to life accruing to all through the sacrificial work of Christ; that He struck off the legal demands of the law of God by which all sinners were condemned to death. Thus, he explains, life is now a gift from God, and is by grace—unearned by merit of our own. Then he follows up with the question, “What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?”—Rom. 6:1.

It is Paul’s answer to this question that is so remarkably enlightening. Apparently the strongest argument he could think of as to why we should not continue in sin, and one which he evidently felt the church at Rome would understand, was because we are dying with Christ and thus co-labouring with God in order to destroy sin; hence that it would be quite inconsistent to be sympathetic with, or in any way tolerate, that for which we are giving our very lives to destroy. “How are we that are dead to sin (dying as a sin-offering), to live any longer therein?” the Apostle enquires.

As though there might be a possibility of mistaking what he means, Paul follows up by adding, “Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into His death?” And then, to make sure that we grasp clearly just what he means by this he goes on to explain, as our text shows, that Jesus’ death was a death “unto sin,” and that “likewise” our death with Him is “unto sin”—“crucified” with Him that the “body of sin might be destroyed.”

Then comes the “therefore” of the Apostle’s argument—“Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof. Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin; but yield yourselves unto God, as those who are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God.” In a word, the Apostle is here saying that we should think of ourselves or reckon ourselves as being alive from the dead—as though through the merit of Christ we had actually been restored to life—and now are to offer ourselves in sacrifice, as “instruments of righteousness unto God.” And this is to be with the thought that our suffering, our sacrifice unto death, is in the likeness of Jesus’ death, a dying sacrificially “unto sin.” This being true, we should not in any way whatever, willingly compromise with sin in our own bodies, or let it have dominion over us. It would be inconsistent so to do.

We have learned to know something of the awfulness of sin, and its results. Our vision of God, through His Word, causes us to love Him and to love His law. Our love for Him causes us to become enemies of that which is out of harmony with Him. Sin is an enemy of God, and we have enlisted in the great cause of reconciliation, and by divine grace have become colabourers with Jesus in the work of destroying sin from off the earth. We are laying down our lives in this great cause—dying “unto sin,” and to destroy the “body of sin”; hence, we must not, as the Apostle indicates, for a single moment show any friendship for this hideous enemy. No, we must not fraternize with sin in any of its forms.

Grace, operating through Christ, strikes off the shackles of sin, and permits us to be legally free; but we must not “continue in sin that grace may abound,” because our shackles have been struck off in order that we may enlist in God’s great army of righteous servants who are being “planted together in the likeness of His death,” and thus being prepared, as His ambassadors, to finally, and everlastingly, put an end to sin and death in the whole wide world. Preaching the Gospel a Necessity.

“Woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel.”- 1 Corinthians 9:16.

WOE is a word not so often used today as formerly. It was a common word in the old English; but there is a meaning attached to it at present, we think, that was not in the original word. Nearly all who read the parable where the Lord speaks of “weeping and gnashing of teeth” seem to have the thought that it means eternal torment. Woe, when used in the Bible, means the same to some minds. So these construe our text to mean, “I shall go to eternal torment if I do not preach the Gospel.” This is because of the creeds, traditions and customs that have come down from the Dark Ages, when the people were forbidden the Bible.

We understand the Apostle to mean here: “I should be very unhappy if I could not preach the Gospel; it would be a cause of great distress to me. In view of my former course of persecution, and the Lord’s great mercy to me, it would mean a loss of His favour and blessing should I refrain from proclaiming His Message.” The context seems to bear out this thought. So it should be a great distress to those to whom the Lord has granted the illumination of His Truth, if the opportunity of preaching this glorious Gospel were taken from them.

From one standpoint, the Apostle’s words would apply only to the public ministry of the Word. From another standpoint, any one of God’s consecrated people is a minister, ordained to preach; for ordination means commission, right, authorization. This commission to preach the Gospel is mentioned by the Prophet Isaiah. (Isaiah 6 1:1-3.)

There the Church is brought to our attention through the great Head of the Church, Christ Jesus, who is represented, primarily, as the speaker. We read: “The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me; because the Lord hath anointed Me to preach good tidings unto the meek; He hath sent Me to bind up the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; to preach the acceptable year of the Lord, and the Day of Vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn; to appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of Jehovah, that He might be glorified.”

Many Ways Of Preaching The Gospel.

Here the commission of the holy spirit to Messiah was prophetically announced, long in advance. The Body members of the Messiah, who have received the same anointing through Him, have also received this commission to preach the Gospel. If the disciple of Christ properly appreciates the privilege of being a messenger of God, an ambassador for God, it would be a woe indeed to him if he could not proclaim the Message, to the extent of his ability and opportunity.

There are some who have the thought that there is no way to preach except by a public discourse from the platform. But this seems not to be the Bible thought of preaching. Jesus talked to the people by the seaside, and along the way; sometimes He sat upon the edge of the well and preached the Message of salvation; He preached to His disciples up in the mountain; sometimes He journeyed with them and talked. And so with us. Whatever way or time we may have for preaching the Good Tidings we should use.

The word Gospel means glad tidings, good news. We are to tell the “good tidings of great joy.” This may be done in the daily walk of our life, as we meet the butcher, the baker and the grocery man, or our neighbours and friends. It may be done by literature sent through the mails, or by handing out a tract, a book, or by preaching from the platform. All of this is preaching the Gospel, making known the Good Tidings; for preaching means merely to make known, and does not relate to the manner in which the knowledge is imparted.

Basis And Superstructure Of The Gospel.

Many tracts contain no Gospel; they contain tidings of great misery. These we would not wish to circulate; for the more we spread such tidings the less preaching of the Gospel we would do. We are to remember that our Lord Jesus especially identified the Gospel with the Kingdom. Therefore we should preach the Good Tidings, the Gospel of the Kingdom. This has been God’s method for gathering the Church, and is to be the witness to the world. We still have the opportunity for making known this good Message of the Kingdom. The Basis of this Gospel is the death of our Lord Jesus Christ as a Sacrifice for sinners, His resurrection and His ascension to the right hand of the Father.

Its superstructure is the salvation of the Church and of the world—’’whosoever will.’’ The blessings of God are all through Christ.

The rich blessings of the Lord for both Church and world are to follow the Second Coming of Jesus. Then the Church is to be glorified and exalted; and the world will enter upon the Era of Blessing God has promised shall come with the full establishment of His Kingdom.

Whoever, therefore, understands this real Gospel, and appreciates his own ordination to preach it, must necessarily feel unhappy if he should be hindered from preaching it. Some can preach in several ways. Others can preach in nearly every way. Some can preach in very few ways; but all can preach in some way. The more we do, the more happy we should be. So we thank God that we have so many helps in our day—books, free literature, Bible Concordances, etc. We greatly appreciate all these and are seeking to make good use of them to the blessing of others as well as for our own upbuilding.

The Talents.

Matt. 25:14-30.

AS seen in the preceding parable,* even the arrival of our Lord at His second advent would prove to be a testing time among those who were looking for Him. This parable shows that the first work in which Christ would then engage would be in connection with believers, inspecting their condition and progress and rewarding them according to their faithfulness respecting their talents and opportunities.

The man travelling into a far country is identical with the “young nobleman” of Luke 19:12, and represents the Lord, who ascended to the right hand of the Father until He would come again to claim His Bride, the Church, and exalt her to reign with Him. “Whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began” (Acts 3:20, 21) . The “long journey” intimates that the interval between these two events would be a long period of time.

Every Christian has been entrusted with certain talents, an account of the use of which the Lord will, in due time, require. The position in the kingdom depends upon faithfulness. If James and John were to occupy the chief places next to the Lord, then they must be “baptised with His baptism and drink of His cup” of suffering.

In the parable but three illustrations are given; one man receives five talents, another two, and another one. These talents would represent such things as the opportunity of entering the race for the “high calling of God in Christ Jesus,”—health, time, money, ability to speak, or sing, or other means of serving the Lord, His cause and His people. Then the Apostle says, “A measure of the spirit is given to every man to - profit withal.” We must use all our talents for the Lord as good stewards in His service and for our own spiritual progress.

When we believed on the Lord Jesus Christ we were “justified by faith,” and were then in a position to offer ourselves as living sacrifices to God (Rom. 12:1) . We there devoted ourselves entirely to God, all we are, all we have or hope to have. The Lord accepts the offering but leaves us in possession of such talents (circumstances, etc.) as we have; not, however, to be used according to our own will, but as good stewards of God’s gifts, to make the most of such health, time, money, business ability, etc., to God’s glory, in His service, and for our own growth in grace and character building. According to the use of our talents is the reward in the Kingdom.

The same commendation is to the one, who, having only two talents and faithfully used them, as to the one who had been faithful with five talents. “Well done, good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, enter into the joys of thy Lord.”

The man who hid his talent illustrates those who, having received the opportunity of running the Christian way, did not appreciate the privilege of sacrifice in the cause of Christ. Hiding his talent in the earth seems to indicate that he loved the world and the things of the world, socialites and pleasures of this life. He sought to save his life and thus lost it, “He that loses his life for My sake shall save it.” This man lost all the privilege he had had. “Take the talent from him and give it to him that hath ten talents.” “Cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.” That is, that such an one has the light of truth taken from him and he goes into the outer darkness, losing even the justification which he had by faith, he becomes an outsider, an unbeliever, in sorrow realising how great reward he has missed.

It is when the Lord’s work of rewarding His saints is complete and thus all His joint-heirs in His kingdom are selected and initiated in their respective positions in glory that the great work in connection with the world of mankind will begin, as illustrated in the next parable,—Matt. 25:31-46.

“Take my life, and may it be
Lord, acceptable to Thee;

Take my hands and let them move
At the impulse of Thy love.

Take my feet and let them be
Swift on errands, Lord, for Thee;

Take my voice, and let it bring
Honour always to my King.

Take my lips and let- them be Moved with messages from Thee;

Take my silver and my gold;
Nothing, Lord, would I withhold.

Take my moments and my days;
Let them flow in constant praise;

Take my intellect and use;
Every pow’r as Thou shalt choose.

Take my will, and make it Thine;
It shall be no longer mine;

Take my heart, it is thine own ;
Thus in me Thyself enthrone.

Take my love, my God;
I pour At Thy feet its treasure-store;

Take myself—I wish to be
Ever, only, all for Thee.”

A Saviour—A Life Giver.

"FOR unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ, the Lord." (Luke 2:11).

IN recording the birth of Jesus, the Scriptures are most careful to point out to us that He was not begotten after the usual manner—that He had no earthly father, but was begotten by the holy spirit. The necessity for this is manifest. The father is the life-giver, the mother is the nourisher of the offspring. If Jesus had received His life from a human father it would have been tainted, impaired, under condemnation of death, as is that of all others. This would have frustrated any work on His part as the world's Redeemer, because no imperfect man could have redeemed a perfect one, as the Psalmist declares—Psa. 49:7.

In order for Jesus to be able to give His life a of redemption price for father Adam's life (and for the life of his race, forfeited by disobedience), it was necessary that He be perfect, sinless; as we read, "He was holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners." And again, "A body hast Thou prepared Me," for the suffering of death.

It is not enough, then, that we recognise Jesus as good, well-intentioned in mind. We must see in Him human perfection, sufficient as a sacrifice to offset the forfeited life of the first perfect man, Adam. And we must see also that He was begotten from above—that the holy spark of life in Him as the babe was a transferred life-principle from a preexistent condition, mentioned by our Lord when He prayed, "Glorify Thou Me with the glory that I had with Thee before the world was," St. Paul explains to us that "He was rich and for our sakes became poor, that we through His poverty might be made rich."

For Our Sakes He Became Poor.

Few babes in all Judea or in all the world were born in a more humble place than Jesus. Joseph and Mary had gone to their native city, Bethlehem, for tax registration, under the imperial edict. The little city was crowded with others on similar errand. And so it came that Jesus was born in an out-house of the inn, where Joseph and Mary had been compelled to lodge for the night. Ah! we cannot wonder that it is difficult for many to understand why our Heavenly Father sent forth His Son for our redemption under such ignominious conditions! Only those who have the spirit of the Divine Plan, through the begetting of the holy spirit, can see the wherefore.

Fear Not!—Good Tidings—Great Joy—All People.

The Message of the angels was surely an inspired one, fully in harmony with God's promise to Abraham—only an enlarged statement of the same—the same "all people" to be blessed—and it was still good tidings and it still meant great joy; but now, two thousand years later, the Message pointed out the very Individual through whom the good tidings would have fulfilment—the Babe of Bethlehem.

The angelic announcement, "Fear not," is interesting. All humanity realise that they are sinners and naturally have forebodings. They find it difficult to believe that God is really gracious and loving. The gods of the heathen nations are ferocious, unloving and unlovable. But the God of all Grace, the Father of Mercies, is a God of Love, who delights to use His Divine power for the blessing and uplifting of His erring children. Therefore He was peculiar in sending the Message of "good tidings of great joy unto all people," as well as in sending His Only Begotten Son at great cost to be man's Redeemer—that He might be just and still be the Justifier of those who believe.—Rom. 3:26.

The Message declared that a Saviour had been born—the Anointed, the Lord. He was to be the antitypical Moses, the antitypical Aaron, the anti-typical Melchisedec, the antitypical David. In addition to the qualities pictured in these various typical characters, He was, also, the Son of the Highest. He was to be the Saviour—the Deliverer—the Mediator of the New Covenant, so long looked for, hoped for, prayed for.

There is a special force or meaning in this word Saviour—it signifies life-giver. The Syriac version is the one in which Saviour is translated life-giver; and Syriac was, likely, the language spoken by Jesus and others of Palestine at that time. And is there not a special fitness or appropriateness in this name life-giver? What had man lost and what would he wish to have back? The Scriptures answer that Adam lost life and came under the penalty, “Dying, thou shalt die.” He did not lose heaven, for he never possessed it. He lost earthly life, an Eden home, human perfection. And Jesus declared that He “came to seek and to recover that which was lost.”—Matt. 18:11.

Hence, as we have seen, He was provided with a perfect, human life, that “He by the grace of God might taste death for every man,” and that by thus suffering, the Just for the unjust, the penalty of the sinner, He might become the purchaser or the Redeemer of Adam and all his race, with a full right to restore to perfect life and to all that was lost as many as would receive it at His hand—thankfully. Throughout His entire Messianic reign of a thousand years He will be the world’s Life-Giver, raising the willing and obedient up out of sin and death conditions to perfection and everlasting life and earthly, human blessings.

But our Lord also does a work for the Church, the “elect,” His bride and joint-heir in the Kingdom, and this blessing to the Church begins before the setting up of His Kingdom. The Church “were by nature children of wrath even as others,” but they are not to be restored to what was lost. The offer to them is that they shall become copies of the Redeemer and lay down their lives, walking in His footsteps, and that He will make up for all their deficiencies and that thus the Father of Mercies will bring them like their Lord to the divine nature, will assist them in making their “calling and election sure” to the heavenly state which God has promised them, for “if we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him; if we die with Him, we shall also live with Him.”—2 Tim. 2:11, 12.

The Hallelujah Chorus.

In verse 14 we have a kind of Hallelujah chorus or angelic response to the Message of the angel already given.

A heavenly host sang, “Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.” How grand! How inspiring! But we see not yet this glorious condition achieved. The proper glory to God is not yet rendered on earth as it is in heaven. Nor does peace yet wave her banner, even over so-called Christendom.

What is the matter? Ah, said the Apostle, that is a secret, a mystery, hidden from past Ages and Dispensations!

The mystery is that God not only intends to have Jesus for His Anointed One, to rule and bless the world, but He has foreordained also a company of footstep followers to be with Him and share His work, and this entire Gospel Age has been devoted to the work of selecting this class, variously called the Body of Christ and the “espoused virgin,” which eventually, at the Second Coming of the Lord, is to become “the Bride, the Lamb’s Wife” and joint-heir.

It is for this that the Apostle declares that the whole creation groans and travails in pain until now —waiting for the manifestation of the Sons of God—the revelation of Jesus and His Bride in the glory of the Kingdom for the blessing of natural Israel and all the families of the earth with knowledge and assistance, that the willing and obedient may be recovered to the image and likeness of God and to everlasting life on the restored earth.

The Institute's Work.

FROM time to time enquiries are received respecting the objects and teachings for which the Berean Bible Institute stands, and it is thought well at this time to again present briefly an outline of the purposes for which the Institute was formed and carries on its work amongst those brethren and friends desiring assistance or association with it in the Christian way. The following is presented especially for the benefit of new friends.

The Berean Bible Institute was formed to be a centre of co-operation in service and fellowship for Christian people, particularly those enjoying the knowledge and appreciation of present truth.

It is unsectarian and makes no claim of authority nor in any sense seeks to dominate the minds of those who become associated with it. It exists simply to assist any and all in the Christian walk -and in the study of God's Word.

The name "Berean" is used to indicate that the Institute has no denominational creed, but takes the Bible as its only guide, and all who become associated with it are exhorted to follow the example of the noble Bereans of old, of whom the Apostle Paul declared, "These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so." (Acts 17:11.) From this standpoint it will be understood that the Institute has no new teachings, but makes known only the teachings of Christ and His inspired Apostles.

The Institute has no affiliation with any church or society in this or any other country but welcomes association and fellowship with all, in every land, who claim to have faith in the ransom sacrifice of Jesus Christ and His teachings based on that foundation truth. There is no membership list of friends associated with the Institute; all consecrated Christians are considered members one of another in the Lord's family, under one Master, even Christ.

The Berean Bible Institute never solicits funds, but depends entirely upon voluntary donations from those sufficiently interested in the work of proclaiming the truths of the Bible and able to render any financial assistance. Large quantities of literature are distributed free and publications are sold at a reasonable cost to cover expense of production.

The Radio Witness.

It is a pleasure to report favourably at this time on the radio witness that has been continued since our last reference to this work six months ago. By the Lord's providence this witness to the truths of His Word has been proclaimed week by week through 3GL

Geelong (Vic.) and 2KY Sydney, and sincere gratitude to the Lord is expressed for His blessings upon this work in His name.

Over the past six months considerable numbers of responses to the message over the air have been received, and many are continuing to appreciate the broadcasts and literature supplied. Also some friends who had appreciated the truth in other lands have been found by this witness, and so this harvest work goes on, the full results being in our Lord's hands and will be in evidence in the Kingdom to come.

The assistance of various friends in making the broadcasts known is very important, and the 'radio cards are available for all who can use them within range of the broadcasting stations. Advertising the sessions in any way is helpful and efforts of this kind are much appreciated.

The financial assistance to this feature of the work has been most encouraging again over the half year past. The voluntary sacrifices to enable this witness of the truth to continue are considerable, and are gratefully acknowledged, as unto the Lord Himself. On the 1st of May last the credit balance in the Radio Fund was £ 97, and on 1st of November the credit to this work was 1112. A full balance sheet will be presented at the close of the year's work in June next.

At this time again it is requested that our brethren remember this feature of the Lord's work in prayer, as well as His work generally, that His truth may be proclaimed in this part of His harvest-field, to the honour of His name and cause, in the blessing of all those who have ears to hear the Lord's glad message of truth, in these last days of the harvest of this Gospel Age.

Gathering at Geelong, Vic.

On November the 5th a nice number of the Melbourne friends journeyed to Geelong to join the members in that city in study and fellowship throughout the afternoon and evening, and it proved a very helpful occasion indeed.

The gathering commenced at 2.30 p.m., with a Bible study on Rom. 5:1-8, which provided helpful thoughts on the steps necessary to enter into complete union with Christ—justification by faith in the sacrifice of Jesus, consecration to God on the basis of that justification, and continued growth in the fruits of the spirit, as the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the holy spirit which is given unto us.

Three addresses, each containing a message of encouragement for all in attendance, added to the helpfulness of the occasion, the subjects being—"Two Distinct Salvations," "Trusting," and "Jottings from a Note Book."

The Tea Table discussion on the "Manna" text, Heb. 10:21, 22, provided further opportunity for fellowship on the Scriptures during the tea interval, and the Love Feast with suitable hymns and prayer of thankfulness to the Heavenly Father, brought to a close the happy time of refreshing for all in attendance.

In My Name.

There were only two or three of us
Who came to the place of prayer—
Came in the teeth of a driving storm,
But for that we did not care,

Since after our hymns of praise had risen,
And our earnest prayers were said,
The Master Himself was present there,
And gave us the living bread.

We noted His look in each other's face,
So loving and glad and free;
We felt His touch when our heads were bowed,
We heard His "Come to Me !"

Nobody saw Him lift the latch,
And none unbarred the door ;
But "Peace" was His token in every heart,
And how could we ask .for more ?

Each of us felt relief from sin,
Christ's purchase for one and all;
Each of us dropped his load of care,
And heard the heavenly call

And over our spirits a blessed calm
Swept in from the Jasper Sea.
And strength was ours for the toil of life
In the days that were yet to be.

It was only a handful gathered in
To that little place of prayer.
Outside were struggle and strife and sin,
But the Lord Himself was there.

He came to redeem the pledge He gave Wherever His loved ones be,
To give His comfort and joy to them,
Though they count but two or three.

The Sheep and the Goats.

Matt. 25:31-46.

“These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal.”

WHILE the Scriptures, as we have shown, do not teach the blasphemous doctrine of everlasting torment, they do most emphatically teach the everlasting punishment of the wicked, the class represented in the parable as “goats.” Let us examine the parable, and then the sentence pronounced at its close.

It has been truly said that “Order is Heaven’s first law”; yet few, we think, have realised how emphatically this is true. In glancing over the Plan of the Ages there is nothing which gives such conclusive evidence of a Divine Director as the order observed in all its parts.

God has had definite and stated times and seasons for every part of His work; and in the end of each of these seasons there has been a finishing up of its work and a clearing off of the rubbish, preparatory to the beginning of the new work of the dispensation to follow. Thus in the end of the Jewish age order is observed—a harvesting and complete separation of the “wheat” class from the “chaff,” and an entire rejection of the latter class from God’s favour. With the few judged worthy in the end of that age, a new age—the Gospel Age—began. And now we find ourselves amidst the closing scenes, the “harvest,” of this Age; the “wheat” and the “tares,” which have grown together during this Age, are being separated. With the former class, of which our Lord Jesus is the Head, a new Age is about to be inaugurated, and these “wheat” are to reign as kings and priests in that new dispensation, while the “tare” element is judged as utterly unworthy of that favour.

While observing this order with reference to the Jewish age and the one just closing, our Lord informs us through the parable under consideration that the same order will be observed with reference to the age to follow this Gospel Age.

The harvest of the Jewish Age was likened to the separation of wheat from chaff; the harvest of this Age to the separation of wheat from tares; and the harvest of the Messianic Age to the separation of sheep from goats.

That the parable of the sheep and the goats refers to the Messianic Age is clearly indicated in verses 31 and 32— “When the Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the throne of His glory, and before Him shall be gathered all nations; and He shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats.- As in the present age every act of those on trial (the Church) goes to make a part of that character which, in due time, will determine the final decision of the Judge in our case, so will it be with the world (the “nations”) in the Age to come. As in the present Age the trial of the majority of the individual members of the Church ends, and the decision of their case is reached, long before the end of the Age (2 Tim. 4:7, 8) , so under the Messianic reign the decision of some individual cases will be reached long before the end of the Age (Isa. 65:20); but in each Age there is a “harvest” or general separating time in the end of the Age.

In the dawn of the Messianic Age, after the “time of trouble,” there will be a gathering of the living nations before Christ, and, in their appointed time and order, the dead of all nations shall be called forth to appear before the judgment seat of Christ—not to receive an immediate sentence, but to receive a fair and impartial, individual trial (Ezek. 18:2-4, 19, 20) under the most favourable circumstances, the result of which trial will be a final sentence, as worthy or unworthy of everlasting life.*

The scene of this parable, therefore, is laid after the time of trouble, when the nations shall have been subdued, Satan bound (Rev. 20:1, 2) and the authority of Christ’s kingdom established. Ere this, the Bride of Christ (the overcoming Church) will have been seated with Him in His throne of spiritual power and will have taken part in executing the final judgments of the great day of wrath. Then the Son of Man and His Bride, the glorified Church, will be revealed and be seen by men, with the eyes of their understanding, and shall “shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father” (Matt. 13:43) .

Here is the New Jerusalem as St. John saw it (Rev. 21) , “that holy city [symbol of government] . . . coming down from God out of heaven.” During the time of trouble it will be coming down, and at the end of it, it will be manifest on the earth. This is the stone cut out of the mountain without hands (but by the power of God) , and it will then have become a great mountain (kingdom) , filling the whole earth (Dan. 2:35) , its coming having broken to pieces the evil kingdoms of the prince of darkness (Dan. 2:34, 35).

Here is that glorious city (government) , prepared as a bride adorned for her husband (Rev. 21:2) and early in the dawn of the new age the nations will begin to walk in the light of it (Verse 24) . These may bring their glory and honour into it, but “there shall in no wise enter into it [or become a part of it] anything that defileth,” etc. (Verse 27). Here, from the midst of the throne, proceeds a pure river of water of life (truth unmixed with error) , and the Spirit and the Bride say, Come, and take it freely (Rev. 22:17). Here begins the world’s probation, the world’s great Judgment Day—a thousand years.

But even in that favoured time of blessing and healing of the nations, when Satan is bound, evil restrained, mankind in process of release from the *See Divine. Plan, Chapter VIII, "The Day of Judgment." grasp of death, and when the knowledge of the Lord fills the earth, two classes will be developed, which our Lord here likens to sheep and goats. These, He tells us, He will separate. The sheep class—those who are meek, teachable and willing to be led, shall, during that Age, be gathered at the Judge's right hand—symbol of His approval and favour; but the goat class, self-willed and stubborn, always climbing on the rocks—seeking prominence and approval among men—and feeding on miserable refuse, while the sheep graze in the rich pastures of the truth furnished by the Good Shepherd—these are gathered to the Judge's left hand, the opposite of the position of favour—as subjects of His disfavour and condemnation.

This work of separating sheep and goats will require all of the Messianic Age for its accomplishment. During that Age, each individual, as he comes gradually to a knowledge of God and His will, takes his place at the right hand of favour or the left hand of disfavour, according as he improves or misimproves the opportunities of that golden age. By the end of that Age, all the world of mankind will have arranged themselves as shown in the parable, into two classes.

The end of that Age will be the end of the world's trial or judgment, and then final disposition will be made of the two classes. The reward of this "sheep" class will be granted them because, during the age of trial and discipline, they cultivated and manifested the beautiful character of love, which St. Paul describes as the fulfilling of the Law of God (Rom. 13:10). They will have manifested it to each other in their times of sorest need; and what they will have done for one another the Lord will count as done unto Him, counting them all as His brethren—children of God, though they will be of the human nature, while He is of the divine.

The condemnation of the "goat" class is shown to be for the lack of this spirit of love. Under the same favourable circumstances as the "sheep," they wilfully resist the moulding influence of the Lord's discipline, and harden their hearts. The goodness of God does not lead them to true repentance, but, like Pharaoh, they take advantage of His goodness 'and do evil. The "goats," who will not have developed the element of love, the law of God's being and Kingdom, will be counted unworthy of everlasting life, and will be destroyed; while the "sheep," who will have developed Godlikeness (love), and who will have exhibited it in their characters, are to be installed as the subordinate rulers of earth for future ages.

In the end of the Age, in the final adjustment of human affairs, Christ thus addresses His sheep: "Come, ye blessed, ... inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

It is manifest the "sheep" here addressed are not the sheep of the Gospel Age, the Gospel Church, but other sheep (Acts 15:17). And the kingdom prepared for them in the Divine Plan, from the foundation of the world, is not the kingdom prepared for the Gospel Church. The Church will receive her kingdom at the beginning of that Age, and 'will reign with Christ, as shown in the reward of the faithful servants in the last parable, "enter into the joys of thy Lord"; but this is the kingdom prepared for the "sheep" of the Messianic Age. Their kingdom will be the dominion of earth which was originally given to Adam, but which was lost through sin, and which is again to be restored when man is brought to perfection, and so made fit to receive and enjoy it. That dominion will not be a dominion of some of the race over others, but a joint dominion, in which every man will be a king, and all will have equal rights and privileges in appropriating and enjoying every earthly good. It will be a sovereign people—a great and grand republic on a basis of perfect righteousness, wherein the rights of every man will be conserved; because the golden rule will be inscribed on every heart, and every man will love his neighbour as himself. The dominion of all will be over the whole earth, and all its rich and bountiful stores of blessing (Gen. 1:28; Psa. 8:5-8). The kingdom of the world, to be given to the perfected and worthy ones of the redeemed race at the close of the Millennium, is clearly distinguished from all others by being called the kingdom prepared for them "from the , foundation of the world," the earth having been made to be the everlasting home and kingdom of perfect men. But the kingdom bestowed upon Christ, of which the Church, his "Bride," becomes joint-heir, is a spiritual kingdom, "far above angels, principalities and powers," and it also shall "have no end"—Christ's Mediatorial Kingdom, which will end, being merely a beginning of Christ's power and rule (1 Cor. 15:25-28). This endless heavenly, spiritual kingdom was prepared long before the earth was founded—its inception being recognised in Christ, "the beginning of the creation of God." It was intended for Christ Jesus, the First Begotten; but even the Church, His Bride and joint-heir, was chosen or designed also, in Him, before the foundation of the world (Eph. 1:4).

The kingdom or rule of earth, is the kingdom that has been in preparation for mankind from the foundation of the world. It was expedient that man should suffer six thousand years under the dominion of evil, to learn its inevitable results of misery and death, in order by contrast to prove the justice, wisdom and goodness of God's law of love. Then it will require the seventh thousand-years under the reign of Christ, to restore him from ruin and death, to the perfect condition, thereby fitting him "to inherit the kingdom prepared for him from the foundation of the world."

That kingdom, in which all will be kings, will be one grand, universal republic, whose stability and blessed influence will be assured by the perfection of its every citizen, a result now much desired, but an impossibility because of sin. The kingdom of Christ during the Millennium will be, on the contrary, a theocracy, which will rule the world (during the period of its imperfection and restoration) without regard to its consent or approval.

The brethren of the Gospel Church are not the only "brethren" of Christ. All who during the Millennial age will have been restored to perfection will be recognised as sons of God—sons in the same sense that Adam was a son of God (Luke 3:38)—human sons. And all of God's sons, whether on the human, the angelic or the divine plane, are brethren. Our Lord's love for these, His human brethren, is here expressed. As the world now has the opportunity to minister to those who are shortly to be the divine sons of God, and brethren of Christ, so they will have abundant opportunity during the age to come to minister to (each other) the human brethren.

The dead nations when again brought into existence will need food, raiment and shelter. However great may have been their possessions in this life, death will have brought all to a common level; the infant and the man of mature years, the millionaire and the pauper, the learned and the unlearned, the cultured and the ignorant and degraded; all will have an abundant opportunity for the exercise of benevolence, and thus they will be privileged to be coworkers with God. We are here reminded of the illustration given in the case of Lazarus; Jesus only awakened him from death and then were the rejoicing friends permitted to lose him from his grave: lathes acid to clothe and feed him.

Further, these are said to be "sick and in prison" (more properly, under ward or watch). The grave is the great prison where the millions of humanity have been held in unconscious captivity; but when released from the grave, the restoration to perfection is not to be an instantaneous work. Being not yet perfect, they may properly be termed sick and under ward; not dead, neither are they yet perfected in life; and any condition between those two may be properly symbolised by sickness. And they will continue to be under watch or ward until made well—physically, mentally and morally perfect. During that time there will be abundant opportunity for mutual helpfulness, sympathy, instruction and encouragement, and any failure to assist will mark a lack of the Lord's spirit of love.

Since all mankind will not be raised at once, but gradually, during the thousand years, each new group will find an army of helpers in those who will have preceded it. The love and benevolence which men will then show to each other (the brethren of Christ) the King will count as shown to Him. No great deeds are assigned as the ground for the honours and favours conferred upon the righteous; they will have simply come into harmony with God's law of love and proved it by their works. "Love is the fulfilling of the law" (Rom. 1,3:10), and "God is love." So, when man is restored again to the image of God—"very good"—man also will be a living expression of love.

"Inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world" does not signify a rule independent of the divine law and supremacy; for although God gave earth's dominion to man at first, and designs restoring it to him when He has prepared him for the great trust, we are not to suppose that God intends man to rule it, otherwise than as under, or in harmony with, His supreme law. "Thy will be done on earth as in heaven," must forever be the principle of government. Man thenceforth will rule his dominion in harmony with the law of heaven—delighting continually to do His will in whose favour is life, and at whose "right hand [condition of favour] there are pleasures forevermore" (Psa. 16:11) . Oh! who would not say, "Haste ye along, ages of glory!" and give glory and honour to Him whose loving plans are blossoming into such fulness of blessing?

Let us now examine the message to those on the left—"Depart from Me, ye. cursed" (condemned) —condemned as unfit vessels for the glory and honour of life, who would not yield to the moulding and shaping influences of divine love. When these, - brethren," were hungry and thirsty, or naked, sick, and in prison, ye ministered not to their necessities, thus continually proving yourselves out of harmony with the Heavenly City (Kingdom); for "there shall in no case enter into it anything that defileth." The decision or sentence regarding this class is—"Depart from Me into everlasting fire [symbol of destruction] , prepared for the devil and his angels." Elsewhere (Heb. 2:14) we read without symbol that Christ "will destroy . . . him that had the power of death, that is, the devil."

"And these [the "goats"] shall go away into everlasting [Greek, aionios—lasting] punishment, but the righteous into life eternal [Greek, aionios lasting] ." The punishment will be as lasting as the reward. Both will be everlasting.

Dear Sirs—I have been very interested to hear your session on 3GL the last few Sunday mornings. As I am a young Christian this session is proving very helpful to me. My husband and daughters, although regular church attenders, have not yet seen the light, but the Lord has promised, “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and ye shall Be saved, and your house.” My husband is listening interestedly to your session and I believe if we had a copy of your questions and answers we could discuss them more intelligently. Would it be possible for you to send me a copy each week? I assure you it would be a real service and I would appreciate it very much. I have several friends who would be interested too.

Please find enclosed 5/- which I trust will help your work in some way. Yours in Christian Fellowship.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I am very much impressed by your Talks from 3GL on Sundays. I would like you to send me a copy of any back numbers, also one of last Sunday particularly; stamp enclosed for same . . . Keep up the good work; Yours faithfully.

Dear Frank and Ernest—Towards the close of your Talk this morning you said that at the close of the Millennium mankind would be judged to see if they would enter into eternal life, at least, that is as it appeared to me, but I would much like more comments about this, for I do not know if I understand you rightly. Also more about your remarks respecting additions to the Scriptures . . . Please believe me, I am interested in the study of God’s Word. Hoping I am not putting you to too much trouble. I remain, Yours sincerely.

Dear Frank and Ernest—Just a few lines to say how interesting and so much in accord with the Scriptures I find your Talks each Sunday morning, and I would be so pleased if you would send me some leaflets on “Chosen People,” “The Jew in History,” and if already available the subject of next Sunday’s Talk.

I have already read “Divine Plan of the Ages” with which your Talks seem to correspond, and I regard it as the best book I have ever read in its interpretation of the Bible. Certainly events of the present day are bearing out the truth of the ancient prophecies, but the world rushes madly on, unmindful or entirely scornful of the idea that we are so near to the close of this present Gospel day of grace, and of what awaits them when the trump of God has summoned away those who are now the very salt of the earth, and more than that, though to so many that fact is quite incomprehensible. Later, I hope to forward you a small donation towards the good work. Faithfully yours.

Dear Sirs—I was very interested in your broadcast from 2KY last Sunday and would very much like a copy of your address. It was the first time I have heard your broadcast; I will listen in next Sunday. Thanking you and may God bless your work. Sincerely yours.

Dear Sirs—My friend and I are two interested listeners to your Sunday morning session on 2KY. We have heard your Bible Discussions regularly for some months now and we enjoy them very much indeed; certainly it is the most worthwhile religious session on the air . . . Yours sincerely.

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I could not get your session today and missed it very much. Would you please send me one of your last, Talks; I would like one sent every week, but would like you to make a charge, or tell me the price. It is good to read the Talk after hearing it. Yours sincerely.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I have not written to you for quite a while. I thank you very much for continuing to send me the Frank and Ernest papers, also “Peoples Paper.” I would feel quite lost without them; I do look forward to reading them and try to pass them along. Enclosed please find 30/- postal notes for your use to spread the wonderful message. Sincerely yours.

Dear Frank and Ernest—Very many thanks for your helpful Talks per radio 2KY each Sunday morning. I would very much like a copy of the broadcast address of yesterday. At present we are studying Daniel at Sunday School and I would like to pass on the detail to my class. With the earnest wish that God will abundantly bless and use you in His service. Yours sincerely.

Dear Frank and Ernest—I have just listened to your broadcast on the subject of the “Chosen People” and would very much like to receive the booklet also any other late booklets you have. Your Talks and books are a great comfort to me. Regarding the Jews being the chosen people, would this apply to the spiritual class, or the 144 thousand chosen from all nations?

I enclose 5/- to cover costs and would like you to send me a copy of all your broadcasts from last Sunday onwards. Thanking you for your past kindness. Yours sincerely.

(The Jews are God's chosen people for the earthly inheritance, which will be fulfilled to them in the Kingdom of Christ. The spiritual class of 144,000, which makes up the Bride of Christ, comprises members from every kindred and tongue and people and nation.—Rev. 5:9, 10. —B.B. Institute.)

Frank and Ernest, Dear Sirs—I have been a regular listener to your Sunday broadcasts from Station 2KY for some time, and wish to commend you for your presentation of the Bible details.

There is one matter which you may be able to help me with, and that is concerning the Society or section of the Church that stands behind your broadcasts. I am not questioning your doctrinal standing, because I believe it is Scripturally correct, and I believe you are out to win people to Christ. But, unfortunately, others use the medium of the radio for religious broadcasts, using mainly orthodox Scriptural expressions as a catch in order to enforce their spurious doctrines connected with their cults. These cults hide behind some other name, and do not announce their real denominational connection.

Now, perhaps your broadcast is of an undenominational nature—I believe it is—but it would be a great help to me, and to the many to whom I am recommending these broadcasts, if some definite connection could be explained, or information as to its origin. I would be glad of any detail which I could use to further the usefulness of this session, if you would care to pass it on.

Also would you kindly forward to me a copy of your broadcast relating to the "Creation." It was a splendid explanation of a very vexing question, which has torn away many to spurious beliefs and practices . . .

Thanking you for the above help, and for any other reading matter which may be useful in the work for our Saviour. May God bless you, Yours and His.

(The broadcasts of Frank and Ernest are undenominational, and reference to the work of this Institute generally will be found on page 91 in this issue.-13.13. Institute.),
